There are a number of other cases before your International Trade Commission which have the potential for really hurting Canada. I am thinking of cases involving zinc and industrial fasteners, all areas in which we have for many years been a dependable supplier to the United States market.

Proposals for "Buy America" provisions limiting your sourcing of federal procurement are of particular concern to us. Congress has already attached riders to this effect on some legislation and there are other amendments being proposed which would be wider in their application.

Another area of concern is technology. As you know, the AFL-CIO has been a strong advocate of restrictions on technology transfers. Canada is a major market for your technology and the United States patent holders earn hundreds of millions of dollars from Canada annually. This exchange has been especially widespread in the defence field. Any decision to limit the transfer of technology could be crippling to Canada. And unless you exempted the defence industries it would weaken our contribution to the collective defence of North America.

If I have put emphasis on tariff issues it is because the field is one in which Congressional decisions prevail. The Administration must work within the guidelines which you collectively establish and the President must in many instances seek your approval for the slightest deviation from the guidelines.

But Congress' impact on Canadian-United States relations does not end with tariffs. As those of you who attended last year's meeting in Victoria will remember, your decision to change the regulations for accounting for Convention expenses had a disproportionate and I expect unintended impact on Canada. We calculate that this decision cost us many tens of millions of dollars last year, through cancelled conventions in Canada and increased attendance by Canadians at conventions of associations and organizations to which they belong in the United States.

There are literally hundreds of professional, business, industrial and fraternal organizations whose membership transcends our borders and we feel tax treatment of their convention expenses should be the same whether held in Canada or the United States. We welcome the proposed modifications recently announced by Vice-President Mondale but inasmuch as they are relatively modest and of applicability to every host country in the world, they may fall short of what we consider is necessary to meet a uniquely Canada-United States phenomenon.

As the extent of government intervention grows, there is bound to be increased interaction. I shall give just one more illustration of Congress' impact on Canadian-American relations by referring to your 1977 amendments to the Clean Air Act. We respect and generally support your objectives. It is not surprising that you instinctively classify large areas to the north as Class I pristine areas in which, in effect, even controlled industrial development cannot be undertaken. But this legislation takes no account of the fact that all along your northern border Canadians congregate in the most favourable climatic areas of our country. Ninety per cent of our people live in a long thin ribbon within 200 miles of the border. That is where most of our industrial development must take place. So, unless we reach an agreement on common standards, your safeguards for the most stringently protected areas could present us with painful choices: either to forego building power plants—to cite two current issues—or for us to proceed in conformity with our own standards.

Now I expect some of you are saying that this is a tough world and everyone must look after himself. But such a reaction ignores the extent of our mutual trade. How many Americans are aware that our joint trade now approaches $60 billion? This is over $7 billion more than the United States trade with the nine countries of the European Community combined, including such major trading nations as Germany, France and Britain. As for Japan, I suppose that since President Nixon's widely reported mistake, it is now more generally known that our mutual trade is more than twice your trade with Japan.

United States exports to Canada as a percentage of your GNP has doubled in a decade. American exports to Canada now represent close to three per cent of your Gross National Product. This is a long way from the 15 to 20 per cent of our GNP that our exports to you represent, but is it far from insignificant even for you? Some US industries are particularly dependent on the Canadian market. For example, how many Americans realize that Canada is the world's largest importer of construction equipment, that our per capita use of construction equipment is twice that of the United States—with the result that almost 20 per cent of the construction equipment made in the United States is exported to Canada? I could go on drawing examples from other industries. But I think you will already appreciate my point.

So I am saying that this is not a one-way street, and if the Canadian economy falters badly many Americans will be adversely affected. It illustrates the risk of showing weakness in the face of protectionist pressures. In this respect I must admit we Canadians have also responded to exploding imports with defensive measures and a couple of these actions have affected or could affect some of your producers. I think, for example, of our quotas on double knit synthetic textiles and the proposed national chicken marketing agency.

These are a few of the many matters which will come up during our meetings and lend a new relevance to this Group. In exploring our problems and searching for mutually satisfactory solutions I know that the Canadian delegation will approach them having in mind a certain perspective.

The Standing Committee on Foreign Affairs of the Canadian Senate which is chaired by our colleague, Senator van Roggen, recently published a report on Canada-United States relations. I will quote one paragraph:

"How the Committee asks, in the light of the geographic ties, the affinities and interchange of the two peoples, the ease of communications, the similar institutions and the extent of trade cultural and other ties can the relationship be considered anything but a "unique one"? Canada cannot deny "a special relationship does exist with its southern neighbour." "

I hope that such perspective will find a sympathetic response among our American colleagues, and that it follows through our discussions here and into the discharge of our respective legislative responsibilities.

---

THE SENATE

Tuesday, April 25, 1978

The Senate met at 8 p.m., the Speaker in the Chair.

Prayers.

[Translation]

NEW SENATOR

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, I have the honour to inform the Senate that the Clerk has received a certificate from the Registrar General of Canada showing that Joseph Napoléon Claude Wagner, Esquire, has been summoned to the Senate.

NEW SENATOR INTRODUCED

The Hon. the Speaker having informed the Senate that there was a senator without, waiting to be introduced:

The following honourable senator was introduced; presented Her Majesty's writ of summons, which was read by the Clerk Assistant; took the legally prescribed oath, which was administered by the Clerk, and seated.

Hon. Joseph Napoléon Claude Wagner, of Montreal, Quebec, introduced between Hon. Jacques Flynn, P.C., and Hon. Martial Asselin, P.C.

The Hon. the Speaker informed the Senate that the honourable senator named above had made and subscribed the declaration of qualification required by the British North America Act, 1867, in presence of the Clerk of the Senate, the Commissioner appointed to receive and witness the said declaration.

[English]

THE HONOURABLE JEAN-PIERRE CÔTÉ, P.C.

TRIBUTES ON RESIGNATION FROM SENATE AND APPOINTMENT
AS LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR OF QUEBEC

Hon. Raymond J. Perrault: Honourable senators, on this evening when we welcome to our midst Senator Wagner, a distinguished representative from the Province of Quebec—

Hon. Senators: Hear, hear.

Senator Perrault: —it is also fitting to pay tribute to our colleague Jean-Pierre Côté, who resigned from the Senate on Friday last, following his appointment as Lieutenant Governor of Quebec.

His appointment follows years of accomplishment both here and in the other place. Jean-Pierre Côté exemplifies the fact that Canada was, and is, a land of opportunity for those prepared to work hard. He had to leave school in 1939 to help out his family when his father, a postal clerk, fell ill. Twenty-six years later he was Postmaster General of Canada. He was appointed Minister of National Revenue in 1968, but the same year he had to reduce his workload, following open-heart surgery, and returned to the back benches. However, in 1970 he was named Minister without Portfolio and was appointed Postmaster General of Canada for a second time a year later.

He was summoned to the Senate in 1972. He has been an amiable and well-liked colleague of ours, and he contributed much to our deliberations.

There is no doubt that he is well able to accept this new challenge. All of us who worked with him in the Senate are certain that he and his wife, Germaine, will handle their duties with both spirit and dignity.

[Translation]

I know that my colleagues will join me in wishing Jean-Pierre and his charming wife our most sincere congratulations as well as our best wishes for success in their new function.

Hon. Jacques Flynn: Honourable senators, as you can well imagine, I am also very happy to welcome our new colleague, Senator Wagner. I am happy because he will be adding to the strength of the opposition which is becoming more and more obvious. He will also enhance the quality of the Senate. I therefore wish to express my deepest gratitude to the Prime Minister for giving us this colleague.

I also wish to extend my most heartfelt congratulations to Senator Jean-Pierre Côté who, on Thursday, will be sworn in as Lieutenant Governor of Quebec.

He is a colleague whom I always appreciated. I am very glad for him. I do not know if I should regret his leaving, since he has no regrets himself, as he said he could never get used to the life of a senator. Apparently, he was a fighter in the other place. But, of course, there is a better balance of power in the other place than in the Senate. I think his problem was that he took too literally the general advice given by the government leader, that is speaking little and always voting properly.

In any event, if that was the problem Senator Côté had, I hope he has a lot to do in his new role. However, I am not sure he will find there the tempo or atmosphere of the House of Commons. Whatever the case may be, it will certainly be a new life and, since he is very happy about his new duties, so are we.

I wish him great satisfaction in the exercise of his new duties. Those good wishes and congratulations apply as well to Mrs. Côté who will be the chatelaine of the official residence of the Lieutenant Governor in Quebec, on St. Louis Road. In passing, I am sorry the residence at Bois de Coulange was never rebuilt because, truly, that residence gave the post incomparable prestige. I have always deplored that fact that it was not rebuilt. I should have been so much happier if the new Lieutenant Governor and his family had gone to live in the residence of former Lieutenant Governors of Quebec.

I speak for all senators of the official opposition when I say to Senator Côté: Good luck! Be happy, you and yours, in your new duties, in your new residence.

● (2010)

DOCUMENTS TABLED

Senator Perrault tabled:

Copies of Agreements between the Government of Canada and the Governments of Newfoundland, Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island, dated April 18, March 23 and March 23, 1978, respectively, concerning the strengthening/improvement of certain primary highway links.

Copies of Reports of the Administrator under the Anti-Inflation Act, pursuant to section 17(3) of the said Act, Chapter 75, Statutes of Canada, 1974-75-76, respecting certain compensation plans between employers and employees, as follows:

1. The Price Company Limited, Mont Joli, Quebec and the group of its sawmill hourly-rated employees represented by Le Syndicat national de l'Industrie du Bois de Price, Inc. (C.S.N.). Order dated April 12, 1978.

2. Domtar Packaging Ltd., Corrugated Containers Division, Kitchener, Ontario and the group of its hourly-rated employees, represented by the Canadian Paperworkers Union, Local 1196. Order dated April 14, 1978.

Copies of Reports of the Administrator under the Anti-Inflation Act, dated April 14, 1978, pursuant to section 17(3) of the said Act, Chapter 75, Statutes of Canada, 1974-75-76, respecting failure to file a compliance report form on the part of the following:

Mr. André Bélanger, Montreal, Quebec

Mr. Lawrence Diner, Westmount, Quebec

Mr. Norman A. Adler, Montreal, Quebec

Mr. John Cloutier, Saskatoon, Saskatchewan

Mr. Maurice L. Hébert, Montreal, Quebec

Report of the Canadian Turkey Marketing Agency, together with financial statements and the auditors' report thereon, for the year ended December 31, 1977, pursuant to section 31 of the Farm Products Marketing Agencies Act, Chapter 65, Statutes of Canada, 1970-71-72.

Capital Budget of Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation for the year ending December 31, 1978, pursuant to section 70(2) of the Financial Administration Act, Chapter F-10, R.S.C., 1970, as approved by Order in Council P.C. 1978-1062, dated April 6, 1978.

Report on operations under the Clean Air Act for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1977, pursuant to section 41 of the said Act, Chapter 47, Statutes of Canada, 1970-71-72.

BUSINESS OF THE SENATE

QUESTION

Senator Flynn: Honourable senators, no one will be surprised if I rise to ask the Leader of the Government why we are here this evening—outside of welcoming Senator Wagner, of course—as far as the business of the Senate is concerned.

In the past two weeks we have rushed through several important bills, some of which we would have preferred to have studied in much more depth. We are now faced with the fact that those bills have been passed and assented to, some in a very imperfect form. We could have done so much this week. What is expected of us this evening?

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, the Leader of the Opposition has asked a very pertinent question. I assure the house that the activities of last week were undertaken in good faith. Indeed, may I say—

Senator Flynn: Which ones are you speaking of?

Senator Perrault: Indeed, may I say that if the Leader of the Government in the Senate is to be faulted at all, it is in that he may have placed too much faith in the pronouncements of the Leader of the Progressive Conservative Party and Mr. Stanley Knowles, both of whom predicted a polling date of June 19 next. Now that I have determined that both of those gentlemen are fallible, I think that we in this house must carry on with a "business as usual" approach, and let events occur as they may.

It may be proposed later on, however, if honourable senators agree to revert to Notices of Motions, unless we have had messages from the other place which indicate far more progress than that which appears to have been accomplished in the past few hours, that the Senate should adjourn until Tuesday evening of next week, subject to recall, of course, in the event that urgent and pressing business comes before us. That is the only course of action I can suggest at this time.

Senator Flynn: Are you proposing that we adjourn tonight or tomorrow until Tuesday of next week?

Senator Perrault: I would say tonight, depending on the circumstances in the next half hour or so.

Senator Flynn: Not dissolution?

Senator Perrault: That, too, is a possibility.

CROWN CORPORATIONS

AUDIT REQUIREMENTS—QUESTION

Senator Grosart: Honourable senators, I have a question for the Leader of the Government to which I do not insist on an immediate answer.

What crown corporations or other agencies of the government, which receive and expend revenues from the Consolidated Revenue Fund, are there which are not subject to audit by the Auditor General of Canada and, in each case, what are the reasons for the exemption?

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, I will take that question as notice.

● (2020)

CANADA-UNITED STATES INTER-PARLIAMENTARY GROUP

NINETEENTH MEETING—DEBATE CONCLUDED

Hon. Daniel A. Lang rose pursuant to notice of Wednesday, March 22, 1978:

That he will call the attention of the Senate to the Nineteenth Meeting of the Canada-United States Inter-Parliamentary Group, held at New Orleans, Louisiana, U.S.A. from 9th to 13th February, 1978.

He said: Honourable senators, I was very, very surprised and somewhat offended this evening by the question put by the Leader of the Opposition to my leader as to why we are present here tonight. It should be self-evident that we are here tonight to hear me speak on the inquiry standing in my name on the order paper. Finding myself in this position—

Senator Flynn: I rise on a point of order. I thought we agreed that instead of making a speech you would put the report on Hansard, as you did last week. It is a case of false pretences if you are now going to make a speech.

Senator Lang: That may have been your ill-founded assumption, Senator Flynn, but I had no intention whatsoever of letting such an opportunity go by when I am able to address this chamber with no preceding orders of the day and in the presence of such a full attendance as we have tonight. I must add that the importance of the subject matter warrants the occasion.

Now, before I get into my speech I should like to say to those who have recently been inducted into this chamber how pleased we are to have them, and to recognize the extent to which they are contributing and will contribute to this institution and its further development. It is not an unmixed blessing, of course, when we on this side look across the chamber and see such distinguished men as Senator Roblin and Senator Wagner strengthening the opposition. Their addition to the other side of the chamber will, I hope, tend to bring to our deliberations a sense of reason and moderation which at times appears to be lacking.

Now, honourable senators, your pleasure tonight is to hear my report on the Canada-United States Inter-Parliamentary Group meeting held last February.

Last Thursday, as the Leader of the Opposition has noted, I asked leave, and the Senate very graciously granted me leave, to have the report of the Canadian delegation appended to the proceedings of that day.

Senator Flynn: Yes, instead of a speech.

[Senator Grosart.]

Senator Lang: That has been done and I hope that it provided enjoyable and educational reading for all senators over the weekend. If it has done so, then my words tonight will have more impact.

Honourable senators will have noted that the report is rather lengthy, being 26 printed pages. It deals in great detail with those matters currently at issue between ourselves and the United States. It also deals with many multilateral issues that are of concern to both our countries. I am sure it will prove of great interest to senators who are interested in these matters.

There is no question today that our relations with the United States are looming larger and larger, and I think that all senators will take an interest in what is happening because of that self-evident phenomenon.

It seems almost unnecessary to reiterate this fact, but I feel it incumbent upon me to remind honourable senators, as it is necessary to remind the press and the public occasionally, that these deliberations do not arrive at any definitive conclusions; nor do they settle issues as between the two countries; but they rather provide a channel of communication which is a valuable supplement to our normal administrative communications and our ambassadorial connections. Where those are deficient or lacking, this Canada-United States Inter-Parliamentary Group provides another recourse, and one that, more and more, is being recognized by our Department of External Affairs.

The role of this group at this moment is unique, because it is in fact the only direct connection between Canada and the United States Congress on matters of mutual interest. We should bear in mind in that respect the significant role the United States Congress plays—particularly today after the demise of the Nixon administration—in initiating, amending and blocking legislation.

Indeed, of the three arms of the American system of government, that is, their presidential executive arm, their judicial component, and their congressional arm, Congress is by far the most potent force, particularly in respect of issues affecting our two countries. Therefore, our input as Canadian parliamentarians into the congressional opinion-making areas is important to Canada; conversely, we must admit that their input into our houses, because of our parliamentary system, has probably a less direct effect. As a consequence, we in Canada can, realistically, place a great deal of importance on this group's activities.

The main purposes of our deliberations are to transmit information, to ascertain positions on issues and, hopefully, to recommend solutions or modifications in order to avoid or minimize confrontations or frictions.

I think it is safe to say, and I am sure senators who were present last February at the meeting will agree with me, that the American delegation considered that meeting to be one of the most successful that had been held by the group to date, and I should not let pass the opportunity to acknowledge that, if that is true, it is in no small measure because of the diligence of the Canadian delegation and because of several factors which affected the input to our delegation.

● (2030)

There were thorough and exhaustive briefings by experts from various departments and outside officials. They took up 20 sessions, each of from two to two-and-a-half hours, for the three committees into which the delegation was subdivided. This involved three or four weeks of firm commitment by members of the delegation before the meeting took place.

The committee is greatly indebted as to the logistical base not only for the meeting itself but also for the scheduling of the committees; to Ian Imrie and his staff in the Parliamentary Relations Secretariat; and, for the substantive input at briefings and the meeting itself, to Peter Dobell and his staff at the Parliamentary Centre for Foreign Affairs and Foreign Trade. Both groups were most competently professional. They were, in fact, the envy of the staff of the American delegation. When we can provide that sort of reaction among the professionals in Washington, we have achieved something rather unusual.

Honourable senators, there were some 30 topics on the agenda. I shall mention only some of them, to give honourable senators an idea of the range and scope of the meetings held by each of the three committees with their United States counterpart.

There were a significant number of multilateral issues as opposed to bilateral issues. I think it was probably the first time there had been so many of them on the agenda. In parenthesis, I might add, of course, that the agenda is formulated by discussions undertaken between our respective staffs in the months before the meeting.

Among the multilateral issues, there were discussed such matters as the proposed grains marketing system, the problems of nuclear proliferation, disarmament-SALT talks, human rights, Carter administration policy in this regard, the use of development assistance as ancillary to the promotion of human rights and then, of course, the all important current GATT negotiations.

As a general observation, I believe it is quite fair to say that in these areas the approach taken by Canada and the United States is basically the same. What was apparent to us, as Canadians, was how much more complicated and intricate are the ways toward the achievement of these objectives through the United States system of government than through our own. That last comment involves, as much as anything else, a mark of respect by Canadian legislators for the vitality and ingenuity of the United States congressmen.

Expectedly, of course, most of the issues were of a bilateral nature. I will not enumerate them at length; they involved trade and energy issues. It was self evident that those two fields of inquiry would be paramount. With regard to trade issues, of course, we had the perennial problems of the Automotive Pact, but now the new major irritant of the U.S. convention tax. We have the problem of non-tariff barriers, particularly those affecting us and imposed in the United States. We have the new problem of our proposed chicken marketing boards; of seaway tolls, which now fortunately seems to be resolved; of cross-border workers; of trade deficits, particularly ours vis-à-vis the United States; and the question that is always with us of the extraterritorial effect of some U.S. laws as currently highlighted by the controversy over the uranium cartel inquiry in the United States.

With regard to energy issues, one of the committees dealt at some length with the gas and oil pricing policies of the Canadian government, with our delegates attempting to elucidate the rationale behind those policies. The pipeline agreement had not at that time been signed, and this, of course, was a very important agenda item.

In the environmental area, conservation and anti-pollution standards were a major subject of discussion, as was the transportation of Arctic gas and oil. Great Lakes water quality and trans-boundary irrigation projects, many of which had been discussed at the meeting held a year previously, again arose, and where such was the case we were simply given an opportunity to up-date the problems in question.

There was one issue that I feel I should bring to the attention of the Senate, because it took up an inordinate amount of time, both in committee meetings and at the plenary session, and it was an issue on which we could find practically no common ground with our United States counterparts. Honourable senators will recall that a couple of years ago we passed a measure known as Bill C-58, which effectively put the Canadian Time magazine out of business, and denied, for income tax purposes, the expensing of costs incurred by Canadians advertising on United States radio and television stations when that advertising was primarily directed to the Canadian market—that is, trans-border advertising.

It will be recalled that the reaction from United States interests at that time was very marked. It will also be recalled that a year or so ago the United States passed an income tax act amendment, just as our Bill C-58 was an income tax amendment, limiting the deduction of expenses for attendance at conventions held outside the United States. That limitation was imposed, very rationally, in order to curb the expensive junketing that was being indulged in by certain American organizations, and which took them anywhere on the globe for the purpose of holding a convention and deducting the expenses of attending such conventions from their income tax.

● (2040)

This legislation, when it was passed by Congress, really failed to get the attention it deserved, considering the fact that there are many hundreds of organizations who have a common base in both Canada and the United States. These include professional groups such as medical groups, service clubs and business groups which, by and large, meet alternatively in either Canada or the United States.

As a result, this amendment had a direct effect on the Canadian convention business last year. In fact, after it was passed, members of Congress suddenly realized how completely inappropriate it was when applied to Canada and the United States. Immediately thereafter there were moves to try to exempt Canada from this provision, recognizing that to do so would be most difficult because the act is framed in terms of generality and applies to every country in the world. To exempt Canada specifically would mean creating a legislative precedent; if not a precedent, a very difficult legislative hurdle.

The efforts to try to have this act amended or modified have been very effectively lobbied into nothingness by interests in the United States. These, of course, are television, radio and press interests. I do not need to mention to honourable senators how persuasive those groups can be with elected representatives. The argument being made by those lobbies is that in return for amending the convention tax provision so that Canada is not adversely affected, Congress should demand a quid pro quo, namely, the repeal or modification of our Bill C-58.

Honourable senators, I mention that not simply because of the inordinate amount of time that was spent on this matter at the meeting, but really to point out that while we have picked up about $8 million a year in Canadian advertising revenue as a result of Bill C-58, it is apparent that because of the U.S. convention tax amendment we have lost perhaps $100 million a year of revenue in our hotel and ancillary businesses in Canada.

These two enactments have only one common ground, namely, in both countries they were amendments to an income tax act; otherwise they have really no commonality. However, the fact of life is that now the two are inextricably linked and, as a result, we seem to have reached an impasse, and on balance Canadians are the big losers.

Honourable senators, I will not elaborate further. I would just say, in conclusion, that the meeting was successful and productive. These contacts are very valuable. I urge all senators to take an interest in this Inter-Parliamentary Group. It is an important group and it is going to become more so during the next few years. That is reflected, to some extent, in the fact that the Canadian government, in the person of the Minister of State for External Affairs, is realizing and acknowledging that this committee can play a very important role in connection with this all-pervasive area of relationships between the two countries. This recognition and acknowledgement in turn greatly enhances the importance of the group and its perceived importance by members of Parliament here in Canada.

Honourable senators, thank you for attending this brief sitting this evening to hear these words of wisdom, and for your kind and rapt attention.

The Hon. the Speaker: As no other honourable senator wishes to participate, this inquiry is considered as having been debated.

● (2050)

ADJOURNMENT

Leave having been given to revert to Notices of Motions:

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, with leave of the Senate and notwithstanding rule 45(1)(g), I move that when the Senate adjourns today it do stand adjourned until Tuesday, May 2, 1978, at 8 o'clock in the evening.

Senator Flynn: Did you say 1978?

Senator Langlois: Yes, 1978, of course.
Motion agreed to.

Senator Langlois: I move that the Senate do now adjourn.

The Hon. the Speaker: Before putting the motion to adjourn, I should like to invite all honourable senators to my chambers to welcome the new senator and his family and friends.

Motion agreed to.

The Senate adjourned until Tuesday, May 2, 1978 at 8 o'clock in the evening.

THE SENATE

Tuesday, May 2, 1978

The Senate met at 8 p.m., Hon. Maurice Bourget, P.C., Speaker pro tem, in the Chair.

Prayers.

FINANCIAL ADMINISTRATION ACT

BILL TO AMEND—FIRST READING

The Hon. the Speaker *pro tem informed the Senate that a message had been received from the House of Commons with Bill C-10, to amend the Financial Administration Act.

Bill read first time.

The Hon. the Speaker pro tem: Honourable senators, when shall this bill be read the second time?

Senator Langlois, with leave of the Senate, moved that the bill be placed on the Orders of the Day for second reading later this day.

Motion agreed to.

DOCUMENTS TABLED

Senator Langlois tabled:

Capital Budget of Atomic Energy of Canada Limited for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1978, pursuant to section 70(2) of the Financial Administration Act, Chapter F-10, R.S.C., 1970, together with a copy of Order in Council P.C. 1978-996, dated April 6, 1978, approving same.

Report of Uranium Canada, Limited, including its accounts and financial statements certified by the Auditor General, for the year ended December 31, 1977, pursuant to sections 75(3) and 77(3) of the Financial Administration Act, Chapter F-10, R.S.C., 1970.

Copies of amendment to section 4(d) of the Immigration Regulations, 1978, pursuant to section 115(3) of the Immigration Act, 1976, Chapter 52, Statutes of Canada, 1976-77.

Copies of Ordinances passed by the Council of the Yukon Territory at its 1976 Third Session, pursuant to section 20(1) of the Yukon Act, Chapter Y-2, R.S.C., 1970, together with copy of Order in Council P.C. 1977-65, dated January 13, 1977.

Copies of Reports of the Administrator under the Anti-Inflation Act, pursuant to section 17(3) of the said Act, Chapter 75, Statutes of Canada, 1974-75-76, regarding the reference on Keeprite Products Limited, Unifin Division, London, Ontario. Order dated April 21, 1978.

Report of operations under Part II of the Export Credits Insurance Act for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1978, pursuant to section 27 of the said Act, Chapter 105, R.S.C., 1952.

Copies of Reports of the Anti-Inflation Board to the Governor in Council, pursuant to section 17(2) of the Anti-Inflation Act, Chapter 75, Statutes of Canada, 1974-75-76, reporting its reference to the Administrator of the said Act of certain proposed changes in compensation plans, as follows:

1. Crescent Cheese Co. and the Maycrest Co. and its Marieville, Quebec, Plant Personnel represented by the Teamsters' Union, Local 973, dated April 20, 1978.

2. Lincoln Steel Products Limited and its employees represented by the Canadian Association of Industrial, Mechanical and Allied Workers, Local 1 (B.C.), dated April 20, 1978.

3. Nova Scotia Corporation and its Thermal Generating Plant Employee group represented by Local 507 of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers, dated April 19, 1978.

4. Nova Scotia Power Corporation and its Office Employees and Others group represented by Local 610 of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers, dated April 19, 1978.

Copies of a document entitled "Economic Review", issued by the Department of Finance and dated April 1978.

DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE

STATEMENT BY MINISTER WITH RESPECT TO LIBEL ACTION— QUESTIONS

Senator Roblin: Honourable senators, I should like to address a question to the Deputy Leader of the Government. It has to do with the recent statement made in the other place by the Minister of Justice with respect to the conviction of the Honourable Jean-Pierre Goyer on a matter of libel with respect to a civil servant.

My question has to do with the statement the Minister of Justice made respecting the government's paying the legal fees involved in this case on behalf of the minister in question; that it intended, if a fine was payable, to pay the fine, and if further legal proceedings were taken it intended to pay those expenses as well.

In the other place the Minister of Justice said that he intended to take this action, or approve of this action, because there were legal precedents and other precedents which he felt justified the taking of this action.

● (2010)

I would ask the Acting Leader of the Government if he would be good enough to produce the precedents for the legal rulings referred to by the minister so that we may examine them to determine whether or not they fit this particular case.

It seems to me that if this matter goes unremarked, we are in danger of establishing a precedent which perhaps would not be generally approved in the future. In my view, there is a difference to be drawn between what a minister does in his official capacity protected by parliamentary privilege and what he does as a private person. While I am not in a position myself to comment on these precedents, I think if we had them placed before us it would be advantageous, and I am wondering whether that can be done.

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, my only information to date regarding the statements alleged to have been made by the Minister of Justice in the other place is from news reports that I have read or heard over the radio or television. For that reason, I shall take the question as notice. I will endeavour to make the necessary inquiries to provide the information which my honourable colleague wishes to have.

Senator Forsey: Honourable senators, I wonder if I might address a supplementary to the acting leader. I should be interested to see, not only the precedents to which the Honourable Senator Roblin has referred, but also the legal basis for the action which the minister has apparently taken—and I am relying not upon news reports, or the radio, or the TV, but upon something I read in the official record of debates of the other place—the action which the minister has apparently taken in paying the legal costs and which he is prepared to take, if there is no appeal, in paying the damage assessed against the Honourable Mr. Goyer.

I should like to know by what authority, statutory or prerogative, this has been done, or is being contemplated, because even if there are precedents, unless there is legal authority, 50 precedents won't make the thing legal.

I should like to see the legal authorities cited, and I should also like to know by what legal authority the Department of Justice has apparently been advising the Honourable Jean-Pierre Goyer in what was apparently a purely private action, not flowing at all from his official duties as a minister, giving him advice as to whether there should or should not be an appeal, and apparently other legal advice. I should very much like to see the legal basis for all of these actions.

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, my information based upon newspaper reports is that the minister, in the other place, said that he had obtained legal advice. Since my information is based only on newspaper reports, I shall take the question as notice and inquire into the situation further.

[Senator Roblin.]

NATIONAL REVENUE

INFORMATION CIRCULAR—REGISTERED CHARITIES— QUESTIONS

Senator Benidickson: Honourable senators, I wonder if the Acting Leader of the Government would see if he can obtain a copy of the directive of the Department of National Revenue which I think is under media discussion at the moment, issued in February of this year and to the effect that certain organizations which have been granted the status of a charitable organization, which entitles them and their donors to income tax consideration, might lose that status if they make representations of a political nature to members of Parliament and to authorities at other governmental levels.

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, I shall have to take this question as notice. Again, my information in respect of this matter is based upon newspaper reports. I shall make inquiries and endeavour to provide an answer as soon as possible.

Senator Roblin: Honourable senators, I wonder if I might ask a supplementary question on the same subject. I have in my hand a copy of the letter that the Honourable Senator Joseph P. Guay, in his capacity as Minister of National Revenue, wrote in respect of this matter, enclosing a copy of the information circular to which my honourable friend opposite has already referred.

I think it is a particularly interesting document. I am sorry that the minister is not here to answer for it. They had trouble finding someone to answer for it in the other place, and we seem to be having the same problem here.

Among the matters referred to in the document issued by the department are certain opinions expressed respecting what I consider to be an interpretation of the statute. I am wondering whose interpretation of the statute it is, and whether it is based upon legal precedent or legal proceedings of any kind. If so, I, for one, would be very pleased to know what they are.

In particular I make reference to the definition of political objects which is contained in this rather objectionable memorandum.

An object normally is said to be "political" if its ultimate intention is to influence the policy making process (as opposed to the administrative process) of any level of government, viz, federal, provincial or municipal. In this context an organization whose object is to promote a change in the law or promote the maintenance of an existing statute is considered to operate for a political objective.

It goes on further to say, under "Political Activities," that an organization could not undertake a program to promote its recommendations.

What are we to make of a document like that? I ask the government what we are to say to people in charitable organizations who perhaps want to change the school laws in the Province of Ontario? Are they not conducting a campaign to influence the government, to change the law, to change policy? What are we to say about people opposed to, or in favour of, abortion and who belong to charitable organizations of various kinds? Could they not be described as offending against this particular piece of departmental literature? I think they can. And I would like to hear what the government has to say about the application of this extreme and extraordinary statement by which they have defined charitable organizations in such a narrow term that anybody who belongs to one of them cannot open his mouth without running the risk of having his income tax privileges withdrawn, thus, naturally, reducing the effectiveness of the organization.

What is there to say about religious organizations? They are certainly caught up in this net. By whose authority has this document been published? Why is it here? What is its justification? What law is behind it, and what policy is behind it? It seems to me to be entirely objectionable as an implied threat to anybody who belongs to any organization for doing anything that is going to disturb the government of the day.

The holding of public events to attract public support, et cetera, is an acceptable activity, "but if the purpose of the demonstration is to embarrass or apply pressure upon a government it is considered to be a political activity."

Those kinds of definitions are entirely unacceptable and I regret that the minister is not in his place to tell us exactly what he is up to.

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, I was very much tempted to intervene before my honourable colleagues resumed his seat because his question is a rather long one, and goes beyond the limits of questions allowed at this stage of the proceedings. However, I am going to take this as notice and I shall try to provide an answer for his many questions put in one.

Senator Roblin: I apologize to my honourable friend if I appear to have trespassed against his interpretation of the rules, but it is easier to do that than to ask 15 questions one after the other.

Senator Smith (Colchester): Honourable senators, I should like also to ask a supplementary question, if I may, about this reprehensible and threatening document, and in particular I would like to ask what criteria the Minister of National Revenue had in mind when he wrote his letter of April 18, 1978, to Mr. James M. McGrath, M.P. in which he said, among other things, that the charitable status "would not be prejudiced by limited attempts to promote the interests of these organizations". What criteria did he have in mind, if any?

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, it is pretty hard for me or for anybody else in this chamber to say what anybody had in his mind when he said something, and in any case I am afraid I am a pretty poor mind-reader, and so I shall not attempt to answer that question. I shall wait until I get information from the minister himself. If he is back in his seat later this week perhaps he would like to comment on this question himself.

● (2020)

Senator Smith (Colchester): Honourable senators, I just wanted to observe, if I might, that I was not asking anyone to read the minister's mind. I was asking that the criteria that he had in mind be ascertained and the house informed.

Senator Langlois: Only the minister can answer that.

Senator Smith (Colchester): Honourable senators, I point out to the Acting Leader of the Government that the minister is not here. All I am asking the acting leader to do is to make sure that the minister comes prepared, when he next dares to face the house on this question, with the criteria that he mentions in this letter.

Senator Langlois: I will try to do that.

Senator Forsey: Honourable senators, I should particularly like to support that supplementary of the Honourable Senator Smith, because I have in my office at the moment a request from a certain charitable organization to ask for certain amendments to the Income Tax Act, and I am positively scared to ask for them, lest I imperil the income tax status of this very reputable, long-standing and important organization. So I very much hope that the minister will turn up and answer the questions.

Senator Grosart: Honourable senators, on the point, I wonder if I might ask the Acting Leader of the Government to do what he can to make sure that the minister attends the sittings of the Senate. We are in the most unusual position of having in this house a minister of the Crown other than the Leader of the Government. Questions were asked in the other place, and there were complaints that the minister was not there. The Senate is the only place where questions can be asked of the minister, and he is not here.

I would suggest to the acting leader that he inquire, and inform the Senate, just why the minister is not able to attend the sittings of the Senate regularly, when he is a minister and subject to questioning.

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, I hope my honourable friend is not implying that the minister is always away from this house. After all, he has been here only a few weeks.

I am not aware of why he is not here today. I suppose he has good reasons for not being present. In any case, he is the person who should be asked to account for his conduct. I am certainly not going to start accounting for anyone else's conduct in this house.

I will convey the messages of my honourable colleagues to the minister, but that is all I can do.

FINANCIAL ADMINISTRATION ACT

BILL TO AMEND—SECOND READING—DEBATE ADJOURNED

Hon. Eric Cook moved the second reading of Bill C-10, to amend the Financial Administration Act.

He said: Honourable senators, the purpose of Bill C-10 is to create the position of Comptroller General of Canada.

I should perhaps begin by pointing out that this morning on the CBC 8 o'clock news the name of the new Comptroller General of Canada was announced. This indicated to me that the government is confident that the Senate will do right by the government and pass the bill. On the other hand, it might indicate that the cabinet once again is displaying some of its customary insensitivity to the position of the Senate in our system of government.

Some Hon. Senators: Hear, hear.

Senator Cook: Whatever the reason, I am still obliged to do my best to discuss with, and explain to, the Senate the principle of the bill.

In his report to the House of Commons for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1976, the Auditor General of Canada stated:

I turn now to the more important question of what should be done to restore effective control of the public purse to the government—and thereby to Parliament. My 1975 report described in detail many of my recommendations to attain this objective. These were endorsed unanimously by the Public Accounts Committee in its sixth report to the House of Commons under date of June 30, 1976.

I believe there are two actions of paramount importance which the government should take to establish the foundation for an evolution toward a completely satisfactory system of financial management and control which would be fully compatible with maintenance of the decentralized authority of deputy heads proposed by Glassco. These recommended actions are:

- (1) The establishment of the position of chief financial officer of the government, preferably with the title Comptroller General of Canada, with deputy minister status and a direct reporting relationship to the President of the Treasury Board, and with duties and authorities fully commensurate with the important responsibilities of such a key position—a position which I rate, as do the members of my Independent Advisory Committee on Financial Management and Control Standards, as the most important and responsible financial executive position in both the public and private sectors of Canada.

Following extensive discussions between the President of the Treasury Board and the Auditor General to clarify certain aspects of the proposed responsibilities for the office, the government, in April, 1977, announced its intention to create such a position, identifying it as that of:

the chief financial administrator of the federal public service, responsible for the quality and integrity of the financial administrative systems and related practices and procedures in use throughout the federal public service.

If Bill C-10 becomes law, Parliament will have implemented the first part of the Auditor General's recommendation. There is, of course, much more to be done to carry out the report of the Auditor General over and beyond creating the position of Comptroller General of Canada. In view of the fact that the Government of Canada collects and spends billions of dollars each year, the creation of the post of Comptroller General is merely a first step in a journey of a thousand miles.

The Comptroller General must be entrusted with all necessary duties and vested with all needed authority to carry out his job. If the Comptroller General is a mere man of straw without proper authority, the appointment will be one of form and not of substance. In this connection I cannot do better than quote further from the Auditor General's recommendations:

- (2) The selection and appointment as the first Comptroller General of Canada of a person with appropriate professional qualifications, with a proven record of outstanding competence and achievement at senior levels of responsibility, and with extensive experience as a senior financial executive in a large-scale organization in either the public or private sector. The appointee should have the sort of impressive credentials and personal characteristics that will enable him to gain quickly the confidence and respect of his Minister, of the Treasury Board, of the Cabinet, of parliamentary committees, of his peers (the deputy heads of all departments and agencies, and the heads of partially or fully-owned and controlled government corporations), of financial and accounting personnel throughout government who will look to him for functional leadership including advice and guidance on financial and accounting matters, of national professional accounting bodies, and of the Auditor General and his senior officers.

I am still quoting from the report:

Unless the government responds positively to these two recommended actions I am convinced that the present unsatisfactory state of affairs will persist. Action on both recommendations, especially the selection or appointment of a properly qualified person to become the first Comptroller General of Canada, will lay the essential foundation of a soundly conceived program for restoring effective control over public funds and assets, and to ensure probity, prudence and economy in their management.

I am confident that the government, Parliament, and indeed all taxpaying Canadians will subscribe to these objectives.

● (2030)

Honourable senators, it is clear that the Auditor General is of the opinion that this will be an important appointment, and if the office is correctly set up, and the right person chosen, it will be a very real step forward, and will be of great benefit to Canada.

It would be unfair to give the impression that nothing is being done at the present time in respect of the duties which will be entrusted to the Comptroller General. There are two existing branches of the Treasury Board which are responsible for the quality and integrity of financial administration policies, practices and control systems. These two branches, namely, the Efficiency Evaluation Branch and the Financial Administration Branch, also develop and maintain the policies and procedures which are necessary for evaluation and reporting of the efficiency and effectiveness of government programs. These two branches will henceforth be part of the office of the Comptroller General.

I have in my hand a documents entitled, "Responsibilities of the Comptroller General," which lists 20 items which will be entrusted to him. This list was read into the record of the Standing Committee of the House of Commons on Miscellaneous Estimates on March 16, 1978, by the Honourable Mr. Andras, President of the Treasury Board. It seems to me that this document would be helpful to honourable senators when considering this bill, and I ask the consent of the house to have it printed as an appendix to Hansard.

The Hon. the Speaker pro tem: Is it agreed, honourable senators?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

[For text of document, see appendix p. 725.]

Senator Cook: With recent passage of the Auditor General Act, and the broadening of the Auditor General's mandate, scrutiny of departmental expenditures from the standpoint of economy and efficiency have been improved.

It should be noted that paragraphs 7(2)(d) and (e) of the Auditor General Act require the Auditor General to draw the attention of the House of Commons to any case in which he has observed that:

(d) money has been expended without due regard to economy or efficiency; or

(e) satisfactory procedures have not been established to measure and report the effectiveness of programs, where such procedures could appropriately and reasonably be implemented.

These provisions, of course, are far wider in their application than simply requiring the Auditor General to ascertain whether in his opinion proper books and records have been kept, or that public money has been fully accounted for and expended only for the purposes for which it was appropriated by Parliament, these being the provisions of the old act.

As I understand the situation, however, the Auditor General reports after the event. His report deals with things already passed and done. The duties of the Comptroller General would be different. As I understand his purpose, the Comptroller General will be supervising actions and decisions which are being done while they are being done, that he will give directions, guidance and advice, and will exert necessary control.

The creation of the office is not difficult. This bill, if passed, does that. Assigning the necessary duties and granting the needed authorities will be more difficult. The selection of the right person will be most important.

Honourable senators, at this point in time we can only hope that the government will be successful in selecting the right man, and that having wisely given him the correct mandate it will give him the full authority to carry it out.

The creation of the post of Comptroller General of Canada means that we are breaking new ground. If we are not breaking new ground, then, as some critics say, we are only creating another deputy minister.

If we are, in fact, breaking new ground, it seems to me that it would be a mistake to try to draft out a hard and fast mandate for the Comptroller General in the act itself. It may well take some period of time for the Auditor General, the Comptroller General and the departments of government to settle the terms of his mandate and the extent of his authority.

It seems to me we will have to await future reports from the Auditor General before we will be able to judge if the government has settled on the correct mandate and has secured a suitable candidate for the office, and if an all-round improvement has resulted. But, of course, before anything can happen, the office must be created, and that, as I have said, is the purpose of this bill.

Senator Grosart: Honourable senators, I wonder if I may ask the sponsor of this bill if the appointment of the Comptroller General of Canada has been made.

Senator Cook: That was an item in the CBC 8 o'clock news this morning and also, I noticed, in the Globe and Mail, to the effect that Mr. Rogers had been appointed Comptroller General as from April 1.

Senator Grosart: Does the sponsor of the bill really believe that? Perhaps I should direct the question to the Acting Leader of the Government. Is it possible that the sponsor of the bill, who should know whether this has been done, is correct in saying, as he did say, that it has been done? This would be, of course, an insult to Parliament. May we be told now, before we proceed further with this bill, whether this has been done? Is it fact or fiction?

Senator Langlois: The honourable senator sponsoring this bill has given the source of his information, and we will have to leave it at that.

Senator Neiman: Honourable senators, may I interject? I happen to be reading yesterday's Hansard of the House of Commons, and the proceedings on third reading of this bill, and I see that the Parliamentary Secretary to the President of the Treasury Board referred to Mr. Rogers as the Comptroller General in his concluding remarks. Therefore, I would assume the appointment has, in fact, been made.

Senator Grosart: I can only ask if this is not the most extraordinary situation we have been faced with in my years in the Senate, when another honourable senator rises to quote from Commons Hansard to the effect that this has been done. I cannot believe it has been done. It is true that Mr. Rogers is a very distinguished prospective occupant of this position. He was the vice-president of Xerox, and the evidence appears to be that there could not be a better man for the job, but surely before we proceed with this bill we should have the facts. Are we in a position where we are asked to approve a bill to create the office of Comptroller General of Canada and are being told by two and a half senators that an appointment has been made?

Senator Langlois: Who is the half senator?

Senator Forsey: I am going to add another half senator, if I may, because I have just been looking at Hansard of the other place and I find Mr. Rogers is three times referred to as "the new Comptroller General." The parliamentary secretary said "the new Comptroller General himself, Mr. Rogers, appeared" before the committee of the other place and, "Indeed, neither Mr. Rogers, the Comptroller General, nor the Auditor General, Mr. Macdonnell, has any problem..." Three times the parliamentary secretary referred to this gentleman, whom I know and whom I esteem very highly, as "the new Comptroller General." I think the question of the Deputy Leader of the Opposition is certainly very relevant indeed. It is a most extraordinary procedure.

Possibly the parliamentary secretary was speaking without any kind of authority but, if so, he should be told by his superiors in the other place to be careful in his use of language henceforth. It is the most extraordinary production I have seen in a long time.

Senator Choquette: It is a fait accompli if it has been done.

Senator Forsey: It is at page 5041 if the acting leader wishes to check the references I have given.

● (2040)

Senator Grosart: Honourable senators, it was my intention—and I suppose it still is—to move the adjournment of the debate. However, I hesitate to do so without having some answers to this very important question. I regret that with this bill before us we are unable to get an answer to this question from either the sponsor of the bill or the Acting Leader of the Government. I move the adjournment of the debate.

On motion of Senator Grosart, debate adjourned.

DISTINGUISHED VISITOR IN GALLERY

Senator Grosart: Honourable senators, before the adjournment of the Senate may I with leave call attention to the presence in our gallery of a distinguished visitor to Canada, a Paramount Chief from Western Samoa, a scholar, who is now the development dean of the projected University of Samoa, the Honourable Tagaloa Leota Pita.

Hon. Senators: Hear, hear.

The Senate adjourned until tomorrow at 2 p.m.

APPENDIX

(See p. 723)

RESPONSIBILITIES OF THE COMPTROLLER GENERAL

The Comptroller General would be responsible for the Treasury Board's interest in the following items:

1. Financial Officers development and maintenance in conjunction with Personnel Policy Branch and Public Service Commission of training programs for financial officers. Liaison with Personnel Policy Branch concerning the general level of financial staff within the government and with PSC, departments and agencies concerning transfer and promotion of senior financial officers. Representation on selection boards for senior financial positions.

2. Ensuring that internal audit procedures support the Treasury Board Secretariat's audit for compliance.

3. Ensure that financial systems are compatible with and support procedures recommended by the Treasury Board designed to provide for the measurement of program effectiveness.

4. Design and implementation guidance with respect to systems of financial reporting, financial management and financial control to provide assurance that public monies and assets are expended with probity, economy and efficiency and that public monies and assets are under effective custody and control. Assessment of the adequacy of such systems in departments and agencies.

5. Report to President of the Treasury Board on the adequacy of departmental and agency systems and procedures for effectiveness evaluation.

6. Report to President of the Treasury Board on the adequacy of departmental and agency systems and procedures for measuring efficiency.

7. Preparing and signing of the Public Accounts and certain other financial statements of Canada.

8. Accounting principles and practices for the Accounts of Canada.

9. Structure of accounts to be used by departments and agencies for the preparation of financial reports.

10. Recommendations on the form of the Public Accounts including ensuring consistency of the Public Accounts form of presentation with the form of the Estimates presentation and taking into account the need for adequate disclosure to Parliament.

11. Recommendations on the form of the Estimates with respect to ensuring that expenditures are made for the purposes voted and in accordance with Treasury Board standards and policies for financial administration.

12. Review and approval of all accounting systems and procedures supporting the financial information and statements included in the Public Accounts.

13. Support the President before Parliamentary Committees on matters of expenditure control and financial reporting.

14. Recommendations as to how capital budgets might be changed to improve expenditure control and financial reporting.

15. Preparation of briefing material and recommendations for the Minister on all Memoranda to Cabinet having to do with the responsibilities of the Office of the Comptroller General.

16. A functional relationship with chief financial officers of the departments, agencies and corporations (providing "functional guidance").

17. Provision of assistance to departments, agencies and corporations in the design and development or improvement of financial management, control, and reporting systems.

18. Liaison of the President of the Treasury Board with the Auditor General, including the coordination of the response to the Auditor General's Annual Report. Ensuring that effective and prompt remedial action is taken by departments and agencies on matters raised in audit observations, and on recommendations of the Public Accounts Committee.

19. Development, maintenance and evaluation of detailed policies and guidelines on the internal financial and operational audit function of the government; the evaluation of the scope and quality of this internal financial and operational audit in departments and agencies. The provision of advice and leadership to the internal financial and operational audit community of the government.

20. The provision of a central advisory service to departments and agencies concerning financial administration policies, principles and standards of the government, and the provision of authoritative interpretations of legislation, regulations and policies related to financial administration. The provision of advice to the Treasury Board Secretariat on financial administration aspects of issues submitted to the Treasury Board for consideration.

THE SENATE

Wednesday, May 3, 1978

The Senate met at 2 p.m., the Speaker in the Chair.
Prayers.

DOCUMENTS TABLED

Senator Perrault tabled:

Report of the Canadian Dairy Commission, including its accounts and financial statements certified by the Auditor General, for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1977, pursuant to section 22 of the Canadian Dairy Commission Act, Chapter C-7, R.S.C., 1970.

COMPTROLLER GENERAL OF CANADA

STATUS OF MR. HARRY ROGERS—QUESTIONS

Senator Grosart: Honourable senators, I should like to address two questions seriatim to the Leader of the Government in the Senate, the first of which relates to the important question asked last evening in connection with Bill C-10 for which an answer was not at that time available.

I would now ask the Leader of the Government whether an appointment has been made to the office of Comptroller General of Canada?

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, I have read an account of last night's proceedings during which an important question was posed by the Deputy Leader of the Opposition. I have since ascertained certain facts with respect to the appointment of Mr. Harry Rogers as an adviser to the President of the Treasury Board.

I am informed that Mr. Harry Rogers, formerly the Vice-President, Operations, Xerox of Canada Limited, joined the Treasury Board on April 10 as a special adviser to the President of the Treasury Board. He was appointed by order in council which was made possible under section 39 of the Public Service Employment Act. A press release referring to Mr. Rogers described him as the "Comptroller General designate." I understand that certain news reports referred to him as the Comptroller General. Of course, he cannot assume the responsibilities of that position until the bill creating the position has been duly debated and passed by both houses of Parliament and given royal assent.

The relevant section of the communiqué from the office of the Prime Minister, issued on February 20, reads:

The Prime Minister announced today the appointment of Mr. Harry Rogers . . . as Comptroller General designate effective April 2, 1978. The Prime Minister expressed his pleasure that the government has been able to obtain the services of such an outstanding person for this key position and thanked Xerox of Canada Limited for its co-operation in this matter.

In making the announcement, the Prime Minister noted that Mr. Rogers would be reporting to the President of the Treasury Board and would be responsible for the assessment and upgrading of financial management programs and financial personnel throughout the Public Service in order to improve both financial control and overall management.

The release goes on to set out some of Mr. Rogers' academic and other background.

I have ascertained, as well, that the practice is not an extraordinary one; that this procedure has been followed in the case of other appointments, pending assent being given by Parliament to the legislation creating the position for which the designated individual is expected to assume responsibility.

Senator Grosart: A supplementary. Could I ask the Leader of the Government if the situation, then, is that the Prime Minister made an appointment designate to an office to which Parliament had not assented?

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, Mr. Rogers has been assigned the position of special adviser to the Treasury Board as at the present time. That is his only position and status. If, of course, Parliament determines at some future date that it does not wish to approve of the proposed legislation which would bring into being the position of Comptroller General, a position which it is intended that Mr. Rogers may ultimately be able to fill, then appropriate action would have to be taken with respect to Mr. Rogers' position as special adviser to the Treasury Board.

● (1410)

Honourable senators, generally it is regarded as being of value to have people who are expected to assume burdensome responsibilities of this kind acquaint themselves in advance with some of the challenges of the office. As I have stated, the practice is a normal one and has been followed, I understand, on other occasions by this government and by previous governments.

Senator Greene: Honourable senators, Xerox being an American corporation, may we take it that Mr. Rogers is a Canadian citizen?

Senator Perrault: Mr. Rogers is most assuredly a Canadian citizen. He was born in that great thriving metropolis of Toronto on April 24, 1931. He obtained his B.A. in Economics and Political Science from the University of Western Ontario where he was a gold medalist in 1954. In 1955 he was involved with the Ford Motor Company of Canada, and after two years he became involved in its international operations where he held comptrollership and finance positions, eventually becoming general manager in Japan.

In 1969 Mr. Rogers accepted a senior financial position with Xerox. He returned to Canada in 1973 as Vice-President, Finance, Xerox of Canada Limited, and in 1977 he was appointed to his present position with that firm. He is very much a Canadian, and a good one.

CAPITAL PUNISHMENT

STATEMENT ATTRIBUTED TO GOVERNMENT LEADER IN THE SENATE—QUESTION

Senator Grosart: Honourable senators, may I direct a second question to the Leader of the Government? Has the leader announced, as reported in the public media, that the government has in preparation legislation or a referendum which might have the effect of restoring capital punishment in certain circumstances? I ask this question because there were reports that the Leader of the Government, as a member of the cabinet, has made these statements. These reports were carried on radio, television and in the public press.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, I appreciate this opportunity to clarify a statement which was incorrectly attributed to me. It arose from an open-line radio program in which I took part on Monday morning last. The program was 90 minutes in length and it was carried on a network of radio stations in the province of British Columbia. The host of the program is a former member of the Conservative caucus, who does a very competent job in his present position. In the course of the program, without giving details, I had the opportunity to suggest to the audience that there were in preparation a number of amendments to the Criminal Code which I felt would be welcomed by the Canadian people. As honourable senators are aware, on Monday afternoon last, these proposed amendments in the form of Bill C-51, the Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1978, were given first reading in the other place.

As I recall, in the course of the broadcast a caller introduced the subject of a possible referendum on the subject of capital punishment in Canada. I said in the course of my reply that I agreed with the views set forth by Edmund Burke to the electors of Bristol, that, in effect, when the electorate sends a representative to Parliament, they elect his or her judgment.

I said that, while at some future time some Government of Canada might choose to conduct a referendum on the subject of capital punishment, or any other subject, it was my view that it would create chaos to have individual referendums on every question which arises.

Out of that statement, which was heard by thousands of people in British Columbia over a network of stations and was tape recorded, came a truncated report in the media that I had advocated a vote on the re-establishment of capital punishment. Indeed, the report suggested that I had in mind some specific government-enabling legislation which was in process of preparation.

The report was inaccurate and I appreciate, therefore, the opportunity to clarify the matter.

Senator Grosart: Did I understand the Leader of the Government to say that some future government might consider it?

Senator Perrault: Yes. I held out the possibility that some future government might. After all, any government, with the assent of Parliament, is capable of undertaking many initiatives in the sense of—

Senator Choquette: Introducing new legislation.

Senator Perrault: Yes, introducing new legislation or even conducting referendums. I did point out to the audience that, as honourable senators are aware, there is some proposed legislation in the other place that will in all probability come before us ultimately to permit the holding of referendums on questions relating to constitutional matters. I think that my reply under the circumstances was entirely proper.

Senator Grosart: May the Senate take it, then, that the reference to a future government makes it clear that there is no suggestion that that future government will be a Liberal government?

Senator Langlois: Could it be otherwise?

Senator Perrault: No, it is simply that I would not wish to predict what any future government would choose to do. That would be presumptuous of me. It may be that at some distant point in the future there will be a change in government and that that new government might decide it wishes to undertake all sorts of initiatives, including public referendums.

Senator Smith (Colchester): Has the honourable gentleman changed his mind about the imminence of the opportunity for the electorate to change the government of the day?

Senator Perrault: The possibility of an election is certainly not an obsession of the government at the present time. Indeed, the government is engaged in developing a range of new legislation which can be brought before Parliament.

Senator Smith (Colchester): What about the obsession which led the honourable gentleman on April 13 to refer to the possible imminence of dissolution? Is it letting go its hold on the government?

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, as I said a few days ago, I fear that I placed too much credence in predictions made by the Honourable Leader of the Conservative Party, who confidently predicted that there would be an election on June 19. I must confess that I was misled by his most eloquent statement.

Senator Smith (Colchester): Does the honourable gentleman ordinarily give more credence to the statements of the Leader of the Conservative Party than he does to those of his own leader?

Senator Grosart: May I ask the Leader of the Government a supplementary question? In view of the answer he has just given and in view of the fact that, in his opinion anyway, it was clear that dissolution would be "soon"—and that was the word he used—and for that reason he urged the passage of legislation with what many of us would regard as undue haste—in view of that is he prepared now to give us the assurance that there will be no such pressure to pass the legislation that is before us and is coming before us?

Senator Perrault: That is a guarantee that I am unable to provide. Honourable senators are aware, of course, that the decision to have a dissolution is one which belongs entirely to the Right Honourable the Prime Minister. I know that the Deputy Leader of the Opposition has had experience in that area and is aware of the prerogatives and rights associated with the responsibility of the office of Prime Minister. I wish to say that there is an immense amount of support for the leader of the Liberal Party in Canada, and his dissolution decision will be accepted by all members of our party. We are fully prepared to set forth our record for the Canadian people at the time designated by the Right Honourable the Prime Minister.

● (1420)

Senator Smith (Colchester): Obviously, you have more courage than he.

MIDDLE EAST

PARTICIPATION OF CANADA IN UNITED NATIONS PEACEKEEPING FORCE IN SOUTHERN LEBANON—QUESTION

[Translation]

Senator Wagner: Honourable senators, on another matter—which concerns me far more than the calling of an election—I should like to ask the Leader of the Government about the current situation in Lebanon by putting the following question to him:

[English]

In view of the most recent incidents in which members of the United Nations peacekeeping force in Lebanon have encountered resistance from Palestinian groups, as a result of which some have been killed, is it the intention of the government to revise its position toward Canadian participation in the UN operations and to seek assurances from the interested parties that active resistance to the presence of the blue berets will cease forthwith?

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, I must take that question as notice. A reply will be sought immediately and an answer provided as quickly as possible.

Senator Wagner: Honourable senators, as a supplementary question, I understand that the Secretary General of the United Nations has expressed concern over these new developments and is considering asking the Security Council for additional troops from participating countries. May I ask the government leader if effectively Canada has been approached by the Secretary General for additional military personnel, and, if so, what has been our response to such a request?

[Senator Grosart.]

Senator Perrault: Information with respect to that supplementary question will be obtained as soon as possible.

NATIONAL REVENUE

INFORMATION CIRCULAR—REGISTERED CHARITIES— QUESTIONS

Senator Grosart: Honourable senators, because this is the question period, may I take this opportunity to welcome the Minister of National Revenue (Senator Guay) on his return to the chamber.

Senator Godfrey: Honourable senators, I should like to address a question to the Minister of National Revenue, dealing with the same subject that Senator Roblin dealt with last night. Although my question is somewhat similar to that asked by Senator Roblin, it is a little more specific. I do not expect the minister to be able to answer it immediately, but that he will take the question as notice.

My first question is: Are there any court cases in Canada—I underline the words "in Canada"—dealing with the question of whether or not a charity may be denied registration or lose its registration under the Income Tax Act because it devotes some of its resources to the kind of political activities outlined in paragraphs three to seven inclusive of the information circular? If so, what are the names and citations of those cases?

My second question is: Does the department consider that there is an appeal to any court from a decision of the minister as to whether or not a charity may be registered, or lose its registration under the Income Tax Act, because of the type of so-called political activities referred to in the information circular? If the department is of the opinion that there is a right of appeal to the courts, what is the legislative or other authority for such an appeal?

Senator Guay: Honourable senators, I should first like to say that last night was the first occasion since I took the oath in this chamber that I was not present here.

Some Hon. Senators: Hear, hear.

Senator Guay: As Minister of National Revenue it is my responsibility to administer the department to the best of my ability. That is what I was doing. I informed my leader that I would not be in the chamber last night, and I also informed the appropriate Senate official of this by letter, stating that I would be in Vancouver fulfilling certain responsibilities I have as Minister of National Revenue. I intend, honourable senators, to do that job as well as you are attempting to do your job, while at the same time attending the Senate on a daily basis.

If you will allow me to do so I should also like to say that I have been in the House of Commons for ten years, and I would challenge many of you to match my record of attendance in that house. I do not recall being absent for a single day unless it was on government business, or unless it was the occasion when I was in hospital for 11 days. I am very proud of that record and, should by any chance my responsibilities as Minister of National Revenue be taken away, it is my intention to carry on in the same way in this chamber, even if only to make sure that all of you are in attendance when I am.

With regard to your first question, senator, let me say that I am checking to see whether there is any jurisprudence as far as Canada is concerned. To the best of my knowledge at the moment, there is none. We can refer to the British courts, as you know, but I have my doubts as far as the Canadian courts are concerned. However, I am having officials of the Department of Justice look into this for me.

Your second question is a very good one indeed, though I am not familiar enough with the subject matter to be able to answer it right away. However, I will make sure that I get the appropriate answer and present it to the Senate.

I am prepared, at least in part, if I am called upon to do so, to answer some of the questions pertaining to the responsibility of my department concerning the publication of the leaflet that was referred to in this chamber yesterday.

Senator Roblin: I wonder if the honourable senator would consider answering the questions I raised last night on these points.

Senator Guay: I should like to read the section of the act that was referred to in the information circular we sent out. Section 149.1(1)(b) reads as follows:

(b) "Charitable organization"—"charitable organization" means an organization, whether or not incorporated, all the resources of which are devoted to charitable activities carried on by the organization itself and no part of the income of which is payable to, or is otherwise available for, the personal benefit of any proprietor, member, shareholder, trustee or settlor thereof.

The information circular gives great leeway to charitable organizations with regard to the presentation of briefs, letters, and so on, to the minister responsible for the activities the organization is concerned with.

The press and the opposition have greatly distorted the facts of the present situation. I would like to say, for example, that we are not muzzling anyone. This is information which the officials of my department are giving to assist in the interpreting of the law as it is. If by any chance anyone should feel that the law is not right, then perhaps they should ask for legislation to have it changed. The individuals running charitable organizations have great leeway also, under the law, with regard to making known their political views as they relate to their activities, so long as they do not abuse the resources of the charity they are concerned with in doing so. They also have complete freedom to express views and campaign for any political party as much as they wish, as long as they do so outside of the bounds of their charitable organization.

● (1430)

To be more specific in regard to your question, senator, the issue of the circular was not an act of intimidation, implied or otherwise. It was issued as a service to inform the public of the existing law, and thereby enabling charities to avoid an unintended contravention of the law. It was not a statement of policy. It was an explanation of certain aspects of the law and related jurisprudence as administered by Revenue Canada that have been in existence for many years.

The circular does not apply to all voluntary organizations in the country as inferred by the honourable senator. It applies only to those segments of the voluntary sector that operate as charities and who wish to seek registration under the Income Tax Act as charities.

These guidelines that we sent out are certainly not regulations, but they do explain what the officers in my department have in mind. They usually put this out only after consultation with the appropriate lawyers, for example, from the Department of Justice and also from my own department.

Senator Roblin: Honourable senators, may I ask a question following on the minister's statement? Is he telling the Senate that this document to which we have been referring is being used as the basis now for the enforcement of this act and his duties? Is this now in force?

Senator Guay: This is the interpretation the officers have put on it, but, at the same time, we are quite prepared, as I outlined earlier, to hear representations by various organizations, to consider their briefs, if necessary, and to consider their concern in this particular regard. In so doing we may suggest that some changes be made. At the moment, we are saying to these organizations that this is the way in which Revenue Canada, which has the responsibility of dealing with these matters, interprets the law as it stands at the moment under the section I quoted earlier.

Senator Roblin: Will the honourable minister tell the Senate whether there have been any cases in which the terms of this particular document have been invoked so as to cancel the right of any charitable organization to the given tax concessions?

Senator Guay: Not to my knowledge, but I will be very pleased to look into that aspect and give you an answer tomorrow.

Senator Roblin: Then, Mr. Minister, if there are no cases that you can bring to mind based on the rules and regulations laid out in this document, I am wondering why it was found necessary to issue the document in the first place.

Senator Guay: I said "No" to you a moment ago, but possibly I should not have said that.

There is a case that I have in mind, but which I am not prepared to spell out at the moment, whereby a charitable organization was dealing in a subdivision, was dealing in real estate, was dealing in a multiplicity of things while, at the same time, wanting to be recognized as a charitable organization. There were millions of dollars involved. However, I am not in a position to name that case.

Senator Roblin: Selling property is not politics at the present time.

Senator Guay: I could have added other things, but I did not want to go too far.

Senator Forsey: Honourable senators, I wonder if I might ask a supplementary, drawing the minister's attention particularly to two notable features in this circular. On second thought, I may draw his attention to more than two, but first of all, two. If he would look at point number four in the circular headed "Political Objects", in the second paragraph he will find this:

"Political" also is an objective which is to be achieved through political action, for example, an organization formed to promote temperance by securing legislation to reduce the consumption of alcohol (even though the courts have held that the promotion of temperance otherwise is a charitable object).

Well, now, I should like the minister to explain to us exactly what that means, because I happen to belong to an organization one of whose purposes to the best of my belief is to secure legislation to reduce the consumption of alcohol.

Senator Grosart: Shame, shame.

Senator Forsey: And I wish more people belonged to it, I might add. I am a regular contributor to the funds of that organization and it is one of my favourite charitable organizations. It is certainly concerned with the promotion of temperance in various other ways, but I should like the minister to give me some idea of whether the fact that it does unquestionably, by briefs to various governments and by circulating documents to members of Parliament, both houses as far as I know, whether it is, in fact, held to be engaged in political objects and political activity, because, if so, then very shortly it may find itself decertified, wiped off the list. That is my first question.

Now, my second question has to do with something under the next main heading, "Political Activities," and paragraph (a)(ii), which reads:

It is also considered acceptable for a registered charity to present a brief spontaneously, without invitation, to governments, commissions or committees, setting out its views on matters of concern and merely recommending corrective measures, provided it does not undertake a program to promote its recommendations.

Well, now, that last expression seems to be extremely vague. What constitutes "undertake a program to promote its recommendations"? I don't know, but it seems to be distressingly vague and it seems to me a net which might catch various activities which most of us would probably consider quite legitimate.

On the next page, in paragraph (b)(i), we find the same kind of thing:

Written or oral representations by a registered charity to its own elected representative—

Who in the world is the "elected representative" of a registered charity? That is a mysterious observation. I should like to discover anybody in this house, or the other house—well, not in this house, because we aren't elected, but anybody in the other house—who could be described as the "elected representative" of a particular charity. This is another example, I think, of the sloppy drafting that we are so often confronted with in legislation coming up from the other place.

It goes on:

—i.e. Member of Parliament, Member of Legislative Assembly or Municipal Councillor, to the involved Minister of the Crown or the pertinent public servant are also looked upon as an acceptable activity on condition that such representations are limited to presenting the organization's interests and point of view and otherwise do not attempt to influence legislation.

Well, I have got in my office now a document from a certain other organization to which I contribute, an important and old and well-recognized and most reputable organization, which asks me to write to the minister or ministers concerned on the subject of certain amendments to the Income Tax Act which appear to me to be perfectly legitimate. I am not much impressed by the particular views they express and I am doubtful whether I shall take any action, but is that an attempt to influence legislation? I don't know.

The next subparagraph, (ii), is:

Written or oral representations to all or mostly all—

● (1440)

At what point do you get enough members of Parliament to say that it is "mostly all"? It is curious English into the bargain, I might add. It states:

Written or oral representations to all or mostly all Members of Parliament or Ministers of the Crown, as part of a campaign to influence intended or specific legislation, is—

You will observe that not only do they not know much about the dictionary but the rules of English grammar are beyond their compass.

Written or oral representations . . . is a political activity and as such cannot be properly carried on by a charity that wishes to maintain registered status.

What does it mean when it says "as part of a campaign to influence intended or specific legislation."

Then, of course, there is the business about demonstrations, which has been referred to in other questions.

Farther down under (f) it deals with the letters to editors. This is one that strikes home directly to me, of course.

A letter-to-the-editor campaign may be used by a registered charity to explain its purposes and programmes, recruit members and raise funds but may not be used to air political views or attempt to sway public opinion for or against a political issue.

They mean "on a political issue", of course, because you cannot sway public opinion against an issue. It is a good job for me that I am not a registered charity or I would have been wiped out of existence a long time ago.

Then farther down we have (g) which relates to publications.

A registered charity may publish a magazine, a review or a newspaper, etc. on a political subject provided that an impartial and objective coverage is given to all facets of the subject matter.

Well, that would be rather rough on the temperance organization which I mentioned a while ago. I suppose it would have to include statements from the distillers organizations, the brewers organizations and various others. I think it is a little bit hard to expect the temperance organization to do this, especially as these other organizations, presumably, are quite capable of airing their views effectively.

I hope that when the minister looks over this thing and considers the whole set of questions which have been raised, he will take these questions of mine as notice and will look into these particularly and give us some kind of answer on the meaning of some of these mysterious, vague, sweeping and possibly highly pernicious phrases.

Senator Guay: Senator Forsey, I can see that you have done some homework since I saw you this morning. First of all, I should like to say that I do not wish to see any tax rip-offs. I do not want to see any diversion of the revenue which would otherwise come to Canada—a diversion which makes for increased taxation. It is possible that taxes can be reduced if Canada receives all the revenue to which it is entitled, and it is my responsibility to see that it does.

I want to make sure that every case is dealt with on its own merits. I do not want to speak in a broad sense and then say we are going to treat everyone alike, because all these cases are different.

I also believe, senator, that a question such as this would certainly be out of bounds in the other place.

Senator Grosart: You are not in the other place now.

Senator Guay: Perhaps it is a different ball game in the Senate, and I am learning. I did not know one could get up and ask a question lasting 10 minutes and expect an answer immediately.

I will use the same words you used, and say that I am impressed by your question. I will make sure I will give you the appropriate answer tomorrow after looking over the notes I have taken of your question.

Senator Greene: I rise on a point of order. Almost from the day of the Charlottetown agreement volumes have been written on how we can reform the Senate. I suggest that the Right Honourable the Prime Minister, in one fell swoop, has done this as effectively as it could be done—in the first place, by making appointments of such high calibre on both sides of this house and, secondly, by making this house a place where cabinet ministers sit in more abundant numbers than they have in the past.

Senator Manning: Honourable senators, in his comments a few moments ago, I believe the minister drew a distinction between charitable organizations and non-profit organizations. I am somewhat confused on that point and wonder if he would mind, not necessarily today but when he is dealing with this matter tomorrow, elaborating on that point, both with respect to the legislation and this directive which has been sent out.

There is another area which has caused a great deal of concern in recent days, and perhaps he would be good enough to comment on it tomorrow. Many church organizations, as honourable senators know, have what they call social action committees and other groups through which they express their concern with the social problems of our times. It seems to me that what we have heard in respect to this legislation and this directive could well be in direct conflict with what has been accepted practice, because many of these social action committees are integral parts of the church organizations, and are not only making representations to the government for changes in policy, but are active, I think we would have to say, in at least the fringe of the political field. One finds their representatives in marches which protest government policies, and it seems to me to be a very serious thing if we infringe on that type of freedom of expression simply because they are classified as religious, charitable or non-profit organizations.

I hope the minister can clarify this matter. If it is found that the legislation or directive does infringe on those fields, then I would appeal to him to take the necessary action to see that the legislation is amended so that this fear that has been engendered by what has happened in the last few days is dispelled.

Senator Guay: Honourable senators, I have made a note of the discussions which have taken place. I think there may be some specific problems relating to the wording of this interpretation bulletin. Although the general wording of it appears to me to be sound, I am going to request my officials to review the entire wording and make it more precise.

Senator Smith (Colchester): Honourable senators, I will defer—perhaps not ask at all—some of the questions I had in mind, in view of the minister's assurance of a moment ago. However, there are one or two questions I should like to ask.

The first is: Is he not aware that the bulk of the criticism directed towards this document or circular is concerned not with the law itself, but with the interpretation of the law which officials have placed on the document?

Senator Guay: Yes.

Senator Smith (Colchester): I thank the honourable senator for that answer.

Secondly, may I ask him a question relating to a letter he wrote to Mr. McGrath, a member of the other place, on April 18, 1978, I believe. I should like to know what criteria for judgment he had in mind when he used the following phrase:

As you will see, this status would not be prejudiced by limited attempts to promote the interests of these organizations at the political level.

As I said, I should like to know what criteria or standards he had in mind by which he would determine, or his department would determine, whether the attempts were or were not limited?

● (1450)

ROYAL COMMISSION ON CONCENTRATION OF CORPORATE POWER

PUBLICATION OF REPORT—QUESTION

Senator Austin: Honourable senators, I have a question for the government leader. It relates to the Royal Commission on Corporate Concentration. At the time of the appointment of that commission in 1975, the Prime Minister gave it the appellation "Royal," because he said it was a commission dealing with one of the most significant subjects in the Canadian economic context.

Can the government leader tell us whether that royal commission is going to make a report on the subject of corporate concentration and, if so, when that report might be expected?

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, I must take the question as notice. I understand that the publication of the report is imminent. I shall make further inquiries in that regard later this afternoon.

COMPTROLLER GENERAL OF CANADA

STATUS OF HARRY ROGERS—SUPPLEMENTARY QUESTION

Senator Smith (Colchester): Honourable senators, I wonder if I might direct a supplementary question to the Leader of the Government with reference to a question asked earlier in this question period by the Deputy Leader of the Opposition concerning the appointment, or otherwise, of a Comptroller General. My question relates to the answer given by the Leader of the Government to that earlier question in which he said, as I understood him, that the procedure to which he then referred in explanation of what had happened had been used on previous occasions by various governments.

I should like to know on what previous occasions has a person been referred to as designate for a position which can only be created by Parliament and which had not been created by Parliament at the time the announcement was made?

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, that information will be sought. In the meantime, I want to assure honourable senators that the procedures followed here have precedents and are legal, and are in accord with our parliamentary traditions. Two or three other instances have been cited. However, I shall attempt to obtain specific information which I can bring to the Senate.

Senator Grosart: It could be a bad precedent.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, I think the precedents will be totally relevant. I have here the regulations respecting the employment of Mr. H. G. Rogers, P.C. 1978-475, which state:

The Governor in Council may appoint Mr. H. G. Rogers to the position of Special Adviser to the President of the Treasury Board on matters of financial and administrative controls.

[Senator Smith (Colchester).]

That is really the only action that has been taken so far. I can see nothing wrong in specifying that a person is designated for a position, subject to approval of that position by Parliament. Surely there is nothing unusual in that.

Senator Grosart: Except there is no provision for approval by Parliament.

Senator Perrault: I feel rather confident that in the long career of the Honourable Senator Smith (Colchester) in Nova Scotia that, indeed, he can recall similar provincial precedents.

Senator Smith (Colchester): I would be very surprised if one could ever find a provincial precedent with which I had anything to do where a person was referred to as a Comptroller General designate, or any kind of designate, for a job which did not exist and could not exist until created by the legislature of Nova Scotia or, as in this case, the Parliament of Canada.

My question did not relate to the hiring of a person as a consultant or adviser, but as Comptroller General designate, as I understood the official reference to be from the earlier answer given by the Leader of the Government. What is the precedent for the use of that kind of reference?

Senator Perrault: The term "designate" was employed in a press release. The official, legal order in council, the regulation respecting the appointment of Mr. Rogers, clearly sets out that he is a special adviser to the President of the Treasury Board.

There is an earnest intent on the part of the government to meet, as effectively as possible, certain criteria which have been set forth by the Auditor General. I think it is most encouraging that the Auditor General has had a great deal of praise for the initiative of the government, the energy of the government, in attempting to meet these criteria.

I think it rather significant that the present Government of Canada has been substantially more active in implementing the spirit and letter of the recommendations of the Auditor General than has been the case in similar instances with other political jurisdictions of this nation.

Senator Grosart: On a point of order—

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, I am speaking now—

Senator Grosart: This is on a point of order.

Senator Perrault: May I conclude what I have to say in reply to the honourable senator?

Senator Grosart: It is a point of order.

Senator Perrault: If it is a valid point of order, we will listen with rapt attention.

Senator Grosart: Our rules are very clear here. When a senator rises and says he is rising on a point of order, he has the floor. I am surprised that the Leader of the Government wishes to contest that.

Senator Perrault: Carry on, senator.

Senator Grosart: Surely he has been here long enough to appreciate that that is essential to our practice here.

The point of order is this: There is before the Senate a bill on second reading for discussion. That being so, it is completely out of order for the Leader of the Government, in reply to a question, to enter into that debate in the way he is now doing.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, that is a very dubious point of order. I find it incredible that a person who gives so much lip service to the idea of parliamentary democracy and the rights of the opposition should wish to deny to the Leader of the Government the opportunity to reply to a question posed by a member of the opposition—indeed, a question containing very negative inferences about this government. I think the position set forth by the Deputy Leader of the Opposition could find no support in any other parliamentary assembly of which I have knowledge. I want to assure honourable senators—

Senator Grosart: We have a rule of relevance.

Senator Perrault:—that the intention of the government in having Mr. Rogers assume this position as a special adviser represents an earnest effort by the government to get on with the job as quickly as possible, an effort to assure that the spending programs of this nation are brought under even more adequate control, supervision and vigilance—a demand which has been made unceasingly by the official opposition for years. I want to tell honourable senators that we are not going to be deterred in our efforts to bring these advances into being.

Senator Grosart: That was not the question.

Senator Smith (Colchester): I thank the honourable gentleman for his brief, concise and clear answer—

Senator Grosart: And irrelevant.

Senator Smith (Colchester):—to my very brief question. However, I could wish that it had been relevant; I could wish that he had not drawn attention to the dereliction of duty of his own government so vigorously by referring to the fact that it has taken the government such a long time to bring these matters under control.

Dealing with the press release, was it not drawn by a person authorized by the government and was it not issued to be believed?

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, there is nothing improper in the press release issued in connection with Mr. Rogers' new position as special adviser to the Treasury Board and as a designate for the position of Comptroller General. If Parliament decides that it does not wish to create the position of Comptroller General, then, of course, Mr. Rogers will not be in a position to assume his new responsibilities.

I really think, for some reason that escapes me, that there is a vigorous attempt being made here to create a mountain out of a molehill.

Senator Smith (Colchester): I will readily concede the proposition that sometimes the honourable gentleman resembles a molehill, but that was not my intent to demonstrate today.

All of this discussion, which the honourable gentleman lengthened irrelevantly, at considerable trouble to himself, started over the simple question I asked, which was whether he could produce the precedents to which he had referred wherein in such cases a person had been referred to as a designate of some kind.

Senator Perrault: That assurance was given some time ago. I can only say that that information will be sought. There is nothing improper in this procedure. If Parliament decides that it does not wish to pursue the proposed legislation, that is Parliament's right.

Senator Smith (Colchester): Which we know.

[Later:]

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, may I rise to provide a partial reply? I was asked for precedents and I have one. Mr. André Fortier was appointed as special adviser to the Secretary of State until legislation establishing the Social Science and Humanities Research Council of which he is now president was passed. That is just one precedent.

Senator Smith (Colchester): Honourable senators, though the honourable gentleman has put it forward as a precedent, it is in fact no precedent at all. The question I asked was as to what precedents there were where such a person was referred to officially as "designate," whether it be "comptroller designate" or whatever other position it might be. The example given does not mention the word "designate" at all so it is no precedent. That is no precedent.

Senator Grosart: I wonder if the Leader of the Government would tell us whether he really appreciates the difference between appointing somebody as "designate" to a position that Parliament has not approved, and merely hiring somebody in the hope that he will get a better job?

Senator Croll: Oh, let us get on with the Orders of the Day.

Senator Smith (Colchester): I would point out to Senator Croll that there are privileges of Parliament.

Senator Croll: You have had no shortage of privilege today.

ADMINISTRATION OF JUSTICE

LIBEL ACTION—PAYMENT OF LEGAL FEES—QUESTION

Senator Forsey: Honourable senators, I forgot last night, when I was asking certain questions about the measures which have apparently been taken and are being contemplated for the relief of the Honourable Jean-Pierre Goyer, to ask—and I should like now to ask the Leader of the Government to inquire—from what vote in the appropriation acts the money has been paid, or will be paid, for the relief of Mr. Goyer in that libel action in which he was involved?

I asked for the legal basis for the government's action in the matter. I should like also to ask where exactly the money is coming from under appropriations from Parliament.

● (1500)

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, that question will be taken as notice and the information will be sought as quickly as possible.

Senator Grosart: You are going to be busy.

Senator Perrault: Yes.

SOLAR ENERGY

OBSERVATION OF SUN-DAY

Senator Austin: Honourable senators, before the Orders of the Day are called I would ask leave to draw the attention of the Senate to the observance by some 40 countries today of an event known as SUN-DAY.

The Senate earlier approved on second reading a bill which I had the honour to present in connection with the development of solar energy. Regrettably, it was not proceeded with in the last session, but I know that the Senate is interested in and does support the development of solar energy techniques so as to provide humanity with an abundant, economical, safe and environmentally compatible energy supply. SUN-DAY is also being noted this afternoon in the other place, and, I believe, with the unanimous approval of all parties in that place.

Senator Perrault: Let there be light in this house as well!

FINANCIAL ADMINISTRATION ACT

BILL TO AMEND—SECOND READING—DEBATE CONTINUED

The Senate resumed from yesterday the debate on the motion of Senator Cook for the second reading of Bill C-10, to amend the Financial Administration Act.

Hon. Allister Grosart: Honourable senators, I would like to be able to say that this is a bill which gives me an opportunity to cool the atmosphere in the Senate a little, but unfortunately it is not that kind of bill. However, I must begin my remarks by complimenting its sponsor, Senator Cook, on an excellent presentation to the Senate. I say that particularly because he did not merely read to us the presentation by the department; he had obviously studied the bill carefully and made his own comments on its effectiveness or otherwise.

I gathered the impression that he had some qualifications; that he was not entirely convinced that this bill will do what he and others hope it will. I may be misinterpreting him in that, but I think a reading of his remarks would indicate that he did appear to have some reservations, and I share them with him. I have a few more that he did not express, although I have no doubt that they will have occurred to him.

This is an important bill; it deals with the creation of the position of Comptroller General of Canada. The Auditor General, who recommended the creation of this post, went so far as to say that this position would be the most important financial position in the public or private sector in Canada. That may be going too far, but I would most certainly agree with him that the effective creation and the effective carrying out of the duties proposed by the Auditor General—but not by the government—for this position would go a long way towards making it as important as the Auditor General believes it to be. In fact, the Auditor General went so far as to say that the office of Comptroller General which he recommended, if made effective, would be ten times more important than that of the Auditor General. Possibly it was the minister who said that, but it is an indication of the importance attached to the position we are now asked to create. In fact, its importance is the subject of a 600-page recommendation by the Auditor General in his report for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1976.

I speak now directly to the importance of the post, and not immediately to those conditions which create the importance of the post. Those words which I quoted from memory a moment ago appear at page 14 of that report where the Auditor General, speaking of the position, says:

I rate it as the most important and responsible financial executive position in both the public and private sectors of Canada.

He also said:

What I do advocate is the type of financial control exercised by the chief financial officer of virtually every business organization of any size in Canada, or, indeed, throughout the world.

The suggestion there, of course, is that we do not have that kind of chief financial officer operating at the present time. The Auditor General further says that the Comptroller General should have prescribed authorities that are fully commensurate with his key duties and responsibilities. As I shall indicate in a moment, the major deficiency in this bill is that this legislative authority has not been provided. What is provided is in no way consonant with that recommendation that he should have the legislative responsibility to do the job.

Referring back for a moment to the words I attributed to the minister, I find that, in fact, it was the Auditor General who said:

—I can assure you that those responsibilities are probably 10 times as great as those of the Auditor General of Canada.

So, having a clear indication of the importance of this post, one naturally asks if the government has met those requirements of the Auditor General. Has it in any way established a post which will take this absolutely necessary control over the long record of waste, inefficiency and scandal in the conduct of government over the years? I am not at the moment tying it merely to this government. The evidence is that control of our financial affairs by government and by Parliament has been deteriorating for many years, and little has been done about it.

● (1510)

It has been said that this legislation is something new. The Leader of the Government indicated that here the government is now doing something innovative. It is doing nothing of the kind. The office of Comptroller General was established in 1931. It was then abolished and this is a significant date—in 1969.

The reasons for that abolition are not hard to find. The government just did not like a Comptroller General with the authority to scrutinize, as Parliament wished, the government's spending and spending intentions. There is clear evidence of that.

The Auditor General's proposal was made in this 600-page report. What was the government's reaction to that? The Prime Minister said, "No, we will not have a Comptroller General." The President of the Treasury Board said no, and the Secretary of the Treasury Board went before the Public Accounts Committee and said, "No, it won't work."

What happened? More and more evidence came forward—it was pouring in day by day—of inefficiency in financial management, of incompetence, of waste and, as we all remember, of scandals. Perhaps it was those scandals—AECL, Polysar and others—that forced on the government a change of mind.

Reluctantly—and the evidence of that reluctance is scattered through the official records—the government agreed to bring in a bill to create the office of Comptroller General. Naturally, it was a compromise, and as poor and ineffective a compromise as would be possible to dream up.

May I read the bill? I have indicated the responsibility and importance of the office. Here is what the bill says:

Her Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate and House of Commons of Canada, enacts as follows:

1. Section 4 of the Financial Administration Act is amended by adding thereto, immediately after subsection (2) thereof, the following subsection:

"(2.1) The Governor in Council may appoint an officer called the Comptroller General of Canada to hold office during pleasure and to perform such duties and functions as may be assigned to him by the Treasury Board, and the Comptroller General of Canada shall rank as and have all the powers of a deputy head of a department."

I sensed some honourable senators wondering whether I was going to read a long passage, but that is the whole bill. Obviously, I cannot discuss the bill in detail, because it has no detail. It merely says that the Governor in Council may—and I am not arguing that point; we have the assurance that he will—that he may appoint this official during pleasure. It is only during pleasure. The official can be fired at any time, if the cabinet does not like his advice. It says that he has the rank of a deputy head of a department and that he shall "perform such duties and functions as may be assigned to him by the Treasury Board".

Of course, we ask immediately: To whom does he report? He has the duty of being responsible for all of the financial expenditures of Canada—$48 billion-plus this year. His duties are assigned by the President of the Treasury Board; but to whom does he report? He reports to the President of the Treasury Board. Could anything be more absurd?

Here is a situation that calls for an objective, outside, independent assessment of the spending intentions of the government, and yet the official appointed reports not to Parliament, not even to the Governor in Council, but to the President of the Treasury Board.

One of the main objections to this bill, expressed both inside and outside Parliament, is that this Comptroller General is denied access to Parliament and Parliament is denied access to him under the present intentions, as they have been indicated by the President of the Treasury Board and others. He is just another official. He is one of two deputy ministers in the Treasury Board. He has the status of a deputy minister and also a status equivalent to that of the Secretary of the Treasury Board.

In what I am saying now I am simply repeating the information that has been given to us, most of it put on record by Senator Cook last night.

The Comptroller General takes over the functions of two branches of government which heretofore, according to the statements made, had the job of making sure that departments were not wasting money. I am not sure how long those departments have been in existence. In any event, they could not do the job. They were ineffective. Moreover, no one seems to have ever heard of those two branches. In fact, when their names were indicated or the designations were given, the Hansard reporters in the other place, who are fully aware of the multiplicity of titles that exist of boards, committees, branches, divisions and so on, had to go and ask, "Who are they? Do we put this in capital letters? Are they official branches?" Well, there they were, and, so far as indicated by any information before the Senate at this moment, the Comptroller General will take over their duties.

The Leader of the Government, in what Senator Smith thought was an irrelevant answer, started to say that the government has implemented the report of the Auditor General. I am sorry to say that it has done nothing of the kind. It has picked what it wanted from that report, what it thought it could live with, but the major recommendation has not been accepted.

Clearly, the purpose of this bill is simply to effect a compromise; to say, "We do not want this kind of scrutiny of the way we are spending public money, but, if you want a facade, if it is necessary to have a facade and to set up this straw man, we will go along with that."

I am sorry for Mr. Rogers. I am surprised that he has accepted the job. The evidence appears to be that he accepted it before he knew what this bill would contain. I would have imagined that a man of Mr. Rogers' calibre and reputation would have said, "Well, of course, my responsibilities, my authority, my power will be spelled out in the legislation." But there is nothing of the sort.

As a result, we have here a bill that provides for this important office and gives this important official—the most important executive in the public or private service of Canada, according to the minister's statement—no authority whatsoever. Yet we are asked to pass this bill that gives not one speck of legislative authority to the Comptroller General or one moment's access to a parliamentary committee.

I would hope that when the Senate gives full consideration to this bill, it will consider improving it. It has been one of our functions here to improve bills. It has been my own feeling that the Senate has accepted this responsibility and that when a case can be made—not a partisan or political case—for the improvement of a bill in the public interest, senators are prepared to give it consideration and, if necessary, to make those improvements in the bill. I, for one, hope that this will happen in this case.

● (1520)

I have at the moment no schedule or program of amendments, but it occurs to me that in the course of debate—I understand there are a number of senators who will speak on the bill—some amendments that would improve the bill will emerge and will receive the support of the Senate.

I emphasize that the major deficiency is the fact that this important official has no authority whatsoever from Parliament except his name. That is all. Parliament says, "We will create the office, we will designate the name of your office, and that is all; that is the end of your authority. You have to rely on what the President of the Treasury Board, the man who is most interested, most concerned, with spending, tells you what you may do to check on the efficiency of the operation of the Treasury Board."

It is just that simple. He can advise. According to the statement of responsibilities, which honourable senators will find appended to yesterday's Debates of the Senate, he will be given no legislative authority; nothing to do with Parliament. His minister can give him authority to advise, and to—believe it or not—"Support the President before Parliamentary Committees." It is incredible. He is the equivalent of an external auditor of business. He is given the job of supporting the decisions of the President of the Treasury Board. That is clear. Item number 13 says:

Support the President before Parliamentary Committees on matters of expenditure control and financial reporting.

It is not to report on the President of the Treasury Board, but to support him. That is what he is going to be told to do. He can give advice, he can give leadership, he can set up a central advisory service to departments, he can provide advice to the Treasury Board Secretariat, and so on, and he can also prepare briefing material. He will be allowed to do that. He will probably be allowed to write speeches for the minister.

In this statement, which is headed "Responsibilities of the Comptroller General," and which is an official statement from the Treasury Board, item number 7 gives him the power to prepare and sign the Public Accounts and certain other financial statements of Canada.

[Senator Grosart.]

As honourable senators may be aware, one of the most regressive, silly and unbelievable decisions made by this government not very long ago was to transfer the preparation of the Public Accounts to the Department of Supply and Services. The spending department, the purchasing department, was given the job of preparing the Public Accounts. I have not heard of a greater absurdity in financial management. Apparently that function is going to be transferred back to the Comptroller General of Canada.

Much more could be said in detail, if there were any detail in the bill. As honourable senators will note, almost everything I have said does not refer to anything in the bill, because there is nothing in the bill. I have had to rely on scattered statements here and there. To a most important question asked of the minister in the Public Accounts Committee, his reply consisted of the two words "No way." He was asked if the government would consider giving the Comptroller General the authority, power and responsibility of reporting to Parliament. Well, we are all aware that the purpose of financial control today is to attempt to restore to Parliament the power of the purse. But when the minister was asked if the Comptroller General could report to Parliament, his two-word answer was, "No way."

So we are asked to pass this bill. I presume that the sponsor will agree to refer it to committee, which I hope will be done in due course, and that it will be examined there. However, I hope that the bill will be debated in the chamber before we are asked to refer it to committee or to proceed with it further.

Senator Greene: Would the honourable senator permit a question?

Senator Grosart: Yes, certainly.

Senator Greene: I wonder if he can assist me. Between the Public Accounts Committee of the other place and the National Finance Committee of the Senate, do we not have access to any of the information to which the honourable senator has adverted, or is there something missing in the staffing or power of those committees which prevents us from getting the sort of financial information for which I believe he quite properly asked?

Senator Grosart: I thank the honourable senator for his question because it is an excellent one, and one to which I should perhaps have given an answer in advance. The fact of the matter, assuming the Comptroller General does anything or tells someone what he is doing, is that he is only required to tell the President of the Treasury Board, and that is the end of the matter. If he writes a report, it will be in the hands of the President of the Treasury Board. It could be hidden forever. Somebody may ask, "Did the Comptroller General object to this expenditure?" and the President of the Treasury Board could give us the familiar answer, "It is not in the public interest to disclose that information."

There is no requirement whatsoever. It is not in the bill and it is not in the suggested modus vivendi that any report he makes, or anything he does, may not be kept absolutely secret. Parliament has no right whatsoever under the bill or any of the quasi-regulations to inquire into that and to ask to see the report. If I read the information correctly, it has no right to obtain any information about the activities of the Comptroller General.

Hon. Eugene A. Forsey: Honourable senators, this bill has at least the merit of brevity. It has the additional merit of being perfectly clear. For once nobody can complain of the inadequate or bad drafting to which we are so often subjected. This bill says exactly what it means. Unfortunately, what it means is exactly nothing. The best description that I can think of for it is one that the late Arthur Meighen once applied to a very different piece of legislation in this house, "a roaring farce and a resounding fake."

The proposed Comptroller of the Treasury has been referred to elsewhere as a watchdog. Well, as far as this bill is concerned, he is a watchdog without even false teeth. He is given no power whatsoever. He is a mere official of the Treasury Board, a special adviser. His existing title, under the regulation which was read to us by the Leader of the Government, will be perfectly appropriate to him when he assumes his new title, if this bill is passed. He will remain a special adviser, nothing more.

● (1530)

He will have the power, if you can call it that, to perform such duties and functions as may be assigned to him by the Treasury Board. He is to bring light, wisdom and order where there has been, on the showing of the Auditor General himself, darkness, folly and chaos; and he is to do this under the instructions of the very institution which has been responsible for the darkness, folly and chaos. He will be completely at the mercy of the Treasury Board.

The sponsor of the bill said, "... we can only hope that the government will be successful in selecting the right man..."—well, I think that is all right; that hope has been fulfilled—"...and that having wisely given him the correct mandate..."—it has given him, in this bill, no mandate whatever—"... it will give him the full authority to carry it out," although it has given him in this bill no authority to carry out anything, except possibly waste paper, if his reports get the kind of treatment that quite possibly they might get from an annoyed Treasury Board.

The instructions under which he operates will be open to change at any moment, simply by the Treasury Board; not by Parliament, not even with a report to Parliament, not even with any consent of Parliament, or any advice of Parliament, but simply at the whim of the Treasury Board. As if that were not enough, he will hold office during pleasure. When I read that my eyes almost started from my head. He will hold office during the pleasure of the Governor in Council. In other words, he will be subject to dismissal at any moment by the government. A queer kind of watch-dog that is.

He will report, not to Parliament, but simply to the Auditor General. Presumably the Auditor General will transmit to Parliament such observations of the Comptroller General as he thinks necessary, but even if he does decide that this transmittal is necessary, he will be transmitting only what the Treasury Board has seen fit to give the Comptroller General the power to comment upon. The Comptroller General, in other words, will be told, "Thus far shalt thou go, and no farther. This thou shalt report upon but not that." When the Treasury Board had told him what he is to report upon, then it goes to the Auditor General, and then the Auditor General will decide whether or not it is necessary to transmit to Parliament the report which the Comptroller General, within the possibly very limited authority given to him, has made.

I think it is instructive to compare what is provided in this bill with what exists in the United Kingdom, where there is, as honourable senators know, a very high official known as the Comptroller and Auditor General, the two offices being united in one. I turn here to two authorities, the first being Wilding's An Encyclopedia of Parliament, where, at pages 161 and 162 we find a description of the office of Comptroller and Auditor General in the United Kingdom. I quote directly from this authority as follows, under the heading of "Comptroller and Auditor General":

The officer who is responsible for the auditing of all public accounts. His position is unique in that he is an Officer of Parliament—

Observe that, honourable senators. He is "an Officer of Parliament;" not merely an official, and in effect, a special adviser to the Treasury Board.

—yet, as head of the Exchequer and Audit Department, he controls a staff of Civil Servants. He is appointed by letters patent on the nomination of the Prime Minister (q.v.), his full title being "Comptroller General of the Receipt and Issue of Her Majesty's Exchequer and Auditor General of Public Accounts." His salary, like that of the Speaker (q.v.), is charged directly to the Consolidated Fund (q.v.) and not provided for in the Estimates (q.v.). His statutory duties are laid down in the Exchequer and Audit Department Acts, 1866 and 1921.

I could quote more from this, and I may return to it in a moment or two, if I find it necessary.

I turn now to the last edition of Erskine May, where I find, under the heading "The Comptroller and Auditor General," the following:

The Comptroller of the receipt and issue of Her Majesty's Exchequer and Auditor General of Public Accounts is appointed by letters patent under the Exchequer and Audit Departments Act 1866, and is removable only on an address from the two Houses.

I am informed by one of the officials in the library, who is particularly learned in this matter, that he is removable actually on an address of the House of Commons. At any rate, he is removable only on an address from at least one of the two Houses of Parliament. I was under the impression that it was on an address by the two Houses of Parliament, as indicated in Erskine May, but it is possible that, as my expert informant tells me, it is on an address of the House of Commons alone. Erskine May continues as follows:

He assists the House of Commons by controlling the issue of money granted by Parliament from the Exchequer on the demand of the Treasury—

Note that, the issue of money.

—and by auditing the accounts of the departments on behalf of the House. His reports regarding the applications and the appropriations of the grants form the basis of the work of the Public Accounts Committee.

There is more on this subject in some detail, but I shall not trouble the house with that.

I do commend to the attention of the house, however, and of the government, the position of the Comptroller and Auditor General in the United Kingdom, and I cannot help asking myself why, if this official in the United Kingdom should be an officer of Parliament, and removable only by address of at least one house of Parliament—and I think it is actually of both houses—the corresponding official here, or the person who is supposed to be in a corresponding position to that of this official in the United Kingdom, should be removable at the pleasure of the Governor in Council.

I draw attention also to the fact that we have formerly had in this country itself a personage called the Comptroller of the Treasury, and if honourable senators will refer to the Revised Statutes of Canada, 1952, chapter 116, they will find, in section 11, the following:

(3) The Comptroller shall be appointed to hold office during good behaviour, but he is removable by the Governor in Council for misbehaviour or for incapacity, inability or failure to perform his duties properly, or for other cause.

Then comes subsection (4), which is as follows:

(4) Where the Comptroller is removed from office, the Order in Council providing for his removal and the documents relating thereto shall be laid before Parliament within fifteen days after it is made, or if Parliament is not then in session, within fifteen days after the commencement of the next ensuing session.

● (1540)

Now, this unfortunate official, whose appointment is provided for in the bill before us, is not given even that limited security of tenure. He is not even given the security of tenure which was provided for the former Comptroller of the Treasury. The list of powers of the former Comptroller of the Treasury, which honourable senators will find in sections 31, 32, 33, 34, 35 and 36 of the Act I have just been reading from, is a very formidable one. I will just mention one or two of them.

Under section 30(1):

No contract providing for the payment of any money by Her Majesty shall be entered into or have any force or effect unless the Comptroller certifies that there is a sufficient unencumbered balance available out of an appropriation or out of an item included in estimates before the House of Commons to discharge any commitments under such contract that would, under the provisions thereof, come in course of payment during the fiscal year in which the contract was entered into.

And there are further provisions under other subsections.

Section 31 is:

(1) No charge shall be made against an appropriation except upon the requisition of the appropriate Minister of the department for which the appropriation was made, or by a person authorized by him in writing.

(2) Every requisition for a payment out of the Consolidated Revenue Fund shall be in such form, accompanied by such documents and certified in such manner as the Comptroller may require.

It goes on through a fairly long subsection (3) and another fairly long subsection (4), and subsections (5), (6) and (7). Then follow the other sections which I referred to. The powers and duties of the Comptroller are specified in immense detail.

It is quite evident from what the Auditor General said to the committee in the other place that he would have originally liked to see, in legislation of this sort, some specification of the duties of the Comptroller General. When he was questioned on the subject, he admitted that he would have liked to see the particular proposals which were being put forward by the Conservative Party in the other place as amendments embodied in the legislation, but when he took the matter up, he said, "I bumped my head into the whole principle of ministerial responsibility." In other words, you could not put this into an act of Parliament, oh no, that would be altogether improper; it would take away from the responsibility of the minister. The Auditor General, being as he said, something of an amateur or a novice in matters of constitutional law, accepted this. What he bumped his head against was not the principle of ministerial responsibility, but the government's or the officials' idea or theory of ministerial responsibility, which is not quite the same thing.

For the life of me I cannot see why this legislation should not provide for an office of the kind that is provided for in the United Kingdom—the office of Comptroller and Auditor General. As we have an Auditor General already, we presumably do not want to touch that. If we are creating an office of Comptroller General, why can't we give him the kind of powers which are specified in the British act? Why can we not specify his powers and his duties in exactly the same way as the powers and duties of the Comptroller of the Treasury were specified in chapter 116 of the Revised Statutes of 1952? Nobody bumped his head into any theory of ministerial responsibility, presumably, when those duties were drawn up. I do not know the precise time when that act was originally passed. I think that the indication here is that there had been a section in the act of 1951. Apparently it was perfectly possible then to put these things into an act of Parliament. If you can put into an act of Parliament anything you want to about the powers and duties and functions of the Comptroller of the Treasury, why can't it be done with the Comptroller General? Apparently it is perfectly possible to do it in Great Britain where I should think the principle of ministerial responsibility is fully as well understood as it is in this country—I am even inclined to think, in some jaundiced and cynical moments, better understood than it is in this country.

Senator Grosart: Right.

Senator Forsey: I cannot for the life of me see why the amendments proposed in the other place, very mild amendments as it seems to me, embodying certain specifications of the powers and duties, should not in fact be included in this legislation.

The amendments were as follows:

The Comptroller General of Canada shall design, develop, implement and monitor such systems that will ensure that

(a) the form of Estimates provides a sound basis for budgetary control;

(b) public monies and assets are under effective custody and control at all times;

(c) accounting procedures and financial reports conform to accepted accounting principles and standards;

Paragraph (d) seems to have got left out in my list here, but (e) is:

satisfactory procedures measure the effectiveness of government programs;

It then went on to say:

and without restricting the generality of the foregoing shall perform such additional duties and functions as may be assigned to him by the Treasury Board.

I am not too enamoured of that last paragraph, but apparently, from the point of view of the people who proposed the amendment in the other place, it was a case of "It pleases 'ee and it don't hurt oi," a well-known principle of the rural proletariat in the United Kingdom.

I simply cannot see why we should not have the same kind of office here with the same kind of security of tenure and the same kind of powers as are provided for in the British legislation, and as were provided for, even to a limited extent, in the old legislation here, for the office and powers and duties of the Comptroller of the Treasury.

I can only hope that when this bill goes to committee, as I trust it will—on the face of it, it is so simple and so brief that one might say that there is no occasion to send it to committee, but the brevity and the simplicity are altogether deceptive—it will receive the most searching examination, and that the minister and officials will be called upon to appear and explain why they think it must be in this peculiar blank and void form, and why there should not be inserted into it the kind of provisions which I have just referred to which will be found, to a limited extent, in our own former legislation and which are to be found in their full plenitude and glory in the legislation of the United Kingdom.

This is a bill of immeasurable importance, it seems to me, if Parliament is to re-assert its control over the expenditure of public money, over the finances of the country. The government, in effect, admits that, but having admitted it in principle, it then produces this shadow of legislation, this mere pious aspiration, if you can dignify it even with that expression, which, as it stands, is really worth absolutely nothing and gives Parliament no control whatever, no vestige of the control which it ought to have over this most important matter.

Senator Greene: Will the honourable senator permit a question?

Senator Forsey: Yes, but if I do not replace my earphone I shall miss your words of wisdom.

Senator Greene: It seems to me we presently have, under the laws of Parliament, the right to use subpoena to bring any officer from any department before our committees. We have been very timorous about using those powers. Are we using this bill, which might be a very proper bill, for the executive to have a certain official that they require when we already have those powers ourselves, if we had the guts to use them? Are we asking them to pull our chestnuts out of the fire by trying to opt an officer that they apparently feel they require for executive purposes, and use him for our legislative purposes?

• (1550)

I do not see why now under our present authority we cannot do any of the things to which you adverted in your speech. We have just been too timid to do them.

Senator Forsey: Well, honourable senator, in the first place I don't think it is a matter of the executive authority and what is useful and convenient for the executive authority. It is a matter of the authority of Parliament and what is useful and necessary for Parliament and, as the Honourable Senator Grosart has pointed out, if the Comptroller General under this legislation reports something to the Treasury Board there is no guarantee that we shall ever know even whether this report exists. How can we say, "We subpoena you . . ."—I shall come to the point about subpoena in a moment—"We subpoena you to come here and tell us about what is in your report" when we do not know that he has made a report at all, let alone what may be in any report that he may have made? The whole thing is hedged with "might have" and "may have" and so forth, and we are groping in the dark. I do not think—I speak subject to correction by honourable senators learned in the law—but you cannot very well subpoena someone simply to come and bring something that he may have written. If he comes, he is obliged in this case to say, "Well, I am acting under the instructions of the Treasury Board, and I cannot produce that." You would get a recorded message such as those we keep getting in the Joint Committee on Regulations and other Statutory Instruments to the effect: "This would involve the giving of a legal opinion which, as you know, I am not allowed to give." The Comptroller General is in a position to say, "This involves revealing information which I am not allowed to reveal. I am acting under the instructions of the Treasury Board."

Now, I am reliably informed that the committees of the House of Commons cannot subpoena anybody, though I am open to correction on that point. Frankly, I do not know whether the Senate committees have or have not the power to subpoena witnesses. If they have, no doubt that is a great advantage, but as I say, even if you have the power to subpoena but you do not know what you are subpoenaing, and the chap is not allowed to give you whatever he may have, I don't know that it would be very effective for the purpose of exerting parliamentary control.

Hon. Léopold Langlois: Honourable senators, I believe I owe a word of explanation to this house for my failure last evening to answer the questions which were posed with regard to this legislation, and particularly with regard to the then information we had that Mr. Rogers had been appointed as Comptroller General. My explanation is that I was absent from Ottawa from the time we adjourned on Tuesday of last week until about five minutes before we came into the house last evening. A week before that I was away from the house because I was under medical treatment as a result of an accident, from which accident I have not as yet fully recovered. This has impeded my activities to a great degree, and it was due to my absence from Ottawa that I was unaware of the announcement which had been published in the press with respect to the so-called appointment of Mr. Rogers until it was brought up in the house yesterday by the sponsor of the bill.

For that reason I had to take the question as notice last evening. Since then I have done some extensive reading in following the progress of this bill in the Commons during the last year and a half or two years. First, it went to the Public Accounts Committee, and since the beginning of this year it has been studied on several occasions by the Committee on Miscellaneous Estimates. I have checked the reaction of the members of the other place with regard to this so-called premature appointment of Mr. Rogers. Absolutely nowhere in these reports was any objection taken, although Mr. Rogers appeared before one of the committees of the other place and gave evidence. No one objected to his being present there and testifying as to his future functions.

Senator Grosart: Not until we discovered the mistake here.

Senator Langlois: No, it was not a mistake, because he was never appointed as Comptroller General. Last evening we witnessed another tempest in a teacup. I will not say "a tempest in a teapot" because the tempest was not even that big.

I turn to the comment—it was not a question but a comment—made last evening by Senator Forsey with regard to the use of the expression of Comptroller General in the other place by the Parliamentary Secretary to the President of the Treasury Board, Mr. Lefebvre. Senator Forsey said this, and I quote from page 724 of Debates of the Senate of yesterday:

Possibly the parliamentary secretary was speaking without any kind of authority but, if so, he should be told by his superiors in the other place to be careful in his use of language henceforth. It is the most extraordinary production I have seen in a long time.

My reading this morning proved that the Parliamentary Secretary to the President of the Treasury Board, Mr.

Lefebvre, was not the only one to refer to Mr. Rogers as being the new Comptroller General. I found many instances of several members of the other place referring to him by his new position. Mr. Lefebvre stated this, at page 5041 of House of Commons Debates of May 1, 1978. Further, Mr. Ron Huntington, the opposition member for Capilano, who is also the chairman of the Public Accounts Committee, said at page 4982 that he was very pleased to see "the appointment and selection of a comptroller general". He also said it is "something I endorse personally, and I am grateful to see it in place." Mr. McGrath also used the same designation for Mr. Rogers. There is nothing wrong with this, and I am not blaming those gentlemen for having misrepresented the facts because they knew exactly what Mr. Rogers was, he having appeared before one of their own committees.

This having been said, I wish to comment on the remarks of Senator Grosart this afternoon when he referred to the responsibilities of this new position. I am not in agreement with his statement that these responsibilities should have been spelled out in the legislation. However, I believe that very few in this and the other house are not acquainted with the responsibilities which will be those of the new appointee.

● (1600)

At a meeting of the Miscellaneous Estimates Committee of the other place on March 16 of this year, Mr. Andras outlined in detail some 20 responsibilities which would be given to the appointee designate. I believe it might be interesting to put some of these responsibilities on the record.

Senator Grosart: They are already part of the record.

Senator Cook: They were made an appendix to last evening's proceedings.

Senator Langlois: Then I will simply point out that these responsibilities do not include being a watchdog of the Treasury Board exclusively as was expressed here this afternoon. The Comptroller General will be the watchdog of all departments, including the Public Service Commission. He will be an adviser to the Treasury Board, having the rank of deputy minister, and, as such, will be available to be called before committees of this house and the other place to report on the operations of his branch of the administration of the Treasury Board.

The suggestion was advanced again this afternoon by both Senator Forsey and Senator Grosart that he probably should have been appointed as an officer of Parliament. This question was put to the President of the Treasury Board during meeting of the Miscellaneous Estimates Committee of the other place. In this connection I refer you again to Issue No. 7 of the proceedings of that committee at page 7:11. Mr. Alexander put a long question to the President of the Treasury Board, but, for the sake of brevity, I will read only the last sentence, as follows:

I would ask you this, sir, do you think it is a good idea that the Auditor General reports and his report is then directed to a committee of Parliament? Do you think that is a good idea?

The report continues:

MR. ANDRAS (PORT ARTHUR): The Auditor General?

THE CHAIRMAN: Yes, Mr. Andras.

MR. ANDRAS (PORT ARTHUR): Obviously I do because I was the architect of the bill that made sure this was the case. I think that is absolutely correct. He is an officer of Parliament, yes.

MR. ALEXANDER: Do you not also think, in light of the importance of this new function, a similar procedure would be a good idea?

MR. ANDRAS (PORT ARTHUR): I think it would be an absolute duplication of what the Auditor General would be doing and, therefore, redundant. You know, that was exactly the issue, Mr. Alexander, which was very thoroughly discussed with the Auditor General. I think if you call the Auditor General before this Committee as a witness, you will find total agreement that he is to be a Deputy Minister with the same authority and the same reporting liaison with committees and Parliament as any other Deputy Minister. The practicality of this is that this man is an operating executive within the administration, as other deputy ministers are, and I think if you broaden it to duplicate the intent of the Auditor General, first, you are simply duplicating the whole system and you really would fragment the co-operation and fragment the effectiveness of this officer. This is an operating executive within the administration, the same as any other deputy minister.

Senator Grosart: That is what is wrong with it.

Senator Langlois: There is nothing to prevent any committee of this house or any committee of the other place from calling this new appointee before it to answer questions as to his functions as Comptroller General. This is a guarantee that Parliament has to appraise the manner in which he will perform his duties.

Senator Grosart: Would the deputy leader permit a question?

Senator Langlois: Yes.

Senator Grosart: Would you not agree that if a committee of Parliament did call this deputy minister or any other deputy minister—and in this particular case I will refer to this deputy minister—he would not be able to come without the permission of his minister?

Senator Langlois: I have been a member of the Senate for 12 years, and was a member of the House of Commons for 12 years. I have participated in the working and operations of many committees, and have never seen an example of a minister turning down a request of any committee to have his deputy or any other officials of his department appear before a committee to give testimony. On many occasions my honourable friend has attended with me meetings of the National Finance Committee when the President of the Treasury Board and his officials, and officials of the Department of Public Works, and many other departmental officials, were called as witnesses. As I indicated, I have never heard of a request having been turned down by a minister. If this should happen, I am sure the minister refusing the permission would be on the spot.

I do not believe a deputy minister has to seek permission from his minister to appear before a committee of Parliament. He is required to appear and give testimony and put himself at the disposal of the committee. That has been the case for several years now. That has been the practice of this Parliament, and I have no fear that it will change tomorrow morning.

The same rule would apply to the Auditor General. The Auditor General does not have to seek permission to put something in his annual report to Parliament. If he is not satisfied with the work done by the Comptroller General, he is required to report that directly to Parliament. That is where you would see some liaison between Parliament and the Comptroller General as stated by Mr. Andras when he appeared before the Miscellaneous Estimates Committee of the other place.

I do not believe there is very much more to add, since I am sure this bill will be referred to committee. I am sure a motion will be put by the sponsor of the bill to refer the same to the National Finance Committee. If that is done this afternoon, I can assure you that notices will be sent out this evening advising that a meeting will be held at 9.30 tomorrow morning. At that time we will have an opportunity to have either Mr. Andras or Mr. Rogers, if he is available, to testify before the committee. Perhaps we could even have the Auditor General, if it is our wish to hear him, give us his views on this arrangement for the operation of the Comptroller General's Office.

The minister stated in the other place that the Auditor General was quite satisfied with this new arrangement, and until it has been given the test I do not think we should try to destroy the position before it is even created.

On motion of Senator Roblin, debate adjourned.

The Senate adjourned until tomorrow at 2 p.m.

THE SENATE

Thursday, May 4, 1978

The Senate met at 2 p.m., the Speaker in the Chair.

Prayers.

PRIVILEGE

PRESS REPORT OF SENATE PROCEEDINGS

Senator Grosart: Honourable senators, I rise on a question of privilege. My purpose in doing so is to correct a report distributed by the Canadian Press agency relating to the proceedings of the Senate of Tuesday last.

The report in question was circulated to customers of the Canadian Press and has been repeated on the radio and television and, amongst other newspapers, in yesterday's Ottawa Journal.

The first few paragraphs of the report are as follows:

For some persons news travels slowly.

For instance, businessman Harry Rogers was appointed comptroller-general of Canada last February and he took office April 2.

Some senators just heard about it Tuesday night, and then in an indirect fashion. They expressed some indignation.

It happened this way—

And the report goes on to indicate some aspects of our proceedings at that time.

I need hardly say that the facts are in effect a direct contradiction of this report, and I emphasize the word "facts." The facts are, of course, that Mr. Harry Rogers was not appointed Comptroller General last February; he did not take office on April 2, and some senators did not just hear about it on Tuesday night, because it just did not happen.

Perhaps it is only fair to say that Canadian Press has issued a follow-up story and they have had the courtesy and kindness to send me a copy. This definitely modifies the original report and quotes the Leader of the Government in the Senate as straightening out the record in this regard, to the extent that he did. Furthermore, the new report carries this statement—"Government spokesmen in the Commons have consistently referred to Rogers as though he already were Comptroller General," which, I suppose, quite definitely gives some excuse to Canadian Press for the incorrect report.

However, honourable senators, I am sure we all welcome in the Senate any time and any occasion when Canadian Press reports our proceedings, and it is certainly not my intent to discourage them in any way, although it would be my hope that in general the reports should be more accurate than this one. This report is so incorrect that if there were an award for the news story of the year that had all the facts wrong, this one would certainly qualify. This same statement could be applied to other press reports of proceedings of the Senate, and indeed to some pronouncements by certain university professors to which Senator Forsey referred quite recently.

In this case the facts are that the news media, some members of the other place, even the official government spokesmen on this bill made the same mistake that the Canadian Press has made; they have said that Mr. Rogers was appointed to this post, before the post had been created by Parliament. Mere common sense made it obvious to us here that nobody could be appointed to a position that had not been created. That is what we said and that was confirmed in the proceedings of the Senate last night to which the second report by Canadian Press refers.

● (1410)

However, I might suggest, if the Canadian Press is thinking of another follow-up, it might, in more or less the same wording as the report, read as follows:

For some persons, including some national news agencies, news travels slowly.

For instance, businessman Harry Rogers was not appointed Comptroller General of Canada last February. He did not take office April 2.

Canadian Press just heard about it Wednesday night.

Senator Cook: Honourable senators, on the same point of privilege, I am now satisfied that I allowed myself to be misled by the news report referred to by Senator Grosart. However, I blame myself, as I should have gone to the source of the news items, in which case I would have been reassured that the government in no way acted without regard to the Senate.

Securing a man for the position to be created and even making a provisional appointment before the law was passed may or may not be good procedure, but it should not, I am now satisfied, be regarded in any way as an affront either to the Senate or to the other place.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, I think we all appreciate the remarks of the Honourable Deputy Leader of the Opposition, who has had extensive experience in the field of communications and, perhaps as a result, has certain specialized insights not possessed by some others in this chamber. I think we can all agree that there have been better weeks for Canadian Press.

DOCUMENTS TABLED

Senator Perrault tabled:

Capital Budget of the Canadian Saltfish Corporation for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1978, pursuant to section 70(2) of the Financial Administration Act, Chapter F-10, R.S.C., 1970, together with copy of Order in Council P.C. 1978-1271, dated April 20, 1978, approving same.

Copies of Reports of the Administrator under the Anti-Inflation Act, pursuant to section 17(3) of the said Act, Chapter 75, Statutes of Canada, 1974-75-76, regarding the references on the following:

1. Bendix Heavy Vehicle Systems Ltd., London, Ontario. Order dated May 3, 1978.
2. Bonar and Bemis Limited, Burlington, Ontario. Order dated May 4, 1978.

Copies of Report of the Anti-Inflation Board to the Governor in Council, pursuant to section 17(2) of the Anti-Inflation Act, Chapter 75, Statutes of Canada, 1974-75-76, reporting its reference to the Administrator of the said Act of certain proposed changes in the compensation plan between the Corporation of Delta and its employees represented by the Delta Municipal Police Association, dated April 26, 1978.

BUSINESS OF THE SENATE

ADJOURNMENT

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, with leave of the Senate and notwithstanding rule 45(1)(g), I move that when the Senate adjourns today it do stand adjourned until Tuesday, May 9, 1978, at 8 o'clock in the evening.

Honourable senators, when we return next Tuesday evening we can expect to have before us Bill C-39, to amend the Currency and Exchange Act, and possibly also Bill C-17, to amend the Canadian National Railways Capital Revision Act. Both these bills are at the reporting stage in the other place. They will be followed by Bill C-36, to amend the Export Development Act; Bill C-42, to amend the Criminal Code; and Bill C-4, to amend the Aeronautics Act, which are likely to come before us early next week.

With respect to Senate committees, the National Finance Committee will meet to consider Bill C-10 after the bill has been referred.

Senator Grosart: If they get it.

Senator Langlois: We have it here; it is Bill C-10.

Senator Grosart: I am referring to the committee; if the committee gets it next week.

Senator Langlois: I did not state a date next week; some time next week. It is expected that the Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce will meet on Wednesday at 9.30 a.m. to consider the subject matter of Bill C-13, and that the Joint Committee on Regulations and other Statutory Instruments will meet on Tuesday and Thursday. Times for the latter committee have not yet been set.

Motion agreed to.

NATIONAL REVENUE

INFORMATION CIRCULAR—REGISTERED CHARITIES— QUESTIONS ANSWERED

Senator Guay: Honourable senators, I should like to reply to some of the questions that were asked of me yesterday, when I gave assurance that I would provide answers today. I have replies to at least four questions, and another answer may come to my desk during the interim and can be dealt with later.

Senator Roblin, referring to the information circular, asked me the following question:

Is he telling the Senate that this document to which we have been referring is being used as the basis now for the enforcement of this act and his duties? Is this now in force?

In reply, the registration of charities for purposes of the Income Tax Act is based upon specific provisions of the act and, where necessary, common law and jurisprudence related to that law. Enforcement of the act is not based upon the circular. It is merely a vehicle that has been used to inform the public about certain aspects of the Income Tax Act, common law and related jurisprudence.

The circular remains in distribution for those who wish to consider the information it contains.

Another question from Senator Roblin was:

Will the honourable minister tell the Senate whether there have been any cases in which the terms of this particular document have been invoked so as to cancel the right of any charitable organization to the given tax concessions?

In reply, to date my department has not brought about revocation of any charity's registration for political activities. At least one organization voluntarily sought revocation after the officials of my department had questioned its activities. Registration has been denied in other cases where the stated objects and activities of applicant organizations were considered to be of a political nature.

The officials of my department have had to bring to the attention of other registered charities certain of their activities that were considered political and to request that they discontinue them.

They received written undertakings from these charities to comply and therefore did not revoke the registrations.

Senator Roblin asked a further question:

... if there are no cases that you can bring to mind based on the rules and regulations laid out in this document, I am wondering why it was found necessary to issue the document in the first place.

In reply, preparation of the circular commenced last summer at the instruction of my predecessor as the result, on the one hand, of a growing concern expressed by the public on the issue of what they felt to be political lobbying by some charities, and, on the other hand, of increasing concern by some charities as to what, in common law, constitutes a political activity. The intention of the circular was to explain and provide information to charities as to what, in common law, constitutes a political activity.

Senator Manning asked if I could clarify a certain matter. The point in question was the involvement of church social action committees in representations to the government for changes in policy.

● (1420)

My answer is that the provision of the Income Tax Act, in paragraph 149.1(1)(b), is quite explicit in that it states that a charitable organization must devote all its resources to charitable activities. The term "resources" is interpreted to mean both physical and financial resources. When representatives of church organizations participate in demonstrations protesting government policies they may be participating as individuals, through personal conviction, or they may be there as official representatives of the charity. If the latter is the case, and the charity is devoting some of its resources to the event, then it could well be that there is an infringement of the existing legislation.

A "non-profit organization," as defined in the Income Tax Act, other than a charity, could carry on such an activity within the ambit of the legislation.

If I may be allowed to finish these answers, even though the senators concerned are not present, I will be pleased to do so.

The next question I have an answer to was asked by Senator Godfrey:

Does the department consider that there is an appeal to any court from a decision of the minister as to whether or not a charity may be registered, or lose its registration under the Income Tax Act, because of the type of so-called political activities referred to in the information circular? If the department is of the opinion that there is a right of appeal to the courts, what is the legislative or other authority for such an appeal?

My answer is that provision is made in the Income Tax Act for an appeal to the Federal Court of Appeal from my department's refusal to grant registration to an organization that has applied for the same, as well as from a notice of intention to revoke the registration of a registered charity.

Another question from Senator Godfrey was as follows:

Are there any court cases in Canada—I underline the words "in Canada"—dealing with the question of whether or not a charity may be denied registration, or lose its registration under the Income Tax Act, because it devotes some of its resources to the kind of political activities outlined in paragraphs three to seven inclusive of the information circular? If so, what are the names and citations of those cases?

The answer is that one known case was heard in the Saskatchewan Court of Appeal in 1951; it concerned the Patriotic Acre Fund. The fund's objects were to promote legislation benefiting farmers, and it was held to be political and therefore not charitable. I may add that some of my officials feel there may well be other Canadian cases we can cite.

Senator Manning asked this question:

Honourable senators, in his comments a few moments ago, I believe the minister drew a distinction between charitable organizations and non-profit organizations. I am somewhat confused on that point and wonder if he would mind, not necessarily today, but when he is dealing with this matter tomorrow, elaborating on that point, both with respect to the legislation and this directive which has been sent out.

My answer is that it must be established that both a non-profit organization and a charitable organization are not for profit. The distinction between the two is in the purposes for which they are established to operate. While a charity must be established to operate for exclusively charitable purposes, a non-profit organization need not.

A large number of voluntary organizations are non-profit organizations. In other words, charities are only a portion of the voluntary or non-profit organizations. Only registered charities are permitted to issue tax-deductible receipts to their donors.

I should like to add a statement with reference to the questions I was asked yesterday. It is apparent from the comments and representations received with regard to the information circular, that there is some misunderstanding about the rules in relation to what organizations may properly be registered as "charitable organizations" under the Income Tax Act. I have therefore withdrawn the circular entitled "Registered Charities; Political Objects and Activities", No. 78-3, so that it may be reviewed and reworded to avoid any ambiguity.

Hon. Senators: Hear, hear.

Senator Smith (Colchester): Honourable senators, I wonder if I may ask the minister a question. I should like to begin by saying we very much appreciate the statement he has just made. He was kind enough to send me a copy of a letter dated yesterday which he wrote to a member in the other place and which I do not think he meant me to regard as confidential—if he did, I will say no more about it.

Senator Guay: No. It was sent yesterday before I made these statements here today.

Senator Smith (Colchester): So the indication therein that the circular would be continued to be distributed is now varied by the statement given today.

Senator Guay: Yes.

Senator Smith (Colchester): Thank you very much.

Senator Grosart: May I ask the Minister of National Revenue a specific but somewhat supplementary question? In view of the definition that he appears to have given of Revenue Canada's definition of "political activity," may I ask him a specific question which I do not expect him to answer immediately, but which might clear up the confusion, if it is confusion, that is in the minds of many people about this memorandum? Would the department include in its definition of "political activity" an organization dedicated to cancer research, if it were a registered charity, using some of its resources to send a representative to Ottawa to urge on the government a fundamental change in its present method of funding cancer research? I am being specific to see what kind of clarification we can get between the two apparent definitions of "political activity."

Senator Guay: I realize, senator, that you are exemplifying only one particular organization, and my answer may apply to other organizations. In view of that, I should like to discuss this matter with the officials in my department and make sure I am in a position to give you the type of answer that you would expect, and, at the same time, not create a precedent.

Senator Grosart: Fine.

[Later:]

Senator Greene: Honourable senators, may I ask a supplementary question of the Minister of National Revenue?

Inasmuch as he has undertaken on Tuesday next to distinguish between a charitable corporation and a non-profit corporation, I wonder if he could look further into the matter. It is my understanding that "charitable corporation" is the language of the Income Tax Act and that "non-profit corporation" is the language of the Corporations Act.

Whether it applies federally at all, I do not know, but I wonder whether the minister would undertake to check into the provincial corporations acts to see how many of them have non-profit corporations—and that, of course, cannot affect the tax picture federally.

Senator Guay: That is a good point, indeed. I shall be pleased to look into that aspect of the matter and provide the house with an answer as soon as possible.

VETERANS AFFAIRS

PENSION RIGHTS—QUESTION

Senator Marshall: Honourable senators, I have a question for the Leader of the Government. In view of the fact that the possibility of dissolution seems to be remote, and in view of the fact that there has been an indication in the other place that much legislation might be brought forward for the benefit of Canadians, could the leader indicate if any consideration has been given to introducing amendments to the Pension Act as it applies to disabled war veterans—amendments which would correct anomalies concerning the basic right of pension?

There is an indication of unfairness in equating the veteran's basic right of pension to the averaging formula established for the five categories in the public service. Is any consideration being given to the introduction of legislation to correct those anomalies?

Senator Perrault: I am sure that all honourable senators appreciate Senator Marshall's concern for the welfare of veterans in this country, a concern which is shared by the Minister of Veterans Affairs, the Honourable Daniel MacDonald. I can say that there is great concern about the plight of these veterans, and the matter is under active study at this time. It may be that the minister will wish to make a statement on his own behalf within the next while.

Senator Marshall: May I ask a supplementary on the same topic? Another anomaly which exists discriminates against some widows of veterans. Should a veteran who receives a minimum pension of 48 per cent die, his wife will receive a substantial pension. However, if he had less than a 48 per cent pension, his widow would be cast aside without a pension. I wonder if the leader would indicate if that anomaly, that inequity and discrimination with respect to disabled veterans under the Pension Act, is being considered.

Senator Perrault: I want to assure honourable senators that this anomaly and the situation referred to earlier by Senator Marshall are under active study at this time. Honourable senators are aware, of course, that the minister responsible for veterans' affairs is himself a veteran who was badly injured in the war, and for that reason brings some personal human insights into the plight of our veterans in this country.

• (1430)

FISHERIES

DEPLETION OF STOCKS BY FOREIGN COUNTRIES—QUESTION

Senator Marshall: I wonder if I could move to another area, having to do with the fisheries. There has been concern expressed, even by the minister in the other place, about the fact that foreign nations are depleting the stocks, or showing much activity just outside the 200-mile limit, which will cause great harm to the potential of the fishing industry which Canadians could enjoy and which would build up the economy and the income of many fishermen. I wonder if the government leader could indicate if this has been discussed and if he is aware of any action being taken in respect of bilateral negotiations with these foreign nations, or at the ICNAF negotiations, to correct this unfairness.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, the matter has been discussed. I shall be prepared to make a statement to the Senate on this subject possibly by the middle of next week.

Senator Grosart: Will we still be here?

COMPTROLLER GENERAL OF CANADA

STATUS OF MR. HARRY ROGERS—QUESTION ANSWERED

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, a question was asked yesterday by the Deputy Leader of the Opposition with respect to precedents which may exist for the procedure which the government has followed in connection with Mr. Harry Rogers, the Comptroller General designate and who has been appointed as an adviser to the President of the Treasury Board. I can report that on April 15 last, which is the most recent instance of a similar procedure, Mr. Donald Tansley was named Chairman of the Fisheries Prices Support Board and deputy minister designate. It was stated in the press release that Mr. Tansley would assume these duties once legislation to establish a separate Department of Fisheries has been passed.

In May 1976, before legislation was placed before the house to change the Department of Manpower and Immigration and the Unemployment Insurance Commission into the Department of Employment and Immigration, it was announced in a press release that Mr. Alan Gotlieb, then deputy minister of manpower and immigration, would become chairman of the proposed Canada Employment and Immigration Commission at such time as the legislation was approved by Parliament.

"Designate", according to official interpretation, means "chosen for office but not yet installed." This is from Webster's Dictionary, and it seems to cover both of these situations and that of Mr. Rogers. The word in the press release, of course, is "unofficial". The legal designation of Mr. Rogers is "special adviser to the President of the Treasury Board". That is the legal and binding designation and the one which has any force of law. The word "designate" constitutes a communications terminology—a crisper way of saying a person will be appointed once legislation has gone through Parliament. "Designate" was used in the news release as a short form to cover the situation.

A question was asked yesterday by the Honourable Senator—

Senator Grosart: May I ask a supplementary with respect to that particular answer? Would the Leader of the Government not agree that there is a clear difference between the two definitions he gave us? The one from Webster's Dictionary, as I heard him, is "chosen for office but not yet installed," but that would hardly include such a definition as "chosen for an office that does not exist."

Webster's definition would seem to support the objection that was made. The leader's second definition, it seemed to me, was a paraphrase to bring this up to date. Would he not agree with that?

Senator Perrault: I can only suggest that the honourable senator's comments, especially in view of his extensive experience in communications and public relations, will be read with great care by members of the public relations branch of the responsible ministry. Perhaps they can draw some wisdom from the observations made by the Deputy Leader of the Opposition.

Senator Grosart: Do you think they might consider making me an adviser designate?

Senator Perrault: Based upon the number of recent appointments of members of the opposition to various posts, it is evident that the government is constantly seeking to appoint people of merit, regardless of party affiliation.

Senator Grosart: I have a further supplementary. Would the Leader of the Government explain why it appeared to be necessary to exclude this designate appointment of Mr. Rogers from the operation of the Public Service Employment Act? If he is not aware of the reason why I ask that question, perhaps

[Senator Perrault.]

I can read the appropriate part of the Canada Gazette where it is explained:

Therefore, His Excellency the Governor General in Council, on the recommendation of the Public Service Commission, is pleased hereby:

(a) pursuant to section 39 of the Public Service Employment Act, to approve the exclusion by the Public Service Commission of Mr. H. G. Rogers on his appointment to the position of Special Adviser to the President of the Treasury Board—

Why was it necessary to take this very roundabout way of excluding him from the existing provisions of the Public Service Employment Act?

Senator Perrault: I can assure honourable senators that there was a determination on the part of the government to acquire the very ablest person available to assume these important responsibilities, regardless of whether that person is from the private sector or the public sector.

However, inquiries will be undertaken, and if further information is provided it will be made available.

[Later:]

Senator Forsey: Honourable senators, I wonder if I might ask a supplementary arising out of the reply given to the Honourable the Deputy Leader of the Opposition.

I noticed that the Deputy Leader of the Opposition quoted from the order in council the words "the Governor General in Council, on the recommendation of the Public Service Commission". I was a little surprised to hear that. I thought it was only ministers who could make recommendations to the Governor General in Council. I was a little surprised to find that the Public Service Commission is making recommendations.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, I will certainly take the question of the Deputy Leader of the Opposition as notice, and provide a statement on the subject just as quickly as possible.

MIDDLE EAST

PARTICIPATION OF CANADA IN UNITED NATIONS PEACEKEEPING FORCE IN SOUTHERN LEBANON—QUESTION ANSWERED

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, yesterday afternoon Senator Wagner asked the following question:

In view of the most recent incidents in which members of the United Nations peacekeeping force in Lebanon have encountered resistance from Palestinian groups, as a result of which some have been killed, is it the intention of the government to revise its position toward Canadian participation in the UN operations and to seek assurances from the interested parties that active resistance to the presence of the blue berets will cease forthwith?

The answer is as follows:

Canada has been very much concerned by the incident in which 2 French soldiers, 1 Senegalese soldier and a

PLO liaison officer accompanying the French were killed and several others were wounded. UN Secretary General Waldheim has already been in touch with the PLO. Chairman Arafat has expressed regret and has given assurances that such incidents will not recur. The Security Council met on Wednesday to discuss the situation. Canada supported a Resolution which deplored the attacks on the UN force that have occurred and demanded full respect for the UN force by all parties in Lebanon.

The Security Council authorized a 2000-man increase in the size of the UN Interim Force in Lebanon. Fiji, Iran and Ireland have each offered to provide a battalion to bring the Force up to 6000 troops. We expect Canada will have to expand its 91-man Signals Unit by a further 8 signallers to accommodate these additional battalions.

[Translation]

Senator Wagner: Honourable senators, I thank the government leader for this fast answer. I wonder if I could ask him a supplementary question.

Would it not be appropriate if the Leader of the Government on behalf of the Senate, were to extend to the ambassadors of France and Senegal in Canada the deepest sympathy of this house on the death of those members of the peacekeeping forces from two French-speaking countries?

● (1440)

[English]

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, I see no objection to the proposition put forward by Senator Wagner. Certainly, his view and recommendation will be made available to the Department of External Affairs.

FINANCIAL ADMINISTRATION ACT

BILL TO AMEND—SECOND READING—DEBATE CONTINUED

The Senate resumed from yesterday the debate on the motion of Senator Cook for the second reading of Bill C-10, to amend the Financial Administration Act.

Hon. Duff Roblin: Honourable senators, I much appreciated the opportunity yesterday afternoon to listen to two quite excellent speeches dealing with the principle of Bill C-10, which is before us now, when Honourable Senators Grosart and Forsey addressed the chamber. Perhaps their speeches were critical in a sense, but it seemed to me that they were cogent and constructive as well. It seemed for a moment that perhaps the matter could be left to rest at that point. However, when Senator Langlois responded in what seemed to me—and I hope this will not sound offensive—a rather unsympathetic manner in setting out, I suppose, what the ministerial position with respect to this bill is, it made me think it might be useful to try to develop further the principles which we are considering in this piece of legislation.

The origin of the bill, I think, is quite clear, and that is that there was sensed to be a need for some improvement in the parliamentary system of financial management. That seems to be common ground for all who have considered this piece of legislation. This need, I think, has developed from events of the recent past—the activities of the Public Accounts Committee of the other place, incomplete as perhaps they were, and unprovided with the necessary tools as I think perhaps they were, which were followed by a very substantial discussion of the issues in the media of various kinds, including an exposé on television and comments in the newspapers, added to which were the annual strictures which we have come to expect from the last two Auditors General. The whole process has given rise, I suggest, to a tide of resentment on the part of the public at what it conceives to be waste and mismanagement of money in respect of the activities of the government.

These warning signals were such that even the administration felt they could no longer be ignored. Reluctantly—and I think Senator Grosart demonstrated this very effectively yesterday—reluctantly, and dragging the full weight of the bureaucratic establishment behind them—and they have my sympathy in that respect—the government presented us with the measure we are now being asked to consider.

I hope it is appropriate to describe it as a pretty feeble effort. It is a feeble measure—and I think that is a fair description of it. It is a feeble measure when it is compared to the ills that it purports to cure. And what are these ills? Well, I think the Auditor General expressed the matter very succinctly and, to my mind, very accurately in his 1975 report in which he said that Parliament—and I underline that word—and indeed the government, has lost, or is close to losing effective control of the public purse. The Auditor General stated that, in his view, the need was for a measure to achieve a system of financial management and controls within the federal government and the restoration to Parliament—and I underline that phrase—of an appropriate degree of control of the public purse.

I suggest, honourable senators, that the combination of those two expressions, “Parliament” and “the government”, are significant to us in this debate. The report refers to a loss of effective control, and loss of effective control not only by government but by Parliament as well. I want to draw the very clear and explicit distinction in this respect between Parliament as such and the government, or the cabinet, or the executive branch, or whatever one wants to call it. I want to suggest that it is not sufficient to satisfy the requirements of the executive of government in respect of control of the public purse. It is essential, as well, to satisfy Parliament that it has control of the public purse.

Senator Forsey: Hear, hear.

Senator Roblin: Those two approaches to the problem, I suggest, are entirely different and distinct. The danger has been in recent times that we think of government and Parliament as being the same thing, and that is not the case at all.

Senator Forsey: Hear, hear.

Senator Roblin: The concern, in my view, is about Parliament. Today Parliament does not control the executive. In fact, it is the other way around—the executive controls Parliament. Indeed, some people have gone so far as to say that the Prime Minister, who in effect is an elected dictator, controls both, and there is a measure of truth in that rather uncomfortable thought.

So, control of the purse is, I suggest to this house, the whole essence of parliamentary interest in financial affairs. If any evidence is needed—and I suspect very little would be required in a chamber of this kind—to support this point of view, I take comfort in reading my old friend Beauchesne, who has a happy knack of putting in very few words some of the essential principles on which our democratic and parliamentary institutions are based. Perhaps I might be allowed to read section 233 in the Fourth Edition of Beauchesne, as follows:

It is one of the old standing principles of our constitution that the House of Commons should control the finances of the country. That is the right, privilege and duty of the House. It has been achieved by means of struggle lasting through centuries, beginning from the fourteenth century down to the seventeenth century, when it was fully confirmed, and since then it has never been disputed.

The cardinal principle on which the whole of our financial system is based is that of parliamentary control, and by this is understood not the control of Parliament in its constitutional sense, but control by the Commons alone. Upon this fundamental principle, laid down at the very outset of English parliamentary history and secured by three hundred years of mingled conflict with the Crown, and peaceful growth, is grounded the whole law of finance and, consequently, the whole of the British Constitution.

● (1450)

And I merely summarize the last paragraph in that same section by saying that in it Beauchesne refers to the fact that the Dominion of Canada has a Constitution similar in principle to that of the United Kingdom. So if any historical precedent is required for the view that I am expressing here about the importance of control of the purse in relation to the function of Parliament, I would suggest that it is in this section of Beauchesne.

Those of us who have an historical frame of mind can carry our thoughts back to the so-called glorious revolution of 1688, which was the culmination of the struggle between Parliament and the Crown for control of the purse, and the great events of those days which, I am afraid, have become pretty dim in the minds of most of us. Perhaps it would not be out of the way to refer to William E. Gladstone, surely the apotheosis of the liberal constitution personality, who, when he was Chancellor of the Exchequer in the United Kingdom in the 1860s—I believe this was mentioned by Senator Forsey yesterday—brought in the concept of the Comptroller General as a servant of Parliament in that series of reforms that he made and that established his reputation as a leading English financial statesman.

So we have this situation to which I have referred, this great history of which we are heirs, the tradition that is ours, and how sad it is to reflect upon the fact that parliamentary control in these days has come a long way down from its former prominent position. Control of the purse in the hands of Parliament is a function which unfortunately has been degraded in the passage of time.

[Senator Roblin.]

We see today the estimates scamped as they go through the parliamentary system. We see the Public Accounts Committee struggling against the odds in trying to get a grip on the spending authority and the spending responsibility that is theirs. And these things have not arisen because of lack of interest; they have not arisen because of neglect or ineptitude on the part of those who have the responsibility for these matters in Parliament. They have arisen because we are drowning in a sea of dollars. We are drowning in a sea of governmental programs and spending functions that were never dreamed of in the old days, and consequently it is becoming more and more difficult for Parliament to discharge, as it used to, its function in the control of the public purse. The growth of the public sector has in these recent times assumed monstrous proportions, and it is difficult—it might be said to be impossible, without some changes—for members of the Commons and members of the Senate to cope with their responsibilities in this connection.

Honourable senators, I suggest that we need some new tools to re-establish that parliamentary control which is the backbone of our system and the backbone of our tradition—tools that will help us to sort through this enormous mass of material which is being dumped on our desks every day; tools that will help us to outline the problem areas; tools that will help us to identify weaknesses; tools that will assist us in crystalizing the issues and that will give us the information and intelligence we need in order to act in the way in which the Constitution demands.

We need to reinforce, I suggest to this chamber, the independent servants of Parliament so that they can give Parliament the information it needs to discharge its function. These servants have to be available to Parliament; they have to report to Parliament; they have to be responsible to Parliament. I am suggesting to this house that we need a Comptroller General who can come to the aid of the Auditor General and help us to roll back this curtain of bureaucratic haze and ministerial privilege which now prevents us from getting at the real problems that beset the administration of our national finances.

But in the light of that analysis of our constitutional position as history records it, and the position in which we find ourselves today, what does this bill give us? I think Senator Forsey gave us a very good analysis, and I can do little better than follow some of the points he made here that I think are worthy of repetition. It certainly gives us a new deputy minister, but that seems to be the end of the matter. There are no specific functions attached to this man's duties, or what he is to do. In fact, there are no new duties whatsoever involved in the creation of this new post. How do I know that? Because the Auditor General testified to that effect in his evidence in the other place. There is, in fact, under this bill nothing more than a re-arrangement of the furniture in the Treasury Board which falls so signally short of dealing with the problem which is facing us.

Who is going to take orders from this new Comptroller General? Nobody. How do I know that? Because the minister himself said so in the other place. What can this new man do? He can only do what the minister tells him to do. His terms of reference are obscure. I am not going to deal with the necessity of putting terms of reference in the bill, because I think that has been dealt with more than adequately by the previous speakers. To whom does this man report? Why, only to the minister who appointed him. And what happens to his reports? That, honourable senators, is something that we may never know, because I predict that if this bill goes through unchanged our Comptroller General, in whom we have such high hopes, will find himself smothered in the embrace of ministerial responsibility and cloaked in the invisible cloak of executive privilege. The Commons will never get at those reports.

How important, then, is this factor of public disclosure of the report of the Comptroller General to which I am now alluding? I suggest to this chamber that it is vital to parliamentary control, and I think I can give an illustration of why I think it is. Let us take the case of the Auditor General today. He does report to Parliament; he does describe himself as a servant of Parliament; and he does secure a very wide circle of publicity for the things he says. Yet it is only when public opinion is mobilized by Parliament or by the media, or whatever, that we can get government to move on the report of the Auditor General, and we know—it was demonstrated in the speeches yesterday—how grudging, how half-hearted and how slow that motion is.

If this is what happens to the recommendations of the Auditor General, what do you think is going to happen to the recommendations of the Comptroller General, if we proceed as we are advised to do in this bill? This gentleman is a creature of ministerial prerogative. He is reporting to a ministerial master, and he is holding his post under ministerial pleasure. It is crystal clear, I suggest, that to be fully effective the Comptroller General must not be merely an official of the executive; he must be a servant of Parliament and he should report to Parliament just as the Auditor General does.

I hear the cry "duplication!" That is a favourite word in some quarters these days. Perhaps we could stand a little bit of duplication in this particular area, but I do not think that duplication is a problem. I think it would be no more duplication to have both officers reporting to Parliament than it now will be under this bill to have both officers reporting to the executive, because both of them do that now—or will do so when this bill is passed. Duplication is not a problem. There is no sound reason, in my opinion, that stands in the way of making sure that this important financial officer reports where the world can see what he does and Parliament can act on it.

● (1500)

We have, I suggest, a rather unusual opportunity in this house in the case of this debate. We have an opportunity to provide our Parliament with a new source of selective, pertinent and important information—information that will tell us something about the efficiency of our government and something about the spending of public funds. It will help Parliament to perform more effectively its primary function, which is to control the public purse. Thus, I put it to you, honourable senators, that this rather small bill impinges on a vital constitutional principle and gives the Senate an opportunity to make an important innovation in securing those measures for the control of the public purse which we need so badly in the Canadian Parliament today.

I hope, honourable senators, that we will recognize this opportunity and that we will know how to act upon it.

Hon. J. J. Greene: Honourable senators, I am persuaded by the cogent, powerful and eloquent arguments from the other side as to their basic fear of the bill, namely, the loss of control of the public purse by Parliament. With respect, I fear that we are riding the wrong horse. We have entered a plough-horse in the Queen's Plate, and that is not likely to be a winner.

I think Senator Roblin, who has had great responsibilities of state, will agree that the executive, in this day of massive government spending and control over all our lives, needs all of the help it can get in managing its financial household. This bill requests for it that kind of help.

I quite agree that that does not mean Parliament should, therefore, relieve itself of its responsibility. It would be most tragic, if we used this bill for that purpose. I respectfully suggest to the committee that will study this bill that it is a measure to set up an executive officer to help the executive to do its work, and that we should consider our own house.

We do not go to the Department of Justice for advice on our legal procedures. We have officers of Parliament—as a matter of fact, one for the House of Commons and one for the Senate—to advise us as to the legality of various functions. If we were to go to the Department of Justice for legal advice, we would be using the same fellows who had already advised the government. That would be rather counterproductive.

Here, honourable gentlemen, whose fears are well founded and well presented, say, "Let us use the same bookkeeper the government uses to determine the financial responsibilities that ultimately belong to Parliament." I say, with all respect, that in this day of government spending I would far rather have my own bookkeeper, even if it costs a little more, than use the government's bookkeeper to determine my decisions in financial matters.

I have no ultimate or profound solution from the mountain, but I respectfully submit that the committee, while considering in detail the valid objections that have been taken, should also consider whether it would not be worth spending the same kind of money the executive will have to spend for the advice it wants on financial matters, and in that way have our own parliamentary and Senate financial adviser. If this were done we would be able to have independent advice.

If I might use an analogy, many private corporations, to my knowledge, have an executive committee which represents the directors rather than the management. It has its own legal advisers and financial advisers. I have always taken the stand that the directors themselves should have their own legal and financial advisers quite apart from the corporate legal and financial advisers, so that the directors can have opinion and advice which are independent of management, where such independence is necessary. If boards of directors never receive any advice but that given by the legal and financial people in management, then boards of directors would be rather useless in our corporate institutions. I suggest, with respect, that if we are but to receive, under the guise of this bill, the advice of the government's financial wizard, we can then be that much less useful.

I do not deny that in this complex age management needs all the sophisticated help it can get. I was almost petrified by Willy Brandt's swan song speech in which he said, in effect, "What we need is more sophisticated civil servants." That scared the living daylights out of me. Surely the ones we have now have pretty nearly "sophisticated" us into oblivion.

If management feels they have need of more sophisticated public servants, then for God's sake let them have them so they can run their own show. But, so that we can keep control of financial spending, which is the very essence of Parliament, let us have our own independent advisers, and let them have full power and full access to the books so that they can advise us. The cost of that, I suggest, in terms of the total cost of government today, in the essential interest of seeing that good accounting principles and practices are followed in federal spending, would be but peanuts.

● (1510)

Senator Grosart: May I ask the honourable senator a question? Did I understand him to say that we might, in this exercise that he suggests, spend the same kind of money that the executive spends? Would he not agree that that would bankrupt the country?

Senator Greene: I do not know what they are paying Mr. Rogers, nor do I know what we pay our legal counsel, but whatever we pay our legal counsel is money well spent by Canada.

Senator Grosart: I agree.

Senator Smith (Colchester): Honourable senators, I do not know if any other honourable senator wishes to speak on this bill this afternoon; if not, I should like to move that the debate be adjourned.

On motion of Senator Smith (Colchester), debate adjourned.

The Senate adjourned until Tuesday, May 9, 1978, at 8 p.m.

THE SENATE

Tuesday, May 9, 1978

The Senate met at 8 p.m., the Speaker in the Chair.
Prayers.

THE LATE ALDO MORO

FORMER PRIME MINISTER OF ITALY—TRIBUTES

Hon. Raymond J. Perrault: Honourable senators, in the House of Commons this afternoon, the Right Honourable the Prime Minister, the Leader of the official opposition and the leaders of opposition parties expressed their horror and sadness over the brutal killing of the Honourable Aldo Moro, former Prime Minister of Italy.

The Prime Minister has sent to the Italian people a message expressing the anguish and sorrow of all Canadians at this senseless act of terrorism. This expression of sympathy and sorrow offered to Mr. Moro's family, the Italian government and the Italian people, is sincere and tangible testimony of the anguish and the outrage of the people of Canada. The Prime Minister said in his speech in the other place this afternoon:

[Translation]

He was also one of the most famous sons of Italy, a nation, as we all know, to which we extend our thoughts and our friendship.

Our countries are closely connected not only by the great number of Canadians of Italian origin, those who came here and helped build our country, but also by the basic values of democracy and freedom which we both preserved and upheld.

[English]

It was a senseless death—senseless because Aldo Moro was above all a man of the people. He was a democrat, a voice of sane reason in clamorous times. He was a politician who asked for moderation in the name of the people.

However, there may be some consolation and hope in the death of Signor Moro, as there has been in the death of many martyrs. The Government of Italy refused to be blackmailed. The fact that the people who said no to the demands of the terrorists were the friends and political colleagues of Aldo Moro must have made the decision an agony, but the world can rejoice that they did not bow to the evil and arrogant demands of people with no reverence for human life, and who regard human life as only a bargaining agent.

We can applaud the fact that there has been universal support for the Italian Government's resolve not to bow to terrorism. This support came from all parties. As a result, we, as Canadians, can salute the actions of the Italian Government, who did not allow national freedoms to be subverted by those whose political aims are so abhorrent to the people of Italy that they are forced to select the platform of assassination.

I know that all honourable senators join with me in expressing sympathy to the family of Aldo Moro. The ordeal they have undergone has been an exercise in extreme cruelty.

In their time of grief, I hope that they can take some solace from the fact that the murder of Aldo Moro has served the cause of democracy and freedom. His murder has evoked nothing but worldwide contempt, and our deepest sorrow goes out at this time to the Italian people, to the Government of Italy, and, above all, to Aldo Moro's family.

Hon. Allister Grosart: Honourable senators, on behalf of the official opposition I join in the expression of shock and horror by the Leader of the Government, by the leaders of our political parties in the other place and, indeed, by decent people all over the world.

The honourable victim of this terrible crime was a man of peace and compromise. He was one of the founders of modern Italy, a member of the Constituent Assembly of 1946, a member of the first Parliament of modern Italy in 1948, five times Prime Minister of Italy, and a man who in all the conflicts with which he was associated made it clear that he was a man of peace and compromise in human relationships.

We can only believe that it was his great qualities that made these assassins single him out for their purpose of notoriety. He was not murdered because he was rich. He represented no particular class or conscience among his people or the people of the world. He was murdered to serve the ends of those who would destroy every concept of decency and civilization for which mankind has struggled upward for hundreds of years.

This terrible crime emphasizes the dilemma which faces every democratic country in the world—the dilemma of how to respond to violence, how to respond to the threat of taking a human life merely to serve political ends, to seek concessions which have nothing to do whatsoever with the individual selected for sacrifice.

I am sure our sympathies go out not only to Mrs. Moro and her family but also to the President and the Prime Minister of Italy who themselves have endured a tremendous ordeal over these past eight weeks. As the Leader of the Government has said, it took courage to take the stand they took—it took more than courage.

In Canada we realize that this is not something far removed from us. We have had our own experiences. It is something which, as a democratic country, we have faced, and which we know we might face again. Our sympathies, therefore, are with those who had this terrible decision to make, and with those who bear the burden of this great loss to democracy and to the world.

Hon. Peter Bosa: Honourable senators, I should like to associate myself with the remarks of the Leader of the Government in the Senate and of Senator Grosart concerning the tragic developments in Italy today.

In learning of the death of the Honourable Aldo Moro today, my first thoughts turned to his family and most specifically to his widow who, during the past two months, must have lived an incredible nightmare, that of awaiting day by day the dreaded news which everyone believed would be forthcoming, although, until it was made official today, there was still a glimmer of hope.

Aldo Moro was a profound believer in democracy. He was a skillful negotiator who dedicated the whole of his life to politics. He was the architect of many a coalition in the delicate and fragile balance of power of Italian politics.

The senselessness of his killing and the brutality with which it was carried out grieves not only the people of Italy but all those who believe in the principles of democracy. I extend to his family, and to the Government and people of Italy, my heartfelt and most profound condolences.

[Translation]

Hon. Pietro Rizzuto: Honourable senators, I too would like to join the Leader of the Government, the Deputy Leader of the Opposition and my colleague in offering my most sincere sympathies to Mrs. Moro and her family, as well as to the President, the Prime Minister, and the people of Italy.

I personally had the opportunity to meet Mr. Moro during his visit to Canada in 1974. I was able to see for myself the determination of that man to really work for the preservation of freedom and democracy, not only within his own country but everywhere people strive to uphold democracy and freedom.

Aldo Moro died today because he had worked all his life to ensure the freedom of his people and respect for the law in Italy. Indeed, the man who was slain today is the man who most wanted to fight for democracy and liberty. He was murdered because for his assassins he stood as a public figure who was able to find ways and means to stop all those who would impose their politics and ideas through violence, and he paid with his life.

I would not want to repeat what has already been said about him, so I will simply add that the death of Mr. Aldo Moro should give food for thought to those who are trying to force their ideas and politics on others through violent means. This can also serve as an example for all the nations who respect democracy and freedom and give them the will to fight those individuals who are becoming a threat to democracy and freedom all over the world.

● (2010)

[English]

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, as a mark of our profound respect and sorrow, I move that the Senate do now adjourn.

The Senate adjourned until tomorrow at 2 p.m.

THE SENATE

Wednesday, May 10, 1978

The Senate met at 2 p.m., the Speaker in the Chair.
Prayers.

CURRENCY AND EXCHANGE ACT

BILL TO AMEND—FIRST READING

The Hon. the Speaker informed the Senate that a message had been received from the House of Commons with Bill C-39, to amend the Currency and Exchange Act.

Bill read first time.

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this bill be read the second time?

Senator Perrault, with leave of the Senate, moved that the bill be placed on the Orders of the Day for second reading at the next sitting.

Motion agreed to.

DOCUMENTS TABLED

Senator Perrault tabled:

Copies of Agreement between the Government of Canada and the Government of New Brunswick, dated April 17, 1978, concerning the strengthening/improvement of certain primary highway links.

Copies of letters, dated April 10, 1978, from the Prime Minister of Canada to the Premiers of the Provinces relating to the future development of the Canadian economy.

Copies of a Statement related to the addition of sugar to the import control list, issued by the Department of Industry, Trade and Commerce pursuant to section 5 of the Export and Import Permits Act, Chapter E-17, as amended by section 3 of Chapter 29 (2nd Supplement), R.S.C., 1970.

PARLIAMENT

POSSIBILITY OF DISSOLUTION—QUESTION

Senator Grosart: Honourable senators, I wonder if I could ask the Leader of the Government if he has any up-to-date information on the announcement expected today about the exercise of a certain prerogative of the Prime Minister.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, the last word I had from the other place was to the effect that the universe was unfolding.

[Later:]

Senator Olson: Could the Leader of the Government give us an undertaking that he will provide the Senate with a list of the balance of government business that is intended to be brought before the two houses of Parliament? This follows somewhat on the answer to Senator Grosart's question. In the event that this session continues until near the end of June, could the leader provide us with a list of what additional business the government intends to bring forward to be completed by somewhere near the end of June? Also, could he include in that list the number of allotted days in the other chamber, and what they will be used for? Some of those days are allocated to the main estimates, others to subject matter decided on by the opposition. If we could have that list we could lay out for ourselves at least some kind of program for use of the balance of the time between now and near the end of June.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, it is expected that within the next twenty-four hours a decision will be taken on the possibility of dissolution. The Prime Minister has committed himself to making a statement on that subject. He will, as you know, hold a press conference tomorrow afternoon, and there is a possibility that a statement will be made at that time, although no final decision has been made.

However, I think that before the end of the week we shall know how much time is left for this Parliament to deal with the matters affecting the nation. As soon as that basic decision has been made about dissolution, I will be able to announce the government plans; that is, if we carry on.

I can assure honourable senators that there are many measures under consideration in draft form, and I would expect that we shall be fully occupied prior to the summer recess if a decision is taken tomorrow not to have an election.

I want once again to give the assurance that the fundamental decision to be taken about an election will be taken in the light of the needs of the country rather than on the basis of the needs of any one political party.

● (1410)

CANADA-UNITED STATES RELATIONS

GARRISON DAM PROJECT—QUESTION

Senator Roblin: Honourable senators, may I ask the Leader of the Government if he can give us, at leisure, the latest information with respect to negotiations between the Government of Canada and the Government of the United States with respect to the Garrison Dam project in the State of North Dakota, and any relevant material with respect to the relations between the Government of Canada and the International Joint Commission?

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, the question is an important one, and it may be of value to have a statement presented to the Senate on the earliest possible occasion. An inquiry will go forward this afternoon on this subject.

NATIONAL REVENUE

RECIPROCAL AGREEMENTS BETWEEN CANADA AND THE UNITED STATES RE TAX EXEMPTIONS ON DONATIONS TO CHARITABLE INSTITUTIONS—QUESTION

Senator Grosart: Honourable senators, I have a question for the Minister of National Revenue. What is the status of any reciprocal agreement or arrangement which may exist between Canada and the United States with respect to tax exemptions on donations to registered charitable institutions, particularly in situations where the donation is made by a taxpayer, corporate or personal, in one country to a registered charity in the other, including the situation where such a donation is made either by a taxpayer in one country or through a subsidiary in the other country?

Senator Guay: Honourable senators, I believe I could give the house an immediate answer to that question. However, I would rather take it as notice and give a more positive answer later.

REGISTERED CHARITIES—QUESTION ANSWERED

Senator Guay: Honourable senators, I should like to take this occasion to answer Senator Grosart's question of last Thursday concerning an organization dedicated to cancer research using some of its resources to send a representative to Ottawa to urge on the government a fundamental change in its present method of funding cancer research.

It is the view of the officials of my department that this type of activity, regardless of the cause to which a charity is dedicated, could be considered as analogous to the presentation of an unsolicited brief to a government containing recommendations for action which would enable the charity to achieve its charitable purposes.

I will send the honourable senator a copy of the answer immediately.

Senator Grosart: Do I understand the answer to mean that in the opinion of the officials of the Department of National Revenue, in such a case the activity would be regarded as a political activity within the prohibitive area?

Senator Guay: No, I did not say that. In order that you may understand the situation properly, it is my intention to send you a written copy of the answer now.

I will repeat my answer. It is the view of the officials of my department that this type of activity, regardless of the cause to which a charity is dedicated, could be considered as analogous to the presentation of an unsolicited brief to a government containing recommendations for action which would enable the charity to achieve its charitable purposes.

Senator Grosart: It still does not answer the question.

FISHERIES

DESIGNATION AS SUBJECT MATTER OF STANDING COMMITTEE—QUESTION

Senator Marshall: Honourable senators, I have a question for the Leader of the Government. In view of the increased international and national importance attached to Canada's fisheries from an economic and trade point of view, and since fisheries does not appear as a subject matter for a Senate committee, I wonder if the leader has discussed with the chairman of the Rules Committee the prospect of assigning the subject matter of fisheries to a standing committee?

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, Senator Marshall has advanced an interesting idea. I have not been able to discuss specifically the details of such a proposal, but undoubtedly the idea should be given consideration. Certainly, it is the view of the government that fisheries is becoming an increasingly important consideration. This is evidenced by the action we have taken in recent years regarding the 200-mile economic zone, and the joint endeavours in which we have participated to assure the enhancement and continuation of the fisheries resource. In this regard it should be noted that there are important discussions under way this week with American officials about the recent action by the courts in the United States and their effect on the salmon fisheries on the west coast.

COMPTROLLER GENERAL OF CANADA

STATUS OF MR. HARRY ROGERS—QUESTION ANSWERED

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, last Thursday, May 4, the Honourable Senator Grosart asked a supplementary question about the appointment of Mr. Rogers as Comptroller General of Canada. He asked, to use his exact words, why it appeared to be necessary to exclude this designate appointment of Mr. Rogers from the operation of the Public Service Employment Act.

The answer to this question is that this is an order in council appointment and therefore does not come under the terms of the act.

As well, the Honourable Senator Forsey questioned the words "the Governor General in Council on the recommendation of the Public Service Commission," saying he was surprised to find that the Public Service Commission is making recommendations. Under section 39 of the Public Service Employment Act, the Public Service Commission has the right to exclude a position from the provisions of the act. There is no provision for the Public Service Commission to recommend an appointment.

● (1420)

NATIONAL REVENUE

INFORMATION CIRCULAR—REGISTERED CHARITIES— QUESTIONS ANSWERED

Senator Godfrey: Honourable senators, I should like to direct a question to the Minister of National Revenue. In answer to a question of mine, the minister replied last Thursday as follows:

The answer is that one known case was heard in the Saskatchewan Court of Appeal in 1951; it concerned the Patriotic Acre Fund. The fund's objects were to promote legislation benefiting farmers, and it was held to be political and therefore not charitable.

I telephoned the minister's executive assistant yesterday and pointed out to him that my question dealt with charities, and I emphasize the word "charities," being denied or losing registration under the Income Tax Act because they devoted some, and I emphasize the word "some," of their resources to certain political activities outlined in the information circular.

I further pointed out to him that the case the minister referred to, which I had read, had nothing to do with the Income Tax Act or with a charity engaging in political activities. That case held that the organization involved was formed for political purposes and was therefore not charitable. In fact, none of its objects was charitable, so that the case is in no way relevant to the case of a charity devoting some of its resources to political activities. I asked him to draw this to the attention of the minister.

My question to the minister is: Do you now agree with me that the case brought to your attention by your officials, and referred to by you in your answer, had nothing to do with the kind of court case I was inquiring about?

Senator Guay: Honourable senators, yes, that will be the case, because the Patriotic Acre Fund case to which I referred earlier, and other similar cases, of which I could cite another, such as Re Knight, which is Case No. 119371, 2 D.L.R. 285, a decision of Chief Justice Rose of the Ontario Supreme Court, do not, of course, deal with the question of eligibility for registration as a charity under the Income Tax Act, as such, since it was only from 1967 that charitable organizations were required to be registered, and it is from that time that the determination of the legal nature of a charity became a prior condition to be satisfied. These cases, and the principle which they affirm, however, are and would be directly relevant in determining whether political activities constitute a basis for denying registration, or whether such activities should result in the loss of an organization's registration.

There are no Canadian cases dealing with the actual denial of registration or loss of registration under the provisions of the Income Tax Act, partly for the reason I have just stated—the legal requirement for registration is quite recent.

Senator Godfrey: I should like to direct a supplementary question to the minister with respect to the same subject. In paragraph 2 of Information Circular 78-3, it states that it is:

... well established that an organization, whose primary purpose is clearly charitable but has a secondary or ancillary purpose which is stated to be political, does not fail to be recognized as charitable, in common law, because of its ancillary or secondary purpose. If such an organization applies for registration as a "charitable organization" as described in paragraph 149.1(1)(b) of the Income Tax Act, registration normally will be granted subject to the comments in 3(a) below.

That is the end of the quotation from the minister's own information circular.

In view of that statement would the minister not agree that the test to be applied as to whether or not the charitable organization is devoting all its resources to charitable activities is whether any political activities are for a secondary or ancillary purpose and to promote the primary charitable purpose of the organization? If that is so, would not the minister agree that an activity, which if engaged in by an organization not organized for charitable purposes, would be considered a political activity and is, when it is used to promote the primary charitable purpose of a charitable organization, part of the charitable activities of the organization and, therefore, all the resources of the organization under those circumstances are being devoted to charitable purposes?

Obviously, I do not expect an answer to that long and complicated question at this point, but I would ask the minister to have his officials consider the question.

Senator Guay: Contrary to what you believe, I have an answer to your question; it is a two-page answer. But, in view of the fact that I have withdrawn the bulletin as such and indicated that I will bring forth another one which will clarify the whole situation, I am sure you will agree with me that we ought to wait for that clarification and take it from there.

Senator Grosart: We would hope it would clarify the situation and not further muddle it.

UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE

REPORTED OVERPAYMENT OF BENEFITS—QUESTION

Senator Smith (Colchester): Honourable senators, I should like to ask the Leader of the Government a question. It relates to what seems to have been a very substantial overpayment of unemployment insurance benefits to recipients in the various parts of the country, including Nova Scotia, if one is to believe what one reads in the newspapers.

Is it correct that these overpayments of unemployment insurance benefits have been made, and, if so, is it correct that the overpayments were caused by an error either by the computer involved or the programmer of that computer?

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, Senator Smith (Colchester) is correct when he states that there has been an overpayment of unemployment insurance benefits in excess of $4 million. I understand the mistake was caused by a computer programmer in the responsible department. However, the mistake has been rectified, and the difficult process of asking for refunds from these recipients is under way. This, as you state, involves people in various parts of the country.

I think it is reassuring, however, to know that the system involved did detect mistakes in the system itself. The methods of surveillance are such that this error was found and steps are being taken to rectify the error. As I said, it is reassuring that this is the case.

Senator Smith (Colchester): I thank the Leader of the Government for his answer, but I have one or two supplementary questions. Would it not have been more reassuring had the error been detected before these large sums of moneys were paid to the recipients, as it will be difficult for them to repay these overpayments?

Further to that, has any consideration been given, since this problem was caused by the government's own machinery or employees, to accepting the fact that the fault was the government's and that therefore the government should bear the cost?

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, the government is proceeding in the fairest way possible, bearing in mind that in the ultimate these funds are taxpayer's funds. They do not belong to the government. The Canadian taxpayer has an interest in making sure all government plans operate as efficiently as possible.

● (1430)

This government, from time to time, makes mistakes, as do all governments. I recall the construction of a heavy water plant in Nova Scotia. At the time Senator Smith (Colchester) was Premier of that great province, and that heavy water plant is still in debt to the taxpayers of Nova Scotia and Canada to the extent of an enormous amount of money, which has never been recovered.

If Senator Smith is suggesting one standard for the federal government and another standard for the government which he led when he was Premier of Nova Scotia, there is an inconsistency in his position. No government likes to make mistakes. This government freely admits its mistake and wants to reassure the Canadian people and members of both chambers that diligent efforts are under way to make sure the mistake is rectified.

Senator Smith (Colchester): I thank the leader for his gratuitous and irrelevant and incorrect reference to an event which is long past and which was indeed the fault of the Government of Canada and its agencies—and I will tell him why, too—and not the fault of the Government of Nova Scotia. I will say further that if the Government of Canada had done its duty when it should have done its duty, when it knew it had made a mistake, there would have been a great deal of money saved for the taxpayers of Canada as well as the taxpayers of Nova Scotia. If the Leader of the Government wants to discuss that any further, I am ready to take him on any day of the week, or night, for that matter.

Perhaps he could devote his attention to the question I asked, which is whether the Government of Canada has given any consideration to assuming the responsibility, on behalf of the taxpayers of Canada, for the mistake which was made, and thus consider relieving the innocent recipients of the great hardship which would be caused so many of them if they are compelled to repay.

Senator Perrault: I shall take that portion of the question as notice. Further information will be sought. It can remain for another day to debate the matter of the costs of heavy water development in this country, but I happen to recall the scenario at that time and the urgent efforts made by the Province of Nova Scotia to locate that plant there. That subject would form a very interesting debate. My basic point is that no government likes to make mistakes. This government is concerned with making sure that no undue hardship will be visited upon people who are paid substantially in excess of their entitlement.

Surely, if we establish the precedent that regardless of circumstances the taxpayers of Canada must pick up the tab in the event of a serious mistake or overpayment in various programs, all sorts of consequences would follow. I, for one, would not be prepared to support that kind of basic policy decision.

Senator Smith (Colchester): Perhaps instead of the taxpayers paying it, the members of the Privy Council might consider relieving the hardship imposed on the poor innocent taxpayers who are required to repay this money—money which was put in their possession wrongfully by these gentlemen.

Just to consider the matter of the heavy water plant a little longer, since the honourable gentleman wants to gnaw at it, or dig at it like a sore tooth—and, mind you, it is his sore tooth, not mine—I could tell him that if the Government of Canada had avoided putting certain very difficult restrictions upon the conditions related to that heavy water plant after it had told us that it would be located in Nova Scotia, things would have been very different.

An Hon. Senator: Question.

Senator Smith (Colchester): Why did you not call for the question when the honourable gentleman opposite started this irrelevant and immaterial debate?

An Hon. Senator: Order.

Senator Smith (Colchester): Haven't I got as much right to ask a question as he had to answer? I don't have to be any more relevant than he was.

Senator Walker: Now we are all happy.

Senator Perrault: Go ahead, senator.

Senator Smith (Colchester): As a further supplementary question, which is strictly relevant, is the Leader of the Government aware whether or not the government, or the appropriate minister thereof, has received any representations from the Government of Nova Scotia in relation to the repayment, or otherwise, of these sums as they relate to Nova Scotians?

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, I do not have that information available at my desk. An inquiry will go forward forthwith.

CANADIAN WHEAT BOARD

SUGGESTED RESTRUCTURING—QUESTION

Senator Olson: Honourable senators, I should like to direct a question to the government leader respecting the announcement made by Premier Lougheed of Alberta either yesterday or the day before about a major restructuring of the Canadian Wheat Board. Could the leader give an undertaking to bring us the federal government's official response to that suggestion? I can tell him that a number of farmers in western Canada are apprehensive about a major restructuring of the Canadian Wheat Board at this time, transferring a great deal of the responsibility to the provinces, when, in fact, the Wheat Board has, at least recently and I think for a long time, earned a reputation of having given them good performance in the marketing area.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senator, that commitment will most assuredly be given and information will be brought here as soon as possible.

THE SENATE

PROPOSALS FOR REFORM—QUESTION

Senator Forsey: Honourable senators, I wonder if I might ask the Leader of the Government whether he or his colleagues have been made aware of the proposals for Senate reform, adopted unanimously, I understand, a few days ago, by the Legislature of Nova Scotia.

The proposal, as I understand it, is a most interesting one; it is that the Senate should be elected instead of appointed, and that every province should have the same representation as every other. I am wondering whether the government in preparing its constitutional proposals is aware of this and will give this proposal the attention—in my judgment exceedingly small—which it deserves.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, there have been a number of proposals, exotic and otherwise, which have originated from a number of sources regarding Senate reform, some of them advanced by people with absolutely no knowledge whatever of the Senate or of the parliamentary system. But it is certainly the right of any Canadian to advance reform ideas with respect to any institution in this country. I think, however, that at some point it would be of great value for the Senate to establish a committee of its own to evaluate all proposals regarding Senate reform and to set forth some of the Senate's own options on the subject of the future of the Senate. Such a committee would provide an opportunity for honourable senators, who happen to know this institution better than any other group of Canadians, to set forth their own views on the subject of change and reform, and perhaps witnesses could be heard. This is an idea that can be pursued over the coming months.

It is very important that the Senate examine how it can become even more effective, just as the other place must do and should do. I believe that every institution, to remain relevant and viable and useful, must be willing to assess and re-assess its position from time to time. The Senate has never shirked its responsibility.

I have read with interest a number of proposals on so-called Senate reform. In my view, some of them would plunge the parliamentary system into utter chaos, I am sorry to say.

Senator Smith (Colchester): Honourable senators, I wonder if I might ask a supplementary question of the Leader of the Government? It is simply this: Would he be willing to find out whether or not that resolution referred to by Senator Forsey has been officially, or otherwise, forwarded to the notice of the Government of Canada or to any minister thereof?

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, I shall certainly undertake that responsibility, and I think that along with a number of other proposals it should be studied by the government and disposed of in the appropriate way—whatever way that may be.

An Hon. Senator: In the wastebasket.

Senator Grosart: Is it the intention of the Leader of the Government to pursue this very interesting initiative before dissolution?

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, that must depend on when dissolution might occur. I could not, for example, give a promise that within the next 12 hours we could initiate that kind of study.

• (1440)

Senator Roblin: Honourable senators, I should like to ask the Leader of the Government if he has any information about the intention of the Government of Canada itself to publish some recommendations for the reform of Parliament, and, if so, what date could he suggest that information might come to us?

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, there is a study under way, just as I understand that similar studies are under way by members of the other political parties. A statement regarding constitutional reform, reform of various institutions in this country, and reform of Parliament, is the prerogative of the Prime Minister, and he will determine when any announcement or policy pronouncement will be made and the form in which it will be made. I cannot give any time schedule.

I have read with interest, however, some statements on the Constitution suggesting a House of Provinces, for example, by a spokesman for the loyal opposition in Parliament. So I understand that members of that party also have the subject under study.

Senator Marshall: Honourable senators, I have a question of privilege apropos the initiative taken by the Leader of the Government with regard to Senate reform. I received across my desk today, as no doubt did all honourable senators, a letter from QCTV Ltd. of Edmonton, Alberta, addressed to All Federal Members of Parliament and All Alberta Provincial Members of the Legislative Assembly. The letter reads as follows:

Much has been said recently about "Television in the House of Commons." Is it effective? Do people benefit from it: Should it be continued?

After several months of delivering the House of Commons Proceedings to the Edmonton public on a tape-delayed basis, QCTV Cablevision decided to ask its subscribers how they feel about the matter.

Enclosed with that letter was a lovely pamphlet entitled "Television in the House of Commons." I believe it is apropos at this time to advise QCTV and the people out there that the picture on the survey is that of the Senate of Canada.

Senator Perrault: Obviously, QCTV really knows where the action is.

Senator Walker: Honourable senators, I want to say one thing. Whatever we may say about the Leader of the Government, he has through valiant efforts delivered some very good members of the Senate. I want to thank him for that.

FINANCIAL ADMINISTRATION ACT

BILL TO AMEND—SECOND READING—DEBATE CONTINUED

The Senate resumed from Thursday, May 4, the debate on the motion of Senator Cook for the second reading of Bill C-10, to amend the Financial Administration Act.

Hon. George I. Smith: Honourable senators, as I join in this debate I would like to congratulate Senator Cook on the speech he made when he introduced this bill on second reading. It was characteristic of the frank and straightforward attitude which he so often displays.

My colleagues, Senator Grosart and Senator Roblin, together with Senator Forsey, made very clear and cogent arguments which demonstrated very persuasively the inadequacies of this bill. I had one or two comments to make about the remarks of Senator Greene, but in his absence I shall confine myself to saying that he was his usual eloquent self.

The Auditor General, in relation to this bill, gave evidence before a committee of the other place to which the bill was referred. He said a number of interesting things, honourable senators, which I recommend reading. One that caught my eye is contained in Issue No. 8 of the Proceedings of the Standing Committee on Miscellaneous Estimates of the House of Commons. At page 8 he said, in part, as follows:

In my previous occupation I made a living by asking two questions. The first question was, why? The second question was, why not?

Honourable senators, I propose to ask those questions today about some of the things related to this bill, and to try to supply some answers. The first question, I suppose, is: Why do we want a Comptroller General? We have already been told by previous speakers where to find the answer to that—in the Auditor General's Report. We might also look at his evidence before the committee of the other place, to which I have just referred.

[Senator Marshall.]

Let us take a brief look in those places just to refresh our memories—we have heard it before—and to see what we find. In paragraph 2.3 of his report for the year ending March 31, 1976, the Auditor General says, in part:

—financial management and control in the Government of Canada is grossly inadequate.

And in paragraph 2.1:

—financial management and control . . . is significantly below acceptable standards—

And in paragraph 3.26:

I believe that Parliament—

I emphasize the word "Parliament".

—and the people of Canada—

I emphasize that phrase as well:

—have the right to sound information on planned and actual expenditures and that the Government cannot afford the risk of being misled by the lack of adequate and objective information.

I need hardly mention the well-known statement of the Auditor General, in paragraph 2.1 of his 1975-76 report, that Parliament—again I emphasize that word—and indeed the government, has lost control, or nearly lost control, of the expenditure of public money; or his words:

Small wonder that Parliament—

Again I stress "Parliament":

—has lost control of government spending. The MPs scarcely had a fighting chance to get adequate information on the spending they have to approve.

I submit that that is worth thinking about, and thinking about very carefully.

Let us turn to the evidence of the Auditor General before the Miscellaneous Estimates Committee, which I shall refer to hereafter simply as "the committee." Looking at the eighth issue of its proceedings, dated March 17, 1978, we find that the Auditor General, speaking of the responsibilities of the Treasury Board, said, in part:

They have always been there. They have been discharged very badly—

I repeat:

[Those responsibilities] have always been there. They have been discharged very badly—

That was not something said off in a corner somewhere. That was said before the committee of the other place in full session.

Honourable senators, I do not recall reading or hearing a more damning indictment of the financial management of the government and the Treasury Board than what is contained in these quotations and similar comments of the Auditor General—and, I might say, similar comments before the Public Accounts Committee of the other place. I submit that they more than sufficiently answer the question: Why should we have a Comptroller General?

But, honourable senators, I submit that they do more than that. They demonstrate that the Treasury Board has not for some years deserved the confidence of Parliament or the public; nor is there any convincing reason to believe it deserves any more confidence now.

● (1450)

With respect to the idea of the position of Comptroller General, it is well known that the then Secretary of the Treasury Board—who is not the one who is there now—when asked on March 18, 1976 before the Public Accounts Committee of the other place if he did not feel there should be a chief financial officer, replied:

No, sir. I believe a government governs and the government is responsible for doing so and is accountable to the country and it must discharge that responsibility.

There are other excellent quotations which form the basis of the very best of reasons for believing that the view of the Treasury Board generally at that time was: "We want no Comptroller General." Indeed, it is clear that that was the view of the present President of the Treasury Board, because he said so himself, though he apparently changed his mind after he concluded that the Comptroller General would not be reporting to Parliament. I emphasize that. Until he became satisfied that the Comptroller General would not be reporting to Parliament, the President of the Treasury Board was against the idea of having a Comptroller General, and he said so before the committee of the other place. I repeat, he was against having a Comptroller General when it was considered that that official would be reporting to Parliament. This point of view, I submit, is not very well calculated to inspire Parliament to believe that he wanted Parliament to know what the Comptroller General would do, or might find.

If any honourable senator has any doubts about this, let him turn to page 6 of Issue No. 7 of the committee's proceedings where, among other things, the President of the Treasury Board said—and I do not propose to read all that he said on that occasion, since he was giving evidence for a substantial period of time—with relation to the recommendations of the Auditor General:

Indeed, I shared some concerns about the precise intent and precise structure that was intended, and the accountability aspect of the structure. I had several meetings with the Auditor General—five or six, if I recall—in which we came to a clear understanding that some of the implication or interpretation of what we thought—

"We" meaning himself and his associates.

—that he had in mind was in fact not what he had had in mind, and whether that was our misinterpretation of the words he used is a matter of history now.

There were some phrases used—

And there surely were.

—and Mr. Macdonell and I both agreed on the understanding of what they really meant. We had thought he had been talking about an additional office that would be reporting to Parliament, and in that sense we could see no purpose in duplicating what would necessarily be a duplication, in our minds, of the Auditor General himself. When it became apparent that this was not what he intended and—

That is, that there would not be a report to Parliament.

—that there had just been a difference in interpretation, I examined the whole issue in much more depth—

That is, he began to take it seriously.

—and I came to the conclusion that this was, in fact, a positive, constructive move to take. I discussed it with my colleagues and the decision was made to make the appointment.

I say that the decision was made to make the appointment on the basis that Parliament did not prescribe the Comptroller General's duties, and did not even receive his report.

Honourable senators, I submit it is perfectly clear from that statement that the President of the Treasury Board does not want the Comptroller General to report to Parliament. Again I ask the question: Why? The minister's answer is to the effect that it would be a duplication of the report of the Auditor General himself. That is what I just read to you from the evidence of the minister. But, what kind of reason is that? Surely the minister did not have such a poor opinion of the Auditor General as to believe that that gentleman would want some official appointed to duplicate his own work, and his own report to Parliament—you have only to mention that to realize what an absurdity it is—and I fail to see, with all respect, how anybody could reasonably think that that is what the Auditor General meant.

Even if the President of the Treasury Board did think that that is what the Auditor General meant, why, I ask again, was he so determined to prevent Parliament from getting the Comptroller General's report, so that Parliament could judge for itself whether it was a duplication? Or was it, as seems to me more likely, that the minister could not bear the thought of another officer of Parliament digging into the activities of the Treasury Board, about which the Auditor General has been so uncomplimentary?

I cannot help but notice that the minister said it took five or six meetings with the Auditor General to clear up the misunderstanding as to what that very able and precise gentleman meant. Honourable senators, it must have been some misunderstanding! I am surprised indeed that it would take the Auditor General five or six meetings to explain what he meant, since, while reading his reports, I have always thought he is very clear and explicit as to what he means.

An Hon. Senator: Hear, hear.

Senator Smith (Colchester): It seems to me more likely that it was an effort on the part of somebody to try to persuade the Auditor General that a financial officer responsible only to the minister would be better than no financial officer at all.

Another reason given was that it might interfere with ministerial responsibility, and I propose to deal with that in a few minutes. I realize, of course, that the bill cannot be amended at this stage. However, I suggest that it should be referred to committee, and that the committee to which it is referred should exercise its right to recommend amendments by putting forward at the very least an amendment which would require the Comptroller General's report to be placed before Parliament within a reasonable time, say 15 or 30 days, after it is made available to the President of the Treasury Board. Such a provision would give effect to the minister's insistence that the Comptroller General report to him. It would also place the information in that report before Parliament with reasonable promptitude, thus enabling Parliament to carry out its duties more effectively.

Honourable senators, I ask: How is Parliament going to insist on a minister's discharging his ministerial responsibility if Parliament does not have full and complete information? And what is "responsibility"? The fifth edition of the Concise Oxford Dictionary defines "responsible" as meaning "liable to be called to account, answerable". In respect of the term "responsible government," it uses the definition "morally accountable for actions." Similar definitions will be found in other accepted dictionaries.

I ask again how the government or a minister can be called to account properly by a Parliament from which the necessary information is withheld. Obviously, this is an impossibility. Equally obviously, if Parliament had before it the report of the Comptroller General, it would have more information and could better call the government or the minister to account for their conduct of public affairs. It could make the minister or the government, or both, respond in the sense of the dictionary definitions—"morally accountable for actions," "called to account," "answerable". Surely, that cannot reasonably be denied.

● (1500)

I should like now, if I may, honourable senators, to turn to the question of the contents of the bill. One has only to look at it to realize it contains no description whatever of the duties of the Comptroller General, or of how he is to carry out his task. This fundamentally important bill deals with the appointment of the Comptroller General and the assignment of his duties in a matter of six and one-half lines of type which are only half the width of the page. It is true that these six and one-half lines provide authority for the appointment of the Comptroller General and for his rank as a deputy minister. However, they also cast him entirely into the hands and upon the mercy of the Treasury Board which, of course, is composed of ministers of the crown, including its President—and we have just heard what the Auditor General thinks of some of their activities. Not only do these six and one-half lines provide for the Comptroller General to hold office only during pleasure—that is, the pleasure of the government which, in all probability, simply means the pleasure of the Treasury Board itself, and perhaps means only the pleasure of the President of the Treasury Board—but they ensure beyond all doubt that he does not do anything that the Treasury Board would not like. His duties, according to the bill, are to be those and only those which may be assigned to him by the Treasury Board. They may also be reassigned or taken away.

[Senator Smith (Colchester).]

Here, honourable senators, we are dealing with the appointment and the duties of an official whose job will be of the most fundamental importance to the financial control of the public purse. Indeed, the Auditor General describes it—and perhaps I will come in due course to a direct quotation—as the most important job of financial control either in the public or in the private sector of this country.

What do we do? If this bill goes through the way it is, all we do is appoint him and say, "You may hold office during pleasure. The people we make your bosses will prescribe what you do and, of course, what you will not do."

The Auditor General, to emphasize the importance he attaches to this job, has gone on to say that it is ten times more important than his own. Presumably this is because, if the Comptroller General does what the Auditor General thinks he should do, he will control the actual use of public money, while the Auditor General simply performs an audit and an examination of what has been done, but does so after the money has been spent.

Surely, honourable senators, it is not consistent with the importance of such a task for Parliament to abdicate to the Treasury Board its right to see that this very important official does some very important things for the benefit of Parliament and, particularly, for the benefit of the people of Canada.

Some Hon. Senators: Hear, hear.

Senator Smith (Colchester): Let me again ask the Auditor General's question: Why not? Why are these duties not defined in the bill? So far as I can tell from reading the comments of the President of the Treasury Board, the only reason he gives for failing to include the definition of the official's duties in the bill is that the words used in the bill are the same as those used with reference to the position of Secretary of the Treasury Board, and that the duties of other deputy ministers are not spelled out in greater detail. These, I submit, are reasons—if they are reasons rather than excuses—that really have nothing whatever to do with the merits of the question. They are reasons directed only towards the desire for uniformity; the desire to cast everything in precisely the same mould, no matter how different those things may be one from another.

Honourable senators, I repeat the submission that these are not really reasons at all, but only evidence of a blind, unreasoning desire for complete uniformity where uniformity has no particular place.

The omission of these duties from the bill is certainly not because the government and the minister are not prepared to say what they intend the Comptroller General should do, and certainly not because the Auditor General failed to point out to them what his duties should be. Indeed, before the committee I mentioned, the President detailed in almost a page and a half what he called, in reference to the Comptroller General, "These are responsibilities that we see". This list will be found on pages 14 and 15 of Issue No. 7 of that committee's proceedings. I ask honourable senators, if the President of the Treasury Board is prepared to say now what he expects the duties of this gentleman to be, why the most fundamentally important of them cannot be included in the bill? Again there can only be one real reason, and that is because he and his associates do not want them to be included in it.

I ask the question: Why should matters of such fundamental importance be left to the pleasure of the Treasury Board to prescribe, alter or withdraw from the jurisdiction of the Comptroller General?

Now I ask the question: Why not? Why should Parliament not be able to ensure that in these fields at least the Treasury Board must comply with the directions of the Parliament of Canada and must, therefore, allow the Comptroller General to do so? Before that can happen, these directions must be in the bill.

One of the reasons given was that to put the definition of these duties in the bill would be to do something which is different from that which is done with reference to other deputy ministers, and it might interfere with ministerial responsibility. I suggest that this officer will not be a deputy minister or a deputy head at all; he will be the Comptroller General of Canada and the words "deputy head" or "deputy minister" are not used to describe his duties or his appointment, but only to fix his rank in the bureaucratic hierarchy. If you look at the words in the bill you will see that that is all it is meant to do. If it meant he was a deputy minister, it would say so, but it only says he shall have the rank or the status, or some words to that effect, of a deputy head of a department. I submit there are very few people who would argue that the legislative commands of Parliament do not carry more weight than regulations or orders made by the Treasury Board.

The task of the Comptroller General is not going to be an easy one. Surely, the more weight and authority that can be given to his position, the better able he will be to carry out his duties properly.

Honourable senators, I find it difficult not to treat with scorn the argument that it would not be good to give him such power by legislation because other deputy ministers do not have it. He is not a deputy minister, but even if he were, he would not be a deputy minister like the others; he would be the Comptroller General of Canada, the person occupying, to use the words of the Auditor General, the most important financial control position in the public and private sectors of Canada.

● (1510)

This area of definition in the bill of at least the main powers of the Comptroller General is one where I submit the committee to which the bill is referred might very well present a second amendment, this one outlining the more important of the Comptroller General's duties so that it will carry all the weight of Parliament, and so that it cannot be interfered with by the government, the Treasury Board or anybody else.

What all this argument has to do with ministerial responsibility I find it very difficult to envisage. This apparently is one of the reasons offered for not setting out in a definitive way some of the major duties, as I have just suggested. Surely, if it has anything to do with ministerial responsibility at all, it would make it easier for Parliament to call a minister or the government to account for how ministerial responsibility has been exercised.

It is interesting to see how this question of ministerial responsibility was put before the Auditor General by somebody. It must have been by the Treasury Board, the Governor in Council, individual ministers of the Crown, or some very senior officials. In any event, at page 8 of Issue No. 8 of the proceedings of the Miscellaneous Estimates Committee, the Auditor General said:

But when I asked the same question . . . I got two answers all right. Relating to why not—

That is the question: Why not?

—was the answer ministerial responsibility.

Then he said, as Senator Grosart pointed out the other day:

I bumped my head into that one.

To return to the Auditor General and his comments, he said:

All I am telling the Committee, sir, with respect to the answer that was given to me, is that it is not done that way. Again, I would declare my own bias. Anything that can strengthen control of the public purse, I am automatically for. I recognize and I did try to say that I find nothing offensive at all in this—

That is, the argument that these things should be put in the bill.

—but I have to concede the point that it is certainly exceptional and people that admittedly know a lot more about parliamentary procedure and about how you do things legislatively in Parliament say that you just do not spell out the detailed duties and responsibilities of an administrative official because the Minister—in this case it would be presumably the committee of ministers known as the Treasury Board—are the people that are responsible to Parliament for the administration of the duties aside from the act.

And they, in carrying out this responsibility, feel that they must have the authority to do what they wish to do—

And listen to this.

—to change anybody's duties now.

So, honourable senators, I think we come to the real answer to the question of why the duties of the Comptroller General are not spelled out in this bill. The Treasury Board feel they must have the authority to do what they wish to change anybody's duties now. Is that the sort of position that we, Parliament, want to abdicate to anybody, much less to the organization about which the Auditor General has said the things, and many other things, that I have read to you or referred to earlier today? That, I submit, is precisely what Parliament ought not to allow them to do. It ought not to allow the Treasury Board to have the authority to do what they wish to change anybody's duties now.

Just to refresh our memories about what the Auditor General recognized about the problem of Parliament, let me repeat a few of his words on this point:

—Parliament—and indeed the government—has lost, or is close to losing, effective control of the public purse.

This is the board, honourable senators, under whom the financial management and control system of departments and agencies of the Government of Canada became “significantly below acceptable standards of quality and effectiveness”; this is the board under whom “financial management and control in the Government of Canada is grossly inadequate”; this is the board under whom “financial management and control of crown corporations became and remained weak and ineffective”; this is the board under whom the “co-ordination and guidance by central government agencies and financial management and control practices in crown corporations became virtually non-existent.” These are the people in respect of whose efforts the Auditor General said in his 1976-77 report:

Small wonder that Parliament has lost control of government spending. The MPs scarcely had a fighting chance to get adequate information on the spending they have to approve.

Is it any wonder, honourable senators, that some of us do not have sufficient confidence in this organization to give it absolutely unlimited control over the Comptroller General of Canada and his duties and his tenure of office?

Let us consider for a moment some of the recommendations as to the duties of the Comptroller General made by the Auditor General in his 1976 report, at page 16:

The Comptroller General will report directly to the President of the Treasury Board . . . The Comptroller General will be responsible to the Treasury Board for the quality and integrity of the financial control systems and administrative policies and practices in use throughout the federal civil service.

He will have the responsibility for:

The design, development, implementation and monitoring of adequate systems and procedures to ensure that:

(1) The form of the estimates provides a sound basis for the government's budgetary control system;

(2) public moneys and assets are under his effective custody and control at all times;

● (1520)

(3) accounting procedures and financial reports throughout government (including the public accounts) should conform to acceptable accounting principles and standards;

(4) expenditures of public moneys are made with due regard for economy and efficiency;

(5) satisfactory procedures measure the effectiveness of programs where they could reasonably be expected to apply; and

(6) he should be maintaining the central accounts of Canada, a job which is presently being carried out by the Department of Supply and Services.

And I ask again: Why should we not put these responsibilities in the bill so that not only Parliament but all parts of the public service know what his duties are, so that he carries wherever he goes the authority of the stipulation of Parliament that he should have these responsibilities and, of course, the authority to carry them out? I submit, for the consideration of the committee to which this bill will be referred, that at the very least they should consider putting forward an amendment for the Senate to consider which will include a statement of the duties of the Comptroller General.

In case anyone wants the exact words of the Auditor General referring to the position of the Comptroller General, he said:

It is the most important and responsible financial position in both the public and private sectors of Canada.

I have heard no one express any dissent from the description of the position as:

—the most important and responsible financial position in both the public and private sectors of Canada.

As we all know, this is a position which will deal with the control of the finances of this country. Can we properly say that Parliament should refrain from defining the duties of such a position? Can we properly say that Parliament is discharging its duty to the country and to itself if it leaves the power to define these duties to anyone other than itself? Surely, honourable senators, we ought to make certain that Parliament does use its right to stipulate what the essential basis of this official's duties shall be, and that no one, except Parliament, has the right to change it.

On motion of Senator Macdonald, debate adjourned.

PROVINCE OF QUEBEC

CONTRIBUTION MADE BY ENGLISH-SPEAKING MINORITY— INQUIRY STANDS

On the Inquiry of Senator Macnaughton:

That he will call the attention of the Senate to the contribution made by the English-speaking minority to the Province of Quebec.

Senator Petten: This inquiry stands until Tuesday, May 23.

Senator Asselin: That will be too late.

The Senate adjourned until tomorrow at 2 p.m.

THE SENATE

Thursday, May 11, 1978

The Senate met at 2 p.m., the Speaker in the Chair.

Prayers.

CANADIAN NATIONAL RAILWAYS CAPITAL REVISION ACT RAILWAY ACT

BILL TO AMEND—FIRST READING

The Hon. the Speaker informed the Senate that a message had been received from the House of Commons with Bill C-17, to amend the Canadian National Railways Capital Revision Act and the Railway Act and to amend and repeal certain other statutes in consequence thereof.

Bill read first time.

Senator Perrault moved that the bill be placed on the Orders of the Day for second reading on Tuesday next.

Motion agreed to.

BUSINESS OF THE SENATE

ADJOURNMENT

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, with leave of the Senate and notwithstanding rule 45(1)(g), I move that when the Senate adjourns today it do stand adjourned until Tuesday, May 16, 1978, at 8 o'clock in the evening.

Senator Grosart: We will be here?

Senator Langlois: I hope so.

Honourable senators, before the question is put I should like to give you a brief rundown on what we can expect for next week.

When we return next week we shall continue with the items already on the order paper and proceed with second reading of Bill C-17 which has come to us today from the other place. It is expected that Bill C-4, to amend the Aeronautics Act, will reach the Senate next week, and perhaps also Bill C-48, to amend the Customs Tariff.

With respect to committees, the Joint Committee on Regulations and other Statutory Instruments is scheduled to meet on Tuesday at 9.30 a.m. and on Thursday at 11 a.m. The Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce will meet on both Wednesday and Thursday at 9.30 a.m. on the subject matter of Bill C-13; and, of course, the Standing Senate Committee on National Finance will meet to consider Bill C-10, should that bill be referred.

Motion agreed to.

COMPTROLLER GENERAL OF CANADA

STATUS OF MR. HARRY ROGERS—QUESTION

Senator Grosart: Honourable senators, I have a question for the Leader of the Government. It is really a supplementary question arising out of a former question I asked and the answer given by the Leader of the Government in the chamber yesterday.

The Leader of the Government said, referring to my question:

He asked, to use his exact words, why it appeared to be necessary to exclude this designate appointment of Mr. Rogers from the operation of the Public Service Employment Act.

The answer given by the Leader of the Government was as follows:

The answer to this question is that this is an order in council appointment and therefore does not come under the terms of the act.

I find the answer very difficult to understand, because the question was why it was necessary to exclude Mr. Rogers, the so-called designate Comptroller General, from the operation of the Public Service Employment Act, and the answer is that because it is an order in council he does not come under the terms of the act. The question therefore arises: why, if he does not come under the terms of the act, would it be necessary to exclude him from the act?

If I may have leave, perhaps I could read the order in council, because I think it will be essential to an understanding of the question and the answer. It is an order in council under the Public Service Employment Act, entitled "Special Appointment Regulations, No. 15. P.C. 1978-475 17 February, 1978," and it reads:

Whereas the Public Service Commission has decided that it is not practicable nor in the best interests of the Public Service to apply the Public Service Employment Act to Mr. H. G. Rogers on his appointment to the position of Special Adviser to the President of the Treasury Board, on matters of financial and administrative controls.

Therefore, His Excellency the Governor-General in Council, on the recommendation of the Public Service Commission, is pleased hereby:

(a) pursuant to section 39 of the Public Service Employment Act, to approve the exclusion by the Public Service Commission of Mr. H. G. Rogers on his appointment to the position of Special Adviser to the President of the Treasury Board on matters of financial and administrative controls; and

(b) pursuant to subsection 35(1) of the Public Service Employment Act to make the annexed Regulations respecting the employment of Mr. H. G. Rogers.

There is then a heading, "Regulations Respecting the Employment of Mr. H. G. Rogers":

Short Title

1. These Regulations may be cited as the Special Appointment Regulations, No. 15.

General

2. The Governor in Council may appoint Mr. H. G. Rogers to the position of Special Adviser to the President of the Treasury Board on matters of financial and administrative controls.

To repeat my question, I asked why, if this, being an order in council appointment, does not come under the terms of the act, was it necessary to have an order in council to exclude Mr. Rogers from the operation of the act?

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, I do not have before me the body of material which guided me in my statement on this subject yesterday. It seems to me that the answer is implicit in the order in council document which has been cited by the Acting Leader of the Opposition. The decision involved a judgment by the government. Mr. Rogers' position involves, in effect, an appointment by the Prime Minister. There is nothing unique about the procedure. It has been followed in many past instances. However, I shall certainly undertake to obtain further information so that the Acting Leader of the Opposition may be fully satisfied on the points he has raised.

Senator Grosart: As a further supplementary, may I ask whether the Leader of the Government would also answer a question which arises out of the statement made by Senator Forsey following my earlier question? Is it so that the Public Service Commission advises his Excellency the Governor General?

• (1410)

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, yesterday in my reply to the Honourable Senator Grosart I stated:

As well, the Honourable Senator Forsey questioned the words "the Governor General in Council on the recommendation of the Public Service Commission," saying he was surprised to find that the Public Service Commission is making recommendations. Under section 39 of the Public Service Employment Act, the Public Service Commission has the right to exclude a position from the provisions of the act.

Senator Grosart: That does not say that it has the right to advise the Governor in Council.

Senator Langlois: No, it is not advising.

Senator Grosart: It is recommending.

[Senator Grosart.]

Senator Perrault: And, as I said yesterday, there is no provision for the Public Service Commission to recommend an appointment, so I really cannot understand what point troubles the Acting Leader of the Opposition. This is a procedure which has been followed by this and, I understand, previous governments. I cannot really understand the troubling point.

An Hon. Senator: The Diefenbaker government.

Senator Grosart: I am not questioning the propriety of it at all at this time. My question is merely why, if the appointment does not come under the Public Service Act, he should be excluded from the operation of that act? It is a simple question.

Senator Perrault: I think that basically it is a governmental decision and if reasons are being sought by the Honourable Senator Grosart, further inquiries will go forward. It is perfectly in order for Senator Grosart to pose a question of this nature, but it really lies in the area of government policy.

Senator Forsey: Honourable senators, I wonder if I might ask a question connected with the reply of the Leader of the Government yesterday to my question on the subject of the words "the Governor General in Council on the recommendation of the Public Service Commission," because, if my memory serves, those are the words which were used in the order in council. And the point I was raising was that ordinarily in an order in council you will find that the order is issued by His Excellency in Council on the recommendation of a minister. I am surprised to find the Leader of the Government saying that the Public Service Commission has—how did he put it?

There is no provision for the Public Service Commission to recommend an appointment.

What is the meaning of those words? It seems to me an irregularity, unless there is some provision somewhere for it, and the Leader of the Government says there is no provision for it.

Perhaps my recollection of what the order actually says is imperfect, but if so, I should like to have the thing clarified, because it seems very curious that the Public Service Commission, which certainly under the act has the power to exclude positions, as we all know, should at the same time be advising, should be making recommendations to the Governor General in Council, which I had always supposed was the prerogative, if I may use that word, of ministers and not of an administrative body.

Senator Perrault: I wish to reiterate the assurance I have given to the Acting Leader of the Opposition that further information will be sought to clarify the situation. To this time, the material which has been provided me has been given to the chamber. Further information will be sought.

GENERAL ELECTION

STATEMENT BY PRIME MINISTER

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, I am able now to inform the house that the Right Honourable the Prime Minister has just announced in the House of Commons that there will be no election at the present time. The Prime Minister has stated that Parliament will be asked to remain in session to solve the problems which affect the country, so I believe that we can all look forward to a rather full, busy and productive few weeks ahead.

An Hon. Senator: A busy summer.

Senator Choquette: All waiting for favourable polls, I take it.

Senator Perrault: There was nothing in the statement by the Right Honourable the Prime Minister about polls, whatever they are.

Senator Grosart: In view of the wording of the announcement, I wonder if the Prime Minister actually said that there would be no election, or if he merely said that he would not advise His Excellency to dissolve Parliament.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, I appreciate the opportunity to clarify it. This is a rather brief, hastily drawn note which has been passed to me from the other place. The precise wording of the Prime Minister's statement will appear in today's Hansard of the House of Commons. I also understand that later this afternoon the Right Honourable the Prime Minister will be scheduling a news conference, when further details will be given.

Senator Grosart: I raise the question because I rather doubt that the Right Honourable the Prime Minister, being so precise as he usually is in such matters, would say or be presumed to have said that there would be no election.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, I can give the assurance that the government has every intention to call an election at some point in the future.

CANADA-UNITED STATES RELATIONS

GARRISON DAM PROJECT—QUESTION ANSWERED

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, yesterday Senator Roblin asked the following question:

Honourable senators, may I ask the Leader of the Government if he can give us, at leisure, the latest information with respect to negotiations between the Government of Canada and the Government of the United States with respect to the Garrison Dam project in the State of North Dakota, and any relevant material with respect to the relations between the Government of Canada and the International Joint Commission?

Honourable senators, I can now advise that on February 1, the U.S. Department of the Interior issued a revised draft plan in response to a domestic court settlement.

Canadian experts examined this revised plan and, on April 3, we delivered to the State Department a letter stating that Canada still had concerns over the potential trans-boundary impacts, particularly regarding water quality and the potential transfer of harmful fish and other biological species from the Missouri River into the Red River system; that we still considered the 1977 IJC Report on Garrison to be the basis on which these impacts should be considered; and that we wished to have further information and consultations on the American plan.

The Americans replied that the Administration, as a whole, is still reviewing the Department of the Interior's draft plan, that their review includes consideration of the IJC Report, and that they will be pleased to consult with us when they have had a chance to further examine the whole matter.

FISHERIES

DEPLETION OF STOCKS BY FOREIGN COUNTRIES

Senator Marshall: Honourable senators, I should like to ask the Leader of the Government in the Senate a question which relates to one I raised on May 4, as reported at page 745 of the Debates of the Senate. The question has to do with the depleting of stocks by foreign fishing fleets on the fringes of the 200-mile limit. The leader indicated that he would make a statement to the Senate on the subject by possibly the middle of this week. Is the leader prepared to make that statement now?

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, that statement is not yet ready for presentation to the Senate. The inquiry has gone forward and I understand that a reply is in a state of preparation.

I understand that today is an allotted day in the other place and that the opposition is concerned with matters affecting the Honourable Roméo LeBlanc, the Minister of Fisheries and the Environment. Perhaps this has caused a slight delay in the preparation of the material requested by Senator Marshall.

REVENUE CANADA

REMOVAL OF OFFICES FROM SAINT JOHN, NEW BRUNSWICK—QUESTION

Senator Riley: Honourable senators, I should like to direct a question to the Leader of the Government.

Just before the end of the last session I asked the leader a question with respect to the possible transfer of 60 members of the Department of National Revenue from Saint John, New Brunswick, to St. John's, Newfoundland. It has been a long time and I still have not received an answer to that question.

• (1420)

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, I feel sure that that question has been answered. If it has not been answered I shall undertake an immediate inquiry. Certainly, if a reply has not been forthcoming it has been an inordinately long period of time.

INDIAN AFFAIRS

JOINT COMMITTEE OF THE GOVERNMENT OF CANADA AND NATIONAL INDIAN BROTHERHOOD—QUESTION

Senator Smith (Colchester): Honourable senators, I should like to direct a question to the Leader of the Government relating to Indian Affairs.

Was there until recently, or is there now, a joint committee composed of members of the government and representatives of a native organization which, I believe, is referred to as the National Indian Brotherhood? If so, does that committee still exist? If it does not exist, when did it cease to exist, and why?

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, because of the detailed nature of the question I must take it as notice. A reply will be forthcoming.

Senator Smith (Colchester): In view of that, I wonder if I might add another part to the question, perhaps supplementary to the main question.

If indeed such a joint committee has ceased to exist, was there, at or about the same time, a cutback in funds available for various Indian purposes, and, if so, to what extent?

NATIONAL REVENUE

REGISTERED CHARITIES—QUESTION ANSWERED

Senator Guay: Honourable senators, I should like to add two lines to an answer I gave Senator Grosart yesterday—an answer with which he did not agree—as follows:

Neither such a brief nor the representations in question would be considered to be political activity.

RECIPROCAL AGREEMENTS BETWEEN CANADA AND THE UNITED STATES RE TAX EXEMPTIONS ON DONATIONS TO CHARITABLE INSTITUTIONS—QUESTION ANSWERED

Senator Guay: Honourable senators, in response to Senator Grosart's question concerning the status of any reciprocal agreement or arrangement between Canada and the United States respecting donations to charitable institutions, there exists an agreement between Canada and the United States of America which is referred to as the Canada-U.S. Tax Convention. This agreement was brought into the Canadian statutes by the Canada-United States of America Tax Convention Act, 1943, which received royal assent on July 24, 1943. I might inform the honourable senator that the convention and protocol with the United States of America are currently being renegotiated.

Article XIII D(2) of that convention stipulates that a Canadian taxpayer, corporate or personal, having income from sources in the United States of America upon which he is subject to tax in Canada, may make a donation to a recognized charity in the United States of America which is deductible from his income from U.S. sources within the same limitations as the deduction for gifts to registered charities in Canada. Article XIII D(1) of the convention provides the same right to a taxpayer residing in the United States.

The determination of whether an organization is to be recognized as a charity or not is made by the country wherein the organization is situated in accordance with its own laws.

A Canadian taxpayer cannot, within the terms of the convention, make a deductible gift to a charity in the other country through a "subsidiary" in the other country.

There is only one exception, and that is in the case of commuters, persons living near the border.

Senator Grosart: I thank the Minister of National Revenue for his answer. Perhaps it is appropriate to congratulate him on his apparent promotion to the front bench. I notice, however, that he has been moved closer to the exit.

I wonder if I might ask the minister a supplementary question arising out of his answer. Would he inquire as to whether there are any special arrangements applicable only to universities and donations to universities of a nature that might be regarded as being similar to charitable donations?

Senator Guay: Yes, senator, I am looking into that aspect of it at the moment in view of the renegotiation that is taking place.

REVOCATION OF POWER OF ATTORNEY TO TAX REFUND DISCOUNTERS—QUESTION

Senator Smith (Colchester): Honourable senators, I wonder if I might direct a question to the Minister of National Revenue with reference to tax refund discounters. Is it correct, as has been reported in some communications media, that his department has adopted the policy of returning to the taxpayer, upon the taxpayer's request, any power of attorney or document authorizing refunds to be made to discounters?

Senator Guay: That statement has been released by one of the officials of my department without any consultation with me. I am looking into this matter at the moment.

Senator Grosart: Par for the course, I guess.

FINANCIAL ADMINISTRATION ACT

BILL TO AMEND—SECOND READING—DEBATE CONTINUED

On the Order:

Resuming the debate on the motion of the Honourable Senator Cook, seconded by the Honourable Senator Patterson, for the second reading of the Bill C-10, intituled: "An Act to amend the Financial Administration Act".—(Honourable Senator Macdonald).

Senator Macdonald: Honourable senators, I wish to yield to the Honourable Senator Asselin.

The Hon. the Speaker: Is it agreed, honourable senators?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

[Translation]

Hon. Martial Asselin: As the bill now before us is of considerable importance, as it contains extremely serious principles that must be discussed, and as I also wanted the bill to be passed as quickly as possible by the Senate, I thought I should speak to it this afternoon. Now, however, the Prime Minister having announced that he is not interested in going to the people in the near future, in holding an election, I feel we should take all the time available to study this bill in depth. So, with your consent, I move adjournment of the debate until Tuesday next.

On motion of Senator Asselin, debate adjourned.

[English]

CURRENCY AND EXCHANGE ACT

BILL TO AMEND—SECOND READING—DEBATE ADJOURNED

Hon. Jean Marchand moved the second reading of Bill C-39, to amend the Currency and Exchange Act.

He said: Honourable senators, I have just a short speech to deliver this afternoon. I was looking through it last night trying to see how I could put some emotion into it, but I really could not find any way of doing so. That is why I am just going to read it the way I wrote it in my room, and I hope you will be satisfied with that.

The specific purpose of this bill is to enable the Governor in Council to authorize the Royal Canadian Mint to strike and issue gold coins, to determine the par value and to set the maximum number of coins that may be minted in any one year.

In view of the resounding marketing success of the 1976 Olympic commemorative gold coin program, the Royal Canadian Mint was authorized in 1977 to issue a special 22-karat gold coin at a par value of $100 to commemorate Her Majesty's Silver Jubilee. Although it was not introduced until mid-1977, this program also proved to be a considerable success since, in only four months, more than 176,000 gold coins, worth a total of $24.6 million, were sold.

● (1430)

This, honourable senators, is only one indication that there already exists a worldwide market for these numismatic coins for which the Royal Canadian Mint is highly renowned. At present it is estimated that the global annual market for numismatic coins is approximately $1 billion, and in 1977 the mint sold more than $31 million worth of such coins. The government believes that the mint should continue its efforts to obtain a substantial share of this global market for Canada.

However, the benefits that can flow from such a program go far beyond a mere profit consideration for the Royal Canadian Mint and, consequently, the Government of Canada. Specifically, the following are only a few of the advantages of marketing a $100 gold coin based on an annual production of 200,000 units: the creation of 50 additional jobs at the Royal Canadian Mint, not counting the jobs created outside the mint with respect to the manufacturing of related products, such as blanks and cases, and with respect to marketing and distribution; additional revenue from gold refining by the Royal Canadian Mint; additional revenue of approximately $5 million to the government, plus an additional contribution of more than $500,000 to the provincial governments in the form of sales taxes; improvement in the balance of payments through the sale of some $15 million worth of coins abroad; and more profitable use of mint production facilities.

In addition, the marketing of gold coins could have an important long-term impact on the gold mining industry in Canada. For example, the minting of 200,000 $100 coins, or 100,000 ounces of gold, represents the total annual production of several mining companies in Canada with upwards of 500 employees each, a payroll of $6 million, and expenditures of between $5 million and $10 million a year. For each one of these jobs it may be assumed that five additional jobs will be created in related industries and services. Need I say more about the significance of such a program to the gold mining industry in Canada?

I presume, honourable senators, you will understand why it has been difficult for me to put any kind of emotion into this subject.

An Hon. Senator: Well, you are talking about money!

On motion of Senator Grosart, debate adjourned.

The Senate adjourned until Tuesday, May 16, 1978, at 8 p.m.

THE SENATE

Tuesday, May 16, 1978

The Senate met at 8 p.m., the Speaker in the Chair.

Prayers.

THE SENATE

MISLEADING USE OF PICTURE OF CHAMBER ON COMMERCIAL PUBLICATION—QUESTION OF PRIVILEGE

Senator Forsey: Honourable senators, I rise on a question of privilege, not my own privilege as a member of the Senate, but the privilege of the house in general.

I hold in my hand a handsome volume, both covers showing a picture, in full colours, of this chamber. The title is Parliamentary Procedure Simplified—A Complete Guide to Rules of Order. When I read this, remembering the number of times I had been ticked off in this house for breach of the rules by experts like Senator Grosart and Senator Molson, I thought this is exactly what I need—this is almost the answer to prayer.

You can imagine my sensations when I opened it and discovered that it contains not one syllable even vaguely related to Canada, and not one comma even vaguely related to any Parliament whatever, let alone this Parliament or this house. It is exclusively American.

It is full of references to when the author, a gentleman doubtless famous to others, but not known to me, Mr. F. L. Gordon, describes himself as having served as the adviser to the women's caucus in Houston, Texas, or when he refers—and this startled me considerably—to Dave Lillard, the 1975 Speaker of the Senate. I am sure Her Honour didn't realize she had been superseded, and by a male chauvinist at that. It turns out that Mr. Dave Lillard was Speaker of the Senate of the State University of Memphis, Tennessee.

This is comic in its way, but on the other hand, it seems to me a rather serious matter that Coles, the publishers publishing this in Toronto, should circulate this with the picture of this Senate chamber on both covers, very prominently displayed. It was apparently enough to deceive even the elect, because it was bought by the Parliamentary Library. This is their copy. It was bought by the Parliamentary Library on the assumption that it really did have something to do with procedure, at least in the Senate, if not in the House of Commons as well. I have written the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs drawing his attention to the fact that this appears to be a flagrant case of misleading advertising. I thought it only right also to raise it in the Senate as a matter of privilege. I think the firm concerned should be ticked off thoroughly for publishing this totally misleading cover, which might lead anybody to suppose that it had something to do with this chamber and the members of this chamber.

Senator Langlois: It will be a best-seller in no time at all.

DOCUMENTS TABLED

Senator Langlois tabled:

Copies of letters between the Prime Minister of Canada and the Honourable Peter Lougheed, Premier of Alberta, concerning Canada's future export grain marketing strategies.

Report of the Royal Commission on Corporate Concentration, dated March 1978, appointed by Order in Council P.C. 1975-879, dated April 22, 1975, pursuant to Part I of the Inquiries Act (Robert Broughton Bryce, Esquire, a Commissioner). Two additional Commissioners (Pierre Nadeau, Esquire, and R. W. V. Dickerson, Esquire) appointed by Order in Council P.C. 1975-999, dated May 1, 1975.

[Translation]

THE SENATE

LEGISLATIVE PROGRAM—QUESTIONS

Hon. Jacques Flynn: Honourable senators, after being away for two weeks—incidentally, I did not think that I would find you here this evening because I was convinced that I would not have to come back to the Senate before October or the end of September—I was really expecting that the government leader would be present to somewhat clarify the situation. I hope that it is not the fear of seeing me back that kept him away this evening. I would ask his deputy whether he has any valid reason for being away.

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, first I should like to say that it is a pleasure for me to welcome the Leader of the Opposition. We are all very pleased to see him, in good health and in good spirits for once.

Now, the government leader is out of town tonight on official business. I am glad to replace him.

Yet, in order to reply to the question of the Honourable Leader of the Opposition, I must tell him that this situation is beyond our control and it is the result of a decision which rested solely with the Prime Minister of Canada and which was not entirely unforeseen; as a matter of fact, the prediction has been made by my honourable friend's leader and we may have been inclined to put too much faith in his ability to foresee the future. In fact, Mr. Clark had himself announced the election with much fanfare and, according to news reports, he was ready to launch his campaign. He seemed so sincere that we believed him. I repeat that the decision was beyond our control. The Prime Minister of Canada alone has the privilege to choose the date of such an event and we must accept his decision.

Senator Flynn: At any rate, I thank my good friend, Senator Langlois, for rushing to the rescue but I think that it would be fairer to set aside my supplementary for the government leader, who forced us to approve a bill that has now become useless, or to pass an imperfect piece of legislation under the pretext that we were facing an imminent dissolution. I hope that when he comes back the government leader will apologize, not so much personally but on behalf of the government, for having misled the Senate and for having made us work with great speed for the wrong reasons. I hope that he will apologize and that he will take this as a notice.

Senator Langlois: In answer to that supplementary question, if it was one, I will point out to the honourable senator that no one has been forced to pass the bill. If the honourable senator thinks it was the case, it is certainly because he lacks fortitude.

Senator Flynn: I did not lack fortitude but some people on your side certainly did and this, honourable senator—

Senator Langlois: Is that another supplementary question?

Senator Flynn: No, no, but I am answering your question. You say that we lacked fortitude, I say no. I say that it was mainly by your side that we were deceived, that we were misled, and—

Senator Langlois: By your own leader.

Senator Flynn: No, not by my leader; my leader has nothing to do—

Senator Marchand: With the date of the election?

Senator Flynn: My leader has nothing to do with the date of the election, nothing at all—my dear friend, Senator Marchand, whom I am always pleased to see and whom I can always egg on into little fights. But Senator Langlois said it was the prerogative of the Prime Minister. So it is not the prerogative of the Leader of the Opposition in the House of Commons. Come on! I could go over everything that has been said here in the Senate for the past month urging us to pass once again useless legislation like the bill to prevent postal workers from striking during the election. Can Senator Langlois tell me—

Senator Langlois: That legislation is not applicable.

Senator Flynn: It certainly is in effect. I moved an amendment.

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, I think the honourable senator is going a little too far. He is entirely out of order. He is making an argument for a future election.

Senator Flynn: This concerns legislation already in effect.

Senator Langlois: I rise on a point of order very simply because you are raising a point of debate, which is not allowed at this time according to our rules since this is the question period.

Senator Flynn: I wanted to ask you about the bill concerning a strike of postal workers. I wanted to ask you how it would apply now.

Senator Langlois: It will apply when an election is called. This has already been said.

Senator Flynn: The government leader is not going to tell me that the bill is not in effect. It was given royal assent although I had suggested at the time that it should come into effect only on proclamation.

Senator Langlois: This is because, once again, my honourable friend misread the bill, which will only become effective when an election is called.

Senator Flynn: This is not true at all.

Senator Langlois: It applies only during an election campaign. You raised that point during consideration of that bill and you were wrong but you do not want to admit it.

Senator Flynn: That is not true at all.

● (2010)

[English]

FISHERIES

INTERIM AGREEMENT WITH UNITED STATES—QUESTION

Senator Austin: Honourable senators, I wonder if I might be permitted to ask a question of the Acting Leader of the Government with respect to interim annual agreements regarding fishing rights.

I understand from reports that the Minister of Fisheries and the Environment has said, as recently as yesterday, that Congress would be given until May 26 to bring into force the interim fishing agreement for 1978.

I wonder why the government has chosen May 26 as the date. What is the importance of that particular date, and what might the government do if Congress does not act by May 26?

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, this is a very complicated question. Since the decision was not mine, and I have not been informed officially of the answer by the Minister of Fisheries and the Environment, I shall take the question as notice.

DEPLETION OF STOCKS BY FOREIGN COUNTRIES—QUESTION

Senator Marshall: Honourable senators, the Leader of the Government indicated on two occasions that one of the most precarious situations is the fact that foreign nations are depleting stocks outside, just on the fringe, of the 200-mile economic zone. The leader indicated on two occasions that he would be making a statement to the Senate with respect to this matter. Since that statement has not been presented, I wonder whether the acting leader is able to cast some light on the situation as it exists at the present time?

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, I shall take that as notice as well, and will endeavour to provide an answer as soon as possible.

FOREIGN AFFAIRS

EVACUATION OF CANADIAN CITIZENS FROM ZAIRE—QUESTION

Senator Bird: Honourable senators, I should like to ask the Acting Leader of the Government what steps are being taken by the government to evacuate CIDA personnel and other Canadian citizens from Zaire, and whether the government will be taking the same steps the Americans, Belgians and French seem to be taking with respect to their nationals.

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, I shall take that question as notice.

NATIONAL REVENUE

RECIPROCAL AGREEMENTS BETWEEN CANADA AND THE UNITED STATES RE TAX EXEMPTIONS ON DONATIONS TO CHARITABLE INSTITUTIONS—SUPPLEMENTARY QUESTION

Senator Grosart: Honourable senators, I have a question which, I presume, will be answered in due course by the Minister of National Revenue. Before asking it perhaps I might say to the Acting Leader of the Government that I am sure it feels more like old times now than was the case over the past two weeks when the leadership on this side was less vigorous and effective.

Senator Langlois: Is this another question? You seem to be answering it.

Senator Grosart: It was a question. I am sure I know the answer, that being that he does feel it is more like old times, and we all, I think, agree with that.

As the minister is not here—and, I am sure, for very good reasons—the question I would like to put on the record—

An Hon. Senator: He is here.

Senator Grosart: I beg his pardon. I was looking at the place he occupied before his recent distinguished promotion.

Senator Marshall: He is getting closer to the door.

Senator Asselin: He has been upgraded.

Senator Grosart: On May 10 I asked the minister the following question:

What is the status of any reciprocal agreement or arrangement which may exist between Canada and the United States with respect to tax exemptions on donations to registered charitable institutions, particularly in situations where the donation is made by a taxpayer, corporate or personal, in one country to a registered charity in the other, including the situation where such a donation is made either by a taxpayer in one country or through a subsidiary in the other country?

The minister favoured me with an answer. After indicating the status of the Canada-U.S. Tax Convention, which was implemented by Parliament in 1943, he said:

Article XIII D(2) of that convention stipulates that a Canadian taxpayer, corporate or personal, having income from sources in the United States of America upon which he is subject to tax in Canada, may make a donation to a recognized charity in the United States of America which is deductible from his income from U.S. sources within the same limitations as the deduction for gifts to registered charities in Canada. Article XIII D(1) of the convention provides the same right to a taxpayer residing in the United States.

In answer to the second part of my question, the minister said further:

A Canadian taxpayer cannot, within the terms of the convention, make a deductible gift to a charity in the other country through a "subsidiary" in the other country.

Because I do not feel my original question was fully answered, I shall now ask a supplementary. As well, some of those who are much concerned with this matter assure me that it is not a satisfactory answer to the question.

My question made no distinction whatsoever between source of income. It referred to any income. The answer speaks only to income from a certain source.

The statement that a Canadian taxpayer cannot, within the terms of the convention, make a deductible gift to a charity in the other country through a "subsidiary" in the other country, I suggest, is the subject of question. One need only take the case of a company such as General Motors in that regard. I am sure it is much too broad a statement to be of any use to those who might be concerned.

My supplementary, therefore, to take a specific example, is as follows: If U.S. taxpayer A, personal or corporate, donates to a registered charity in Canada, or vice versa—if Canadian taxpayer A donates to a charitable organization in the United States—are there reciprocal agreements or arrangements by which such donations are deductible by the taxpayer in his own country in respect of income earned in the United States and/or Canada and/or elsewhere?

I ask the question because, as we are all aware, there are Canadian charities seeking donations from institutions in the United States. Certainly, the answer does not clarify the situation. I am told that some who are concerned with this have not, as I have not, been able to get a satisfactory, definitive and precise answer from the department.

I am fully aware that the minister has been having his problems with his department. He has indicated some of them here. However, I hope he will be able to provide us with a complete answer to this question.

We also know that there are situations where Canadian taxpayers would wish to donate on a charitable basis, for example, to Canadian studies in an American university. I suggest, with respect, that the answer given does not cover this situation, and I shall ask the minister to have his officials prepare, in due course, a full and complete statement on the status of such agreement or arrangements vis-à-vis such deductions.

• (2020)

Senator Guay: Honourable senators, I said the other day, when I answered Senator Grosart, that I was answering his question in part. If he reads the Debates of the Senate he will find that this is the statement I made. However, I am very pleased indeed to provide him this evening with a reply to the supplementary question which he posed to me in the Senate, also on May 11, which is similar to what he is asking this evening arising out of my answer in respect of the provisions of Article XIII D(2) of the Canada-U.S. Tax Convention.

Senator Grosart asked if there are any special arrangements applicable only to universities and donations to universities of a nature that might be regarded as similar to a charitable donation. I am sure he will recall that.

There is no provision in the Canada-U.S. Tax Convention relative only to universities, but since universities normally qualify as charities the provisions of Article XIII D(2) of that convention, which I explained last Thursday in my reply, would be applicable.

However, provision is made under subparagraph 110(1)(a)(vi) of the Income Tax Act for a deduction in respect of gifts to universities outside Canada which are prescribed to be universities the student body of which ordinarily include students from Canada. Such universities are prescribed by order in council upon the recommendation of officials of my department, and are listed in Schedule I of the income tax regulations. Any institution outside Canada which, upon application to my department, is found to meet the requirements of being a bona fide degree-granting university at which students from Canada have attended in recent years may be recommended for such status.

Senator Grosart, I am sending you a letter in regard to what I have just said so that you may be in a position to read it this evening. If you feel that I am not giving an appropriate answer to the points you have just raised, I shall be pleased to read Hansard and make sure that I give you an appropriate answer at the next sitting of this house.

[Translation]

OLYMPIC STADIUM—EXEMPTION FROM CUSTOMS DUTIES—
QUESTION

Senator Denis: Honourable senators, I have a question for the honourable Minister of National Revenue. I presume it falls within his jurisdiction. If not, I would ask him to consult other members of cabinet.

As you are aware, the Olympic Stadium is not completed and does not have the appearance it should have, namely a sightseeing attraction for tourists and also an achievement for all Canadians and particularly for Canadians in Montreal to be proud of. Everybody knows that as a result of serious work slowdowns, strikes, weather considerations and what have you, it has been learned that completion of the roof would cost upward of $2 million in customs duties. They say that the cost of the roof itself is rather substantial. I wonder if it would not be in the interest of the Canadian government to have this roof imported duty free, if possible, since that would be to the advantage of the population, not only of Montreal but of all Canada.

Senator Guay: Honourable senators, I should like to say at the outset that the responsibility of my department is to apply the law, to explain it, and at the same time to collect duties and taxes owed to the federal government. Moreover, it is a fact that when the plans for the Olympic Stadium were made public in Canada, we advised the government that it would cost about $2.5 million, as you are aware, and as of today I believe we have not yet claimed this sum from the Quebec government, but the officers of my department are working on it at the moment.

[English]

The responsibility of my department is to collect taxes, and, unless the taxes as such are changed, I have no alternative but to demand the amount from the Government of Quebec through the officials of my department, which is the regular procedure.

In regard to the remainder of the plans in question, this would also have to come in and the same thing would apply. So I would say that if there is any consideration to be given to exempting, if I may use that word, or to saying to the Quebec government, "No, you do not have to pay that tax," then we would have to have the approbation of the other house and appropriate legislation before anything could be done.

In the meantime, I have no alternative but to demand payment of the tax.

[Translation]

Senator Denis: Honourable senators, as a supplementary, that is why I said that it was the duty of the Minister of National Revenue to collect taxes. And I added that it was not only up to him, but to the federal cabinet, to see that the Olympic Stadium is exempted from duty. Mind you, not the whole stadium, for duty has already been paid for the existing facilities, but only the roof that has yet to be installed. It should be done as a gesture of generosity towards some unlucky people, for a stadium which is expensive but well worth the price. I wonder whether the cabinet would be willing to reconsider the matter.

Senator Guay: Honourable senators, I shall make it my duty to submit to the cabinet the request you just made. At the same time I am sure the cabinet will give all the necessary consideration to your request. Meanwhile, I can say to you that I have no alternative other than to let my department officials carry on with the work under way.

Senator Forsey: Honourable senators, is there not in the Financial Administration Act a provision allowing the cabinet to waive payment of such or such duty, such or such tax, such or such levy? I thought there was something of that kind. I am not a lawyer, I may be wrong, but I think there is a provision which would allow the cabinet to do something.

Senator Guay: Honourable senators, whether you are right or not, I agree with you that I should make representations to the cabinet and inform them of your remarks and requests so that they consider them along the lines you are proposing.

[English]

VETERANS AFFAIRS

ALLEGED DISCRIMINATION AGAINST WIDOWS OF VETERANS— QUESTION

Senator Marshall: Honourable senators, I should like to direct a question to the Acting Leader of the Government. May I preface my question by indicating my commendation to the Minister of Veterans Affairs for acceding to the request and following the recommendation of the Standing Committee on Veterans Affairs of the House of Commons to equate the basic rate of pension to the five lowest categories in the public service. While I am sure that everybody would commend the Minister of Veterans Affairs, there still is a serious inequity which indicates that widows of some veterans are discriminated against in that they do not receive the widows pension because of the 48 per cent disability pension rule. I wonder if the acting leader could indicate if any consideration is being given in the other place to overcome this inequity at this late stage, some 60 years after the end of the First World War, to provide the equation and realistic treatment of widows of veterans?

● (2030)

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, being myself a veteran of the last war, I am in sympathy with the concern expressed by my honourable friend. Although I have heard that consideration was being given to a recommendation in that direction by the Minister of Veterans Affairs, I have received no confirmation to date. If there is any support needed in this direction, the honourable senator can count on me to give it.

CANADIAN BROADCASTING CORPORATION

POLITICAL POLLS—QUESTION

Senator Roblin: Honourable senators, may I ask the Acting Leader of the Government to clarify, at his leisure, a matter of policy with respect to the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation? I am sure that the acting leader is aware that the CBC has announced that it has conducted a poll to investigate the political preferences of the people of Newfoundland.

My question is to the point as to whether this poll was conducted within the established policies of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation. If we could have a statement with regard to the background of this move on their part, I would be grateful.

I should also like to know who authorized this particular poll, how much it cost, and whether any similar polls have been conducted by the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation.

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, I have not heard of such a poll being considered at this stage. However, I will make inquiries and will try to provide the information for my honourable colleague.

PROVINCE OF BRITISH COLUMBIA

PROPOSED TREATMENT FOR HEROIN USERS—QUESTION

Senator Austin: Honourable senators, I have a question for the Acting Leader of the Government, which I presume he will take as notice. There is a great deal of concern in British Columbia, particularly among those who are engaged in criminal law issues related to drug users and treatment, that the federal government is participating with the provincial government in proposing a scheme which would permit heroin users to be held in custody and receive compulsory treatment without a court hearing or medical certification.

I should like to ask the acting leader to assure the Senate that the federal government is not participating in a plan which would allow some public servant, or indeed a minister, to hold any Canadian citizen or any resident of Canada in custody for any purpose without the approval of a court.

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, I do not know of any such arrangement made between the Government of British Columbia and the Government of Canada, but I will make inquiries and will try to answer the question.

FINANCIAL ADMINISTRATION ACT

BILL TO AMEND—SECOND READING—DEBATE CONTINUED

The Senate resumed from Thursday, May 11, the debate on the motion of Senator Cook for the second reading of Bill C-10, to amend the Financial Administration Act.

● (2040)

[Translation]

Hon. Martial Asselin: Honourable senators, I will be brief because several speakers have already talked about the provisions of Bill C-10 concerning the appointment of the Comptroller General of Canada.

It comes as no surprise that this bill is under consideration at this time of the session, especially when one thinks of the criticisms and harsh comments the Auditor General made against the present government about the way public spending is controlled. Obviously the government could hardly go to the electorate without answering the suggestions and recommendations made by the Auditor General concerning, I repeat, the controls over the financial administration of the country.

But since the elections are once again far remote, we in the opposition have decided to take our time and study this bill thoroughly because it is important. As Senator Flynn said, I think that before the end of the present session the opposition will not be railroaded into adopting the bill quickly under the pretext that elections are imminent and are to be called any minute.

This having been said, the government has presented a bill containing one paragraph only. Senator Cook explained that clearly. I think he had no difficulty. All one had to do was to read the bill carefully, and I quote:

The Governor in Council may appoint an officer called the Comptroller General of Canada to hold office during pleasure and to perform such duties and functions as may be assigned to him by the Treasury Board, and the Comptroller General of Canada shall rank as and have all the powers of a deputy head of a department.

That is the clause through which the position of comptroller general is being created. It is not surprising that the speakers who preceded me, Senator Grosart, and even the leader of the unofficial opposition, Senator Forsey, as well as my friend Senator Roblin, and Senator Smith, should have brought up important points concerning the creation of that position, the department to which that civil servant should be answerable and the ways in which he should report to it.

In my humble opinion, when we speak of a comptroller we mean someone who has authority, who checks, inspects, supervises, examines. I feel that the responsibilities of a comptroller, whether he works for the federal government, the public service or private enterprise, are to control, inspect, supervise and examine.

Moreover, if we are to set the post of comptroller as I perceive it, then his authority must be exercised free of constraints, ties, or close supervision on the part of the authority he has to control; as I say, the comptroller must control. In this case, as we know, the comptroller will be a deputy head. He is indeed called a "deputy head of a department". He will have all the powers of a deputy head, but as Senator Cook explained, he will come under Treasury and his boss will be the President of the Treasury Board. He will take all his instructions from him, from the Honourable Robert Andras, who now presides over the Treasury Board. He is the head of the Treasury Board.

So if the President of the Treasury Board is to direct all the action and the functions of the comptroller general, that means the comptroller is and will be accountable to him. He will not be above criticism and restrictions in carrying out his duties. That is why my colleagues on this side of the chamber have proposed another formula which would define more clearly the overall duties of Comptroller General of Canada.

It has been said with reason that the Comptroller General of Canada will have to receive his authority from Parliament itself. I am entirely in favour of this line of thought. In fact, Parliament is our institution which enables us to control the funds of the executive, to control how taxpayers' money is spent. The function of Parliament is to control those expenditures. This is how, in our British parliamentary institutions, the function of a Parliament is defined.

If we want to have a completely objective man, free of any tie with the authority he has to control himself, I think the Comptroller General should receive his directions, his authority from Parliament itself, before which he should bring every year a report on his activities which will be considered by a committee of the house, just like the Auditor General of Canada. Thus, the first suggestion I am making is, of course, that some amendments will probably be introduced but we should consider the possibility of giving a new vocation, a new function to the Comptroller General since he should receive his authority, his directions, from Parliament itself.

Senator Forsey: Hear, hear!

Senator Asselin: That is what we are going to ask since, as I say, the responsibilities of the Comptroller General were so little defined that when we read the records of the committee which considered this bill we are surprised to see with what insistence members from both sides of the house asked the President of the Treasury Board to define clearly the responsibilities of the Comptroller General.

What would be his responsibilities? Would he be on an equal footing with the Auditor General of Canada? Would he be on the latter's staff? When one hears statements like that made by the Parliamentary Secretary to the President of the Treasury Board who says that the Auditor General of Canada will be empowered to audit all the Comptroller General's books and accounts and all Treasury Board data and statistics, one wonders whether the Comptroller General of Canada will not one of these days come under the jurisdiction of the Auditor General of Canada. In my opinion, this would be a terrible mistake. I repeat, it would be a serious mistake to link the Comptroller General with the functions or responsibilities of the Auditor General of Canada, since their respective functions must be entirely separate and distinct.

Senator Forsey: Hear, hear!

Senator Asselin: Because of this important question and many others, honourable senators, I entirely agree with Senator Smith (Colchester) and the other speakers who addressed themselves to the matter of referring this bill to a committee.

Obviously, we must review this bill. We must clearly define the functions and responsibilities of the Comptroller General, which members of the other place have failed to do, to insure that his work will be efficiently done. His post must be related to something, not only in regard to Parliament but in regard to the Canadian people, since it has been created in order to correct a situation which has been described to us by the Auditor General of Canada.

I think that if we want to give Canadians the impression that we have created a valuable office, which will really give the responsibility for financial management to some sort of an auditor, or call him a comptroller if you wish, who will be accountable to Parliament we will, in my opinion, have to review this bill entirely in committee.

Honourable senators, I think that we will have the opportunity in committee to move some amendments which, in my opinion, will improve this bill. I feel that this will help the Comptroller General of Canada to better perform his duties not only towards Parliament but towards all Canadians.

On motion of Senator Flynn, debate adjourned.

● (2050)

[English]

CANADIAN NATIONAL RAILWAYS
CAPITAL REVISION ACT
RAILWAY ACT

BILL TO AMEND—SECOND READING—DEBATE ADJOURNED

Hon. Leopold Langlois moved the second reading of Bill C-17, to amend the Canadian National Railways Capital Revision Act and the Railway Act and to amend and repeal certain other statutes in consequence thereof.

He said: Honourable senators, it gives me great pleasure to speak tonight on the second reading of Bill C-17, to amend the Canadian National Railways Capital Revision Act and the Railway Act and to amend and repeal certain other statutes.

This bill creates a capital structure for Canada's largest crown corporation, which is appropriate to a mature corporation. It will establish a sensible relationship between debt and equity; it will consolidate the investment of the Government of Canada in the CNR, and will remove the need for regular votes of money to assist the CNR.

Current legislative and other arrangements governing the financing of the CNR, which have remained largely unchanged for the last 25 years, provide that each year the government purchases CNR preferred non-cumulative shares in an amount equal to 3 per cent of the gross revenues of the national system. In 1978 this would have required the inclusion in the government's main estimates of an amount of some $80 million. However, this government's proposal would eliminate this requirement, and indeed the main estimates for 1978-79 have been prepared without this provision. This is a very important feature, given the pressures on and the determination of the government to keep public expenditures down.

Existing arrangements also provide that the government appropriate funds to meet company deficits. Indeed, an amount of $22 million was included in last fall's supplementary estimates for this purpose. However, agreement has been reached among all concerned that, as part of this recapitalization proposal, authority would be obtained to restrict the purchase of preferred stock in account of calendar year 1977 by an equivalent amount. This, in effect, would save $22 million in cash flow from the treasury, and this is also an important consideration given the current difficulties being experienced in overall cash management. The provisions of this bill would enable the company to attain an adequate profit level in the future, and thus eliminate the need to appropriate funds to meet deficits.

Financing arrangements in place also provide that the CNR would obtain its other capital requirements either from loans from the Minister of Finance or from the private sector. In recent years the company has been encouraged not to look to the Minister of Finance for these needs. It has been co-operative in this regard, and has been successful in the capital markets. However, the result of this long-standing obligation for the company to rely on loans for the bulk of its capital requirements has resulted in a debt ratio of about 60 per cent, compared with the rail industry average in North America of approximately 35 per cent, and about 35 per cent for Canadian Pacific in particular.

The proposed conversion of $808 million of debt into equity would result in a debt ratio of 42 per cent, and thus provide a more realistic basis for the government and the public to assess the economic efficiency of the company, and the performance of its officers in relation to those of its competitors. This would also provide an important morale boost to the CNR management, who, I am sure you will agree, are dedicated individuals making considerable progress in improving the efficiency and profitability of their operations. Canadian National reported a net income of $28 million in its 1977 annual report.

The interest which will be foregone on converted debt would be more than offset by the elimination of the requirement for the government to purchase the CNR preferred shares. Another important feature of the proposal from the government's point of view is that the CNR will be required to pay annually to the federal treasury a dividend equal to 20 per cent of its profits, or such higher amount that the Governor in Council may direct. For the first time in over 20 years the Canadian people will be receiving a monetary return on their equity in the company.

It is estimated that over the next five years these changes represent an overall reduction of the government cash flow of about $235 million—that is, $470 million on the cancellation of preferred stock purchases by the government; $25 million on the cancellation of obligations under the 1941 and 1942 CNR Financing and Guarantee Acts; and $65 million on a minimum 20 per cent dividend on CNR projected net incomes in the next five years; minus the interest payments foregone on the $808 million portion of the CNR debt, which is converted to equity, namely, $325 million of foregone interest payments.

A further feature of the proposal would see the consolidation of the remaining CNR debt held by the government and its repayment being rescheduled in a manner that would facilitate cash management for the government's accounts by the Department of Finance.

Finally, there is the proposed merging into common shares of the present preferred shares and the government's investment in the Canadian government railways. There will also be a reduction of equity in recognition of depreciation attributable to years prior to the adoption of depreciation accounting. This "cleaning-up" action, coupled with the more realistic debt to equity ratio and the enhanced ability of the CNR to register and retain profits in the future, will place the company on a more readily understood financial basis and reduce the possibility of its having to come to the government for funds.

● (2100)

Indeed, that is the long-term advantage of the proposed recapitalization. Canadian National will be in a position to finance all its capital and operating requirements without reference to the Government of Canada. In the short term—that is, for the current and the next fiscal year, as the Prime Minister mentioned in the other place on December 19, 1977—we would avoid a cash outflow of some $100 million and in so doing eliminate $80 million from this year's estimates alone. In the medium term—that is, over the next five years—it is estimated these changes represent an overall reduction of the government cash flow of about $235 million. These are all important advantages from the point of view of the Government of Canada.

During the past two years the financial structures of the crown corporations reporting to the Minister of Transport—for example, the St. Lawrence Seaway Authority, Air Canada and Northern Transportation Company Ltd.—have been examined and restructured where necessary. Passage of this bill will bring the financial structure of the CNR closer to that enjoyed by other crown corporations.

In summary, Bill C-17 creates a capital structure for the CNR, which is believed appropriate for a mature corporation. It will provide the means for CNR to run its operations on a commercial basis while raising the necessary funds for its capital projects in the marketplace. At least the Canadian people can expect to receive a return on their equity in Canada's largest crown corporation. The CNR management will be responsible and accountable to manage a financially viable self-supporting institution. The government is confident of the ultimate effectiveness of Bill C-17 to achieve its objectives with due regard to competition.

Honourable senators, the main thrust of this legislation is to make CNR more accountable for its own financing and end the need for government dependency.

Before going on I would like to explain, by means of a brief review of the various clauses of the bill, how these objectives I have just outlined would be reached. First of all, there is clause 1, respecting the revision of sections 6 to 10 inclusive of the Canadian National Railways Capital Revision Act, which would require the cancellation of the $808 million of debt owing to the government by increasing by a like amount the capital stock held by the government. This conversion—this is not a debt forgiveness—would result in a debt-equity ratio of 42 per cent, as I indicated previously.

Under clause 2, interest on the converted debt due after December 31, 1977, would be cancelled, but this would be more than offset by the following factors:

(a) The government would cease to purchase 3 per cent preferred shares of CN which has been a major source of CN capital financing and has in recent years been an amount of some $80 million in the government's main estimates.

(b) The government would cease to fund CN deficits; an amount of $22 million was included in this fall's supplementary estimates for that purpose, as I previously stated.

(c) CN would agree to pay to the federal treasury a dividend equal to 20 per cent of its profits or such higher amount that the Governor in Council may direct. This would mean that for the first time in the history of the CNR, the government would be receiving a return on its equity in the company.

(d) The remaining CN debt would be consolidated and its repayment rescheduled in a manner that would facilitate cash management for the government's account by the Department of Finance.

(e) The present preferred shares would be merged into common shares along with the government's investment in the Canadian government railways and to account for the reduction in equity attributable to the recognition of depreciation prior to the adoption of depreciation accounting. This latter point would eliminate from the equity portion of the CNR balance sheet titles which have no counterpart in the private sector and which raise unnecessary questions from the private sector lenders.

(f) Over the next five years the need to include in main estimates some $470 million for preferred share purchases would be eliminated and the receipt of dividends upwards to $250 million by the government would more than replace the interest on CNR debt that would otherwise be received.

(g) Another long-term advantage of the proposed recapitalization would be to place CNR in a position to finance all its capital requirements without reference to the Treasury.

Under Clause 2 authority would also be given to the CNR to retain profits for the 1977 fiscal year after payment of certain statutory obligations such as interest on debt owed to the government.

Clause 3 repeals section 37(4) of the Canadian National Railways Act which would permit the CNR to fund their income deficits.

Now I come to Clause 4 of the bill which in the first place revises subsection 38(1) of the Canadian National Railways Act by providing that the auditors be appointed annually by the Governor in Council and that the auditors shall report annually to Parliament in respect of their audits.

Another subsection is added, which will appear in the amended act as subsection 38(1.1), and which provides that the annual reports of the board of directors and auditors, respectively, shall be submitted to Parliament through the Minister of Transport and shall stand permanently referred to any committee of Parliament—that is, of both houses.

Clause 5 repeals subsection 72(5) of the Railway Act, which provides that "the securities may be made payable at such times and in such manner and at such place or places in Canada or elsewhere, and may bear such rate of interest, not exceeding six per cent per annum, as the directors think proper." This ceiling on the interest rate is removed and the board of directors will have the liberty and authority to set the interest rate on these securities.

● (2110)

In conclusion, honourable senators, clauses 6 and 7 of the bill repeal the Canadian National Railways Financing and Guarantee Acts 1941 and 1942, which repeal removes the necessity for the government to provide temporary loans to the CNR for the funding of outstanding securities.

This concludes my brief review of the bill, which I hope has been explanatory. At any rate, I am in a position to supply further information, if it is desired.

At this stage, honourable senators, I should state that it is my intention, should this bill receive second reading, to move that it be referred to the Standing Senate Committee on Transport and Communications.

On motion of Senator Roblin, debate adjourned.

The Senate adjourned until tomorrow at 2 p.m.

---

THE SENATE

Wednesday, May 17, 1978

The Senate met at 2 p.m., the Speaker in the Chair.
Prayers.

DOCUMENTS TABLED

Senator Perrault tabled:

Capital Budget of Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation for the year ending December 31, 1978, pursuant to section 70(2) of the Financial Administration Act, Chapter F-10, R.S.C., 1970, as approved by Order in Council P.C. 1978-1534, dated May 4, 1978.

Report of the Canadian National Railways Securities Trust for the year ended December 31, 1977, pursuant to section 17 of the Canadian National Railways Capital Revision Act, Chapter 311, R.S.C., 1952.

THE CONSTITUTION

GOVERNMENT WHITE PAPER ON REFORM—QUESTION

Senator Flynn: Honourable senators, I should like to ask the government leader if and when we can expect the government white paper, or whatever form it takes, on constitutional reform? I ask this question because the government leader has suggested that a special committee of the Senate be struck and charged with the responsibility of studying recommendations regarding the Senate. It would be useful for that special committee to know the thinking of the government on this particular matter.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, the white paper on the Constitution and other matters will be forthcoming shortly. However, at this time a date has not been set. I think it may be forthcoming within the next few weeks. I shall endeavour to ascertain the date and communicate that information to honourable senators.

Many senators believe that there may be some value in striking such a committee after the contents of the white paper have been made known, and I find that I am basically in agreement with the sentiments of the Leader of the Opposition in this regard.

THE SENATE

LEGISLATIVE PROGRAM—QUESTION ANSWERED

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, I read with interest last evening's proceedings—

Senator Asselin: What about my speech?

Senator Perrault: —and I saw that it was another lively sitting of the Senate. I very much regret my absence. I note that the Leader of the Opposition asked whether my absence from the chamber was as a result of my fear of seeing him on his return from his triumphant tour of the glittering capitals of Europe.

First of all, I should like to assure him that his presence does not strike fear in my heart. Secondly, had I known he was going to arrive at a given time at Uplands Airport I might well have endeavoured to organize a delegation to greet him. It is always a joy for me to see the Leader of the Opposition. His good humor, his good nature, his charm, his non-partisan qualities and the non-political spirit which he brings to this place is an inspiration to all of us.

● (1410)

Senator Flynn: By comparison.

Senator Perrault: The Leader of the Opposition has implied that I possess a certain power, which I assure honourable senators I do not, and that is to force the Senate to approve legislation. If there is one chamber in this entire country which exercises a spirit of independence—

Some Hon. Senators: Oh, oh.

Senator Perrault: Well, honourable senators, that is very true. Our committee work is the finest committee work done in any legislative assembly in this country.

Hon. Senators: Hear, hear.

Senator Flynn: When we can have the committees meet.

Senator Perrault: The fact that the Senate has amended bills over 167 times so far this session says something about the spirit of independence which exists here.

Senator Flynn: I will want to check that.

Senator Perrault: It would be much fairer to say that rumours about an election were rife until last week—inspired, in great measure, by the statements of opposition party leaders. Efforts to, in effect, “look into the crystal ball” were not successful. There was dissolution speculation from all sides.

Knowing something of the possibility of an election, and having regard for the people of Canada above all—

Senator Flynn: Oh no. Come on!

Senator Perrault: —the Senate worked as expeditiously as possible to see that legislation passed in the other place received royal assent. It goes without saying that I have neither the power nor, indeed, the desire to force honourable senators to vote for legislation they do not support. Like all senators, I endeavour on occasion to exercise persuasive powers. That is the limit of my ability.

Senator Grosart: You are a modest man.

Senator Flynn: Your persuasive power comes from another source.

CANADIAN WHEAT BOARD

SUGGESTED RESTRUCTURING—QUESTION ANSWERED

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, a question was asked by Senator Olson on May 10 last regarding an announcement made by Premier Loughheed of Alberta about a major restructuring of the Canadian Wheat Board.

By way of reply, it can be said that it remains unclear what a Board of Governors of the Canadian Wheat Board, as proposed by the Alberta government, could do that cannot be done by the existing Canadian Wheat Board Advisory Committee. The Advisory Committee has been given increasing responsibility in recent years, and it is envisaged that this process will continue as the committee gains experience.

The members of the Advisory Committee are now elected by the producers. The Government of Canada believes that this is a superior system to one based upon direct appointees by either provincial or federal governments, and it is more consistent with the board's role as a producers' marketing agency.

FISHERIES

DEPLETION OF STOCKS BY FOREIGN COUNTRIES—QUESTION ANSWERED

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, Senator Marshall asked a question on May 4 regarding the depletion of stocks by foreign countries. In essence, he voiced his concern about the fact that foreign nations, to quote his words, are "depleting the stocks, or showing much activity just outside the 200-mile limit, which will cause great harm to the potential of the fishing industry—"

The Minister of Fisheries has expressed concern that foreign nations may be disregarding some internationally agreed upon regulations outside our 200-mile zone on the Atlantic coast. At the present time the International Commission for the North-west Atlantic Fisheries, ICNAF, sets total allowable catches and quotas for the areas beyond Canadian fisheries jurisdiction. However, at a recent meeting of fisheries experts from member countries of ICNAF in Ottawa, a great deal of progress was made towards establishing a new organization to deal with fisheries co-operation in the Northwest Atlantic, and towards acceptance of the concept of special consideration for Canada in the management of stocks outside the 200-mile limit.

In the meantime, we are continuing our surveillance efforts in the area beyond the 200-mile limit and will be raising any questions on suspected overfishing with foreign nations at the forthcoming annual meeting of the International Commission for the Northwest Atlantic Fisheries.

COMPTROLLER GENERAL OF CANADA

STATUS OF MR. HARRY ROGERS—SUPPLEMENTARY QUESTION ANSWERED

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, on May 11 last Senator Grosart asked a supplementary question regarding the appointment of Mr. Harry Rogers as Special Adviser to the President of the Treasury Board.

I have been furnished with an additional list of 16 officers who were appointed under section 35 of the Public Service Employment Act after their exclusion from the act under section 39. I have provided Senator Grosart with a copy of that list, which is rather long and detailed. Section 39 of the act authorizes the commission with the approval of the Governor in Council to exclude a position or person in whole or in part from the operation of the act.

Subsection 35(1) of the act authorizes the Governor in Council, on the recommendation of the commission, to make regulations prescribing how positions or persons wholly or partly excluded under section 39 shall be dealt with. Where it is in the best interests of the public service to appoint a person without competition to a position that has been established by the Treasury Board, the position is excluded from the operation of the act under section 39, and the Governor in Council authorizes the appointment to the position by regulations made under section 35 of the act.

It may be noted that by special appointment, Regulation No. 17, Donald D. Tansley was authorized to be appointed Associate Deputy Minister of Fisheries for a term of six months. These regulations have not yet been published in the Gazette.

Senator Grosart: Perhaps the Leader of the Government would permit me, before he proceeds, to thank him for his very full answer to my question. It took quite a long time coming. I have to thank him for giving me these precedents for this action, almost all of which appear to be bad precedents.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, I was pleased to be able to provide the information regardless of whether or not the Deputy Leader of the Opposition approves of the precedents.

FOREIGN AFFAIRS

EVACUATION OF CANADIAN CITIZENS FROM ZAIRE—QUESTION ANSWERED

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, I have replies to quite a number of questions here today, and I shall not endeavour to put then all on the record at this time.

A question was put by Honourable Senator Bird yesterday, asking what steps are being taken by the government to evacuate CIDA personnel and other Canadian citizens from Zaire and whether the government will be taking the same steps that the Americans, Belgians and French seem to be taking with respect to their nationals. This question was addressed to the Acting Leader of the Government.

Although information about the progress of the attack is sketchy, due to poor communications facilities in the area, reports indicate that Kolwezi and Mutshatsa have been captured. The department has no record of any Canadians being in either of these locations.

● (1420)

We are aware of 17 Canadian missionaries who are registered with our embassy in Kinshasa, and who are living in seven widely dispersed locations, which are from 100 to 500 miles distant from the present danger area. We are following the situation closely with a view to doing everything we can to ensure their safety, should fighting spread to the areas where they are located.

As most of the mission facilities at which they are serving are organized on a multinational basis, we are co-ordinating our plans with those of other countries who have missionaries in the same locations.

FISHERIES

INTERIM AGREEMENT WITH THE UNITED STATES—QUESTION ANSWERED

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, last evening Senator Austin asked a question with regard to the interim annual agreements concerning fishing rights and the date of May 26. He said:

I wonder why the government has chosen May 26 as the date. What is the importance of that particular date, and what might the government do if Congress does not act by May 26?

In reply, I should like to point out that the chief negotiators, Marcel Cadieux and Lloyd Cutler, agreed to meet again on May 26 to review the progress made in resolving outstanding issues and to answer Canadian requests for a reply at that time.

Senator Austin will recognize the need to have a deadline so that the uncertainty that is surrounding fishing in both countries can be removed one way or the other. It is unwise to speculate at this time on what action may be taken by the federal government, if the United States response is not satisfactory. We are now waiting that response.

UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE

REPORTED OVERPAYMENT OF BENEFITS—QUESTION ANSWERED

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, on May 10 Senator Smith (Colchester) asked a question about the recent overpayment of unemployment insurance benefits in Nova Scotia. I am now advised that these overpayments will be treated no differently from those stemming from any other commission or claimant error, or a claimant not meeting conditions of entitlement. However, I can assure honourable senators that the government always considers the financial circumstances of the claimant in recovering overpayments. The obligation is stated specifically in section 49 of the Unemployment Insurance Act, and I quote:

Where a person has received benefit under this Act . . . for any period in respect of which he is disqualified or any benefit to which he is not entitled, he is liable to repay an amount paid by the Commission in respect thereof.

The information which I have received from the office of the Minister of Employment and Immigration for Canada states:

We regret this error and the inconvenience it will cause, however, we simply do not have the authority to ignore the overpayments. As with all overpayments which must be collected, we will approach each of these situations individually and with humanity.

Honourable Senator Smith (Colchester) asked a supplementary question as to whether or not any representations had been received from the Government of Nova Scotia in relation to the repayment or otherwise of these sums as they relate to Nova Scotians, and I am advised that to the best knowledge available the answer is no.

Senator Smith (Colchester): Honourable senators, I wonder if I might direct a supplementary question to the Leader of the Government relating to these overpayments of unemployment insurance.

First, may I thank him for his answer and for his kindness in furnishing me with the written explanation, which I believe was directed to him by the department or its minister. Included in that explanation is a copy of certain sections of the Unemployment Insurance Act, which, as I understood the reply of the leader, make it compulsory to collect any such overpayments. Obviously, I have not had the time to study those sections carefully, owing to the fact that I just received the document a few minutes ago, but as I read them there is no compulsion in those sections to make collection.

There is a statement that a person who receives the overpayment is liable to repay, but that is not a compulsion on the minister or on anyone else to collect it.

I also note that in this documentation there is a provision allowing the writing off of overpayments in cases of undue financial hardship. I believe that is the term used. Consequently, since there is no compulsion on the government to effect collection, at least in this statute, and since there is a provision for writing off in cases of undue financial hardship, I should think my original question is still relevant: Has the government considered the possibility of writing off these individual overpayments?

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, in view of the statute which makes it mandatory for the government to collect overpayments, it would be impossible under the law to grant a blanket amnesty, in a sense, to those who had been paid excessive amounts. But I want to assure honourable senators that the government shall be guided in its policy by the obvious need to approach, as I stated in my reply, each situation individually and with a great sense of humanity. It could well be that the word "humanity" will be interpreted in a most generous fashion. Beyond that, I can give no commitment.

Senator Choquette: Honourable senators, might I add this, that it was never made clear, in all these discussions about overpayment, that the theory of unjust enrichment in law gives a complete right to the government to collect the said overpayment. It is just the same as if someone were to receive furniture belonging to someone else. He cannot benefit by it. In theory it is called unjust enrichment. Those who have received this money are guilty of unjust enrichment if they do not pay it back. But the government has a complete right, inalienable right, to collect that money. It is just that it is, I would say, in consideration of the generosity of the government, if it is not collected. That was never made clear.

Senator Smith (Colchester): Honourable senators, perhaps I could direct a further question to the Leader of the Government with relation to his statement that the statute, parts of which he was kind enough to send me, makes it compulsory or obligatory—I have forgotten his words, but that was the effect of it—that the government should collect any such overpayment. I just want to ask him if he would be kind enough—not now but when he has an opportunity to have the research made for him—to point out to me which one of these sections, copies of which he has been kind enough to send me, contains that provision.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, I will be pleased to undertake that task of research for the honourable senator. It may be said, of course, that all governments act as trustees for those taxpayers who have entrusted them with the power of government. In this case of unemployment insurance overpayment, this is not the government's money; it is money belonging to the taxpayers of Canada. Whether a government is municipal, provincial or federal, it must act in accordance with the statutes. If there is an opportunity to bring humanity and flexibility to decisions which are made, then that, of course, should be done.

I am sure that similar statutory considerations and other concerns motivated the actions of the Honourable Senator Smith when he acted in his capacity as Premier of Nova Scotia. As I have said, the federal government has provided every assurance that the spirit of humanity will be brought to the difficult task in some cases of collecting these overpayments, bearing in mind, however, its statutory obligations.

In cases where there is dire financial hardship, I will certainly undertake to determine whether or not implementation of the policy will mean that in some cases repayment will be postponed for a period of time or cancelled altogether.

Senator Smith (Colchester): I thank the Leader of the Government for his assurance, and also for his assurance that he will undertake the research that I mentioned. However, I should like to make one correction, if I may be permitted to do so. In his comment with relation to that research, I should say that it is not research for me. I have read this and I cannot find any such thing as the honourable gentleman asserts is in it. It is a piece of research to support his assertion that I am interested in finding.

[Senator Perrault.]

NATIONAL FINANCE

SALES TAX PROPOSAL RELATING TO PROVINCE OF QUEBEC— QUESTION

Senator Smith (Colchester): Honourable senators, perhaps I might be permitted to direct a question to the Leader of the Government on another subject. It relates to the proposal of the government to make direct payments to federal taxpayers in the Province of Quebec, based on the premise, as I understand it, that the Governments of Canada and Quebec have not agreed upon a course of action which will allow taxpayers to benefit from the federal contribution toward the reduction in provincial sales tax, out of which this arose.

I should like to ask whether this option of direct payment to federal taxpayers within the province was discussed with all provinces before the latest budget, when the representatives of the government say—and I have no doubt they say correctly—they discussed the question of reduction of provincial sales tax and federal contributions thereto with each of the provincial governments.

● (1430)

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, a number of options were discussed with respect to providing a stimulus for the Canadian economy. These options were discussed some time ago in meetings involving first ministers, as I am sure the honourable senator is aware.

As far as the honourable senator's main question is concerned, as to whether this specific alternative was offered to all of the other provinces, I am not in a position to say. I shall, however, endeavour to obtain from the office of the Minister of Finance pertinent information that can be presented to this house. I can say that there was substantial agreement with all the provinces, except Quebec, just prior to the time the budget was presented. These proposals to stimulate the economy through joint federal-provincial action on the sales tax won a great measure of support from all provinces. The Minister of Finance was in direct contact with all the provincial finance ministers and discussions were held with all of them, although I understand that a somewhat noncommittal response was obtained from the Minister of Finance of Quebec prior to the presentation of this budget proposal. There was, however, unanimous support for the general policy on the part of the other provinces.

Latterly, this government, faced with the position taken by the Government of Quebec, has moved in a direction calculated to make sure that insofar as it is possible there is equitable treatment for all provinces, and that there will be a beneficial taxation effect in all provinces as a result of this federal-provincial program. The statement with respect to Quebec made a few days ago by the Minister of Finance was an endeavour to redress the balance in relation to the other provinces.

Honourable senators, this is a complicated and controversial matter, and I do not want to go beyond what I have said at this time. I shall present a further statement for the consideration of honourable senators at the earliest possible opportunity.

FISHERIES

DESIGNATION AS SUBJECT MATTER OF STANDING COMMITTEE—QUESTION

Senator Marshall: Honourable senators, the government leader will recall that a couple of weeks ago I asked a question with regard to having fisheries made the subject of a standing Senate committee, in view of the value of our fisheries and marine resources. The government leader indicated that he would be looking into the matter, and I wonder if he could give us a report on the progress that has been made in that regard.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, I was hoping that we would have had a reply ready for presentation to the Senate by this time. It will be presented, of course, just as soon as it becomes available to me. The Minister of Fisheries and the Environment has been very much involved, as honourable senators are aware, in a considerable range of negotiations with the United States, and this has taken a good deal of his time recently. But that information will be provided as soon as possible.

Senator Marshall: Perhaps the government leader misunderstood my question. I am referring to the fact that fisheries is not the subject matter of a standing committee of the Senate. In view of the importance of fisheries to Canada, I should like to know what progress has been made with regard to setting up such a committee to deal with fisheries and marine resources.

Senator Perrault: I can report no progress on that as yet, honourable senator. It may usefully be made a matter for discussion with the Leader of the Opposition. There are limitations, of course, on the number of committees which can effectively operate in the Senate. We have to consider, first of all, the question of staff. Then there is also the question of the membership of such a committee, since some of the senators have onerous responsibilities in connection with existing committees. While the idea, I think, has a great deal of merit, whether or not it can be implemented before the end of this Parliament is something that could be discussed with the Leader of the Opposition.

Senator Flynn: When?

Senator Grosart: By way of supplementary, I would suggest that the Leader of the Government may have misunderstood the question. The objection I understood the senator was making was that fisheries, as a subject, important as it is, is not assigned to any existing committee. Surely that is a matter that can be corrected at once.

Senator Flynn: I hope the Leader of the Government will not think of giving this responsibility to the Standing Senate Committee on Agriculture headed by Senator Argue.

Senator van Roggen: I would second that.

Senator Perrault: We have never experienced any difficulty in the past in assigning legislation relating to fisheries to a standing committee of the Senate. Certainly, in a sense, it represents an important resource, and we have Senate rules covering referral of matters relating to natural resources. The Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce is the committee to which legislation regarding fisheries is usually referred.

As I understand it, then, what the honourable senator is suggesting is that the word "fisheries" be added to the list of matters to be referred to an appropriate standing committee under our rules.

Senator Flynn: Perhaps the Chairman of the Rules Committee would look into this. He is always available.

FOREIGN AFFAIRS

INTERVENTION BY FOREIGN NATIONS IN ZAIRE AND ERITREA—
QUESTION

Senator McDonald: Honourable senators, I should like to ask a question of the Leader of the Government with respect to the war that is now going on in Zaire. Has the Canadian government any knowledge with respect to what troops or so-called advisers of foreign nations are taking part in that war, and has the Canadian government made any representations through the United Nations or any other world organization concerning foreign intervention in that war?

I also ask the same question with respect to the war in Eritrea.

I pose these questions because it seems to me that the Western World lacks leadership today with respect to these conflicts in Africa, and I believe that my own country is not showing the leadership it should. I should like to know what troops and advisers are involved, and what action, if any, has been taken by the Canadian government.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, I must take this question as notice because it is somewhat detailed.

NATIONAL REVENUE

NUMBER OF QUEBEC TAXPAYERS—QUESTION

Senator Smith (Colchester): Honourable senators, I should like to direct a question to the Minister of National Revenue. Has his department readily available, or reasonably available, the total number of persons in the Province of Quebec for the taxation year 1977 who paid income tax or were liable to pay income tax to Canada?

Senator Guay: Honourable senators, the processing of income tax returns for 1977 has not been finalized, but there are approximately three million taxpayers from Quebec who have made a return this year. I cannot go any further than that at the moment.

Senator Smith (Colchester): I do not suppose the honourable minister has available the number of adults in Quebec who would be likely to benefit from a reduction of sales tax.

Senator Guay: I will request the officials in my department to make some type of assessment to that end, and I will try to provide an answer as soon as possible. As you probably realize, this will require quite a bit of work. However, if it is required, I will certainly attempt to give an answer as soon as possible.

Senator Smith (Colchester): I thank the honourable minister.

• (1440)

FINANCIAL ADMINISTRATION ACT

BILL TO AMEND—SECOND READING

The Senate resumed from yesterday the debate on the motion of Senator Cook for the second reading of Bill C-10, to amend the Financial Administration Act.

[Translation]

Hon. Jacques Flynn: Honourable senators, I moved the adjournment of the debate on this bill to have the time to acquaint myself with what has happened since the bill was introduced in this house, particularly on second reading. I am now convinced that all or almost all that could have been said about this bill was said very eloquently, very efficiently and very convincingly. So I will add very little, and I assure you that I will be very brief.

The office of Comptroller General is being created as a result of a recommendation by the Auditor General, and unless I am mistaken, the Auditor General made that suggestion because he thought his work was only to report to Parliament on possible flaws in the financial administration of Canada. He wanted to have someone at the start and during the operations to make sure the existing procedures were being complied with, or in their absence, to suggest some. That is how I understand the role of the Comptroller General as envisaged by the Auditor General.

It so happens, from what I was able to read of the committee sessions in the other place, that the government accepted the idea with much reluctance and hesitation. It appeared very clear to me from what the Honourable Mr. Andras said that it took him a lot of time at first to understand what the Auditor General was proposing, and once he thought he understood there was even more confusion in his mind because he spoke at a certain point of duplication between the functions of the Comptroller General and those of the Auditor General. Once again, there is absolutely no duplication—the Auditor General reports to Parliament on what happened while the Comptroller General tries to prevent mistakes the Auditor General might subsequently be talking about.

In any event, the hesitation and reluctance on the part of the President of the Treasury Board are reflected in the bill that is now before us and it seems to be only window dressing. They say they are going to create the office of Comptroller General of Canada to hold office during pleasure and to perform such duties and functions as may be assigned to him by the Treasury Board.

What does that mean? The Auditor General suggests the government, and consequently the main control agency of the financial administration, the Treasury Board, have a comptroller. And they say, "Yes, we are prepared to accept a comptroller but as long as he does what we tell him to do." A comptroller under control. That is the situation. This is what we have here.

[Senator Guay.]

Senator Lamontagne: The responsible government theory.

Senator Flynn: It is perhaps the responsible government theory, but not responsible to Parliament. I want to emphasize this to Senator Lamontagne. The government should not be responsible only to the people, but first of all to Parliament, because otherwise the people could hardly check whether the government is acting in accordance with the applicable legislation.

Therefore, if his responsibilities are not defined, what we have here is a comptroller under control. Some ask, "Why define his responsibilities?" Those of other deputy ministers are not. I say that this is completely inaccurate. In all the cases where there is only one deputy minister, his responsibilities are those of the department. They are included in the statute which concerns the minister himself. There can be no doubt about the responsibilities of a deputy minister when there is only one. When there is more than one, the legislation provides for it. This is the case, for example, of the department headed by our colleague, Senator Guay, the Department of National Revenue, which has two deputy ministers, one responsible for taxation and the other for customs and excise. In this case, section 3 of chapter N-15 of the revised statutes defines the respective responsibilities of both deputy ministers. Let no one suggest, therefore, that the responsibilities of a deputy minister are never defined. This is completely false. Moreover, I say that this bill is only window dressing on the part of a government which does not believe in the need to appoint a Comptroller General, but which agreed to the suggestion simply because the Auditor General urged it to do so and because it wants to save face in the eyes of the public. It therefore agrees to appoint a Comptroller General under the condition that it can control him. This is the government's condition for agreeing to this idea.

Therefore, I say that this bill will remain insignificant, vague, superfluous and useless unless we can provide a minimum of responsibilities, duties and powers for the comptroller general in committee. If the committee is not ready to accept this, I suggest that it might be as well to let the bill die in committee or to have the courage to reject it on third reading. In my opinion, it is essential to provide a minimum of responsibilities. I am not saying that we should not also give the Treasury Board authority to entrust the Comptroller General with a minimum of additional duties. I do not want the bill to be restrictive, but I would like it to include at least the minimum. I consider this essential. Otherwise, if we are asked to agree to this type of legislation, Parliament will become a laughing-stock. I hope that in committee, we shall get some support from the government side in an attempt to give some meaning to this bill, since it has none at the present time.

• (1450)

[English]

Hon. Paul Desruisseaux: Honourable senators, it is not my intention to speak at length on this bill. Other senators have registered their criticisms against it, and I believe I should register my views now. With your permission, I will do so in the French language.

[Translation]

In my humble opinion Bill C-10 is not the best legislation we have ever studied here in the Senate. In itself its purpose seems valid, constructive and necessary. Considering the complexity of its accounts, Canada must gradually reinforce its audit system. This audit system must meet the highest standards. Of course it should also meet the highest requirements of Canadians and have their full confidence. If we refer to the duties and responsibilities stemming from the terms of reference of the incumbent of that new position, as listed in the appendix on page 725 of Senate Hansard and explained to us by the sponsor of the bill, Senator Cook, I think that this bill which comes to us after approval by the House of Commons would, as it is submitted, provide for important amendments to the audit system and the additional controls that have become necessary and will improve the confidence in the efficiency and the operational value of our system.

In its present form, Bill C-10 contains several defects and leaves some doubt as to the flexibility and the authority required for maximum efficiency.

Unfortunately, the bill as proposed lends itself to all kinds of criticisms, assumptions and limitations with respect to the Comptroller General's terms of reference in assuming the duties and responsibilities given to him on certain occasions by the Treasury Board. So it is important to revise that clause.

The extent of the authority or independence given to him under Bill C-10 is far too modest to be efficient. Even in his revocable position it would be too easy to reduce him to silence. I think we should examine all the consequences and the impact of this bill to ensure efficiency and independence in our audit and control system.

It would be unfortunate to pass the bill before us in its present form.

The Auditor General of Canada and some key men in his department should, on behalf of the government, be responsible themselves for such appointments and, I might add, for the assignment of the duties and responsibilities of the Comptroller General.

Like most honourable senators, I agree with the constructive aspect of the bill which creates the position of Comptroller General in Canada. Unfortunately, it seems to me that, in the best of general interest, the way the duties and functions of the incumbent of that position are established should be revised and reconsidered, his authority better defined, better guaranteed and more firmly based.

This is where an appropriate Senate committee could make excellent recommendations and amendments with a view to ensuring a more efficient audit system.

[English]

Hon. Eric Cook: Honourable senators—

The Hon. the Speaker: I wish to inform the Senate that if the Honourable Senator Cook speaks now, his speech will have the effect of closing the debate on the motion for second reading of this bill.

Senator Cook: Honourable senators, I should like to thank all those who have taken part in what has been—for me, at any rate—a most spirited and helpful debate, but it seems that there may be some confusion as to the thrust and effect of this bill. Nevertheless, there were some excellent observations made by all speakers. Therefore, while I will not detain you for long, I think I should endeavour to supply reasons and answers where possible to do so.

It may assist the Senate if I review the present situation as it relates to the public accounts. As practically every speaker made some reference to the position of Auditor General, perhaps the proper place to begin is to discuss his position and functions.

The existing Auditor General Act was passed by Parliament in 1977, and section 3(1) reads:

The Governor in Council shall, by commission under the Great Seal, appoint a qualified auditor to be the officer called the Auditor General of Canada to hold office during good behaviour for a term of ten years, but the Auditor General may be removed by the Governor in Council on address of the Senate and House of Commons.

Section 7(1) reads:

The Auditor General shall report annually to the House of Commons

(a) on the work of his office; and

(b) on whether, in carrying on the work of his office, he received all the information and explanations he required.

I would draw the attention of the Senate particularly to the wording of subsection (b), which I will read again.

(b) on whether, in carrying on the work of his office, he received all the information and explanations he required.

Then Section 7(2) reads:

Each report of the Auditor General under subsection (1) shall call attention to anything that he considers to be of significance and of a nature that should be brought to the attention of the House of Commons, including any cases in which he has observed that

(a) accounts have not been faithfully and properly maintained or public money has not been fully accounted for or paid, where so required by law, into the Consolidated Revenue Fund;

(b) essential records have not been maintained or the rules and procedures applied have been insufficient to safeguard and control public property, to secure an effective check on the assessment, collection and proper allocation of the revenue and to ensure that expenditures have been made only as authorized;

(c) money has been expended other than for purposes for which it was appropriated by Parliament;

● (1500)

(d) money has been expended without due regard to economy or efficiency; or

(e) satisfactory procedures have not been established to measure and report the effectiveness of programs, where such procedures could appropriately and reasonably be implemented.

I would ask honourable senators, when considering the bill before us, to please keep in mind the provisions of sections 3 and 7 of the Auditor General Act, which was assented to, as I have already said, in the year 1977.

It is important to keep in mind that Bill C-10 does not in any manner, shape or form affect the Auditor General. This bill does not purport to create a second Auditor General, or some other or different or new kind of Auditor General. You will recall that Senator Langlois made this point very clear during his excellent contribution to the debate.

There can be only one Auditor General, the servant of Parliament who reports to the House of Commons, and who cannot be removed except by the Governor in Council on address of the Senate and House of Commons. With all due respect to Senator Forsey, it doesn't matter in the least if he is known by a double-barrelled name, as in the United Kingdom, or by one name, as in Canada. There can only be one statutory official entrusted with the duty of giving an all-embracing and final report on the state of the national finances to Parliament.

In my opinion, if that statutory official is by law authorized and required to do more than audit the government accounts and to advise thereon, then that is not as good a system as the system we follow in Canada.

In passing, I note the Auditor General's position in the United Kingdom is described as "unique." I quote the definition given by Senator Forsey:

The officer who is responsible for the auditing of all public accounts. His position is unique in that he is an Officer of Parliament yet, as head of the Exchequer and Audit Department, he controls a staff of Civil Servants.

If that is his correct description, then in my view the system is not as good as our Canadian system. In my opinion, the Auditor General himself should not be required to perform any other function, which function would have to be the subject matter of an audit by some other authority. The Auditor General should have one statutory duty, and only one.

The Auditor General is, and remains, totally outside the public service. He visits the offices of the members of the public service only to discharge his statutory duties. Therefore, as I have attempted to make plain, it is important to remember that this bill in no way alters, diminishes, controls or affects the Auditor General, his rights, his duties, his obligations, his authority and, finally, his report to the House of Commons.

The Auditor General is as independent of the public service as is any member of the judiciary. He is as independent as any other auditor general in any other country, and certainly in Canada we are fortunate in having men of the calibre of the present Auditor General and his predecessors in office.

To sum up, the Auditor General (i) is completely independent; (ii) has to report any neglect to supply him with any information and explanations; (iii) has responsibilities and duties which are full, clear and comprehensive; and (iv) must have the absolute and undisputed last word.

In view of this outline of the office of the Auditor General, it may reasonably be asked, "What is the need for this bill?"

The need for the bill is that the Auditor General is not satisfied with the state of the public accounts and has recommended, in order to help straighten things out and keep them straight in the future, that there be some central official inside the public service who will be entrusted with the task of bringing more order into the area of public finances, and who will be working, of course, in close harmony with the Auditor General.

This officer will be working inside the public service to bring order and regularity into the day-to-day operations of the government. Therefore, he must be given the necessary status to ensure that he will be listened to, and that he will command attention from all other top officials and heads of departments.

Honourable senators, to illustrate this clearly, you will appreciate that army headquarters would not send an officer of the rank of captain to call upon a colonel to advise the colonel that his men are not marching properly, dressing correctly, or drilling as they should. Following this example, it would be pointless for a junior civil servant to have to fault a deputy minister because his department had been guilty of following wrong procedures, resulting in extravagance and waste. For that reason, the new official must himself be a deputy minister. The Comptroller General, being himself a deputy minister, will at all times have free and full access to all other deputy ministers and heads of crown corporations.

The intent is that with the Auditor General continuing his good work on the outside, and the Comptroller General working with him on the inside, the result will be a great improvement in the operation and management of the public finances of Canada.

It seems to me it is not very important that the duties of the Comptroller General should be spelled out in the act itself. Furthermore, it is not necessary, or desirable, for him to report to Parliament. His report, in part, will be a great mass of detail, and Heaven knows we have too many reports already. He will report to the Treasury Board, but what is perhaps more important is that his reports, pursuant to the provisions of the Auditor General Act, must be made available to the Auditor General.

Therefore, the situation with respect to any report will continue as it now is. The Auditor General will issue one all-comprehensive, all-inclusive annual report, and all relevant subsidiary reports will be available to the Auditor General and form part of the material on which he will base his report.

It might be instructive and of assistance if at this point I remind honourable senators of what the Auditor General does affirm when reporting to the House of Commons. He reports as follows:

My examinations included general reviews of the accounting procedures and such tests of accounting records and other supporting evidence as were considered necessary in the circumstances.

The staff of the Audit Office was given full access to all vouchers, records and files relating to the accounts of all departments, Crown corporations and other agencies, and was provided with all the information and explanations required.

The bill will give the Auditor General the back-up support and assistance for which he has asked. If this proves to be satisfactory, the Auditor General, no doubt, in his reports to the House of Commons, will express his approval of the work of the Comptroller General of Canada. If, on the other hand, the Comptroller General does not perform in a manner satisfactory to the Auditor General, I feel confident that that, too, will be the subject of further and adverse comments.

I shall let the Auditor General speak for himself on this matter. I quote from his evidence given to the committee of the House of Commons on March 17, 1978, as follows:

In taking the highly unusual step for an Auditor General of recommending in quite specific terms the creation of this office, I also took the further step of spelling out what seemed to me to be the appropriate duties to be assigned to him. Now, this is not directly related to putting them in legislation but I can assure this Committee, and through this Committee I can assure Parliament, that, as time goes on and the Comptroller General takes office and commences to exercise his responsibilities, if at any time it would appear to me, as Auditor General—I am sure this would be the same I hope and expect from my successors—that these duties were not appropriate, that they were not adequate for him to carry out the mandate that has been recommended and he has been now established, and I will have no hesitation whatever in placing that firmly on the record. In other words, if we fail to reach agreement through the president of the Treasury Board or the Treasury Board itself on these matters, they will certainly be reported to Parliament so it does provide a safeguard, I think, of the type Mr. Andre was seeking.

● (1510)

I would point out that inasmuch as Bill C-10 is the direct result of representations made in reports of the Auditor General, so I feel convinced future governments will also respond to future reports of the Auditor General, and, if he requests the government so to do, the legislation will be amended and strengthened in any way he might suggest.

Some senators have expressed the fear that we are merely appointing another deputy minister, and that this will serve little or no purpose. It occurs to me that, even if the Auditor General had not requested the appointment, this appointment should be made. Indeed, it should have been made years ago.

I suggest to you, honourable senators, that there is not a chartered bank, insurance company, or trust company of any size which does not have amongst its executive personnel a comptroller general, whether by that or some other title. He may be called the chief inspector, senior vice-president (finance), or executive vice-president (corporate procedure), but his duties will be similar to those of a comptroller general. I think this is true of all businesses of any size in Canada, but I picked the banks, the insurance companies and the trust companies because they are governed by their own acts or Parliament, they report to and are inspected by governments, they deal largely with the money of people who are depositors, policyholders and the like, and, in addition, they have outside independent auditors.

If well run, fully regulated large concerns in the private sector use and require the services of an executive like a comptroller general, then I for one am fully satisfied that the Government of Canada needs, can use and will benefit from the services of a comptroller general.

Indeed, a short description of the bill is that it is a good housekeeping bill, because that is the real purpose and thrust of the recommendation of the Auditor General and of this measure. The creation of the post of Comptroller General will make it easier to have, from a financial standpoint, tidy, well run and economically operated government departments and crown corporations.

Honourable senators, I will conclude by adding that I get the impression that too many people expect too much from the appointment of a Comptroller General.

I was much impressed by Senator Roblin's excellent speech wherein he dealt with control of the public purse. However, while I think the Comptroller General can do much to foster the keeping of proper records, and the following of correct procedures, it must be remembered that so long as Parliament votes in excess of $40 billion a year, and requires the public service to disburse it, there is nothing a Comptroller General can do to reduce the total amount of public expenditure. He cannot override the will of Parliament, and as Parliament has full control over the amounts voted, it is not very sensible or logical for us to vote these huge sums of money and then blame the public service for doing what we require it to do. This is just about as sensible and logical as it is for a man to give his wife a dress allowance, and then complain because she spends it.

Honourable senators, the control of public spending starts with the voting of supply, and if Parliament continues to authorize spending money, as if money were going out of style, the appointment of one or more Comptrollers General will have little effect on the total amount spent.

However, what a good and strong Comptroller General can and will do is make a real contribution to the keeping of proper records and the following of correct procedures, both of which will help avoid waste and unnecessary loss and expense in the operations of the Government of Canada.

For these and other reasons advanced by other speakers I can assure Senator Grosart that I indeed have no reservations on the score of this being a good bill, and I respectfully suggest it be given second reading.

Motion agreed to and bill read second time.

REFERRED TO COMMITTEE

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this bill be read the third time?

Senator Cook moved that the bill be referred to the Standing Senate Committee on National Finance.

Motion agreed to.

CANADIAN NATIONAL RAILWAYS
CAPITAL REVISION ACT
RAILWAY ACT

BILL TO AMEND—SECOND READING—DEBATE CONTINUED

The Senate resumed from yesterday the debate on the motion of Senator Langlois for the second reading of Bill C-17, to amend the Canadian National Railways Capital Revision Act and the Railway Act and to amend and repeal certain other statutes in consequence thereof.

Hon. Duff Roblin: Honourable senators, I suppose there is no way that I can disguise from you the fact that the subject matter of this bill will be regarded by most as rather dry and dusty, dealing, as it does, with arcane financial matters. So it is all the more important for me to express my obligation to the Honourable Senator Langlois for the succinct and effective way in which he presented the government's case with respect to this bill. I certainly think he put their best foot forward, and I congratulate him on that account.

I also appreciate the example of brevity which he gave in connection with the matter, and I regret that I cannot promise to follow him very closely in that respect. I found that my thoughts on this bill are somewhat more extensive than I had originally expected they might be. The bill, in fact, asks more questions than it answers, as far as I am concerned. But before I get into my analysis of this point of view, may I say I would like to pay my respects to those officers, past and present, who had the responsibility of guiding the Canadian National Railways through the years.

I count it a privilege that I was—and I hope I may say this—a friend of Donald Gordon; I know we were partners in the bagpipes together. I have a great respect for Norman MacMillan whom I also had the opportunity of meeting in a business capacity in a previous incarnation. The same may be said for Dr. Bandeen. And I had the opportunity to meet General Dextraze a few days ago. We can pay a tribute, and a well deserved one, to the high calibre of leadership which these men and their like have given to a very important public institution. And I am prepared to acknowledge the debt we owe to them and to all the people who work in the Canadian National Railways—the management and staff, past and present.

Whether it is regarded as a “profit centre”—which is the new expression, it seems—or whether in its old role as a potent instrument of national policy, this great organization has served the country well. I make that preface so that you will understand the attitude from which I approach the less sweeping matters of approval that I have in mind when I examine the bill itself.

What is the purpose of the bill? I think it can be said very briefly that it is to clean up the balance sheet of the Canadian National Railways, and it does so by several different means. First, there is the $808 million of debt which is to be converted to equity. This has the considerable advantage that no interest necessarily applies if it is to be converted into equity, and there is no obligation to repay.

Secondly, there is the conversion of some 4 per cent non-cumulative preferred shares to equity as well, which also eliminates the fixed dividend so far as they are concerned.

And, thirdly, there is provision for the write-off of something around $800 million-worth of undepreciated assets, a depreciation obligation which is unfunded at present, according to the testimony given by the railroad.

● (1520)

There are two other matters of interest in the bill. First, there is a provision that there should be a minimum dividend of 20 per cent of the after-tax profits, which would accrue to the benefit of the Government of Canada; and a salutary resolution to ensure that the annual report of the railway is delivered to the committees of Parliament.

I think that the justification that follows on these proposals could be summed up as follows: There is, first of all, a saving to the cash flow position of the federal treasury of some $235 million over five years. Second, it permits the debt-equity ratio of the company to be adjusted. It now stands at 61.5:38.5, and this is to be adjusted to 42:58. This conforms, generally speaking, to industry standards. Third, it is thought that these moves will facilitate access to the money markets, and, fourth, that it will lay the foundation for, if I may use the expression, the revitalized personnel—that hardly does them justice—of the Canadian National Railways to compete more vigorously, perhaps with the Canadian Pacific Railway, and, at any rate, to eliminate losses and to make money for the people of Canada.

That sounds pretty good. As a matter of fact, it sounds just as good in 1978 as it did in 1952. It would surprise no one who has studied the matter, and certainly, I think, few senators, if I were to say that substantially the same exercise took place with respect to the Canadian National Railways 26 years ago.

As I listened to the rationale that was presented last night by Senator Langlois, I was struck by how similar his argument was to the argument that was used in the presentation of Bill C-308 in June 1952, 26 years ago, when Parliament was asked to convert $736 million-worth of debt to equity, as we are being asked to do today and for roughly the same reasons.

That bill, these 26 years ago, brought about a massive reduction in the fixed debt situation of the company for the same basic purposes—to restore a reasonable debt-equity ratio, which would then appear at something like 36 to 64, much the same as that of the Canadian Pacific Railway, and for the same reasons that we heard last night, namely, to improve profitability. Listen to this quotation:

—in this measure we have gone a great distance to grant the CNR relief from the fixed charges and to bring them to a position not on a parallel with that of Class I railways of the U.S., or with that of the CPR for that matter, but to bring them to a more comparable basis.

Again:

The intention of this formula is to lessen charges, to give more incentive to railway management and railway employees and to encourage the railway to earn greater gross revenues. If that can be done, a position should be arrived at which would free the Canadian National Railway from these large deficit operations.

And again:

The interest which will be foregone on converted debt will be more than offset by the elimination of the requirement for the Government to purchase CNR preferred shares.

I defy anyone to say whether those remarks were made in 1952 or 1978. They apply with equal aptitude in both situations. And if the reputation of the honourable senator who introduced the bill was not above any challenge whatsoever, I might even accuse him of plagiarism in the speech he gave last night in respect of the matter that is before us.

When that bill was passed there were some comments made by my old friend Donald Gordon, when he said as follows:

Capital revision has taken away the curse of the past, but let us be frank enough to recognize that it has also taken away an alibi and convenient excuse. That is its real meaning for the future. We are now in a position where we have nothing to hide behind, and nothing to block the road to success. We have a fighting chance of paying our way in the world, and counting the bad years with the good we ought to be able on the average to pay all our operating expenses, our fixed interest charges and income taxes, and still have something left to return to our owners as a dividend on preferred stock.

Again from the same gentleman:

I would like to record, even now, my complete confidence that our proposal deals with the last possibility of any further revision of this nature and that it is aimed at a final clearance of the effects of what has been called the legacy of the past. I am confident that, given this final clearance, the Canadian National will be able to demonstrate that it is an efficient and well run organization.

Oh, the gratuitous exercise of prophecy! I challenge anyone to say whether those remarks would come more properly from Dr. Bandeen or Mr. Gordon. I think either of them would have made the same speech.

It seems to me, honourable senators, that the more things change the more they are the same. It seems to me that the solution that was proposed in 1952, which is the same as the solution we have today, did not work very well. It may be said that we are back to square one and are repeating in this legislation before us today the same measures that we approved in 1952, and for the same basic reasons—to secure a better debt-equity ratio, and to underline and reinforce the profitability of the company.

I think this short excursion into history is a pretty good reason why we really should not accept this measure at its face value; that we really must question the full implications of what we are being asked to do, and examine the whole aura of events which surround this particular bill. That I should like to attempt.

I am examining this bill from two points of view: first, the immediate interest of the government and of the Canadian National; second, the wider implications that it has for transportation policy and the public interest.

First of all, why is this bill necessary? Well, it will save the government a lot of money. In particular, it will save them $80 million in 1978, which they would have to provide, or which they would have been willing, apparently, to provide, in taking up the 4 per cent preferred stock. The arrangement is that they provide the railway with an amount equal to 3 per cent of its gross income in the form of 4 per cent preferred stock. But we do not need this bill to do that, because the legal obligation to take up this 3 per cent of the gross revenue in preferred stock has expired. It expired many years ago in 1960 or 1962. It no longer exists. If the Government of Canada really thinks it is a good idea to stop providing this money in this way, it does not need any measure like this to do it. All it has to do is come to an exercise of will, because what it is doing now is providing purely voluntary support for the Canadian National Railways. So there is the first point—the saving of money and what it means in respect of the legislation.

The second point that we are being urged to consider is that it will improve the access of the Canadian National Railways to the financial markets of the world; that they will no longer be under tutelage from the government with respect to their source of long-term funds of borrowed money, and that they will be able to improve their access to the financial markets, if this bill passes.

Well, I should like to suggest to honourable senators that Canadian National has pretty good access now. In the last three years, for example, there have been four loans raised by the Canadian National Railways, two of them in Europe. In November 1976, they raised $85 million at 8½ per cent. In March 1977, they raised another $60 million in Europe, paying 8½ per cent. In June of last year they went to the United States, and raised $100 million at 8½ per cent. In February of this year they went back to the United States, and raised $120 million at 9½ per cent.

I am happy to tell the chamber that in none of these borrowings, if my information is correct, as I believe it is, was there any formal federal guarantee. So that strikes me as pretty good access to public markets, without government help, assistance or guarantee.

• (1530)

The Canadian National Railways enjoy a double A rating. Only the Government of Canada is higher in this country with a triple A rating. Why should not the CNR have an excellent access to the public financial markets these days, as things are? Every prudent lender is well aware of the fact that, whether it is explicit or implicit, CNR bonds are really bonds of the Government of Canada, because every lender knows that the Government of Canada is not about to let the CNR go broke, or fail to pay its interest, or renege on its principal. That was settled in 1922, when the CNR was formed.

So I suggest to honourable senators that the argument that this bill is necessary for access to the public markets is not quite as strong as it might appear at first glance. The access now is not too bad.

But then we have another argument. It is advanced by the government that something very unfortunate took place in 1952 which should now be put right. This is that 26 years ago those in charge ignored the fact that there was a substantial amount of depreciation hanging around in the CNR books that was unfunded, and they are now telling us that some $800 million, more or less, represents an unfunded burden of depreciation that was overlooked 26 years ago, and that we must get rid of this distortion on the books of the CNR if we are to do that organization justice.

Well, that is an awful lot of unfunded depreciation to swallow in one fell swoop, if it means, as it does in this instance, the writing off of $808 million-worth of fixed debts to the Government of Canada. I suggest that we should take a little look at just how strong that argument is.

Let us look at the depreciation accounts. I want to deal with three of the more important ones in the railroad business. One is the depreciation of rolling stock—and I will explain the practice in the CN and the CP so that honourable senators may form some idea of the implications of the point I am trying to make. Depreciation of rolling stock in Canadian Pacific commenced on January 1, 1940. In the Canadian National Railways it commenced at exactly the same time.

Depreciation on track—another very important capital item in the railway business—commenced in the Canadian Pacific Railway on January 1, 1956, and in the CNR at the same time.

In connection with structures—another important aspect with which depreciation is involved—depreciation began in the Canadian Pacific Railway on January 1, 1942, and did not commence in the Canadian National Railways until 1956, which was some fourteen years later and has to be taken into account.

But however we slice it, I suggest that if there is anything at all in the depreciation argument—and I will express the view in a few moments that there is nothing in it—then it is certainly nothing like the $808 million which is being advanced as one of the prime reasons why this piece of railway refinancing legislation should go through.

I say I doubt that the depreciation argument is very strong because I would be very surprised indeed if the men in 1952 really overlooked the fact that there was a problem with depreciation. I suggest to honourable senators that they knew about it, and I suggest that they were satisfied with the situation as it was—and there were some very good reasons why they should be. If the depreciation argument had been unearthed in 1952—taking the allegation of the government argument at its face value—then something else would have had to go, because if the same debt was forgiven and the unfunded depreciation was recognized, then the debt-equity ratio that they finally came up with would not be 30 to 70, or close to that, as it turned out to be, but probably close to zero to 100. That debt equity ratio is patently unsound.

So if they took it in depreciation, they would not have got it in loan forgiveness. It is one or the other, in my view; and I think they left the depreciation where it was, and they took the debt write-off instead, because it was to the advantage of the Canadian National Railways to do so. By working on the debt instead of the depreciation, they saved the interest cost and they avoided the necessity to repay the corpus of the debt.

That was a good bargain in 1952, and I suggest that it is no basis at all for the special recognition in 1978, which we are being asked to accord today.

All right, never mind; Bill C-17 is going to allow the Canadian National Railways to make money and to get off the taxpayer's back, and this should be considered well. The point that I want to put in this connection, however, is that with or without Bill C-17, if the forecast of the Canadian National Railways for the next five-year period is anything like being right, the Canadian National Railways is going to make money anyway, whether we reorganize the finances or whether we do not. I would like to give the house some figures in connection with what the railway said would happen under either of those two circumstances.

I will spare honourable senators my reading of the figures year by year, because they can be summarized quite easily. Without Bill C-17, without the recapitalization and all that goes with it, the railway would, as it estimated over this five-year period, make about $440 million. If we go through with this bill, if we recapitalize and if we write off all these debts, et cetera, and consider all the consequences of that action, the railway will make more money, considerably more money. It will make $890 million, or, let us say, twice as much. That is important, and I will come back to it because I think the question of profitability goes to the root of the argument with which we are being faced here.

I simply want to say at this stage of my discussion, honourable senators, that without Bill C-17 they will still make a lot of money in five years, $440 million, even with all their investment programs, et cetera. With Bill C-17 the plan is to make $890 million.

But there is another interesting sidelight to that particular comparison of the situations—that with and that without the bill. Without the bill, we would find that the debt-equity ratio would present an interesting picture. Without the bill, this year, 1978, the debt-equity ratio will be 61.5 to 38.5. If we do not have the bill, and proceed without it, an interesting thing happens, because the debt-equity ratio begins to fall, and we find that in the five-year period to 1982 the debt-equity ratio is 55.1 to 44.9. If we have the bill, at the same period it will be 42.1 to 57.9. But even without the bill, the debt-equity ratio is going to come down, and there is a very strong possibility that the Canadian National Railways could earn their way back to a better debt-equity ratio without the bill.

I would like to leave that point where it is, because again I want to link it up before I resume my seat.

So I have examined these different counts: government savings, access to financial markets, debt-equity ratio, profitability. On all those points I think there is a strong argument for saying that the advantages of the bill are somewhat less clear-cut than they might appear to be at first glance.

I want to emphasize, or refer particularly to, the last item that I mentioned, namely, profitability, because it brings me to the core of my doubts as to the advisability of Bill C-17 at the present time. What makes us so sure in 1978 that the Canadian National Railway will not find itself in the future in the same situation that it discovered it was in after 1952? Why do we think it will be profitable? Well, let us give all credit—and there is a lot of credit due—to a bright, new, intelligent management style. There is a tighter, more effective and more efficient operation. I believe they are better trained and better motivated people, and we want to encourage them in what they do.

But the real difference, I suggest, between 1952 and 1978 is to be found elsewhere. In 1978 the government proposes to relieve the Canadian National Railways of at least one of the non-economic functions that they now perform—and I am referring particularly to the provision of passenger services.

● (1540)

Now—and this is different from 1952—the government is transferring the non-economic cost of the passenger service away from the CNR and to the new organization known as VIA. Anyway, the passenger traffic deficit, which the president estimates at $50 million a year, is being transferred from the railway to this new organization, and over the five-year term of the forecast I have been discussing, this $50 million loss will be reduced to $20 million, and, who knows, it may even disappear altogether.

I suggest there is a possibility that this one item alone of relief from uneconomic activity on the part of the government is the biggest single factor in the restoring of profitability to the Canadian National Railways. It is probably worth at least $100 million over the term of the five-year forecast that we have been discussing.

But this is not all. There is other relief in sight for the Canadian National Railways. For example, out of the general funds of the Government of Canada an amount of $600 million is being made available for the upgrading of the railway network in western Canada, to bring it back to some kind of serviceable state. That is worth something. During the next few years there are going to be hundreds of miles of branch lines abandoned in western Canada for the reason that they do not make money. That will mean something, I suggest, to the people who are making the calculations at Canadian National Railways. I would expect that along with the VIA situation these forecasts have already been included in their figures. I should be surprised if they are not, but I think they should be brought to their attention.

There are a couple of other very important matters of the same nature which, at the present time, have not been settled. The first of these has to do with the cost of running transportation systems in the province of Newfoundland. There is a royal commission, as senators know, examining that matter. Canadian National Railways are claiming a loss of $22 million a year due to the non-economic cost of that operation, and we know what the government's views about funding these non-economic costs are. That is an important consideration which is still in limbo.

Even more important is the question of the present non-economic Crowsnest rates for the movement of grain in western Canada. This has been before this house and before the country since time began, and it has been calculated by the Canadian National, in their latest information to Parliament, that there is a loss of $64 million per year on their share of the movement of grain in western Canada because of the non-economic nature of what they are trying to do. So here we are, in these two amounts, looking at $86 million.

Now, the Canadian National has made it perfectly clear—and the evidence to this effect is abundant—that they fully expect the Government of Canada to reimburse it for these non-economic costs. It wants them to be underwritten. I must say that the Minister of Transport has made it equally clear with respect to his policy—that user-pay policy which is the subject of another debate by itself, and about which Senator Smith (Colchester) will be glad to tell you, and in which I would probably join him—that the counterpart of the user-pay policy is that the taxpayer picks up the cost of these non-economic services that the railways are being asked to run. Therefore, I suggest that the odds are good that these deficits will be made up, because the government is pledged to do it. If that happens the economic position of the CNR will be transformed out of all recognition. It will make another five-year forecast necessary—indeed, I have one in front of me—incorporating these new government policies. Should they come to pass in this five-year period the profit will go from $890 million to something like $1.2 billion and more, if my estimates are within the ballpark.

In any case, with these new policies that the Government of Canada has espoused, one can logically conclude that the profits of the Canadian National Railways will be increased by tens of millions of dollars per year from that source alone, and the need for this refinancing measure, Bill C-17, is certainly placed in considerable doubt.

No matter what happens, however, there is another consideration in any financial restructuring of the Canadian National Railways which bears not so much upon the profit centre concept of the railway itself—although that has relevance—but on the wider position that the railway should assume in our society. I look for, and I hope I get, before this debate is finished in the Senate, a clear statement of government policy with respect to the corporate objectives of the Canadian National Railways—corporate objectives perhaps revised in light of the failure of 1952.

An explanation of Canadian National's difficulties in 1952 and following years could perhaps lie in its capital expenditure policies. During the period from 1952 to 1976, Canadian National spent $4.8 billion on improvements, additions and replacements of its property. Of this, $2.8 billion was provided by depreciation and salvage, while $768 million came from government purchases of preferred stock, leaving over $1 billion to be financed by borrowing. This increase of the CNR long-term debt amounts to about one-and-a-third times the $800 million we are being asked to forgive now.

This raises the question of whether the measure before us is an admission that the capital expenditures represented by the amounts I have just quoted are unable to pay their way, and therefore are not justified economically. If that is the case, and if we write these things off, it has most serious implications for every privately owned firm that competes with the transportation or other undertakings of Canadian National. It means that the Canadian National can enjoy the benefits of spending money without bearing the burden of its cost, and the competitors of Canadian National will find the terms of competition radically altered to their disadvantage as a result of Canadian National's having expanded and improved its operation through capital spending on which no return need ever be earned.

I think it is this line of argument that brings us to the concern of the trucking industry, for example, and I say that the question of the capital investment policy of Canadian National is something which needs to be considered by the Government of Canada. I ask the house whether we would agree that Canadian National should limit itself to those activities which are essential to railroading, and that the thrust of Canadian National should be to making it a cracking good railroad, and not to making it a conglomerate with non-rail preoccupations cluttering up its attention. It is clear that since 1958 the rate of return realized on some of the capital investments of the railway has not lived up to expectations, and I wonder whether some of those, such as hotels, are now railway activities. I suppose the conventional view is that running a hotel is a railway activity. Well, perhaps it was at one time, but if you have a railway that does not carry people anywhere, and has gone out of the passenger business, you wonder what it is doing in the hotel business. You wonder, for example, whether the $25 to $30 million—I do not know how much it was—that was put into the CN tower represents the wisest use of the inevitably limited resources of that railroad, and whether it would not be better if they restricted themselves to running the railroad and stopped trying to emulate its great rival in becoming one of the conglomerates that we have in this country today. It seems to me that this business of capital forgiveness, of being allowed to write off the past, and of placing the people concerned in a new, strong, financial position, goes to the root of the fears of the trucking industry as they were presented in the other place. I am going to quote what they said:

[Senator Roblin.]

Perhaps the trucking industry's concern on this thing can best be summed up by something Dr. Bandeem said in his evidence... when, in answer to a question on the likely impact of the recapitalization on efficiency, he stated:

The mere change from debt to equity of our capital structure will have no immediate impact on the efficiency of the railway—

● (1550)

That is a statement that could be well pondered.

—but what it does do is put us in a position to take maximum advantage of any opportunities that are offered anywhere in the country for commercial operation of transport.

The Canadian Trucking Association, commenting on these two statements, said:

CN management should be encouraged to compete in the marketplace on an equitable basis with private enterprise where transportation services can be self-supporting. We do not believe this can happen where the Crown-owned railway is given an overwhelming financial advantage. To be more specific, we are concerned that given enough financial leeway, CN management will again be tempted to try and buy their way into a self-contained empire of inter-connecting services where they would otherwise have to compete with other carriers for much of the interline business they would control. CN might decide that with one final cast of the dice they could revolutionize domestic transportation on a multi-modal basis and in the process effectively bury the competition.

Needless to say, I do not subscribe to this rather apocalyptic view of what might happen, but I do say there is a need for a statement of government policy in connection with the investment direction that Canadian National will follow. We need to know what the role is going to be in this particular case with respect to road transportation. It is an important role, indeed, and we need to know what the effect of this debt adjustment will be on the ability of Canadian National to compete, and what happens to equity in connection with other modes of transportation.

What I require, before I can vote for this bill with good conscience, would be a statement of policy from the government covering these matters, because clearly it is their duty to do so, not that of the board of directors of Canadian National Railways. There should be a clear policy which, in my opinion, should include the statement that the business of the railroad is railroading; it is not the business of developing a conglomerate. The policy of the government should be that the railway would compete fairly, and not from a financial base which is so strong as to preclude the successful dispute by any other party.

I come to the point where I am prepared to sum up, and I appreciate the patience of those who have listened to me. Is the bill needed to handle the preferred stock question? The answer is no. Is it needed to provide access to financial markets? That might be improved somewhat—I do not think we should ignore that—but certainly it is far from essential. Is the disposition of this unfunded depreciation a matter in which the railways should have our sympathetic interest? I sometimes have a little doubt about that. Is it necessary to ensure the profitability of the railway? I am sure it is not because the railway itself has told us that such is not the case. Is it needed as an incentive for management to do better? I know those men too well. They will do the best they can, at any time and under any circumstances.

Well, what is wrong with the bill? It seems to me that we should expect, as a minimum statement from the leaders of the government, that they clarify the national policy. I want clarification of the policy with respect to the subsidy that will arise from the Crowsnest freight rates. I think we need a statement as to what the answer will be in principle to the royal commission in Newfoundland concerning $22 million-worth of uneconomic assets there. We need to know far more about the impact of branch line abandonments than we do now. These are just three of the important public policy questions which the CNR cannot answer, but the government surely should be able to do so. The effect of the answers to these questions on the balance sheet will be dramatic.

We then want to know what the government in 1978 thinks ought to be the corporate objectives of the Canadian National Railways. Is it to be the railway? Is it to be the conglomerate? What rules and standards of policy will the government lay down for the use of capital resources? Because, even after this bill passes, according to the minister in the other place, the cabinet will still have to approve the capital budget of the Canadian National Railways.

When we have all these factors worked out and can meld them into the financial situation we are being asked to deal with today, and when we have the policy declarations I seek, then we will know how the balance sheet and the profit and loss statement of the Canadian National Railways will be affected, and I say it will be affected radically. That is why I say there is a good case for proposing that these other important policy matters should be settled before we decide what we should do with this bill.

What I really look for, in any debate on railways—and I suppose it betrays my background and betrays the experience of a life generally lived on the western plains—regarding the policy of the government and the policy of the Canadian National Railways, is some recognition that railroads are an instrument of national policy par excellence; and that this is an instrument, as transportation policy has been since the very beginning, by which our nation is served and enhanced. In railroading, in particular, we seek to find an equalization, an equalization so that manufacturers in industries in the eastern and western parts of our country have a fair shake in competing for business in Canada as a whole.

We want to see a railway system that provides better ways and means, and that modernizes the moving of western grain which is still the life blood of a very large portion of this country. We want to see a railway system which constructively promotes the integration and unity of our country. We must get away from the situation where we in western Canada look upon railway freight rates just as people in international trade look on non-tariff barriers to trade. For us, that is exactly what it is if we do not get a fair and equitable system of freight rates. They are barriers to trade, non-tariff barriers to trade, and we need to bring these barriers down. Let the government show us that this bill helps in these great causes which I have outlined to you this afternoon, and I, for one, shall rise up and call them blessed.

Senator Goldenberg: Would the honourable senator allow a question? I understood Senator Roblin to say in the course of his very excellent speech that the business of a railway is railroading, and that the Canadian National should stick to this. Why should that apply only to the publicly-owned railway and not to the Canadian Pacific Railway?

Senator Roblin: As I understand it, the Canadian Pacific has not, in recent years at any rate, come to the Government of Canada asking for money to bail them out of their deficits. It seems to me that they take a regular commercial risk. As free enterpriser, I feel that the Canadian National Railways should avoid the temptation to try to model itself on that other company, and become a conglomerate. I feel, when considering its relationship to the public purse and the general view of the Parliament of Canada about public enterprise, it would be well advised to do so.

Senator Goldenberg: If I might follow through, Senator Roblin says that Canadian Pacific, a privately-owned line, is not in the habit of coming to the government for financial assistance. Is it not a fact that it was Canadian Pacific that set the precedent for such government financial assistance?

Senator Roblin: Of course they did. They were pretty good at it too. I do not want to get into the position—and certainly it was not my position in what I had to say—as being thought, in any way, to be a spokesman or defender of the Canadian Pacific Railway. God knows they are able to look after themselves. They have shown that when dealing with the Parliament of Canada over the years. I am simply dealing with the Canadian National Railways, and what I think is good for them. Canadian Pacific can worry about their shareholders. We are the shareholders of the Canadian National Railways.

On motion of Senator Smith (Colchester), debate adjourned.

The Senate adjourned until tomorrow at 2 p.m.

THE SENATE

Thursday, May 18, 1978

The Senate met at 2 p.m., the Speaker in the Chair.

Prayers.

DOCUMENTS TABLED

Senator Perrault tabled:

Copies of contracts, pursuant to section 20(3) of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police Act, Chapter R-9, R.S.C., 1970, entered into between the Government of Canada and

1. The Town of Rimbey, in the Province of Alberta (English Text).

2. The Town of La Ronge, in the Province of Saskatchewan (English Text).

Report of the Canada Post Office for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1977, pursuant to section 80(2) of the Post Office Act, Chapter P-14, R.S.C., 1970.

BUSINESS OF THE SENATE

ADJOURNMENT

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, with leave of the Senate and notwithstanding rule 45(1)(g), I move that when the Senate adjourns today it do stand adjourned until Tuesday, May 23, 1978, at 8 o'clock in the evening.

Honourable senators, before the question is put I wish to inform the Senate on the prospects for next week. In doing so I shall deal first with the meetings of committees.

The Standing Senate Committee on National Finance will meet on Tuesday at 2 p.m. to consider Bill C-10, to amend the Financial Administration Act.

On Wednesday the National Finance Committee will again meet on Bill C-10 at 9.30 a.m. The Banking, Trade and Commerce Committee has scheduled an in camera meeting at the same hour to consider its report on the subject matter of Bill C-13. Also on Wednesday the Special Senate Committee on Retirement Age Policies will meet at 1 p.m. On Thursday the Joint Committee on Regulations and other Statutory Instruments will meet at 1 p.m.

In the Senate we shall proceed with the items now on the order paper and any other items that come to us. I might add, as a last comment, that if we conclude the work now on the order paper next week and no other items come to us from the other place, we might consider adjourning for one week.

Motion agreed to.

COMPTROLLER GENERAL OF CANADA

PUBLICATION OF TREASURY BOARD RE APPOINTMENT— QUESTION

Senator Grosart: Honourable senators, I have a question for the Leader of the Government. It is an unusual type of question, because I will merely ask him to carry a message for me to the Treasury Board.

Senator Perrault: You are telegraphing your punch.

● (1410)

Senator Grosart: It arises out of some discussions we have had about the appropriateness of government spokesmen announcing the appointment of the Comptroller General before such an office exists. I believe the Leader of the Government agrees with me in principle that that was at least inept, if he would not go as far as I would to say that it was an affront to Parliament. I would ask him therefore if he would carry this message to Treasury Board, arising out of a publication of the Treasury Board headed "Federal Spending Plans," in which, of course, we are all interested. It then has a headline "Estimates Show Restraint"—about which there is some doubt—and then a headline, "Comptroller General Appointed." This was published something like a month ago. The message I would ask the leader to convey, with respect, to the Treasury Board and the officials is that Treasury Board proposes; Parliament disposes.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, as was pointed out earlier when this matter was under lively and active discussion, the announcement of the appointment of the Comptroller General in rather brief press release form was inaccurate only in the sense that the form of that public relations release suggested that the appointment had, in fact, been made before the position had been approved by both houses of Parliament. May I suggest that the headline on that account in the informative document quoted by Senator Grosart and issued by the President of the Treasury Board may be said to be a form of editorial and literary "licence"—a practice not unknown to the profession of journalism and public relations. While the actions of Parliament certainly cannot and should not be anticipated by government publicists and writers, I think honourable senators will agree it has not been a serious inaccuracy, if, indeed, there has been an inaccuracy.

And may I suggest that the mails are fully operative. If the Deputy Leader of the Opposition wishes to send a letter to the President of the Treasury Board to set forth his personal views on the subject, I am sure he will do so.

Senator Grosart: But I thought it would be much more effective if the Leader of the Government would consider, in his wisdom, carrying the message. I do not like to ask him to carry messages, but this is an important one.

Senator Perrault: Well, I will be very pleased to make available to the President of the Treasury Board the transcript of the proceedings of this chamber.

Senator Smith (Colchester): Honourable senators, I wonder if I might ask the Leader of the Government a supplementary question arising out of that portion of his answer to the Deputy Leader of the Opposition which indicated that a publication of the kind which the deputy leader had in his hand and referred to was one which could reasonably be expected to indulge in literary licence. Does he recall that on a previous occasion when I asked him about that very document, he then told me that it was to replace a former publication of the Treasury Board, which was entitled something like "Where does your dollar go?" which he said was relied upon by a great many people in Canada as an accurate statement of all the facts therein set out?

Senator Perrault: Well, honourable senators, there is an earnest endeavour, as I have pointed out in the past, to inform the Canadian people, regardless of party, of government efforts in the area of restraint by this government. If this one headline appears to be technically incomplete, I am sure that the honourable senator would not cite that as a reason that the entire publication should be withdrawn. Indeed, it may be that within the story portion of the article referred to by the distinguished deputy leader there is clarification of the headline. I do not want to make any judgments on this matter at the present time, because I do not have a copy of the publication before me.

Senator Smith (Colchester): I am afraid I shall have to ask the honourable leader a further question. Does he realize that my question related to what he said with reference to this document being one which might be expected to contain matters of literary licence, and whether he was prepared to compare that with his answer to me formerly that it replaced a document relied upon by many people in Canada as an accurate statement of all things contained therein?

Senator Perrault: I do not accept the viewpoint that, in essence, that story is inaccurate. It, perhaps, may be a short form of describing the policy action of the government, an action which Parliament had under active consideration for some considerable period of time. I know that the honourable senator is aware that often there is a substantial difference between an official policy statement made by a minister of the Crown and the short press release which is issued as a follow-up. Surely, in the vast range of his experience the honourable senator can recall many examples of the fact that the short press release form of policy announcements often lacks in certain details.

Senator Smith (Colchester): I should like to say that the honourable gentleman has still not dealt with my question, which was related to his remarks and his description of the document as one which could be expected to carry literary licence or to indulge in literary licence. Is he prepared to relate his description of that document now to his former description of it as one which replaced this highly reliable publication, relied upon by Canadians generally as accurate statements of what was contained therein?

In other words, I am suggesting to the honourable gentleman that his answer today, that this document might be expected to contain matters of literary licence, is completely inconsistent with his answer to me before, which was intended to convey the idea that this document was equally as accurate as the one it replaced.

Senator Perrault: The document from which the deputy leader quoted is replete with unbounded accuracy. One headline has been cited because of an alleged technical inaccuracy. The headline was shortened, I suggest, because of space requirements. If the honourable senator no longer has a copy of this document, I shall obtain one and make it available to him.

Senator Smith (Colchester): I have a copy.

Senator Perrault: Because we are earnestly desirous on this side that he be well informed.

Senator Smith (Colchester): I do have a copy of the document. I also have a copy of the honourable gentleman's answer, and I know that that answer is completely inconsistent with his description of it today as one which contains literary licence. There is no use in his saying anything else, because it is inconsistent with his former answer.

Senator Grosart: In view of the fact that the Leader of the Government tends to make light of this specific statement, which in three words in big headlines is, "Comptroller General Appointed," I will say to him that I will refrain from going so far as to say that that statement is a lie, looking at Madam Speaker and having in mind what happened in the other place the other day.

NATIONAL REVENUE

EMPLOYMENT TAX CREDIT PROGRAM—QUESTION

Senator Marshall: Honourable senators, I should like to direct a question to the Minister of National Revenue, having to do with the employment tax credit program which was announced to start on March 8. While I realize that the responsibility is directly with the Minister of Employment and Immigration, I am sure the Minister of National Revenue will bear some responsibility in this program.

In view of the fact that concern has been expressed that many small businesses in isolated and remote areas are still not aware of the program, could the minister advise us what progress has been made and, by reporting to the Senate within the next few days, give us a breakdown, by province or by region, of the number of applications that have come in and the number that have been approved?

Senator Guay: Honourable senators, I will certainly be pleased to do the best I can and give you an answer as soon as possible.

● (1420)

RECIPROCAL AGREEMENTS BETWEEN CANADA AND THE UNITED STATES RE TAX EXEMPTIONS ON DONATIONS TO CHARITABLE INSTITUTIONS—SUPPLEMENTARY QUESTION ANSWERED

Senator Guay: Honourable senators, with leave, I should like to provide an answer to Senator Grosart's supplementary question on May 16 concerning the Canada-U.S. Tax Convention. The question was:

If U.S. taxpayer A, personal or corporate, donates to a registered charity in Canada, or vice versa—if Canadian taxpayer A donates to a charitable organization in the United States—are there reciprocal agreements or arrangements by which such donations are deductible by the taxpayer in his own country in respect of income earned in the United States and/or Canada and/or elsewhere?

In reply, there are no reciprocal agreements whereby a taxpayer in the United States or in Canada, who is not employed in or carrying on business in the other country, may deduct gifts made to a charity in the other country. However, under both the Income Tax Act and the Internal Revenue Code of the United States, there is provision for the deduction, within limits, of gifts to a charity of the taxing country by a non-resident person employed in or carrying on business in that country.

Furthermore, there is a provision in the Income Tax Act that permits an individual to deduct gifts to a charity in the United States, again within limits, if he were resident in Canada, he commuted to his place of employment or place of business in the United States, his chief source of income for the year was that employment or business, and the gift is one that would be allowed as a deduction under the United States Internal Revenue Code, were it applicable. There is no similar provision in the United States Internal Revenue Code.

I will immediately send a copy of my reply to Senator Grosart.

[Translation]

NATIONAL FINANCE

PROVINCIAL SALES TAX—QUESTIONS

Senator Asselin: Honourable senators, I have a question for the government leader. In view of the fact that the Minister of Finance's proposal concerning the sales tax has not been accepted either by the Quebec government or by any of the political parties represented in the Quebec National Assembly and that the great majority of the people in Quebec seem to be against this rebate formula which would bypass the Quebec government by repaying $85 directly to the taxpayers; in view also of the stubbornness that the Prime Minister seemed to show yesterday in the house when he said that the formula was here to stay and that the bill would have to be passed as such; and since the Leader of the Government has been looking for a very long time for a new mission for the Senate, does he not think that the Senate should not keep quiet on such a serious issue which, in my opinion, in the long run will have a serious impact on national unity? Could the government leader not consider setting up a Senate committee which would try to bring both governments together and work out an acceptable solution for both parties to the satisfaction of both of them? Does the government leader not agree that at the present time, because of this crisis, the Senate might have an important role to play?

[English]

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, the Senate historically has had an important role to play in bringing to this national forum, the hopes, aspirations, problems and concerns of the regions of Canada. Certainly, the suggestion advanced by Senator Asselin should not be rejected out of hand.

However, it should be said that never in the history of this nation has any Prime Minister worked more assiduously to try to strengthen the unity of this nation than has the Right Honourable Pierre Elliott Trudeau—

Senator Grosart: That is not the question.

Senator Perrault: —and there have been earnest efforts made not only to meet and negotiate with the Government of Quebec and the premier of that province but as well with the other Canadian premiers and governments. If anyone can be accused of failing to consult, it has not been the Government of Canada. I have in mind a well-known government which can, however, be accused of failing to negotiate in good faith, at times, with regard to the important range of problems affecting this nation. Just a few weeks ago we had a meeting of first ministers for the purpose of discussing, perhaps for the first time in such depth, the problems which afflict this nation. This meeting, held because of a federal initiative, represented an effort on the part of both federal and provincial governments to find solutions to common problems. The recent retail sales tax policy announced by the Minister of Finance was the result of the virtually unanimous support for the idea as a stimulus to the economy. Admittedly, negotiations with the Province of Quebec have been difficult. That government has not been forthcoming with a supportive attitude towards this and certain other federal initiatives. Despite what could be described as a rebuff, on the part of the Government of Quebec, however, the federal government is determined that Canadians from coast to coast, regardless of the provincial governments in power, insofar as it is possible shall enjoy tax benefits on an equal basis. Because it was not possible to conclude with Quebec the kind of agreement which was achieved with the other Canadian provinces, then the government sought out the best possible alternative.

It is difficult to find an alternative whose effect is totally equivalent to the incidence of the retail sales tax reduction in effect in other parts of Canada. It must be said that there has never been an unwillingness on the part of the Government of Canada to sit down and negotiate at any time with the Minister of Finance of Quebec, or the premier of that province, or with any other province. At times there has been difficulty on the other side, however.

[Translation]

Senator Asselin: Honourable senators, I have a supplementary for the government leader.

Obviously, what the government leader has just delivered is a political message. However, can everyone be wrong at the same time in Quebec? I am asking this of the government leader. The Quebec National Assembly, the government, the opposition parties, the new Quebec Liberal leader, Mr. Claude Ryan, are all saying to the federal government that the suggested formula is not the right one for the people in Quebec and that it must be changed. Are all those people wrong at the same time, and only Mr. Trudeau and Mr. Chrétien right?

[English]

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, as successive Canadian governments have discovered, the priorities of a federal government, faced with problems of national unity or the question of implementing common financial, economic and taxation policies, are often somewhat different from the priorities of provincial governments, and this is perhaps inevitable. Canada, from its very inception, has been an adventure in conciliation, compromise, and the working out of differences which exist between and among the provinces and the federal government. Of course, one does not expect provincial parties at all times to agree with any federal government; indeed, that was the experience of the Conservative Party when it last had the responsibility of governing Canada. Just because there is a degree of provincial opposition in one province, or perhaps unanimous opposition, to the nuances of a federal government policy, it does not necessarily mean that that federal policy should be condemned.

[Translation]

Senator Asselin: Honourable senators, I would like to ask another supplementary.

Considering that the role of the Senate, as the government leader has repeated often, is to protect minorities from inequities, and considering also that this federal formula will penalize approximately one million Quebecers who do not file any income tax and are classified among the poorest of the population—

Senator Lamontagne: Does—

Senator Asselin: Does the honourable senator wish to raise a question of privilege?

Would it not be the right time for the Senate to intervene and tell the federal government it should not penalize these thousands of people who do not pay any income tax and who will not receive the $85 payment from the government for the 1977 fiscal year?

● (1430)

[English]

Senator Perrault: I appreciate the concern that the honourable senator has about this matter. It is entirely appropriate that he take this line of questioning. I gave a commitment yesterday that a statement, on behalf of the Minister of Finance, concerning this important matter, would be made in the Senate in the next few days.

Secondly, I think that all honourable senators believe that the Senate has an important role to play in the discussion and interpretation of regional aspirations. I hope that in the progressive development of this chamber, we will accord even greater importance to regional studies.

As I have said before—and other senators have spoken in the same direction—I feel that the Senate of Canada, which was brought into being originally as a protector of minority rights and regional concerns, should give new meaning to its mandate by establishing a committee which will go into all the regions of Canada, analyze the problems which exist there and report to the Canadian people and to Parliament its findings. I think that would be a very useful activity for the Senate.

I can think of the importance of going into the Atlantic provinces and meeting there and reporting on their regional concerns; and doing the same in the provinces of Quebec and Ontario, the prairies, the north country, and western Canada. I agree with that. However, if the honourable senator is suggesting that we should form a special committee of the Senate to analyze the recent joint federal-provincial action with respect to sales tax reductions, then I have to say that is a proposal which, at this time, I am not prepared to support.

Senator Lamontagne: May I ask the Leader of the Government whether it is true that what has to be done at the moment to re-establish the balance in that respect is that the Quebec Government has to increase its income tax, as have the other provincial governments, by the amount that the federal income tax has been reduced?

Senator Perrault: This is an important comment made by the honourable senator. Now that the federal government has indicated its goodwill and its desire to make certain that the people of Quebec will benefit together with other provinces, there is now unlimited opportunity for the Government of Quebec to undertake tax initiatives within its jurisdiction to make sure that there is equitable treatment of all of its taxpayers.

Senator Roblin: Honourable senators, I ask the Leader of the Government whether he is aware of the statement issued by the four western premiers on this very point respecting the manner, policy, and measures by which the federal government introduced the sales tax proposition.

Senator Perrault: I am equally aware of the fact that full negotiations were held with the ministers of finance of the four western provinces, and they approved the proposal before it was announced by the Honourable Minister of Finance. If they have engaged in a process of agonizing reappraisal, the federal government cannot be faulted for that.

Senator Roblin: I should like to ask the Leader of the Government if he is aware of what they actually did say—not his interpretation of what they said, but what they actually did say on April 13, 1978 after the sales tax measure was proposed. One paragraph in the statement reads as follows:

The Premiers stressed that they were not debating the principle of the sales tax cut as a fiscal measure, but they were sharply critical of the unilateral and intrusive way in which it had been put forward.

And is the leader aware that they went on to detail their specific concerns?

1. The severe distortion of provincial fiscal and economic priorities caused by the unilateral exercise of federal budgetary policy. They were particularly concerned that the federal plan was put forward so late in some provinces' budgetary planning cycles, and after others had brought down their budgets.

2. The dangerous and unacceptable implications the measure may have for other possible federal fiscal initiatives and intrusions into areas of provincial taxation, budgetary responsibility, and constitutional jurisdiction.

3. The fact that provinces did not participate in the decision concerning the federal compensation formula which treats Canadian taxpayers differently depending on the region in which they live.

4. A total reversal of the policy toward greater flexibility in the new cost-sharing arrangements between the federal government and the provinces achieved in 1976 and 1977.

I ask the Leader of the Government if he is able to reconcile this view of what has happened with respect to these financial arrangements with the impression he seeks to give us, that this government has not made any faux pas, or had any false measures, any false initiatives, put forward that would improve the unity of the country. I suggest to him that that is not the case.

Senator Perrault: I suggest that the Honourable Senator Roblin has engaged in an exercise of selective quotation. The significant statement of the Treasurer of the Province of Ontario, Darcy McKeough, of course, was omitted from the list of quotations. As I recall, the Honourable D'Arcy McKeough used words to the effect that this was a remarkable example of federal-provincial co-operation, and, in effect, said that this was the first time in the history of Canada that this kind of joint policy initiative had been undertaken. I noticed that that McKeough quotation was not in the list cited by Senator Roblin.

I noticed as well that other favourable quotations from certain western spokesmen, made immediately after the announcement of the retail sales tax reduction policy, were selectively omitted.

Finally, I should like to ask Senator Roblin for the source of his information. What is the document from which he quoted, when was it issued, and who wrote it? I ask that because many statements critical of this policy were made two or three days before it was presumed there was going to be a federal election called. I would not suggest that some of these statements may have been politically motivated, but I think there is a very real chance that they were.

Senator Grosart: Oh, come on!

[Senator Roblin.]

Senator Roblin: I am delighted to answer my honourable friend's questions in respect of this document. In the first place, my quotations were not selective, because I made no reference to the province of Ontario. I said specifically that I was talking about what the four western premiers had to say, which is something about which I might be presumed to be informed, considering the regional character of some of the responsibilities we have in this house.

Who made the statement? It was issued by the four premiers themselves. I did not make it up. It is an official communiqué.

When was it made? It was made on April 13, in Yorkton, Saskatchewan, where the western premiers had their meeting.

If my honourable friend wants a copy of this document—which I think he will find rather instructive because it deals with a wide variety of measures concerning federal-provincial relations, not merely finance—I shall be only too happy to see that he gets one.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, the exercise being engaged in by certain provincial ministers of finance is a fascinating one. You will recall the occasion when the Minister of Finance for the Province of Manitoba, with a smiling Premier of Manitoba beaming his approval, brought to the Manitoba Legislature his budget announcement, and said that this measure was going to be a great boon to Manitoba. Indeed, he held up his budget, so that this important measure could be announced to the citizens of Manitoba. I can only suggest that something must have happened on the way back from the legislature—

Senator Grosart: Of course. Why not?

• (1440)

Senator Perrault: —because the line is somewhat different now. Certain premiers, initially so enthusiastic about the proposal, are now quoted in negative terms.

Senator Asselin: And Claude Ryan of Quebec.

Senator Perrault: Certain spokesmen, once so enthusiastic about these retail sales tax reductions, reductions which will bring such benefits to their people, have decided that for reasons best known to themselves they were going to level criticisms against the federal government. The fact is that there was full consultation with all the provincial ministers of finance. This is a matter of record. To suggest that federal action was arbitrary is not fair play.

Senator Roblin: Honourable senators, for the leader to say that the four premiers of western Canada can be accused of an act which he describes as not fair play seems to me to be making a statement which requires more substantiation than he has been able to give it this afternoon.

Senator Grosart: It is for national unity.

Senator Roblin: I won't have my honourable friend distorting their words any more than I will have him distorting mine. They said:

The Premiers stressed that they were not debating the principle of the sales tax cut as a fiscal measure—

That is why my acquaintance, the Minister of Finance for Manitoba, was able to speak in the way he did. To continue their words, they said:

—but they were sharply critical of the unilateral and intrusive way in which it had been put forward.

That is not what I said; that is what they said.

These four men occupying responsible positions in the political life of western Canada have a right to express their opinion, and when they express it they have a right to have equal credence given to what they say as is given to the arguments on the other side.

Senator Perrault: The provincial premiers of western Canada have a right to issue statements at any time they wish. I simply put on record the fact that there was full consultation with these ministers of finance. I can provide the dates on which these conversations were held. If Senator Roblin describes that process as “unilateral,” his terminology is beyond my realm of understanding.

Honourable senators, during the past four years there has been a greater range of meetings between the representatives of the provincial and federal governments than in the history of Canada. These were initiated by this government and the present Prime Minister. To suggest that this process constitutes “riding roughshod” over provincial rights is a totally inaccurate and mischievous allegation.

Senator Grosart: It is absolutely true.

Senator Roblin: I do not think it is an inaccurate or mischievous allegation. This is not my opinion; I was not there. I can only relate what was said. Again I quote:

They noted that the federal government had not used the opportunity afforded by the February Conference of First Ministers to raise its proposal but instead gave provinces only days to consider the plan. Insistence on budget confidentiality by the federal minister made normal interprovincial consultations difficult if not impossible.

So I suggest there is some solid ground for the expression of opinion which these first ministers made in the statement to which I referred.

Senator Walker: I think Senator Roblin made a very valid point. However, I cannot understand how the Leader of the Government can stand there and talk in such a bombastic manner about all the wonderful things the Government of Canada is doing. He suggested to the former Postmaster General that the Prime Minister of Canada is doing a great deal, and has done more than anyone else, to keep Canada together in one Confederation.

Does he not realize, as I think everybody else realizes—including the new boy over there, Senator Firth—that when this Prime Minister came into office there was no talk of separatism; that talk of separatism has arisen only in the past ten years? It started under the present Prime Minister and has gone on at such a pace that we have reached a dangerous impasse today. How can the Leader of the Government talk in this manner when we have almost reached a state of disaster under this Prime Minister?

The Prime Minister, more than anyone else, has engendered antagonism in the province of Quebec against himself and his government. He has incurred the hatred of Premier Lévesque, who was once a delightful person but who has since learned to hate the Prime Minister and the federal government.

To go one step further, what has this Prime Minister done, and where are the figures to bring light to the gloom in which we all are at the present time? What about the economy? It has never been lower than it is at the present time. What about unemployment? It has never been greater than it is at the present time. What about inflation? It has never been higher than it is at the present time.

I think the Leader of the Government is a charming person—

Some Hon. Senators: Hear, hear.

Senator Walker: —but when he gets primed up the way he is today, and speaks as though he is up in the foothills of the Rockies, it is an amazing thing. I wish he would come down to earth and answer those four questions.

Senator Perrault: First of all, honourable senators, at no time did I make the statement that any one person in this nation had done more for national unity than another. However, I did state that in the past four years a record number of initiatives had been taken with respect to meeting regularly with the provincial premiers and provincial first ministers for the discussion of our problems as a nation. I think this is a useful and desirable process.

Senator Roblin quoted from a statement issued by the premiers of the western provinces that suggested there was a unilateral quality to the budget announcements made by the Honourable Jean Chrétien. I find it difficult to understand how an action can be unilateral when there were three full weeks of consultation between the provincial premiers and the federal government on this particular matter.

Furthermore, I would ask Senator Roblin, who at one time was a provincial treasurer, whether he ever agreed to discuss in February budget proposals that he intended to deliver in April. Budget secrecy is an essential priority for those entrusted with the responsibility of budget preparation. Budgetary procedure is cloaked invariably in a great deal of secrecy and confidentiality. This is an utter necessity. Are we to assume that there should have been a six- or eight-week period of consultation with the possibility of security leaks? I should like to ask the honourable senator whether he does not believe that a three-week consultation on a matter of this kind is quite ample and satisfactory.

I have a great deal of respect for Senator Walker, but when he states that separatism began in 1968, I must disagree with him. I recall an incident in 1968 when the Prime Minister was pelted with debris during a St. Jean Baptiste Day observance. He bravely stood up to the mob on that occasion to stand four-square for federalism. Does that incident suggest that perhaps separatism existed before 1968? I ask myself what kind of condition this nation would be in today had Mr. Trudeau not been Prime Minister since 1968.

• (1450)

Senator Smith (Colchester): A lot better.

Senator Walker: Honourable senators—

Senator Frith: Honourable senators, just to add a question—

Senator Walker: Excuse me—

Senator Frith: New boys have some rights here, too, have they not, Madam Speaker?

Senator Walker: I am answering a question.

An Hon. Senator: Order!

Senator Walker: The mob that day—

Senator Frith: Madam Speaker, do I not have the right to speak before Senator Walker does?

Senator Walker: Go ahead.

Senator Frith: To add to the rhetorical questions, on behalf of the new boys of the Senate to the old boys, and to add—

Senator Walker: That is very clever.

Senator Frith: Just to go back a little further than 1968, when apparently there was no separatism—

An Hon. Senator: Question.

Senator Frith: I wonder if the leader could tell us where the honourable senator who posed the question was in 1961, 1962, 1963 and 1964 when there were bombs in mailboxes, and when the events leading to our present situation were much more violent than they are now. I have known the honourable senator a long time. In all probability, he was placidly paddling his canoe down the Rideau Canal on his way to work.

Senator Walker: One good turn deserves another.

Senator Roblin: Honourable senators, I hesitate to prolong this discussion. It has probably reached its natural end. However, I was asked a question, and I would like to answer it.

When I was the Treasurer of Manitoba, I never had the opportunity of telling the federal government what it was going to do. That, in effect, is what happened in this particular case. The provinces were advised as to what the measure was going to be.

But completely apart from that, and hopefully on a constructive note, it seems to me that we simply have to evolve a more satisfactory system of collaboration between the provinces and the federal government on fiscal matters.

Taken together, the provinces now spend more money than the federal government. Their influence on the economy grows as each month goes by in comparison with the influence of the federal government. The need for a more harmonious and effective system of fiscal co-operation is obviously very great and most important. If this debate does nothing else but underline the importance of taking some progressive step in that direction, I, for one, would be satisfied.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, I agree most wholeheartedly with the view expressed by Senator Roblin that there must be an ever greater degree of consultation between the provincial and federal governments. There is no question at all about that. It is absolutely essential to the future of this nation that that be the case.

As has been pointed out, municipalities and provinces now spend more money, and raise more money, than the federal government. I suggest that the same view concerning consultation should extend to relations between provincial and municipal governments. Many municipalities are rarely consulted by provincial treasurers in advance of provincial budgets being brought down.

Senator Lamontagne: I am wondering whether the government leader remembers—and, if not, perhaps Senator Roblin remembers—when fiscal arrangements between the federal government and the provinces were amended unilaterally by telegram in 1958.

Senator Perrault: What Senator Lamontagne is pointing out, of course, is that we have come an immense distance in a relatively short period of time. The government is moving in precisely the direction of greater consultation, and the country will benefit as a result.

Senator Roblin: Since the question was asked, I shall answer it. I remember the telegram, and I approve no more of it today than I did then.

Senator Smith (Colchester): Just to throw a calming influence on the attitude of the Leader of the Government, may I ask him if he does not agree that this whole problem about provincial sales taxes and direct payments to persons arose out of an ill-considered and hurried attempt to produce a budget before an election was to be called—an election which was not called because the person who had the prerogative to call it got scared?

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, that kind of question can be answered on the hustings at such time as an election is called.

Senator Walker: My friend has been on the hustings all afternoon.

Senator Smith (Colchester): I am wondering why you are not prepared to answer it now. Are you afraid to answer it now?

Senator Perrault: I hope, Senator Smith, that you are not criticizing the treatment the taxpayers of Nova Scotia are receiving under this program, because it is going to be of immense benefit to them. Indeed, the federal government is picking up 100 per cent of the cost of the program as far as the province of Nova Scotia is concerned.

Senator Smith (Colchester): Another straw man.

Senator Perrault: I hope the honourable senator is not suggesting that he wants it withdrawn.

Senator Smith (Colchester): I have to say that the Leader of the Government is the greatest inventor of straw men I have ever encountered during my years in political life.

Senator McIlraith: Order!

Senator Smith (Colchester): The only problem is that while he sets them up, he is not very adept at knocking them down. He will have a long, long way to go before he finds any inference in anything I have said at any time which would justify his making that remark.

Senator McIlraith: Order, order!

Senator Smith (Colchester): I still say that he is afraid to answer my question. He does not want to say something which is not true, and he does not want to admit the truth.

FOREIGN AFFAIRS

INTERVENTION BY FOREIGN NATIONS IN ZAIRE AND ERITREA— QUESTION ANSWERED

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, Senator McDonald asked yesterday whether the government has any knowledge of troops or foreign advisers operating in Eritrea, and whether it has made any representations through the United Nations or any other world organization concerning foreign intervention.

On the basis of present information, the Canadian government has no evidence of any foreign combat involvement in the current hostilities in the Ethiopian province of Eritrea. This does not rule out, however, the presence of a Soviet or Cuban advisory capability.

Honourable senators will, of course, recall that Soviet and Cuban troops and advisers are in Ethiopia, at the request of that government, purportedly to assist Ethiopia in the protection of its territorial integrity. The question of Eritrea has not come before any international fora, including the United Nations, since Eritrean liberation movements became active in the 1960s. Canada has, therefore, not been called upon to express an opinion on the matter.

In replying to Senator McDonald's question concerning Zaire, I can say that according to the information obtained by our embassies in Kinshasa, Brussels and Washington, the only military advisers in Zaire are from France and Belgium. Morocco has a small military mission in the country as a result of the last Shaba war. The presence of Cubans in Zaire has not been established.

The Canadian government has not made representations in the United Nations or any other international forum regarding the war. However, we are following the evolution of the situation very closely.

THE SENATE

PROPOSALS FOR REFORM—QUESTION ANSWERED

Senator Perrault: On May 10 last, Senator Forsey asked whether the government had been made aware of the proposals for Senate reform adopted unanimously, he understood, a few days prior to that date by the Legislature of Nova Scotia. To answer his question, no, nothing official has been received.

Senator Smith (Colchester), by way of supplementary question, asked whether or not the resolution referred to by Senator Forsey "has been officially, or otherwise, forwarded to the notice of the Government of Canada or to any minister thereof." As before, the answer is no.

CURRENCY AND EXCHANGE ACT

BILL TO AMEND—SECOND READING

The Senate resumed from Thursday, May 11, the debate on the motion of Senator Marchand for the second reading of Bill C-39, to amend the Currency and Exchange Act.

Hon. Allister Grosart: Honourable senators, when Senator Marchand introduced this bill as its sponsor in the Senate, he said that he had spent some time the night before trying to see if he could find any "emotion" in the bill, or any reason why he could speak emotionally on it, but he said he had reached the contrary conclusion. I understand why he had done so, because he was looking at this bill from the point of view of the government.

• (1500)

On the other hand, there are those who have looked at the implications and effects of this bill and have found that it has engendered a good deal of emotion. I refer particularly to those Canadians who are concerned when there is contained in the provisions of a bill a clear erosion of the traditional powers and prerogatives of Parliament, especially when the eroder is the cabinet. There are those Canadians who are concerned about this bill, just as they are about any potential or actual—and I think this is an important point—debasement of the currency of the realm. Then there are those Canadians who are concerned about the serious problems of the mining industry, and who feel that the approach of the government in this bill and the attitude it has taken are, if not useless, then certainly confused. Yet again, there are those Canadians, particularly members of Parliament, who are always concerned when there is confused thinking in the presentation of legislation to Parliament, such as we have in this case.

I should say at once that I fully support the potential objectives of this bill because, if implemented as those who are most concerned with the bill would wish, it would create jobs in the mint and in those enterprises which are suppliers to the mint. Also, if the government would change some of its attitudes on the bill, it could immediately create important and much needed jobs in the mining industry.

One objective of the bill is to create opportunities for the export of an important new Canadian product, and in the present situation, particularly in regard to our trade relations with the United States—which country would be the major market—this would certainly be a useful objective. The provisions of the bill could, and will, if properly administered, add substantially to federal government revenues, and it will introduce an entirely new Canadian product to international markets.

The objection that I take, and that others have taken, is to the method by which this is sought to be achieved. There seems to be utter confusion in the thinking behind this bill and in its drafting, and such confusion has not been uncommon in the bills that have come before us, particularly in the "rush, rush" situation with which we have been faced in recent weeks.

I could perhaps illustrate the contrasting views on this by reading a few sentences from correspondence sent to the Leader of the Opposition, Senator Flynn.

The Mining Association of Canada, for example, has said that about a year ago they began discussions with the Government of Canada, particularly proposing that the government become active in the issue of bullion coin, and they made it clear that one of the effects of that would almost certainly be a two-fold increase in the domestic consumption of Canadian gold. That is certainly an important objective.

In its letter to the Leader of the Opposition, dated April 24, The Mining Association of Canada said:

—we believe it—

That is, the government.

—is prepared to proceed with a gold bullion coin programme—

And for that reason they strongly support this bill.

They said it would create "a significant new demand for gold from Canadian mines", and indicated how that demand would come about. Unfortunately, statements have been made by the minister, by the parliamentary secretary who sponsored this bill in the other place, and by others, that the government is not ready to go ahead with the bullion program, and I shall speak in more detail to that point later.

The other letter is from Brian F. Hubka, of Blairmore, Alberta, who is, apparently, a coin collector and, perhaps, a dealer. He says:

I note from today's newspaper that the Government has introduced in the House of Commons a bill which would give the cabinet power over the production of gold coins.

I am opposed to such a measure because I feel that such power would be misused just in order to 'rip-off' coin collectors.

He concludes by saying:

In short, I would hate to see our country 'debase' our currency through similar 'two-bit' schemes to make money out of gold. The episode of the Olympic coinage was bad enough.

I think that the Government's chief concern should be to see that our dollar retains some value.

I am not saying that I agree entirely with either of those statements, but I present them to the Senate as indicating that this is a bill which has caused some differences of opinion.

The bill, as Senator Marchand pointed out, transfers from Parliament the power to decide the content of our currency.

[Senator Grosart.]

Traditionally, it has been the prerogative of Parliament alone to make such decisions. The government has given no reason other than that it would be convenient, that it would be easier for the mint to go ahead and plan if they could just go to the cabinet, instead of having to go, as they do now, to Parliament, to obtain authority to mint coins, and particularly to determine the gold content, which is the basis of the real value of our currency.

I should mention that the bill has been amended, and it is now a much better bill than it was when first introduced in the House of Commons. I think it fair to say that it was through the efforts of the official opposition that certain amendments were made which greatly improved the bill. So, naturally, I congratulate the government on having accepted the amendments they did, without too much difficulty, thus pointing up the lack of consideration that must have gone into the preparation of the original bill.

The explanatory note to the key clause of the bill, clause 1, as it was presented on first reading, outlined its purpose. It stated:

This amendment would allow the Governor in Council to authorize the issue of gold coins of different denominations and would remove the requirement that the value of the gold in the coins be equal to the amount that appears as the denomination of the coin. It would also authorize the Governor in Council to specify the maximum number of gold coins to be struck in a year.

The existing legislation requires—and I shall quote only a short part of Section 4 of the act—that:

—the standard weight so prescribed for a coin shall be such that the value of the gold contained therein is equal to the amount that appears on the coin as the denomination thereof.

Perhaps I should explain that there are all kinds of medals minted, but when the word "coin" is used it is taken to mean what we would normally call a coin, but specifically one that has a face value.

● (1510)

Honourable senators will be aware of the long history of the battles that parliaments, in the United Kingdom and elsewhere, have sustained to prevent the debasement of the currency by the executive. It is clear here that the intent of this bill is to allow the cabinet, through the Governor in Council, to debase the currency.

Because this is a most complicated business, I am not about to say that there should not be an authority to debase currency. It may be necessary. In fact, we have already debased our currency. A perfect example of that is the Olympic coins, in which case we went so far as to mint two coins, each with a face value of $20, but the gold content of one being only half that of the other. That is the mess to which the coin collector-dealer referred and which the Government of Canada actually permitted. I cannot think of a better example of this creeping encroachment on the power of Parliament than what happened in the subsequent issue.

Parliamentary approval was required for the issue of the Olympic coin, but for the next issue—I am referring specifically to the Silver Jubilee coin—the authority was obtained by a $1 vote in the estimates. That is always the first step in the erosion of parliamentary power, but we are now at the next step, where we are asked to approve the complete transfer from Parliament to the executive of that power to control the currency.

Naturally, this raises serious questions about this bill. They are less serious than they would have been in the bill as originally presented, because amendments have been made. I commend the government for those amendments, because at least they require reporting to Parliament on the activities of the mint; and there is also the requirement that any order in council issued under the authority of the provisions of this bill shall be presented to Parliament. This method of giving some degree of parliamentary control is being used increasingly, and I am glad to see that it is. So I commend the government for at least going that far.

The complete transfer from Parliament to the executive of the power to debase the currency certainly gives me cause for some concern. Of course, we should be getting used to this by now, but this was just one of those “rush, rush,” half-baked bills. Even the parliamentary secretary admitted that they picked this out of the package—half the package being a bill concerning the Royal Canadian Mint and our currency act. In the case of this particular bill it was hoped that it would be rushed through in this form, as opposed to the total package, which Parliament should certainly have looked at but which would have taken too long to get through. It is just another example of the utter confusion and contempt of Parliament that was created by the situation we have just experienced.

I am fully aware of the problems it created for the Leader of the Government in the Senate. I do not blame him—not for a minute. He acted in good faith—I am sure of that; I know he did—when he told us that it was essential that we get these bills through. He was deceived, as were many others, including the Canadian public. Well, that is past history, but we are going to have to live with it with bills like this.

The distinction between the issuance of numismatic coins and bullion coins is the essence of the problem here. The original intent—and this is part of the half-baked approach of this bill—was merely to authorize the government to issue a new series of numismatic coins. Those are coins not used in the exchange processes of business but coins which are put away by collectors. Such coins have a value dependent not on the stated face value but on their rareness and other aspects, as determined by dealers.

The Mining Association of Canada pointed out that the minting of a few more of these numismatic coins would help, but that it would not be of any significant help to the mining industry. The association went back and said, “Look, we were asking you for bullion coins a year ago. We thought we had it all set.” I read the letter where they said, “Well, we understand you are going ahead.”

The government spokesmen said, “Oh, no, we have not reached that stage”. First of all, they said, “No, we have not even considered that.” Then the Mining Association said, “Well, don’t worry too much about it, because you have the authority in the bill.” The government clearly did not know that they had the authority in the bill to go that far, because all they were talking about was this issue of numismatic coins. So they finally said, “We will look at it. We will consider it.”

Well, the importance of issuing bullion coins—that is, coins which will have an exchange value determined by their face value as well as by Canada’s standing throughout the world—is that there is now a marvellous opportunity for Canada to move into this area. That is so because certain leading banks are refusing to handle the Krugerrand. The only importantly traded bullion coin is the South African Krugerrand. There is a billion dollar market, and Canada’s share of it at the moment is a mere $31 million. The reason this delay by the government will be a disadvantage to us, will cost Canada money, is that the leading New York banks, the leading stockbrokers like Merrill Lynch, have refused to handle the Krugerrand. So, as has been pointed out, the market is wide open. However, the government has said, “Well, we will look at it, and perhaps in a year or so we will get into it.” But the opportunity may well have passed by then, because the United States is thinking of getting into this business, as are other countries. Here is this glorious opportunity for Canada to move fast, and all the government says is, “Well, we will consider it.”

I am quite sure that if the whole matter had been considered, as it should have been, and if the whole package had been put before Parliament long ago, the authority would long since have been given for the mint to proceed to mint bullion coins. As I say, honourable senators, this is another example of the kind of confusion we have been faced with over and over again in the last few weeks.

● (1520)

I hope that this bill will be referred to committee, because I believe it important to impress on the minister and the officials that it is not good enough to say, “Well, one of these days we will get on with the bullion coin.” The projected sale—and there has been a projection of sales—would have the effect of doubling the amount of Canadian gold that is taken into production.

Not many years ago we had in Canada perhaps more than 100 gold mines. That number has been reduced to very few today. Certainly, the evidence indicates that if the government proceeded quickly with this bullion issue it would open up gold mines. Canada is the third largest gold producing nation in the world, and so it is important to our economy.

I would urge, therefore, that the bill be referred to committee, and that the appropriate minister or officials be called to give us the assurance that the government is now prepared to take a different attitude toward the implementation of the bullion aspects of this bill, and to provide a more immediate response than that indicated in the statement made by the parliamentary secretary on third reading in the House of Commons.

Motion agreed to and bill read second time.

REFERRED TO COMMITTEE

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this bill be read the third time?

Senator Langlois moved that the bill be referred to the Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce.

Motion agreed to.

The Senate adjourned until Tuesday, May 23, 1978, at 8 p.m.

---

THE SENATE

Tuesday, May 23, 1978

The Senate met at 8 p.m., the Speaker in the Chair.
Prayers.

THE HONOURABLE BRYCE MACKASEY

NEWSPAPER REPORT—QUESTION OF PRIVILEGE

Senator Marchand: Honourable senators, in last Saturday's issue of La Presse I read a statement made by a former colleague of mine and of others in this house, the Honourable Bryce Mackasey, in connection with a question put to him about his future. When asked if he was thinking about joining the Senate, his answer was that he was not ready to retire.

I am aware, of course, of some of the shortcomings of this institution, as there are shortcomings of the House of Commons and many other places. Such a comment disturbs me, coming as it does from a man with whom I sat for many years and who for a period between 1972 and 1974 mentioned to me almost daily that he would like to be appointed to the Senate.

I regret his comment and I hope that he was joking, because if he were not then some day I might take a tougher stand than I am taking tonight.

DOCUMENTS TABLED

Senator Langlois tabled:

Capital Budgets of the Atlantic Pilotage Authority, the Great Lakes Pilotage Authority, Ltd., the Laurentian Pilotage Authority and the Pacific Pilotage Authority for the financial year 1978, pursuant to section 70(2) of the Financial Administration Act, Chapter F-10, R.S.C., 1970, together with copies of Orders in Council P.C. 1978-1604, P.C. 1978-1605, P.C. 1978-1606 and P.C. 1978-1607, respectively, dated May 11, 1978, approving same.

Capital Budget of the Farm Credit Corporation for the fiscal year ending March 31, 1979, pursuant to section 70(2) of the Financial Administration Act, Chapter F-10, R.S.C., 1970, together with copy of Order in Council P.C. 1978-1617, dated May 11, 1978, approving same.

Report of the Canadian Grain Commission for the year ended December 31, 1977, pursuant to section 14 of the Canada Grain Act, Chapter 7, Statutes of Canada, 1970-71-72.

[Translation]

NATIONAL UNITY

CONGRATULATIONS TO TORONTO BASEBALL CLUB—QUESTION

Senator Wagner: Honourable senators, I should like to put a question to the Deputy Leader of the Government.

Would it not be proper for the house to extend to the Blue Jays organization and to Mrs. Wallace our congratulations for the patriotism they have shown in Toronto in recent days?

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, I do not think that it is up to me to decide what is proper for the Senate to do. It is a matter which should be suggested to the Senate in a motion.

[English]

● (2010)

TRANSPORT

REPORT OF NEWFOUNDLAND TRANSPORT COMMISSION— QUESTION

Senator Marshall: Honourable senators, I wish to ask the Acting Leader of the Government a question relating to the announcement by Dr. Sullivan regarding the Newfoundland Transport Commission report which was due to be submitted to the Minister of Transport in the other place on May 19. I wonder if the acting leader could advise the Senate if that commitment has been fulfilled. If he is not aware of the facts, could he find out and inform the Senate as soon as possible?

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, I will inquire about this and inform the Senate as soon as possible as to when this report is going to be made available to all concerned.

[Translation]

NATIONAL FINANCE

PROVINCIAL SALES TAX—QUESTION

Senator Asselin: Honourable senators, I have a question for the deputy government leader. Is he aware that the Quebec Premier and the Prime Minister are to meet soon to discuss a sales tax compromise, and, if so, when are they to meet?

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, if my memory does not fail me, such a meeting was first suggested by the Quebec Premier. It gave rise last week to the answer by the Prime Minister, in the other place, that he was prepared to meet him. I have no information further to that exchange of wishes and acceptance.

[English]

Senator Asselin: Honourable senators, I think the first member of the House of Commons to ask Prime Minister Trudeau to meet Premier Lévesque was Roch La Salle, the member for Joliette. During a question period last week he asked the Prime Minister if he was ready to meet Premier Lévesque to discuss this question of sales tax, and the Prime Minister said yes. It was not the Prime Minister who suggested that he wanted to meet Premier Lévesque at his early convenience.

[Translation]

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, I would once more endeavour to answer in French, and I would hope my honourable friend will understand this time.

All I suggested is that, if my memory does not fail me, such a meeting was first suggested by the Quebec Premier, and last week the Prime Minister, on whose representations I am not aware of, indicated he was prepared to meet Mr. Lévesque. After that I have no further information, nothing has been published and I have heard of nothing more on the matter from the House of Commons.

Senator Denis: When they do that, they help the separatists.

Senator Asselin: Honourable senators, I have a supplementary. During the weekend, the newspapers reported that two senators, namely, Senator Lamontagne and Senator Marchand, wanted to suggest amendments to find a compromise for the sales tax proposal. Is the acting government leader aware of the suggestion that the honourable senators want to make?

Senator Langlois: Like yourself, I have read in the newspapers that certain senators were willing to suggest alternative amendments to the present one. But as concerns the conclusion that they are prepared to suggest amendments, I have no knowledge of this and only those directly involved could reply to your question.

Senator Flynn: Honourable senators, I rise on a question of privilege. I do not know if the reporters understood the words of Senator Denis who said earlier that we were only helping the separatists.

Senator Denis: It is true.

Senator Flynn: I say that it is a lie; it is a lie that has been repeated many times in the last few weeks and I am getting tired of it.

Senator Denis: Me too!

Senator Flynn: I am beginning to get tired of hearing the Liberals continue to pretend that they are the only ones able to protect national unity. This Liberal tactic is completely shameful and I say that Senator Denis should be ashamed to repeat this lie.

Senator Denis: Honourable senators, I am not ashamed because I am the one who accused the Conservatives of acting as if they were separatists.

Senator Flynn: No.

Senator Denis: That is true. I repeat my assertion. You do the same thing in the House of Commons where people purposely get thrown out to attract the separatist vote in the province of Quebec.

Senator Flynn: Is Senator Denis going to treat Mr. Claude Ryan the way he treats us, in order to disagree with the Prime Minister and his Minister of Finance? Try to have a little heart, a sense of ethics and honesty.

Senator Denis: We are the federal government and we deal with federal matters.

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, I do not want to get involved in a debate that is completely out of order. I ask that order be restored in this chamber, and especially that decorum be respected.

Senator Hicks: Hear, hear!

Senator Denis: It is the Conservatives.

Senator Flynn: You started it all.

[English]

NATIONAL REVENUE

EMPLOYMENT TAX CREDIT PROGRAM—QUESTION ANSWERED

Senator Guay: Honourable senators, if I may be permitted to say so, I thought it was only in the other place that they did some yelling in the chamber, but I understand it is coming through clearly on this side of Parliament.

I should like to answer a question the Honourable Senator Marshall asked me last week about employment tax credit. In response to his request, I have obtained the following information from the Canada Employment and Immigration Commission concerning agreements approved and jobs created to date by the employment tax credit program:

PROVINCE	AGREEMENTS	JOBS CREATED
Newfoundland	18	23
Prince Edward Island	18	23
Nova Scotia	33	64
New Brunswick	37	54
Quebec	378	736
Ontario	113	155
Manitoba	17	19
Saskatchewan	23	25
Alberta	12	81
British Columbia	40	43
	689	1,223

My department does not become directly involved in this program until such time as the employers file their income tax returns with claims for this credit. I would anticipate very few claims of this type before 1979. I will send the honourable senator a copy of this answer.

● (2020)

THE SENATE

LEGISLATIVE PROGRAM—QUESTION

Senator Olson: Honourable senators, I should like to address a question to the Acting Leader of the Government or, indeed, the Minister of National Revenue, respecting a question I raised on Wednesday, May 10 with respect to the balance of the government's legislative program to the end of June. Whether we have prorogation at that time is for the government to decide.

The Leader of the Government did give an undertaking that, as soon as he knew whether or not dissolution was a possibility, he would be prepared to indicate to the Senate the full legislative program that the government intended to introduce between now and the end of June, including the days allocated to mandatory matters, such as the estimates. Can we expect that sometime this week?

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, I have not heard about any proposal for dissolution of Parliament. Last week the Prime Minister announced that Parliament might be adjourned before the end of June, if possible.

I know that discussions are taking place in the other house now between the various leaders in order to arrive at a work schedule that would allow such an adjournment. I have no further information. However, I shall inquire into this as soon as possible and inform the Senate of the so-called work schedule between now and the summer recess.

NUCLEAR WEAPONS

GOVERNMENT POLICY RE NEUTRON BOMB—QUESTION

Senator Forsey: Honourable senators, I wonder if I might ask the Acting Leader of the Government whether he can give us any information on the policy of the government with regard to the proposed neutron bomb.

Senator Langlois: This is a $64,000 question. I will take the question as notice and provide an answer to the Senate at the earliest possible moment.

CANADIAN BROADCASTING CORPORATION

TWENTY-FIFTH ANNIVERSARY REPORT—QUESTION

Senator Riley: Honourable senators, I should like to ask the Acting Leader of the Government a question. The other day I received, with the compliments of Mr. A. W. Johnson, President of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, a copy of the report of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the corporation. Although I am known to be bilingual, the copy I received was in French only and I wanted to send the report home to an English-speaking person I know who is interested in the affairs of the corporation. There must have been an English edition of this well-illustrated and apparently expensive document, but I am wondering why they did not include the French and English versions under the same cover, and why I, an Irishman, would get—

Senator Flynn: They should have sent it to you in Gaelic.

Senator Riley: —the French version. I can understand Senator Flynn's getting this document in the French language with the compliments of Mr. Johnson.

To get back to my question, I should like to know what this report cost the taxpayers of Canada, and why both the French and English versions were not printed under the same cover, as is the practice with so many government documents today.

Senator Forsey: They mixed you up with Claude Ryan.

Senator Riley: No, they mixed me up with Jacques Flynn.

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, even though my honourable colleague was born in the predominantly French-speaking town of Charlottetown, I understand his concern. I shall do everything possible to obtain an answer to his question.

PUBLIC SERVICE

MOVEMENT OF EMPLOYEES FROM SAINT JOHN, NEW BRUNSWICK—QUESTION

Senator Riley: Honourable senators, I should like to know why the Government of Canada is moving so many federal public servants out of Saint John, New Brunswick. I understand some employees of the Department of Transport are being moved to Halifax, and that some Revenue Canada employees are going to Newfoundland. Also, the Port of Saint John is being denuded of a medical doctor, an employee of the Department of National Health and Welfare, who is being moved to Halifax. These people might as well be sent to Liverpool, Nova Scotia. What is wrong with the Port of Saint John?

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, Senator Riley's question proves, once again, that it is impossible to please everyone at the same time. I shall endeavour to find out why the federal government is transferring a medical officer from Saint John to Halifax. I hope Senator Smith (Colchester) will side with me should the answer be in favour of Halifax.

Senator Riley: That is not a very good answer. I would like to have a full answer to my question.

Senator Langlois: I shall take the question as notice.

CANADIAN NATIONAL RAILWAYS CAPITAL REVISION ACT RAILWAY ACT

BILL TO AMEND—SECOND READING—DEBATE CONTINUED

The Senate resumed from Wednesday, May 17, the debate on the motion of Senator Langlois for the second reading of Bill C-17, to amend the Canadian National Railways Capital Revision Act and the Railway Act and to amend and repeal certain other statutes in consequence thereof.

Hon. George I. Smith: Honourable senators, I am not sure that I would have chosen, by preference, to run against an attraction of the kind which is available not far away this evening. However, since I do not have as much choice in the matter as I would wish, I suppose I should go on. It will be interesting to see how many people can stand listening to me as opposed to paying attention to the other attraction. I shall have little difficulty in excusing them, because I would rather not listen to myself tonight.

Senator Hicks: Hear, hear.

Senator Smith (Colchester): After such an explanation by way of introduction, I am sorry that any honourable senator should feel it necessary to rub it in, as Senator Hicks just did.

Senator Hicks: I was merely agreeing with you.

Senator Langlois: The score is now one to nothing for Montreal.

Senator Flynn: In that case, go on.

Senator Smith (Colchester): Honourable senators, as I begin to take part in this debate I wish to acknowledge that Senator Langlois' statement in sponsoring this bill set out, clearly and concisely, its factual content and the objectives which the government and the CNR hope it will achieve. Like all honourable senators, I am indebted to him for doing that.

● (2030)

I wish to say also that my colleague, Senator Roblin, made a splendid speech in which he set out fairly, clearly and eloquently a substantial number of matters which are relevant and important to the subject matter of the bill, and which deserve the most careful consideration. I suggest that his examination of the bill and the matters related to it demonstrated very plainly that it is not quite so simple as it appears, and that all of its contents and objectives do not necessarily commend themselves with equal force to the favourable consideration of all senators.

I do not intend to repeat what Senator Roblin said so well—I am sure honourable senators will be glad to know that—but there are some aspects of his comments which I wish to emphasize because they seem to me to be very important.

First, I wish to ask all honourable senators to recall that this is not the first time that the CNR has come to Parliament asking to be relieved of much of its capital debt. There seems to be nothing which has been said by the government or by the CNR which can give us very much confidence that in due course they will not be back again. It will be remembered that Senator Roblin drew our attention to the fact that after the relief afforded the CNR in 1952, its then president, the very able Donald Gordon, was most optimistic and felt that the railway had now been set on its way to a profitable future. It seems he was not right.

In this connection, too, it is necessary to keep in mind that the request on this occasion has nothing whatever to do with what used to be referred to as the inherited debts of the CNR. The 1952 recapitalization took care of that, and that is no longer a factor to which we should give any weight whatsoever at this time. To quote from the present president of the CNR, as reported in the Winnipeg Tribune in 1976:

—the CN doesn't have inherited debt problems at the moment. CN was recapitalized in 1937 and then again in 1952, these two recapitalizations essentially removed two things; they removed the inherited debt and they removed the capitalization of accumulated deficits which had gone on in the earlier years. By 1952 the question of inherited debts had been handled.

Remember that is a quote, as reported in the press, from remarks of the present president of the CNR.

I think too that the argument about accumulated depreciation does not really carry very much persuasion. Perhaps that is because I do not follow it well enough, but I think the best that one can say about it is that it is just tossed in as a sort of extra make-weight.

[Senator Smith (Colchester).]

The alleged savings to the government seem to me to be calculated on the basis of some fancy financial sleight-of-hand, especially when it is kept in mind that the government has not been obliged since 1960 to take any preferred or any other stock of CNR, although it has voluntarily continued to do so since that time after the legislative compulsion ended.

The argument about wishing to have the same debt-equity ratio as the CPR and other railways is understandable, but really is not fundamental to Canadian National's successful operation. It may be important when trying to borrow on the world financial markets, but we are informed that they have quite successfully borrowed already, with things as they are, and borrowed on the world markets. But in any event, since the debt-equity ratio as of 1952 was just about what they are asking it be restored to now, one cannot help asking the very relevant question: Who let it get that way after 1952?

To turn to another subject, some senators, I am sure, will have been aware of various representations by pensioners of the CNR. It is perfectly clear—and there can be no dispute about it—that the CN pension plan is not by any means fully funded. That is shown, for instance, in note 8 to the consolidated balance sheet for 1977, which is found on pages 37 and 38 of the annual report for that year. The total shown there required to fund fully what the report calls "past service costs," is a very large amount of $1,063,082,000, which is a good round sum. All of this, except $14.2 million, is in respect of the Canadian operations of the CNR. The $14 million-odd relates to its operations in the United States.

I must say, although the president of the company and its auditor maintain that the way this item is shown is perfectly good accounting, to me it leaves something to be desired in the area of good communications. For instance, the consolidated statement of income on page 26 of CN's 1977 annual report shows net income $28.018 million. Immediately under that item appears the comment, "See accompanying notes to consolidated financial statements." Just below that again there is a heading, "Consolidated Statement of Earned Surplus," wherein it is repeated that the $28.018 million is net income for 1977 and that the balance of earned surplus at December 31, 1977 is $39.782 million, although this is again followed by the injunction to look at accompanying notes.

Well, of course, anyone experienced in dealing with balance sheets will at once turn to the notes. But it is not likely, it seems to me, that the ordinary person, not accustomed to dealing with such matters, would, in fact, look at the notes. If he did, I am sure he would be very surprised to find, after being told that the net income for the year was $28 million-odd and the balance of earned surplus was over $39.75 million, the following statement:

The amount of past service costs remaining to be charged to operations at December 31, 1977, based on the latest actuarial valuation as at December 31, 1975, adjusted for subsequent changes, amounted to $1,063,-082,000.

The note then goes on to say that this amount is being charged against operations in certain annual payments, similar, I presume, to amortization of capital debt, including principal and interest, the last of the payments to be made nearly 50 years hence in the year 2027.

Well, you know, it is not much wonder that a person who is concerned, and perhaps even personally concerned, about these matters, but who is not expert in interpreting financial reports, becomes worried about the future of the CN pension plan, although I cast no aspersions on it other than what I say precisely.

● (2040)

The note also states that the charge made for the year ending December 31, 1977, was indeed included in the charge to operations for that year, and I assume, without having turned it up to find out, that similar charges have been made against operations in recent years and before arriving at the bottom line of the consolidated revenue report.

Somewhere among the considerable volume of documents I have looked at in relation to this bill, I noted a statement by a senior official of the CNR that really people should not talk about this pension plan deficit because it disturbs the pensioners and employees. Well, honourable senators, this seems to me to be a most surprising attitude for the corporation to take. I should think that the concern now and in the past expressed by pensioners and employees on this subject must come from a lack of adequate communication rather than too much talking about it; and, if so, the more talking that is now done about it in a reasoned and factual way, the more likely it is that the concern of the pensioners and employees will be allayed—if the facts are indeed facts that ought to allay such concern.

I should also say that I have looked at the financial statement headed "The Unfunded Liabilities of the Company's Various Pension Plans" and the costs for such plans contained at page 24 of the 1976 annual report. While I make no criticism of it as a formal financial statement, I do say that it seems to me not to be very well calculated to be readily understood by one not accustomed to dealing with such statements.

It also appears, from some of the available information, that very likely some of the pensions now being paid are particularly small, having been calculated upon contributions made many years ago, since which time I hardly need say that the value of a dollar has been greatly eroded by inflation. This, of course, poses a difficult problem, and one not easy to solve, by any means; but I do suggest it is a problem which out of ordinary decency and fair play the company should try very hard to ameliorate, and it may well be, of course, that it will be necessary to have the co-operation of the employees as well.

Honourable senators, let me turn now to another subject, that of trucking, because motor vehicles are the greatest land competitors of the railway. In hauling freight, for instance, motor vehicles now, I believe, haul about one-half of the domestic intercity freight traffic and almost all local traffic in metropolitan areas.

These motor vehicles are, of course, all, or mostly, privately owned, except those which have been purchased or otherwise acquired by the railways themselves.

The truckers feel, of course, that they have no public money chest to dip into to help finance their capital or operating requirements or deficits, and honourable senators will not be surprised to hear me say that the truckers consider this recapitalization of the CNR as quite unfair to them; that it gives their great competitor, the CN, a very unfair advantage.

Senator Hicks: Would my honourable friend permit a question at this stage?

Senator Smith (Colchester): Certainly.

Senator Hicks: Would he not agree that the provision of the highway system in Canada is a tremendous subsidy to the trucking industry, perhaps comparable to the subsidy or government money that goes into the railways to build their roadbeds, which the railways pay for themselves?

Senator Smith (Colchester): No, I would not agree with that at all. I shall deal with that matter in a moment, in any event, so perhaps the honourable senator will wait for a short time until I do so.

Senator Hicks: Thank you.

Senator Smith (Colchester): I do not assert that the truckers are necessarily correct in the way they look at this recapitalization, but I do say that their argument appears to be reasonably well founded.

Here, of course, as Senator Hicks has reminded me, I should say I am well aware of the railway argument that railways have to provide and maintain their rights of way and their roadbeds, while the public does that for the truckers. However, that is an argument I do not accept, and the truckers do not accept it—although that is not the reason why I do not accept it. I do not accept it because for years I had the responsibility of trying to balance these two things out, and I think I can say that by and large a real effort is made to ensure that the truckers pay by way of taxes on their vehicles, licence fees, and taxes on the fuel they use, an amount comparable—this is in comparative, not absolute, terms; if everything were added up we might find that the truckers pay more than the railway pays—the truckers pay an amount which is comparable to what the railways have to pay. The truckers, of course, will maintain, and quote you figures to back up their argument, that indeed they pay more than it costs the public to build and maintain the highways which they use. I do not necessarily support going that far, but I do say they have a very good argument in this connection which is not always recognized when this matter is discussed.

Under the heading of "User Pay," we hear a good deal of talk from the minister and Department of Transport. I have to say that it is pretty clear, from various examples which will spring quickly to mind, that this is not always applied, and it is certainly a principle which is not applied to the recapitaliza-tion of the CNR. It certainly does not apply to this write-off as proposed in this bill—and I use the term “write-off” intentionally because, in fact, that is precisely what it is. It is referred to as a conversion of debt into equity, but the fact is that we are really asked to write off that amount of $808 million, or whatever it is, which the CNR owed to the Canadian taxpayer and still owes to the Canadian taxpayer.

It is true, as I have said, that the action is camouflaged and the $808 million will be called equity rather than debt, but the fact is that the taxpayers of Canada will never get it back in any form whatsoever, except in paper shares. It is also the fact that when money owed to the taxpayers of Canada is written off, or converted into equity, it has to be paid by the taxpayers of Canada. They have either already paid for it or they will pay for it in the future. There is simply no alternative.

Not only is this $808 million exempted from the so-called principle of user pay, but the CNR's competitors, the truckers, as taxpayers of Canada, have to help pay it. This, in their view, really heaps insult upon injury, and one can readily understand why they should feel that way. Here the major competitors of the CNR have to help relieve the railway its debt and so, as far as they are concerned, increase its competitive capacity. It does not seem to me to be any wonder that the truckers feel very unhappy about this kind of sleight of hand that is bound up in the fancy words of this bill.

“User pay”—we hear the minister talk about it. “Taxpayer pay” would be a far more accurate designation of what this bill is designed to bring about. “User pay”—is that what this proposal of recapitalization will mean in respect of the $808 million? Also, what about the write-off of the debt of the St. Lawrence Seaway? What about a similar action in relation to Air Canada? Surely no one will say that these are instances of user pay. They are, in fact, as I have said, instances of taxpayer pay.

● (2050)

Let me turn now, honourable senators, to the subject of the use of the railways as an instrument of national policy for development and for unity. Speaking of user pay naturally leads us into this subject, which seems to me to be more important than this bill, which has been conceived to free the CNR of the results of its management since 1952.

My colleague, Senator Roblin, mentioned this subject in his excellent speech, but I would like to deal with some aspects of it which he did not have time to speak about to any extent. Like him, I am concerned with all of Canada, but, also like him, I have a particular concern about one part of the country, as I suppose is the case with all honourable senators. In his case it is the west; in my case it is Atlantic Canada. Today I wish to emphasize Atlantic Canada, though much of what I say about it is applicable, in one way or another, to the western part of our country as well. I wish to speak of the use of the railways, and in particular, for the moment, of the CNR, as an instrument of national policy for the development of our country and its unity.

[Senator Smith (Colchester).]

Such use is, of course, consistent with the commitments made to the Atlantic provinces to persuade them to enter Confederation. The commitments were made to New Brunswick and Nova Scotia at the time of Confederation, and to Prince Edward Island and Newfoundland later, though made to all of them at one time or another. I am sure honourable senators will remember the informative speech Senator Bonnell made last year on his inquiry concerning transportation in the Atlantic region. It is no new subject. It has been one of the foremost factors in the minds of people from the Atlantic provinces ever since Confederation. Commitments were made to the western provinces as well, but these commitments to either western or Atlantic Canada have never been adequately fulfilled.

Just look, for example, at the inability of our railways to move grain to the west coast as quickly as is necessary properly to fill contracts for its export. I read the other day—I am not sure if the figure is correct, but it is certainly in the general area of accuracy—that something like 20 ships were awaiting cargoes of grain on the west coast, and would have to wait for a very considerable time simply because the railways were not getting the grain to the ports as required. This is not, of course, all the fault of the railways. It is in part, and perhaps in very great part, the fault of the present Government of Canada, and that of preceding governments as well.

I ask honourable senators to consider for a moment the potential for Canada of our great harbours on the Atlantic coast. I will not take time to name them all, but the ones that spring to mind are St. John's, Saint John and Halifax, in particular. I do not think I am overstating the case when I say that Halifax has the greatest natural harbour on the east coast of the Americas, and perhaps in all of the world. Its value has been recognized in every time of national crisis, and I have no doubt it is familiar to many honourable senators here, some of whom had first-hand experience of that harbour in time of war.

At the time of Confederation these ports and many others were gateways to the world, and particularly to the world of trade. At Confederation also, the railways, and particularly the Intercolonial Railway—or, as we call it down our way, the old ICR—was to provide us in the maritime provinces, and particularly, then, New Brunswick and Nova Scotia, with good, effective transportation to the markets of central Canada and the central United States. Perhaps for a time after Confederation it did play its part in development, but as the years went by it began to falter. For much of this century, and perhaps earlier than that, it failed, and sometimes miserably failed, to carry out that great national and regional responsibility and commitment.

Let me again turn to Halifax—and at this point I am glad to be able to say something favourable about the CNR, in addition to the other kinds of comment I have been making. In the 1960s, it seemed for a while that the CNR was really giving some recognition to its obligations. For instance, it assisted materially in the efforts that were made to attract a Volvo automobile assembly plant to Halifax, by making sure that effective transportation from Halifax to other parts of Canada would be available for the distribution of these automobiles.

The CNR also helped substantially in the attraction to Halifax, and the development there, of container traffic, as that mode of transportation began to be widely accepted. I want to give the CNR full credit for having displayed a spirit of willingness—indeed, one might say a most sympathetic willingness—to assist, and it did assist. The fruit of that assistance, along with the co-operation of all the other parties involved, including the Governments of Nova Scotia and Canada, shows what can be done when the railway sets out to fulfil these obligations.

I am delighted, of course, with the useful effect that that help has had in both those instances, and some others along about the same time, but the disappointing thing about it is that it only emphasizes the lack of that kind of effective help during many other years.

Let me turn again to the development of ports. The port of Saint John, New Brunswick, is primarily served by the Canadian Pacific Railway. While I do not have much first hand knowledge on that score, from the information I get I believe it is served at least as well as Halifax. St. John's, Newfoundland, is served by the CNR, and according to Newfoundlanders it is not served very well. My colleague from Newfoundland may have something to say about that.

● (2109)

Halifax is served primarily by the CNR—not entirely, but primarily. Consider that port for a moment and the possibilities and potential it has which the railway could share in developing. It is the nearest to Europe of any port on the mainland of Canada. Thus it gives the opportunity for the shortest turnaround which any ship proceeding from Europe or the United Kingdom to Canada can have. With the very high cost of operating ships, every day that can be saved in turnaround, indeed, almost every hour, is an advantage to the shipowner, the shipper and to the consignee. Thus, if one considers only the problem of transporting goods between the mainland of Canada and Europe and the United Kingdom, Halifax is the obvious port, and Saint John is a very close second.

However, honourable senators, a short turnaround on the water part of the journey which freight has to make is of little assistance if the overland journey is so long or so expensive, or both, that it offsets the advantages of the shorter water journey. A short sea turnaround also loses its advantage quickly if the goods carried are not delivered promptly and safely to their destination from the ports where they are discharged.

Although, as is the case with all eastern Canadian ports, Halifax and Saint John compete with other Canadian ports on the Seaway and on the Great Lakes, for the great bulk of the traffic I am talking about our competitors are not primarily other Canadian ports, but the United States east coast ports. At present Halifax and Saint John still have some advantage over these foreign ports. However, I fear that unless the CNR changes its attitude and determines to help more effectively, as it did in the circumstances which I cited, then certainly Halifax and Saint John—and Halifax in particular with reference to the CNR—will lose traffic and jobs to these United States ports. I want to emphasize that primarily I am not talking about Canadian ports, but ports in another country.

The right combination of port facilities, labour force, together with speed, security and cost of movement from port to destination can keep and improve the advantage of Halifax and Saint John. The wrong combination will lose traffic and jobs to the United States. I am far from confident that either the Government of Canada or the Canadian National Railways now sufficiently appreciate this fact or are sufficiently concerned about this danger.

People from Atlantic Canada and from the west would, I am sure, rather be considering proposals for using our great railways to live up to the commitments of Confederation and as an instrument of national policy for development and unity than dealing with this bill.

Honourable senators, I wish the CNR well. I want so see it prosper. I want it to be efficient and profitable, but, above all, I wish to see it perform adequately as an instrument of national policy for the development of all the regions of Canada and to further national unity.

Senator Hicks: Honourable senators, if I may continue my earlier reference to the subject of dispute between my honourable friend and myself, I am disappointed that his answer was only a general assertion that the taxes paid by the truckers compensated for the great benefits they receive from having their roadbeds prepared and made available to them at the taxpayers' expense. I have been interested in this for a long time and while I do not have the advantage of my honourable friend of having been a minister of highways, my impression is that we would have to spend far less money on building highways if they were not being used by these huge tractor-trailers. It seems to me that the great expenditure on our highways is made necessary by the heavy traffic they have to carry.

I wonder if my honourable friend can do any more than give me a general assurance against my general impression. Are there any figures available? Has any work been done to determine how much extra the highways have cost because of the heavy truck traffic they have to carry?

I have an impression that if we had a controlled economy, one of the first things we would do would be to take all these heavy trucks off the highways, transport all the freight by rail, and allow the trucking industry to do only the hauling from the main terminals to the delivery points. Perhaps my honourable friend has some further facts and figures on this.

Senator Smith (Colchester): I shall be glad to see what I can discover in this respect, but I can say a number of things to the honourable senator. I agree with him, of course, that the use of our highways by very heavy vehicles does greatly increase the cost of building and maintaining those highways. I do not think anyone could possibly dispute that. What the truckers will say, and what I think they can reasonably argue, is that that extra cost is met, or nearly met, by the taxes they pay for the use of those roads by virtue of the fees for the licences which permit them to put their vehicles on the roads, and by the taxes they pay on the fuel they use. Although the honourable gentleman shakes his head—and I do not wish to rely too much on memory—

Senator Hicks: Some other honourable gentlemen are shaking their heads also.

Senator Smith (Colchester): It was only my honourable friend's head that I heard shake.

I think I started to say, when we became concerned about shaking heads—or was it rattling heads?—that my honourable friend's assertion about his knowledge and his study leads me into the temptation of comparing experience with him in that respect, so I will yield to that temptation now.

For some seven years I was the Minister of Highways, and for some six years thereafter I was the Minister of Finance, of a small province, admittedly, but one in which these questions were very much alive, and I had to deal with them in both those capacities. Although originally I joined in the chorus in which my honourable friend joined tonight, I became convinced that there was really not as much to it as the backers of the railway argument said, and I know that figures exist which tend to indicate what I say is, in a general sense, supported. I would be glad to dig them up because it is a most interesting question, and one which I think is very important to the development of our future means of hauling traffic.

I think it would be better, as does the honourable senator, if greater use were made of the railways, but not for just the same reason perhaps that he advances.

Against that, of course, there is the danger of a lack of competition, and I do say this as well, that the existence of the ability to move freight by road is one of the things that has a very substantial effect upon the rates which the railways can charge for moving the same kind of goods. If they get out of line with what the truckers charge, then, of course, they will lose business. I have allowed myself so easily to be diverted into a lengthy answer to a short question that I should offer my apologies to honourable senators who have been so patient.

● (2110)

Senator Norrie: Is it not true that the CNR has a large number of trucks that are subsidized, and they compete with the non-railway trucks?

Senator Smith (Colchester): Yes, that is very true. That raises another element in the whole question. I think their annual report, which I read in preparation for this debate, goes into it at some length. They have a very large volume of heavy road transport vehicles which compete against the privately-owned vehicles, and also compete against the very railroad itself.

Hon. John Morrow Godfrey: Honourable senators, I should like to speak briefly in this debate on one point only.

[Senator Smith (Colchester).]

Senator Smith said he did not understand the question of depreciation too well, and I must confess that I am in the same position. Senator Roblin is so graceful and persuasive a speaker that he had me mesmerized, I must confess, last Wednesday, and when he sat down I thought I understood what he said about depreciation. What really happened was that I thought I should be able to understand it. Afterwards, when I realized I didn't really understand what he said, I looked up the part that confused me, and I should just like to read it. He said:

—there was a substantial amount of depreciation hanging around in the CNR books that was unfunded, and they are now telling us that some $800 million, more or less, represents an unfunded burden of depreciation that was overlooked 26 years ago.

He went on to say:

Well, that is an awful lot of unfunded depreciation to swallow in one fell swoop, if it means, as it does in this instance, the writing off of $808 million-worth of fixed debts to the Government of Canada.

My impression from that statement was that for some reason or other, because of the, as he said, unfunded depreciation, this bill provided for the writing off of $800 million-worth of debts. I then looked up what the Deputy Leader of the Senate said on this question, and he covered it in one sentence. He said:

There will also be a reduction of equity in recognition of depreciation attributable to years prior to the adoption of depreciation accounting.

That I understand very well. If over a period you do not take depreciation, then your profits are that much larger. They are increased by the amount of depreciation which you did not take, which adds on to your equity by the same amount. I understand the Deputy Leader of the Government to say that this is simply a bookkeeping item in which you are writing down equity, and that has nothing to do with debt whatsoever, and certainly nothing to do with the $808 million, which appears to be the whole amount of the debt written off. No doubt the deputy leader can clear this up for us when he replies.

On motion of Senator Langlois, debate adjourned.

FOREIGN AFFAIRS

INAUGURATION OF CANADIAN EARTHQUAKE ASSISTANCE PROJECT AT FRIULI, ITALY

Hon. Peter Bosa rose pursuant to notice of Wednesday, May 10, 1978:

That he will call the attention of the Senate to the inauguration on 29th and 30th April, 1978, of the Canadian Earthquake Assistance Project at Friuli, Italy.

He said: Honourable senators, I am pleased to be able to draw the attention of the Senate to my recent visit to the earthquake area of Northern Italy, known as the Region of Friuli, on the occasion of the inauguration of the Canadian housing project, which took place on April 29 and 30, 1978.

Honourable senators will recall the devastating effects of the earthquake that took place a little over two years ago, more precisely on May 6, 1976, during which over 1,000 people lost their lives and 60,000 were left homeless. While the Government of Italy provided the immediate basic emergency needs, the international community responded very quickly with various forms of assistance. Canadian reaction was sympathetic and swift. Within 48 hours Canadian forces in Europe were in action at Venzone. They originally intended to set up a military hospital, but after ascertaining that the approximately 3,000 injured were being looked after in hospitals adjacent to the area, Canadians established instead an open kitchen, providing a valuable service to the people of that area.

Two senior officers of the Canadian contingent, Lt. Col. R. E. Moore and Major M. Fortin, were present at the inauguration. During the rescue operations thirteen people lost their lives. Among them there was a distinguished Canadian, Captain Robert McBride, who died in a helicopter crash. I will have more to say about this happening later.

As the drama unfolded, Canadians of Italian origin in many parts of Canada spontaneously initiated a fund-raising campaign, which ultimately amounted to $4,500,000. The credit for this impressive figure must be attributed to the thousands of men, women and children of all walks of life, and all origins, who contributed generously to the fund throughout Canada. Governments, too, were generous. The federal government contributed $1,300,000; the Province of Ontario, $500,000; the Province of Quebec, $75,000, and lesser amounts came from the Provinces of British Columbia and Alberta, the municipality of Metropolitan Toronto, and the Borough of York. Other jurisdictions of which I am not aware may have contributed to the fund, and I am sorry that I do not have complete information so that I might acknowledge all government contributions on this occasion.

There was constituted soon afterwards an ad hoc committee of 32, representing the major fund-raising centres of Canada. Acting in the name of the National Congress of Italian Canadians, an umbrella organization of clubs and associations, the ad hoc committee brought together into a common fund the proceeds of the various fund-raising groups. By uniting all the resources in a single project it was possible to realize and co-ordinate assistance more effectively.

Looking back, the project can be subdivided into three stages. First was the fund-raising campaign, which was believed originally to be the whole project. The proceeds, it was thought, would be turned over to some government agency and that would be the end of it. However, the generous response and the amount collected changed all that.

● (2120)

Second was the planning stage. Members of the committee went to Friuli on a fact-finding mission and reported that housing was the most pressing need. A plan was devised for the construction of 181 houses and two senior citizen homes in the towns of Taipana, Venzone, Bordano, Pinzano and Forgaria, and tenders were awarded.

The third stage consisted of supervising the construction and seeing it through to completion, as well as the allocation of the dwellings and the necessary preparation for the official inauguration.

I have deliberately avoided mentioning names because it would be impossible to do justice to the many people who participated and contributed. However, I am going to make an exception in the case of Messrs. Primo Di Luca and Marco Muzzo. They were prominent during all stages, but more specifically during the last stage. The responsibilities they undertook required them to travel back and forth to Italy many times, which they did at their own expense.

Perhaps for the first time in the history of international aid, governments of three jurisdictions had entrusted their contributions to a group of individuals to carry out a project in the name of Canada.

This single act, in itself, is an eloquent testimonial and perhaps the highest compliment that can be made to the members of the ad hoc committee of 32 and the National Congress of Italian Canadians. Governments and individual donors to this cause can rest assured that their money was well spent. At this time there are approximately 830 Friulani who, after living for two years in temporary housing, can now rest and relax in permanent and earthquake-proof dwellings. It is somewhat of a miracle that a project of this magnitude could be realized in less than 18 months, the time during which the plan was conceived, the land sites expropriated and the construction completed. Without the speedy co-operation of the region and the municipal councils, such an undertaking could not have been realized. This project has been described by the President of the region, Mr. Comelli, as the largest project since the quake. He said that the Italian government, after having provided temporary shelter, concentrated on rebuilding schools and factories so that Friulani would not have to take the traditional route of emigration from Friuli. Now that such reconstruction has been achieved, they are going to concentrate on building houses. Until a couple of decades ago, 80 per cent of the people of the area were employed in agriculture. Now there are fewer than 20 per cent in that field, as the region underwent an unprecedented change during the industrial boom.

Friuli is situated in the northeast corner of Italy. It borders on Austria and Yugoslavia. It is one of five autonomous regions of Italy. It is subdivided into four provinces with a total population of approximately 1.5 million. It is estimated that approximately 50,000 Friulani have come to Canada at different times. The region has witnessed the ravages of drought, floods, invasion and wars. Friulani have been tempered by these events, so they have learned to cope with adversities. Perhaps for the first time in its history there were men wearing different military uniforms who were there to help and assist. I had occasion to see that myself when an editor of the Toronto Daily Star asked me to accompany one of his reporters, Mr. Joe Serge, to the quake area so that Canadians would get an eye witness account of what was happening there. I know the area, as I was born in the town of Bertiolo not far from our destination. During the four days we were there we saw Yugoslav ambulances, Canadian, American and German soldiers, French firefighters, Austrian and Swiss Red Cross personnel. It seems that in times of tragedy nations know how to show their solidarity. I wish we had the wisdom to do the same in all our international dealings at all times.

After two years of real commitment and long working sessions the members of the ad hoc committee were looking forward to the inauguration of the project. No one had anticipated it would have taken this long, and the members were anxious to see its completion. The inauguration preparations were not without anxieties. The political developments in Italy and the kidnapping of Mr. Moro gave rise to the possibility of postponement. In considering postponement we had to take into account the administrative elections in mid-May and the regional election in June. For these reasons we proceeded with the original plan, and, as it turned out, all went well.

Present at the official ceremonies was a large Canadian delegation headed by the Honourable Norman Cafik, Minister of State responsible for Multiculturalism; the Honourable Monique Bégin, Minister of Health and Welfare; Senator Rizzuto; the Honourable Dennis Timbrell, Minister of Health of Ontario; the Honourable Jacques Couture, Minister of Immigration of Quebec; Mr. Tesolin, M.L.A., Alberta; Dr. L. Leone, President of the National Congress of Italian Canadians; Mr. Roger Bull, acting Canadian Ambassador; Mr. Croato, President of the Federation of Fogolar Furlans of Canada; Alderman Joseph Piccininni; members of the ad hoc committee; members of the media and many sympathizers.

The Government of Italy was represented by the Honourable G. Stamat, Minister of Public Works; Honourable Bressani, Undersecretary of State to the President of the Council; Mr. Comelli, President of the Friuli Region; the Prefects of Udine and Pordenone; many members of Parliament and Regional Council; Mayor Candolini of Udine; Messrs. Tomasini, Sachetto, Fabris, Cedolini and the Honourable Colomba, respectively mayors of Taipana, Venzone, Pinzano, Forgaria and Bordano. Also present were Messrs. Pascatti and Benini, who had provided valuable assistance and advice throughout the project; Professor Valerio of Friuli Nel Mondo; Monsignor Copolutti and Mr. Aldo Bernadis, projects architect.

There were distinct opening ceremonies in each of the five towns. Everywhere we saw posters thanking Canada. In each of the towns there is a street or a square which carries a Canadian connotation such as "Borgata Canada"—Canadian Hamlet. All ceremonies were impressive and moving, but the most solemn took place in Venzone, a town of 550, which lost 54 of its people and 95 per cent of its buildings in the earthquake. There, in Piazza McBride, situated in the centre of the 92 Canadian houses, hundreds of residents, visitors and members of the official party stood at attention in the heavy rain which started shortly after the ceremony began. Mayor Sachetto unveiled a memorial monument in honour of the late Captain Robert McBride. Mrs. McBride was present, having been flown in for the occasion. A platoon of Alpine infantrymen stood at attention as a lone bugler played the Last Post. Two Italian soldiers placed a tricolour wreath at the foot of the monument. Everyone wept as 30 grade school children all dressed alike filed in front of the monument, each one placing a mini-Canadian and Italian flag in front of the monument. The local band played the two national anthems. Members of the official party waited on the platform to make some appropriate remarks. The Honourable Norman Cafik, after presenting the keys to one of the houses to one of the residents as symbolic gesture, said in response to the gratitude expressed by Mayor Sachetto and President Comelli, that it was Canada which owed Italy a debt of gratitude. He referred to the many Canadians of Italian origin who have contributed to the development of Canada and the cultural enrichment of our nation. The people continued to stand in silent reverence, reliving the tragedy that had befallen their town, in an emotionally charged atmosphere, oblivious of the rain, as Mr. Gilbert of the Canadian Embassy translated Mr. Cafik's remarks.

● (2130)

The official ceremonies having come to an end, the celebration of Canada-Friuli friendship continued from April 27 to May 9, it having been proclaimed by the Canadian Ambassador to Italy, His Excellency D'Iberville Fortier, who was regrettably absent on this occasion for reasons of health. Big posters overhanging the main streets of Udine, the capital of the province, signified this important event. This celebration of friendship was manifested through the distribution of information and the showing of films on Canada to schools and cultural institutions. Each day there was a different program. The people of Friuli learned a great deal about Canada. As a result, I can say without hesitation that relations between the two countries have never been closer than they are at the present time.

The solidarity shown by Canadians after the earthquake contributed in a meaningful way to the friendship between Canada and Italy. I wish to thank personally all those people who participated, whether financially or physically, in the realization of the Friuli project.

The Hon. the Speaker: As no other honourable senator wishes to participate, this inquiry is considered as having been debated.

INCOME TAX

MOTION TO AUTHORIZE BANKING, TRADE AND COMMERCE COMMITTEE TO STUDY LEGISLATION—DEBATE ADJOURNED

Hon. Salter A. Hayden moved pursuant to notice:

That the Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce be authorized to examine and consider the subject matter of any bill based on the Budget Resolutions relating to income tax in advance of any such bill coming before the Senate, or any matter relating thereto.

He said: Honourable senators, this type of motion is well understood by the Senate. It is a recognized practice when dealing with complicated bills which will require considerable study and which are likely to be slow in coming to us from the other place. Invariably, they are referred to the Senate at or about the time that we are looking at either a summer recess or a Christmas recess.

The idea of this motion is to afford the opportunity of a prestudy so that the pressures that ordinarily accompany the approach of these recess periods may be avoided and proper consideration given to bills of this kind.

Senator Flynn: Honourable senators, as it is my intention to make a few comments on this motion, I move the adjournment of the debate.

On motion of Senator Flynn, debate adjourned.

The Senate adjourned until tomorrow at 2 p.m.

---

THE SENATE

Wednesday, May 24, 1978

The Senate met at 2 p.m., the Speaker in the Chair.

Prayers.

Motion agreed to.

● (1410)

[Translation]

NATIONAL UNITY

CONGRATULATIONS TO TORONTO BASEBALL CLUB

Senator Wagner: Honourable senators, yesterday I put a question to the Deputy Leader of the Government and it was suggested to me that I should proceed through a motion. I will therefore do so hoping to get the same unanimous response as shown in the other place.

I therefore move, seconded by the Honourable Senator Goldenberg:

That the Senate unites in commending the Toronto Blue Jays organization and team and Mrs. Ruth Ann Wallace, for their presentation of Canada's National Anthem during the Victoria Day Weekend, thus showing their confidence in a united Canada and in both official languages of the country.

Motion agreed to.

[English]

DOCUMENTS TABLED

Senator Langlois tabled:

Copies of Report of the Administrator under the Anti-Inflation Act, pursuant to section 17(3) of the said Act, Chapter 75, Statutes of Canada, 1974-75-76, respecting compensation plan between British Columbia School Trustees Association West Kootenay Employers' Organization, British Columbia and the group of its clerical and maintenance employees, represented by the Canadian Union of Public Employees Locals 748, 1285, 1298, 1341 and 2098 (formerly 343). Order dated May 12, 1978.

CURRENCY AND EXCHANGE ACT

BILL TO AMEND—REPORT OF COMMITTEE

Senator Hayden, Chairman of the Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce, reported that the committee had considered Bill C-39, to amend the Currency and Exchange Act, and had directed that the bill be reported without amendment.

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this bill be read the third time?

Senator Hayden moved that the bill be placed on the Orders of the Day for third reading at the next sitting.

FINANCIAL ADMINISTRATION ACT

BILL TO AMEND—REPORT OF COMMITTEE

Senator Everett, Chairman of the Standing Senate Committee on National Finance, reported that the committee had considered Bill C-10, to amend the Financial Administration Act, and had directed that the bill be reported without amendment.

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this bill be read the third time?

Senator Everett moved that the bill be placed on the Orders of the Day for third reading at the next sitting.

Motion agreed to.

VETERANS AFFAIRS

MEALS AT SUNNYBROOK HOSPITAL—QUESTION

Senator Marshall: Honourable senators, I wonder if I could ask the Deputy Leader of the Government what the position of the government is, and particularly that of the Minister of Veterans Affairs, with regard to the inhumane decision made by the board of directors of Sunnybrook Hospital to deny a hot breakfast to veterans who have been confined there for many years. It is intended that these veterans be served a cold breakfast, resulting in a saving of a few thousand dollars. It is, indeed, an inhumane decision to make against the veterans of Canada.

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, unfortunately I do not have this information at hand, but I will inquire and report back to the chamber as soon as possible.

NATIONAL REVENUE

INFORMATION SERVICES—QUESTION

Senator Smith (Colchester): Honourable senators, I should like to direct a question to the Minister of National Revenue. It relates to a document headed Communiqué—Revenue Canada, Customs and Excise. On the outside it has a blue sheet purporting to give additional information about the sales threshold to $50,000 for small manufacturers, and at the bottom it bears the words, "Information Services, Ottawa" and gives a postal address and a telephone number. Obviously, it is not the same organization that put out the pieces of paper which are between the blue covers because there is a different telephone number there. I should like to ask the minister what information services these are.

Senator Guay: Honourable senators, the first number is that of Mr. Bourgeois who is in the department at the Connaught Building. He can be reached very easily, as is indicated here, by phoning that number. The other one is a regular information service number. It is there on a permanent basis. The first number that we suggest you contact is that of the man in charge. He will give you the information pertaining to this particular communiqué.

Senator Smith (Colchester): Perhaps I did not make my question as clear as I should have. Who are these Information Services? Are they part of the minister's department or are they some other organization?

Senator Guay: Again I will repeat that Mr. M. P. Bourgeois, phone number 998-9640, is a member of the staff of Revenue Canada. I think that was clearly said in the first instance.

In regard to the other information which is printed at the bottom of the form, that is a regular service that has been in existence for some time, and it also pertains to Revenue Canada when it comes to a communiqué such as this one.

Senator Smith (Colchester): Just to get the matter perfectly clear, is the minister saying that the Information Services referred to in this document are part of his department?

Senator Guay: My answer to that is yes, except to say that the bottom telephone number will put one in touch with information on a variety of subjects which one may require in dealing with the department, whereas the first number will put one in touch with Mr. Bourgeois, who has particular knowledge of this communiqué.

[Translation]

FOREIGN AFFAIRS

KOLWEZI MASSACRE—QUESTION

Senator Wagner: I should like to put a few questions to the deputy government leader with regard to foreign affairs.

First of all, can he assure us that there were no Canadian citizens among the victims of the Kolwezi massacre in Zaire?

Secondly, to his knowledge, are there still Canadian citizens in the Shaba province and, if so, what steps have been taken to guarantee their safety and, in due course, their transportation to a safe area, in case the Zaire rebels now quartered in Angola should renew their attacks?

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, I really cannot add anything to the information given the Senate last week by the leader when he answered a similar question and advised us that, according to his information at that time, there were no Canadian nationals in the immediate combat area but that it was possible there were some just a few kilometers away.

With regard to whether Canadian nationals were victims of that invasion, I have no information on the matter, but I shall take up the matter immediately with the Department of External Affairs and pass on the information as soon as I have it.

Senator Wagner: Honourable senators, I have a supplementary question. Does the government have any information on the nationality of the military instructors now serving with the Zaire rebels in Angola? More specifically, could he confirm the report to the effect that these instructors are of Cuban nationality, in spite of the fact that Havana has stated most emphatically that no Cuban troops took part in the massacre?

Senator Langlois: With respect to this supplementary question, honourable senators, I must rely on the statement which the Prime Minister made yesterday to the effect that Cubans seem to be involved in this conflict. The Prime Minister even announced to the house, in reply to a question from, I think, the Right Honourable John Diefenbaker, that Canada was not considering any new assistance programs to Cuba, especially in view of that country's activities in Africa.

I have nothing to add to this information which was provided yesterday in the House of Commons by the Prime Minister, but I shall seek further information and advise my honourable friend accordingly.

[English]

Senator Wagner: With the permission of honourable senators, I should like to ask a further supplementary question.

On the larger issue of peace and security in Africa, has the government any plan either to initiate or to support diplomatic discussions in order to ensure that the Angolese authorities will not tolerate any more the presence on their soil of armed guerrillas, such as those who engineered the Kolwezi massacre?

Senator Langlois: Again, honourable senators, the answer to that question will require some expertise that I do not have. I shall seek the information from the Department of External Affairs and report back to the Senate as soon as possible.

● (1420)

CANADIAN NATIONAL RAILWAYS CAPITAL REVISION ACT RAILWAY ACT

BILL TO AMEND—SECOND READING

The Senate resumed from yesterday the debate on the motion of Senator Langlois for the second reading of Bill C-17, to amend the Canadian National Railways Capital Revision Act and the Railway Act and to amend and repeal certain other statutes in consequence thereof.

Hon. Léopold Langlois: Honourable senators—

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, I must inform the Senate that if the Honourable Senator Langlois speaks now, his speech will have the effect of closing the debate on second reading of this bill.

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, at the outset of my remarks I should like to express my gratitude to the Honourable Senator Roblin for his expression of appreciation for what he described as my succinct and effective way in presenting the government's case with respect to this bill.

However, soon after this, my honourable friend added, and I quote from page 786 of Senate Hansard of May 17 last:

As I listened to the rationale that was presented last night by Senator Langlois, I was struck by how similar his argument was to the argument that was used in the presentation of Bill C-308 in June 1952, 26 years ago, when Parliament was asked to convert $736 million-worth of debt to equity, as we are being asked to do today and for roughly the same reasons.

Then on the following page he carried on, and I quote again:

And if the reputation of the honourable senator who introduced the bill was not above any challenge whatsoever, I might even accuse him of plagiarism in the speech he gave last night in respect of the matter that is before us.

As I acted as parliamentary assistant to two Ministers of Transport from 1953 to 1957, and in that capacity was contemporary indeed with the implementation of the 1952 revision, it is possible that quite inadvertently I borrowed some of the arguments used in support of that 1952 capital revision. It is worth noting that although the 1978 revision is quite different from that of 1952, the objectives of both revisions are quite similar. But I shall revert to this aspect of the matter later on in my remarks. On the other hand, I have read the debate on the present bill in the other place and in its committee, and I must confess in all honesty that I was unable to find any major discrepancies between the remarks made by opposition members there and those of my honourable colleague here. However, I readily admit that the subject matter of the present bill does not allow much leeway for anyone debating it.

However, I was particularly struck by the close similarities of my colleague's remarks to the contents of a letter and a memorandum sent to the Minister of Transport on January 17, 1978, by Mr. Ian Sinclair, President of CP, entitled "A Perspective on Bill C-17" in which is to be found the same quotation from a message of the late Donald Gordon to CN employees after the 1952 revision, which quotation was repeated by the Honourable Senator Roblin in his address of last Wednesday in this house. However, although these similarities are not very likely merely coincidental, I am not even suspecting my colleague of plagiarism, as he did in my case the other day. I would rather see an explanation for his apparent inspiration in his past close association with CP interests when he occupied the important functions of President of Canadian Pacific Investments Ltd., Chairman of Marathon Realty Co. Ltd., Vice-President and Director of Canadian Pacific Securities Ltd., Director of Canadian Pacific Hotels Ltd., CanPac Leasing Ltd., CanPac Minerals Ltd., Cominco Ltd., and others which I need not recite here. I am merely giving the source of my information which is the 1973-74 edition of the Directory of Directors at page 439 which confirms my research of the CP report for that same year.

[Senator Langlois.]

Having said that, I wish to comment on the speeches of all those who participated in this debate, in particular that of Senator Smith (Colchester), who last night, in a very interesting address, dealt with some aspects of this bill that had not been dealt with by those who spoke before him, although some of these issues were raised in the other place. I will attempt to reply to the many questions and issues that were raised by Senator Roblin, Senator Smith (Colchester) and other senators who have so far participated in the debate. However, I will do so at random, not necessarily following the order in which the questions were raised but following rather the order in which I myself took note of these various issues. I will attempt to provide some answers which hopefully will clarify the situation. More specific and in-depth information will no doubt be provided before the Standing Senate Committee on Transport and Communications once the bill has received second reading.

The first issue I wish to discuss is the one having to do with the recapitalizations of 1937 and 1952 and the $808 million of unrecorded depreciation.

A knowledge of CN history is important in this debate, and very few of those who have participated have done a recapitulation. In order to understand fully the implications and reasons behind this bill we must do that, and I will endeavour to do so as briefly as I can.

Since the creation of CN in 1919, different governments have followed various policies with respect to CN, particularly as they related to using the company as an instrument of social and economic policy, while following some commercial objectives. However, this issue cannot be evaluated without a brief outline of CN history to date.

Senator Roblin: May I interrupt my honourable friend? Has he finished making his personal references to myself? If so, I have a statement to make.

Senator Langlois: Yes, I have finished that, but I have the floor, and unless the honourable senator wishes to ask a question—

Senator Roblin: No, it is a question of privilege.

Senator Langlois: On a question of privilege, go ahead.

Senator Roblin: I think my honourable friend has, at least by innuendo, suggested that I have been the recipient of a letter from the Chairman of the Canadian Pacific Railway and that I have been quoting that letter in this house. I wish to say that that innuendo, if it exists, is inaccurate, and that to my knowledge I received no communication whatsoever from anybody in Canadian Pacific Railway with respect to this debate. In view of the nature of the subject under discussion, I think it only right that I should make that clear so that my honourable friend will be under no misapprehension on the subject.

The second thing I should like to say to him is that perhaps it would also be advisable, for the information of the house, to indicate that he did not do me the credit of listing all the offices I held in connection with Canadian Pacific Investments in days gone by. He might perhaps have done me the justice of pointing out that I had resigned them all. I not only resigned them all, but I resigned then in 1974, under circumstances which I need not go into in detail. But I think the implication that my speech in any way represented a statement that was not my own, or interests that were not my own, is not correct, and as a point of privilege I want that to be cleared in this chamber.

● (1430)

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, I am pleased that Senator Roblin raised this question of personal privilege; but I was in a similar position the other day when I was implicitly accused, and more directly than the honourable senator, because today I did not accuse him of anything, and I clearly said so. He is using his imagination when he says that by innuendo I did so. I spoke of the honourable senator's past association, and I gave the source of my information as being the Directory of Directors for 1973-74. I did not imply that my honourable friend was still holding these positions with the CPR subsidiaries; and I referred also to the CPR financial report of the same year, 1973-74. So I do not think my honourable friend should be worried by the so-called accusation.

Senator Flynn: For what purpose did you do it?

Senator Langlois: Because I was accused of having copied someone else. I found there were similarities between the information I divulged today and the speech of the honourable senator. I cannot see why he should not expect to have a rebuttal on this very point.

Senator Grosart: Shame!

Senator Flynn: From you he should have expected that, there is no doubt.

Senator Roblin: Honourable senators, I will accept my honourable friend's apology, and in return I will withdraw any suspicion of plagiarism.

Senator Langlois: I will accept that. Honourable senators, this small tempest in a teapot being over, I should like to carry on with my remarks. I was about to deal with issue No. 1, being the recapitalizations of 1937 and 1952 and the $808 million of unrecorded depreciation. I was about to do a recapitulation of the history of the CN since its inception in 1919. Various governments have followed various policies with respect to CN, particularly as it relates to using the company as an instrument of social-economic policy while following some commercial objectives. This is particularly evident. At the outset, CN was created with a capital structure which consisted of 100 per cent debt, while in the same period CP had a debt-equity ratio of 26 per cent to 74 per cent.

Additionally, in the years from 1923 to 1931, the government funded the deficit of CN resulting from a collection of insolvent companies by further loans.

Clearly the governments of the day during that period had no intention of establishing a company which would commence operations on a commercially viable basis. The recapitalizations of 1937 and 1952 continued to make provisions for massive infusions of government funds, as well as mixed social and commercial objects.

The 1952 recapitalization in particular provided vehicles for significant infusion of government funds, and therefore tended to break down the discipline required to ensure effective, viable commercial objects.

In addition, "the legacy of the past," as we often call it, was still present in that some $808 million of unrecorded losses were not recognized until 1976 when the adjustment was made for losses attributable to years prior to the adoption of depreciation accounting in 1956, as per the Uniform Classification of Accounts of the Canadian Transport Commission.

The $807.8 million amount was established by the CN in 1976 only, in full consultation with the Parliament-appointed auditors, Coopers & Lybrand, chartered accountants, and in keeping with generally accepted accounting principles in this regard. It is included in the balance sheet of the 1976 CN Annual Report, as honourable senators know.

It should be noted that the proposed debt to equity conversion is not based on the above correction of the CN recorded depreciation.

As an aside, it is interesting to note that if instead of performing the careful calculation it did, CN had simply adopted the position that its ratio of accumulated depreciation to asset cost should be equal to that of the CP, then the indicated adjustment would have amounted to about $1.1 billion.

Now I come to issue No. 2, which was raised in the form of a question: Has CN over invested in the last 20 years? It can be said, of course, that CN investments have been of a higher percentage than those of CP Rail in the last 20 years; that is, an increase of 56 per cent in CN versus an increase of 44 per cent in CP Rail. On the other hand, this should not be considered as an over-investment, since CN has been able to come back to its 1956 level of net income of $26.1 million as compared to its 1977 level with a net income of $28 million. CP Rail had a net income of $55.6 million in 1956 and a net income of $54.8 million for the year 1977. CN has been able to keep its total cost increase in line with its revenue increase in spite of a much higher debt to equity ratio than CP and in spite of a much higher burden of unprofitable passenger services and in spite also of a higher debt interest cost than CP Rail had.

It can be said that many of the CN Rail investment programs, in which the CN took the lead over CP Rail, have proven to be very productive. However, it is the desire of the government that CN exercise in the future more financial restraint before proceeding with capital budgets.

Now I come to issue No. 3. Many senators and members of the other place have claimed that there is a need, recognized by all parties, to improve the accountability and control of Parliament and government over crown corporations and that the passage of such a bill should await the recommendations of the royal commission, that is, the Lambert Commission, and the passage of the legislative package to be introduced with respect to crown corporations. There were suggestions also that the bill be amended to provide the means for Parliament to better control CN in light of the CN performance over the past 20 years.

The system's lack of profitability during the last 20-year period is a reflection of the disadvantage of the undertaking, including its inappropriate initial capitalization and the costly process of melding the predecessor companies facilities into a unified system.

Profitability has, indeed, improved in recent years. However, it is clear that unless the intended recapitalization is fully implemented, the company will not be able to achieve comparability with successful privately owned railways.

● (1440)

It should be noted, however, that between 1956 and 1976, CN has kept its increase in total costs in line with its revenues. CN did better than CP Rail in this respect, and I give one example of this. The CN 1956 net income was $26.1 million, and the 1977 net income was $28 million. On the other hand, the CP Rail net income was $55.6 million in 1956, and the 1977 CP Rail net income was down to $54.8 million.

I believe this indicates that current CN management does not need additional control besides what is generally intended to be done through the proposed crown corporations bill. Therefore, to my mind there is no reason to further delay the passage of this bill.

Reference was made last night in this house by Senator Smith (Colchester) to pensions and related matters, and I am going to deal extensively with this important subject. In order to achieve this I am going to put this issue in the form of questions.

Question No. 1: What were Dr. Noel Hall's main recommendations and what is expected to come out of his report on railway pensions?

Answer: Dr. Hall considered that the central issue is the effect of inflation on railway pensions. He calls for immediate improvements to the Canadian Pacific pension plan to bring it in line with the Canadian National pension plan. Dr. Hall recommends, and I quote:

Retired employees of the CPR should be granted the same level of increase in pensions since retirement as those granted by the CNR to its retired employees. These increases have been approximately 2 per cent annually each year since 1970, and should apply to all those retired prior to January 1, 1973. These increases should also apply to those in receipt of survivor pensions.

That the provisions in the CPR pension plan terminating survivor benefits upon the remarriage of the eligible widow or widower, be removed.

A further recommendation is that the provisions of the CPR pension plan requiring marriage five years prior to the death of the employee or pensioner in order to qualify for a survivor's pension be reduced to one year.

[Senator Langlois.]

A final recommendation from which I wish to quote this afternoon is that the provision in the CPR pension plan limiting eligibility to employees hired before age 40, be changed to read, "hired before age 60."

Dr. Hall's report gives the highest priority to the welfare of existing pensioners and survivors. To assist them, he recommends for consideration by the parties the creation of a "Heritage Fund" based on a levy of 1 per cent of existing payrolls, shared equally by current employees and the companies, to provide full adjustments for past increases in the cost of living.

At the recent negotiations a modified version of Dr. Hall's "Heritage Fund" concept was agreed to. It is not anticipated that any other changes will evolve from his report.

Dr. Hall compared the railway pension plans in all their aspects with plans in the public and private sectors. He concluded that the railway plans compare favourably with the best plans in the representative groups selected from the private sector. The most important difference between the public sector plans and those covering railway employees is that five of the nine public plans in the study provide full indexation of current pensions.

Dr. Hall stressed in his report that he should refrain from making specific recommendations where the evidence clearly suggests that the unions and the railways are capable of dealing with pension issues through established collective bargaining procedures. Significant improvements to the railway pension plans have been made since 1973, when pensions became a bargainable issue.

Question No. 2: What are the unfunded liabilities of the CN and CP pension funds?

Answer: CP, as at December 31, 1977, $868 million; CN, as of the same date, $1,072,018,348.

Question No. 3: Are the pension funds being manipulated?

Answer: The CN pension trust funds are maintained independently of any company funds. These are invested and controlled by the provisions of the Pension Benefits Standards Act and Regulations, and are subject to annual audit by the government auditors. CN pension funds have never been manipulated.

Question No. 4: How much of the pension fund is invested in CN, and at what interest rate?

Answer:

Due	Coupon Rate	Amount
1 February 1981	4%	$3.9 million
1 January 1985	5¾%	10.6 million
1 October 1987	5%	19.4 million
		$33.9 million

Of course, I hasten to add that these interest rates were the going rates at the time these securities were issued. The $33.9 million held by the pension fund is only 7 per cent of the total of these three issues, totalling, in all, $505 million. The remaining 93 per cent is held by the public.

Question No. 5: Should the pensions of retired railway employees be increased on the same basis as for current union employees?

Answer: Improvements in pension benefits have never been applied retroactively. Employees retire and receive the benefits provided by the plan at their retirement date. I do not foresee any change in this philosophy; however, ad hoc increases have been granted to certain pensioners and widows since 1971. At the recent negotiations a modified version of Dr. Hall's "Heritage Fund" concept, to provide for the escalation of existing pensions in the year 1978, was agreed to.

Now, I pass on to issue No. 5 relative to competition. On the question of competition, it is worth noting that the $808 million debt to equity conversion is not intended to improve CN's competitive position over CP trucking or other CN related businesses. It is intended to place CN in a responsible financial framework so that it may stand on its own feet—that is, outside of government appropriations—and to sustain such a position. It would not be possible for CN to sustain such a position if, for example, freight rates were not allowed to continue to increase in line with the increasing costs with due recognition to the normal forces of competition. For example, in looking at the unit cost aspect, which is the basis for establishing the minimum rates, such a debt to equity conversion does not have any impact, since CN and CP are using the CTC approved figure for the cost of money. The CTC bases for determining the cost of money are, indeed, the CP financial parameters and not those of CN. The unit cost basis used to establish freight rates is not modified by this proposed debt to equity conversion. Inasmuch as costs are used to set freight rates, CN is not improving its competitive position with the passage of this bill.

● (1450)

I now come to issue No. 6 which deals with rate discrimination. The question asked there is: Is CN going to expand its domestic container fleet to kill truck competition?

CN and CP have more than 80,000 boxcars. At this time there is no indication whatsoever that containers on flat cars will replace these boxcars. If there are indications of any attempt by the railways—and I include both major companies—to kill the trucking competition, this should be brought to the attention of Transport Canada and the CTC. If need be, the rule of competition could be modified to fit changing conditions.

Issue No. 7 also deals with rate discrimination.

The Canadian Trucking Association is accusing the railways of "rate discrimination" and so-called "dirty tricks," favouring the railway's own trucks over other trucks, particularly for highway movement of containers and piggyback trailers.

Transport Canada officials contacted the association to seek specific documented examples. They were advised that past cases of such discrimination have been corrected by CN and CP. However, the association has advised Transport Canada officials that they are in the process of documenting current occurrences of rate discrimination or dirty tricks.

The Minister of Transport has, therefore, advised the association that specific examples of rate discrimination should be documented and brought to the attention of the minister and the CTC in order that corrective action can be initiated.

I now come to issue No. 8 which deals with the fact that the government is under no legal obligation to purchase the 4 per cent preferred stock of CN.

It is true that the government has not been under any obligation to purchase the preferred stock of CN since 1961. However, it has been used as one of the mechanisms by successive governments, including a Conservative government, to infuse needed funds into CN. As a matter of fact, serious consideration was also given by the Ministers of Transport, of Finance, and of Treasury Board, as a substitute to Bill C-17, to increase the purchase of the preferred stock. Because of the current fiscal constraints and the concerted efforts on behalf of the government to reduce its expenditures, this option was rejected. A debt to equity conversion of the $808 million was adopted as the preferred option. This bill puts CN on a financially stable basis without the need of government appropriations.

CN will be in a position to raise its future capital investment requirements on its own; it therefore satisfies the general government desire to reduce its own cash requirements; and it normalizes the CN's shareholders' equity as shown in the CN Annual Report to aid CN in money market activities.

I now come to issue No. 9 which deals with the profits of CN and the claim that CN is now making a profit, and has projected profits without Bill C-17, and that, therefore, this recapitalization is not needed.

A further claim is that CN is now making a profit and is projecting profits for the next five years without this bill and with its current financial structure. The CN projected profit position with this recapitalization may be too healthy for such a crown corporation, and it would be wise to await the impact of relieving CN of its financial constraints before going ahead with such a recapitalization.

The examples given were the transfer of passenger service to VIA Rail; the adjustment in the Crowsnest rate; the government expenditures in the purchase of grain hopper cars and in the rehabilitation of the Prairie branch lines; the relief to be expected for Newfoundland operations, and so on.

Under this bill, CN must pay a minimum of 20 per cent of its net income to the government as dividends. The remaining profits as projected are required to sustain CN's debt to equity ratio at the same level of that of its main competitor, CP Rail.

Issue No. 10 raises the question: The 1952 recapitalization did not work. Why should this one work?

The 1956 recapitalization, as I stated earlier, is quite different in many aspects from that being proposed in this bill. Bill C-17 differs significantly from the two previous recapitalization bills, those of 1932 and 1956, in that it provides the means for CN to stand on its own feet on a commercial basis and outside the government's annual appropriations. Being put on a similar debt-equity basis as CP, it is the government's intention to allow CN to operate on a commercial basis and to ask CN to conduct its affairs with a commercial attitude. This will facilitate the government's assessment of CN's performance and provide CN management with the unambiguous criteria for decision-making and avoid the possibility of over-investment.

● (1500)

In summary, Bill C-17 creates a capital structure for CN, which is believed appropriate for a mature corporation. It will provide the means for CN to run its operations on a commercial basis while raising the necessary funds for its capital projects in the market place. At least the Canadian people can expect to receive a return on their equity in Canada's largest crown corporation. The CN management will be responsible and accountable to manage a financially viable self-supporting institution.

The government is confident of the ultimate effectiveness of Bill C-17 to achieve its objectives with due regard to competition. The main thrust of the present legislation is to make CN more accountable for its own financing and end the need for government dependency. For that reason it should be supported by those who believe in a competitive free market system.

I come now to issue No. 11, the thrust of which was that CN, having been able to raise the necessary financing on its own, so far with a double A rating, does not seem to need this bill to carry on and obtain the necessary funding from the money market. This was done with the full knowledge of the investors. Honourable senators will agree that the government had a moral obligation to continue to purchase some $80 million worth of preferred stock every year. Without this, the situation could have been quite different.

Issue No. 12 raised the following question: What is the primary role of CN? The primary role of CN is to run effectively the business which they have now broken down in profit centres—that is CN Rail; Grand Trunk Corporation; CN Telecommunications; CN Trucking; CN Express; CN Passenger; CN Hotels; CN Marine, and others.

I should mention in passing that Grand Trunk Corporation is a corporation which was incorporated in the United States as a holding company for the Canadian National subsidiaries operating in that country. The incorporation took place in 1971 following an order in council authorizing it.

In the long term the growth and expansion of these profit centres must be done to satisfy the needs of this country in a cost-effective manner with good use of scarce resources; to be self-sufficient; and to receive compensation for non-economic services which must be kept in the name of the public interest.

There were many other issues raised regarding what the government's policies were on transportation in Canada. There was some criticism raised of the user-pay concept—which I do not need to explain because it is well known what it means—freight rate structures, and intermodal competition. The rules of competition are within the National Transportation Act, and revisions have been recognized in Bill C-33.

[Senator Langlois.]

As an addition, I should like to remind honourable senators that Bill C-33 died on the order paper at the end of the second session of this Parliament. The minister indicated recently that he would be prepared to reintroduce the bill provided he had some assurance from the opposition that it would receive passage in a reasonable time. National transportation policies are well known and could be resumed in this fashion.

There are many factors which would influence the development and operation of the transport system in Canada. Some of these factors are external, such as the growth of world trade, the demand for Canadian exports, and existing and future agreements with foreign countries. Others are domestic in origin: economic growth and the resulting demand for efficient freight and passenger transportation, concern about energy conservation and the environment, and the need to redirect the pattern and nature of urban and regional development. All these could have a marked influence on the future development of the transportation system.

The principal objectives of Bill C-33 are that a new transportation policy is necessary in Canada so as to assure it is efficient; is an effective instrument of support for the achievement of national, regional and socio-economic objectives; and provides accessibility and equity of treatment for users. Bill C-33 also states the principle applicable in achieving the new objectives.

The Government of Canada should establish national policies respecting the various constituent parts of the transportation system, and it is the responsibility of the commission, within its statutory jurisdiction, to ensure adherence to such policies.

In major aspects of the process relating to the development and economic regulation of the transport system, there should be co-operation between the various levels of government as well as consultation with the public.

In the planning and development of transportation services designed to achieve a particular purpose, consideration should be given to all means of achieving that purpose, including means that do not involve a mode of transport.

Competition within and between modes of transport should be encouraged where economic and technical factors permit. In the provision of transportation services there should be opportunity for both public ownership and private ownership of carriers, and also for national, regional and even local carriers with Canadian-controlled or publicly-owned carriers being an objective. Any conflict between public and private objectives should be resolved in favour of the public interest.

Commercial viability should be an objective, both in the operation of transportation services and in the provision of facilities and services in direct support thereof.

Where the implementation of a particular policy of the government requires departure from the objective of commercial viability referred to above, the benefits and costs involved should be identified and a relevant addition of costs assumed directly by the government.

● (1510)

This principle was renewed in the other place on February 7 last by the Honourable Otto Lang. I quote from page 2622 of Hansard of the other place, as follows:

—Crown corporations are to operate as efficiently and effectively as possible. In our view, we should not cloud their performance by imposing obligations upon them to carry out even good public services unless we are prepared to quantify the cost of that public service and to pay the price for it directly.

One of the other objectives of this transportation policy is that where effective competition exists, transportation rates and services should be established through the working of the market mechanisms. Where no effective competition exists, transportation rates and services should be so regulated as to provide transportation users the same protection as they would have if effective competition existed.

Where competitive services are available but public assistance is considered necessary to support a policy of the Government of Canada, such assistance should be made available in such a way so as not to distort the selection by the user of the most appropriate mode of transportation.

Finally, special measures, insofar as they are necessary, should be adopted to avoid undue disruption of the transportation services essential to the national interest.

Before concluding my remarks, I should like to put certain figures on the record relating to the debt-equity ratio of both CN and CP over a period from 1923 to 1975.

DEBT TO EQUITY RATIO

Year	CP	CN
1923	26%	100%
1937*	37%	65%
1952*	35%	55%* *
1975	36%	62%
after proposed debt to equity conversion	36%	42%

* After the capital revision

** After giving recognition to the unrecorded depreciation and by reducing the reported value of the equity accordingly as reflected in the CN 1976 Annual Report and as approved by the Government appointed Auditors.

Mention was made during the course of the debate of the subsidy received by CP. I have a table showing the subsidies paid to the railways by CTC during the period 1976 to 1977, which is as follows:

RAILWAY SUBSIDIES EARNED IN RESPECT OF THE FOLLOWING YEARS AS PAID BY CTC AS OF DECEMBER 31, 1977

($ Million) (Rounding)

	CN		CP
	1976	1977	1976	1977
Passenger	145.1	132.7	36.0	34.7
Branch Lines	42.9	40.6	38.0	36.1
At & East	7.5	6.8	6.3	5.2
	195.5	180.2	80.2	75.9

Note: Subsidies paid to the railway by CTC during 1977 in respect of all years are $183.7M to CN (after correction of the subsidy over-payment) and $94.2M to CP.

Honourable senators, this concludes my remarks. I thank you for your attention, and I commend this bill to your favourable consideration.

Senator Bell: Honourable senators, I wonder if I might ask the sponsor of the bill to what body the reference "Transport Canada" refers. It is a name with which I am not familiar.

Senator Langlois: Transport Canada is the Department of Transport.

Senator Roblin: I wonder if the honourable senator would clarify a point for me. He spoke of the commercial principles under which the Canadian National is now to operate, and he spoke of the position of the minister to make sure that non-commercial costs were recognized as being outside its mandate. I am wondering if he can now tell me how, in the forecast of the profit of Canadian National, the $64 million per year which the railway says it loses on the Crowsnest rate movement has been treated.

Senator Langlois: I do not have a ready answer to the question. I would suggest that Senator Roblin put that question during the committee's consideration of the bill.

Motion agreed to and bill read second time, on division.

REFERRED TO COMMITTEE

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this bill be read a third time?

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, I move that this bill be referred to the Standing Senate Committee on Transport and Communications.

Senator Choquette: Honourable senators, I am wondering whether there is anything left for the committee to cover. It seems that the sponsor of the bill has left no stone unturned. I have never heard such a lengthy explanation in closing a debate, and am wondering what is left for the committee to deal with.

Senator Langlois: If I left no stone unturned, it is because no stone was left unturned by those who participated in the debate. I was merely endeavouring to provide adequate replies to all of the questions raised during the course of the debate.

Senator Roblin: There are a few stones that have yet to be turned over, and some stones which were turned over that have to be put back.

● (1520)

Senator Benidickson: Honourable senators, if this motion is debatable—I am not an expert on the rules and my memory is not the best—then I would mention that I have some special privileges in this respect. In 1952, when the CNR capital revision was important—and this has been referred to in the debate on second reading—I happened to be parliamentary secretary to the Minister of Transport, and I confirm basically what Senator Smith (Colchester) has said. I have not quite completed reading the speech of Senator Roblin, which I was not able to hear last week because I was away. I am sure his figures are correct, but my recollection—and this is not from research—is that with that capital revision bill we certainly felt we had eliminated most, if not all, of the unfair deadwood that was created in the amalgamation of the railroads in the period from 1919 to 1922, and the deficits of subsequent years. Because of this motion—

Senator Asselin: Are we still on second reading?

Senator Benidickson: No, I am speaking on the motion to refer the bill to committee. I am simply giving advance notice—if the rules permit, and I think they do—that I would like some figures on two or three points.

I had the second opportunity between 1952 and 1957, as a pretty green boy, to introduce each year the bill on the capital revision requirements and budget of the CNR. Now, in this period it was so complicated, and involved so many hundreds of millions of dollars, that I was not the only one who was ignorant; but each year the annual CNR financing bill was passed fairly rapidly because of the immensity and complexity of the figures involved. I am thinking of the period from 1952 to 1957 when I was responsible for the annual bills.

What new real infusion of capital was brought about during the regime of Donald Gordon? Senator Roblin was very complimentary to Mr. Gordon. I had a little doubt as to whether I was doing the right thing, and I may have to apologize when we come to third reading. Anyway, a tremendous amount of new capital was invested in those years for dieselization, and the very expensive hump freight distribution system introduced in Winnipeg, Moncton and other places. Those improvements cost millions and millions of dollars, and the amounts were in those bills that I introduced.

I will tell the Leader of the Opposition a little secret because time has gone by and it is possible now. The financial critic of his party came to me and asked for my black book of information, and I willingly gave it to him. It was all just too huge financially for any member of Parliament to analyze and comprehend, usually under pressure of time.

Anyway, I would like to give advance notice to the committee that I shall want to know what really new capital, irrespective of depreciation, was introduced in that period for some of these so-called technological improvements that we were assured by management would be money-makers, would provide a return on investment, and would never have to be wiped out, as we are doing now. And, of course, I shall want to know the same figures for the period after 1957 when another government came into power, and I was the financial critic of the same bills, probably with similar apprehensions.

I think my colleagues in the committee study that is to follow will understand why I ask for this. I was really a parliamentary assistant and errand boy; I was not a minister. So, I would like to know the amount of net new capital introduced by the government. Depreciation has to be taken into account, of course.

In 1951-52, my minister assured the government that the CNR had been relieved of most of its old-time debt. Here I am speaking chiefly of railroading. The question of whether the railway has invested in non-railway activities is another question.

I compliment Senator Smith (Colchester) on the figures he gave last night which, although I have not had time to research them, I know are accurate. I also compliment Senator Roblin on his speech. I introduced in a five-year period several annual capitalization bills to provide for profit-making which involved over a billion dollars, and this has worried me ever since.

The Hon. the Speaker: Is it your pleasure, honourable senators, to adopt the motion?

Motion agreed to.

INCOME TAX

BANKING, TRADE AND COMMERCE COMMITTEE AUTHORIZED TO STUDY LEGISLATION

The Senate resumed from yesterday the debate on the motion of Senator Hayden, that the Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce be authorized to examine and consider the subject matter of any bill based on the Budget Resolutions relating to income tax in advance of any such bill coming before the Senate, or any matter relating thereto.

Hon. Jacques Flynn: Last night Senator Hayden explained what he considered to be the main reason for this referral of the subject matter of Bill C-56 to the Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce by saying that invariably this type of bill is referred to the Senate when we are looking at either a summer or a Christmas recess. He added:

The idea of this motion is to afford the opportunity of a pre-study so that the pressures that ordinarily accompany the approach of these recess periods may be avoided and proper consideration given to bills of this kind.

● (1530)

I must say that the idea of the pressure of the Christmas or summer recess does not appeal to me too much, as I have indicated before. However, I appreciate that adequate opportunity should be given to the Senate, and to the Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce, to consider this type of bill before we are asked to pass it.

There is another aspect of this method which I think is much more important: the fact that a committee of the Senate is able to examine a piece of legislation, a white paper or a set of proposals, before it passes the other place. This enables us to make recommendations that are more likely to be accepted than the amendments we might make after the bill has passed the other place and has reached us. This is very important. We are in a better position to convince the government and the other place that they should make some amendments or changes along the lines of the recommendations we make through a committee to which the subject matter of a bill or white paper has been referred.

In this particular case, there is another aspect that is important. The committee will not only deal with a fiscal bill in the ordinary sense, but with one that also involves a very important political problem. And I hope that the committee will not hesitate to look into that aspect of the question. I also hope that, if the committee looks into it, those who are not totally in agreement with the proposals of the government for a reduction of the provincial sales tax, or with what the government has done, will not be considered separatists, as was suggested last night by Senator Denis.

I would hope that people who are noted for their expertise in the matter of federal-provincial fiscal relations—people like Senator Lamontagne, for example, who was mentioned in the press last weekend as being in search of an appropriate formula—could suggest a solution to this confrontation between the two levels of government in Ottawa and Quebec. I hope Senator Lamontagne will come before the committee and make some suggestions, because as we look at the subject matter we aren't tied by the problem of competence in dealing with amendments; we are only making recommendations. It is easier to make recommendations than to make amendments, and I hope the committee will not hesitate to call on any person who has an opinion to offer or a solution to propose, even Mr. Jacques Parizeau. The problem here is one not so much of taxation and jurisdiction as of confrontation between the two levels of government.

I am not a separatist, even if Senator Denis thinks I act like one. I have never knowingly done anything to promote separatism or the independence of Quebec. On the contrary. However, what I feel is that confrontation may be more dangerous to the unity of this country than anything else.

Some Hon. Senators: Hear, hear!

Senator Denis: When the honourable senator talked about the new modification, or the new way, he could at least have been fair and told us what Mr. Parizeau did wrong, instead of saying only what Parizeau did that was good.

Senator Flynn: I do not think I defended Mr. Parizeau's position. Nor did I attack Mr. Chrétien's position. I am willing to give my opinion on that, but I do not think it is relevant at this point. I was merely trying to say that I was hoping the committee would be able to do something to resolve the confrontation that has taken place between Quebec and Ottawa. I said that because I think confrontation is more dangerous to the unity of Canada than anything else.

I do not doubt that Mr. Parizeau is happy with the present confrontation. I suspect, however, that the present federal government had also used confrontation to its own advantage, not only with the present Quebec government but with previous Quebec governments. I would remind Senator Denis of some of those previous occasions, when Mr. Bourassa was laughed at by the present Prime Minister of Canada, and of the conditions that prevailed under Mr. Lesage, Mr. Johnson and Mr. Bertrand. Such confrontations have taken place for the most part under Liberal administrations here in Ottawa.

Mr. Parizeau played his cards very close to vest; Mr. Chrétien would be justified in saying that Mr. Parizeau tricked him; that is quite possible. But I think that Mr. Chrétien should have suspected that this might happen. In any event, we are faced with a confrontation, and it must be resolved.

I would hope that in studying the subject matter of the bill the committee will try, with the help of all those who are interested—and I am one—to find a solution. I am not, however, as competent as Senator Lamontagne and others, and I would call on them to help us out. I do not know if in this particular case Senator Denis could help. I would suggest that he stay out of the committee, because I do not think he possesses any of the diplomatic talents required under the circumstances.

Senator Denis: Unlike you, I am an expert at that.

Senator Flynn: Sometimes I know when not to speak.

I merely want to call on all those of good will with knowledge in this area to contribute recommendations that might be helpful in finding a solution to this delicate and serious problem.

Motion agreed to.

● (1540)

BANKS AND BANKING LAW REVISION BILL, 1978

BANKING, TRADE AND COMMERCE COMMITTEE AUTHORIZED TO MAKE STUDY

Hon. Salter A. Hayden moved pursuant to notice:

That the Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce be authorized to examine and consider the subject matter of the Bill C-57, intituled: "An Act to revise the Bank Act, to amend the Quebec Savings Banks Act and the Bank of Canada Act, to establish the Canadian Payments Association and to amend other Acts in consequence thereof", in advance of the said Bill coming before the Senate, or any matter relating thereto.

He said: Honourable senators, possibly I should explain my presentation of this motion at this time, in view of the fact that Senator Flynn, with respect to a previous motion similar in nature, did not feel that we had put the best foot forward.

Precedent is important, and this business of referring the subject matter of a bill to committee developed, in the first instance, in 1971 when we were wrestling with the income tax bill. That bill came to us some time in December. I had anticipated that possibility during the summer, and had discussed the matter with the Law Clerk. I said, "There must be some way of doing this so that we will be fully informed and will not have to wait to have our study until the bill actually comes to us. Why can't we look at the subject matter of it?" The Law Clerk replied, "There is nothing in the world to prevent you."

So that was really the first motion; and the reason for it was that we were anticipating a Christmas recess. It worked in that case, and it has worked in other cases.

I agree—and I have said so in committee many times, but did not think I should mention it in the Senate—that the strategy behind this kind of motion is dependent on our being able to complete our report before the matter is fully dealt with in the House of Commons, in order that there might be opportunity for amendment.

We have done two things in that regard. We studied the income tax bill fully under the authorization to study the subject matter, and we then presented amendments to the Minister of Finance. The bill was still struggling through the committee of the other place. Finally, when the minister came before us, it was too late to deal with all the amendments we had proposed. So in relation to specific amendments we insisted on an undertaking from him that they would be included in the next income tax bill to be presented.

We have since made use of that procedure on a number of occasions. We made use of it when we were studying the Petroleum Corporations Monitoring bill. We made use of it when the previous Minister of Finance was before us and dealing with certain situations. He agreed that our suggestion by way of amendment was the way it should be done. However, he wanted his bill, and he undertook to find a way under the Financial Administration Act to deal with it temporarily, and said that it would be included in the income tax amendments the next year. That was done.

So we have a combination of elements with which we are working, and underneath it all the basic object is to get our attitude on the bill communicated publicly to the minister, to the Commons and the Commons committee before there is any finality in that house; otherwise there may be motions and objections, such as, "Well, those people in the Senate and the Senate committee certainly think they are pretty smart people in proposing all these things."

It is a good committee, and part of the value of the committee is in the fact that Senator Flynn is a member of it. He is a good member of the committee.

Hon. Senators: Hear, hear.

Senator Hayden: As a matter of fact, from time to time I will ask, "Senator Flynn, what have you to say on this point?" Perhaps there is some design in that. Perhaps it will bring his thinking into line with what we think the amendment should be. I wish to thank him for his suggestions today. It is a new role, but with his broad shoulders, and the broad shoulders of the other members of the committee, perhaps we can take on the burden of that confrontation. It has happened so often before, and it is bound to happen almost every time we get an income tax bill that has so many goodies in it that it cannot be refused.

However, on this bill the issue is straightforward. We made a study of the White Paper on the Revision of Canadian Banking Legislation, and presented a report on it approximately nine months ago. I can say, from a rather casual study of the bill and comparing it with our report, it would appear that from two-thirds to perhaps three-quarters of it embraces the substance of the recommendations contained in our report. A great deal of it includes actual sections from the Canada Business Corporations Act, including the amendments which we made this year to Bill S-2. That accounts for a substantial part of the bulk of this bill.

Of course, in some fashion the competition bill creeps into it, but we will sort that out. There are other what might be called structural objections, as well as objections concerning the method posed to deal with the situation. However, we will deal with all of those matters. It is a competent committee which is not afraid to engage expert help. With all that, we just want to get going as quickly as we can.

Motion agreed to.

NORTHERN PIPELINE

FIFTH REPORT OF COMMITTEE OF SELECTION PRESENTED AND ADOPTED

Leave having been given to revert to Reports of Committees:

Senator Petten, Chairman of the Committee of Selection, presented the following report:

Your committee has the honour to submit herewith the list of senators nominated by it to serve on the Special Committee of the Senate on the Northern Pipeline, namely, the Honourable Senators Adams, Austin, Beaubien, Bonnell, Cottreau, Flynn, Hays, Lang, Langlois, Lucier, Macnaughton, Manning, Olson, Riley, Rowe, Smith (Colchester), Steuart, van Roggen, Williams and Yuzyk.

Respectfully submitted,

William J. Petten,
Chairman.

• (1550)

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this report be taken into consideration?

Senator Petten: Honourable senators, with leave of the Senate and notwithstanding rule 45(1)(f), I move that this report be adopted now.

The Hon. the Speaker: Is it agreed, honourable senators?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

Motion agreed to and report adopted.

The Senate adjourned until tomorrow at 2 p.m.

THE SENATE

Thursday, May 25, 1978

The Senate met at 2 p.m., the Speaker in the Chair.
Prayers.

DOCUMENTS TABLED

Senator Langlois tabled:

Copies of document entitled "Improving the Equity Financing Environment for Small Business in Canada," dated May 24, 1978.

ADJOURNMENT

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, I move, with leave of the Senate and notwithstanding rule 45(1)(g), that when the Senate adjourns today it do stand adjourned until Tuesday, June 6, 1978, at 8 o'clock in the evening.

Motion agreed to.

BANKING, TRADE AND COMMERCE

COMMITTEE AUTHORIZED TO MEET DURING SITTING OF THE SENATE

Senator Langlois, with leave of the Senate and notwithstanding rule 45(1)(a), moved:

That the Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce have power to sit while the Senate is sitting on Wednesday, June 7, 1978, and that rule 76(4) be suspended in relation thereto.

Motion agreed to.

TRANSPORT AND COMMUNICATIONS

COMMITTEE AUTHORIZED TO MEET DURING ADJOURNMENTS OF THE SENATE

Senator Langlois, with leave of the Senate and notwithstanding rule 45(1)(i) moved:

That the Standing Senate Committee on Transport and Communications have power to sit during adjournments of the Senate.

He said: Honourable senators, I should like to give an explanation of this motion. This morning, in consultation with the Honourable Senator Smith (Colchester), the chairman of this committee, and Senator Bourget, the co-ordinator of committees, it was decided that the committee should sit when the Senate returns on June 6. The committee will therefore sit in the morning at 9.30 and in the afternoon at 2. If the motion is passed, we shall arrange to have notices distributed to senators at their desks this afternoon so that they will know what is in store for them during that week with regard to meetings of that committee, and the order in which witnesses may be called to give evidence.

Motion agreed to.

NORTHERN PIPELINE

COMMITTEE AUTHORIZED TO MEET DURING SITTING OF THE SENATE

Senator Langlois, with leave of the Senate and notwithstanding rule 45(1)(a), moved:

That the Special Committee of the Senate on the Northern Pipeline have power to sit while the Senate is sitting on Tuesday, June 6, 1978, and that rule 76(4) be suspended in relation thereto.

Motion agreed to.

COMMITTEE AUTHORIZED TO ENGAGE SERVICES

Senator Olson, with leave of the Senate and notwithstanding rule 45(1)(i), moved:

That the Special Committee of the Senate on the Northern Pipeline have power to engage the services of such technical, clerical and other personnel as may be necessary for the purpose of the inquiry.

Motion agreed to.

AGRICULTURE

COMMITTEE AUTHORIZED TO STUDY MARKETING OF GRAINS AND OTHER AGRICULTURAL PRODUCTS

Senator Argue, with leave of the Senate and notwithstanding rule 45(1)(e), moved:

That the Standing Senate Committee on Agriculture be authorized to examine and report upon the problems of international co-operation in the marketing of grains and other agricultural products; and

That the committee, or any subcommittee so authorized by the committee, may adjourn from place to place in Canada for the purpose of such examination.

Motion agreed to.

THE HONOURABLE RAYMOND J. PERRAULT, P.C.

ABSENCE ON OFFICIAL BUSINESS

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, I should probably have done this before today. However, I thought that honourable senators knew the reason why the Leader of the Government has been absent from the house this week. Having received many inquiries yesterday afternoon and this morning, I should explain that Senator Perrault is on official business in British Columbia, where the Honourable John Silkin, Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food of Great Britain, is paying a visit. Senator Perrault will be returning to Ottawa next Monday. I apologize for not having informed the house about this matter before today.

● (1410)

Senator Grosart: Tell him we miss him.

CURRENCY AND EXCHANGE ACT

BILL TO AMEND—THIRD READING

Senator Langlois moved the third reading of Bill C-39, to amend the Currency and Exchange Act.

The Hon. the Speaker: It is moved by the Honourable Senator Langlois, seconded by the Honourable Senator Bourget, P.C., that this bill be now read the third time.

Is it your pleasure, honourable senators, to adopt the motion?

Hon. Eugene A. Forsey: Honourable senators, I rise simply to express my regret that the committee, when it was reporting this bill, did not recommend an amendment to provide that the action under the bill by the executive, the government, should not only be reported on as required by the last part of clause 2, but also that such action should not come into effect except upon an affirmative resolution of both houses. I think it is very unfortunate that this was not done, because I think the bill, as it stands, gives far too much power to the executive, and takes away, to a large extent, one of the most important functions and powers of Parliament with regard to the control of the currency.

Motion agreed to and bill read third time and passed.

FINANCIAL ADMINISTRATION ACT

BILL TO AMEND—MOTION FOR THIRD READING—MOTION IN AMENDMENT—DEBATE ADJOURNED

Senator Everett moved the third reading of Bill C-10, to amend the Financial Administration Act.

The Hon. the Speaker: It is moved by the Honourable Senator Everett, seconded by the Honourable Senator Cameron, that this bill be now read the third time.

Is it your pleasure, honourable senators, to adopt the motion?

Hon. Eugene A. Forsey: Honourable senators, I rise to move an amendment to the motion for third reading.

The amendment is to strike out lines 7 to 16, inclusive on page 1 and substitute the following—I am prepared to allow the reading of this to be done by the Clerk Assistant if it is the wish of honourable senators, but I am also prepared to read it in extenso myself. I do not know which the house would prefer, but presumably if I read it once it would be unnecessary for the Clerk Assistant to read it again, and we can say, "Dispense".

[Senator Langlois.]

Copies of the amendment will be available, I think, to most honourable senators; if not all, I have a packet of them here.

To proceed then with the amendment:

(2.1) The Governor in Council may, by commission under the Great Seal, appoint an officer called the Comptroller General of Canada to hold office during good behaviour for a term of ten years, but the Comptroller General may be removed by the Governor in Council on address of the Senate and House of Commons.

(2.2) Notwithstanding subsection (1), the Comptroller General ceases to hold office on attaining the age of sixty-five years.

(2.3) Once having served as the Comptroller General, a person is not eligible for re-appointment to that office.

(2.4) In the event of the absence or incapacity of the Comptroller General or if the office of Comptroller General is vacant, the Governor in Council may appoint a person temporarily to perform the duties of Comptroller General.

(2.5) The Comptroller General shall be paid a salary equal to the salary of the Auditor General, and the provisions of subsection 4(2) of the Auditor General Act in respect of pension benefits apply, with such modifications as the circumstances require, to the Comptroller General.

(2.6) The Comptroller General is the chief financial officer of the Government of Canada and as such shall establish financial systems and procedures to ensure that

(a) the form of the Estimates provides a sound basis for budgetary control of government expenditures,

(b) public moneys and assets are kept under effective custody and control,

(c) government accounting procedures and financial statements conform to generally accepted accounting principles and standards,

(d) public moneys are expended with due regard to economy and efficiency, and

(e) satisfactory methods are used to measure the effectiveness of government programs, and shall perform such additional duties and functions as may be assigned to him by the Treasury Board.

(2.7) The Comptroller General shall report annually to Parliament on the work of his office.

(2.8) Every report to Parliament made by the Comptroller General under this section shall be made by being transmitted to the Speaker of the Senate and to the Speaker of the House of Commons for tabling in their respective Houses.

(2.9)—

And here in the copies which may be distributed shortly there is a small typographical error.

(2.9) Sections 15, 16, 18, 20 and 21 of the Auditor General Act apply, with such modifications as the circumstances require, to the Comptroller General.

I so move, honourable senators, seconded by the Honourable Senator Smith (Colchester).

The Hon. the Speaker: It is moved by the Honourable Senator Everett, seconded by the Honourable Senator Cameron, that this bill be now read the third time.

In amendment, it is moved by the Honourable Senator Forsey, seconded by the Honourable Senator Smith (Colchester), that—

Hon. Senators: Dispense.

The Hon. the Speaker: Is it your pleasure, honourable senators, to adopt the motion in amendment?

Senator Forsey: Honourable senators, I rise with regret to speak to this amendment. I hoped it would not be necessary.

Before saying anything else, I should add that I regret very much that at the moment there is not a French version of the amendment available.

[Translation]

It is with infinite regret that I say no French version is available, or at least has been until now. We hope to get one within a matter of minutes, perhaps even before the end of my speech. I therefore ask the francophone senators to forgive that omission which is in no way voluntary on my part. But the matter was rather urgent, and during the morning the person entrusted with the translation of those documents was not available. As for me, I would never dare write any legal text, even in English, let alone in French. Obviously, I am not a lawyer and do not have the necessary qualifications, either in English or in French. That is why there has been no French version, at least until now. So, once again, I beg the forgiveness of the honourable francophone senators.

● (1420)

[English]

I voted for the second reading of this bill in the hope, not very robust, faint yet pursuing, that it would be amended in committee to give it some meaning, some force and some substance. That effort was made. It failed. I am not ready to accept that defeat as final. I want to give the Senate a second chance. That is why I am moving the amendment which has just been read.

I am not going to repeat the arguments that a number of us advanced against this measure on second reading. I shall simply say that as far as my own observations are concerned they stand unrevised and unrepented. I have seen no reason to change them. Not one of the arguments advanced by those who opposed the bill has been answered, in my judgment.

I am not going to trouble the Senate with any attempt to refute the replies to the arguments advanced by those who oppose the bill, except for one, which I shall mention incidentally in a few moments, because they were scarcely arguments.

We were treated instead to a parade of irrelevancies and vague assurances—vague assurances that the Lambert Commission would soon be reporting and everything would be placed upon the best and surest foundation; vague assurances that the Financial Administration Act was being revised and that an amended and notably improved version would be before us in due course, as Sir Robert Borden used to say, though nothing definite by way of time was suggested. And, of course, we were also given the general assurance that everything would be for the best under the best of all possible institutions, the Treasury Board, whose glittering record in this matter has been painted in such glowing terms by the Auditor General.

I recall one attempt at an argument which I think I need trouble the Senate with for a moment, which is that in setting up the office of Comptroller General as the amendment proposes it we should be duplicating the functions of the Auditor General. With great respect to those who have advanced that argument, I think it will not hold water, because the duties of the Comptroller General, as I understand them, are preventive; the duties of the Auditor General are corrective. One acts before the event to prevent an untoward event; the other acts after the event has taken place, to draw attention to errors, omissions or defects in what has been done.

The argument which seemed to prevail with some people in the deliberations of the committee, if I am correctly informed—I am not a member of that committee; I was present for some of its sittings but had to leave for the sittings of another committee, where my presence was, I think, much more necessary—the argument that impressed some members of the committee was that the Auditor General felt that he would sooner have this bill than nothing. Well, I do not think that is the choice which is before him or before the Senate, because if this bill failed to pass the Auditor General would have precisely what he has now, bar one thing, which I shall come to in a moment.

He would have an official of the Treasury Board, now known by the modest title of “Special Adviser,” an official ready and able to perform such duties as Treasury Board assigns to him. Those words should have a familiar ring to those who read the bill with attention.

One thing only would be lacking: this official who is already there, already performing, presumably, such duties as the Treasury Board assigns to him, this official would lack the title of “Comptroller General.” He would have exactly the same powers as he—well, he has exactly the same powers as he would have under the bill, and he would still have those powers if the bill failed to pass. All the bill gives him is a halo, a nimbus, a golden glow, an aura, a magnificent, grandiloquent title, that is all; and rank and status, and salary, of course.

This is a bill to confer on an existing official of the Treasury Board, the special adviser, a title, rank and salary, and that is all it is. Otherwise, it is empty verbiage, an aching void, “a sounding brass and a tinkling cymbal,” “words and breath, and of no force to oblige a man at all.”

The special adviser controls nothing now except by gracious permission of the Treasury Board, and if he were given this rank, title, salary and status, he would still control precisely nothing, except by special permission, gracious permission of the Treasury Board.

I feel regretfully obliged to say that if the committee felt itself unable to accept the amendments which were proposed in committee, which were substantially the same as the one which I have just placed before the Senate, then I think it should have reported that the bill be not further proceeded with, because this bill really says absolutely nothing, except in the matter of the title, rank and status of this existing official.

I have one other remark to add which may, perhaps, sound a little frivolous, but I think it is, in fact, mournful rather than frivolous. Honourable senators will recall what, in Alice In Wonderland, the Mock Turtle spoke with a deep sigh. "Once," said the Mock Turtle at last, with a deep sigh, "I was a real turtle." Well, if this bill goes through unamended, I think some distance down the road poor Mr. Rogers, the special adviser, will have occasion to utter a similar lament, slightly amended, in these words: "Once," said the Mock Turtle at last, with a deep sigh, "I might have been a real turtle if the Senate had done its job."

Hon. H. A. Olson: Honourable senators, I rise on a point of order with respect to the motion in amendment now before the Senate.

As I understand it, Senator Forsey, on the motion for third reading, is attempting to directly amend Bill C-10. He did not, as I expected, move that the bill be referred back to committee and, in doing so, spell out the purpose, which is the amendment that he read, and the argument, or the other purpose—and this device is commonly used in the other place—which is to hoist the bill for six months, thereby effectively killing it.

I raise this issue because I have carefully examined the rules of this house. What happens on third reading is not specifically spelled out in the rules. Therefore, it becomes necessary for us to rely on rule 1, with which all senators are familiar, that being that for situations not otherwise provided for in the rules we use the rules of the other house.

● (1430)

As a matter of fact, honourable senators, the rules of the other place do not state specifically what is in order and what is not in order with respect to the third reading of a bill. It is necessary to go back to the authorities and to the references, and, as far as I know, they are very clear that one cannot move a motion on third reading that directly substitutes words in a bill for other words, or deletes words, or adds words that are not in the bill at that stage. If such an amendment is desired, the motion should be one to refer the bill back to the committee.

There are good reasons for that, I suggest, one of which is that, under rule 47, the Senate cannot take under consideration in the same session a motion that has been decided either in the affirmative or the negative. The Senate did, in fact, refer this bill to a standing committee and asked for a report.

[Senator Forsey.]

That committee went through the bill clause by clause, as is done with all other bills, and reported its findings to the chamber. As a matter of fact, the motion now before the Senate, as Senator Forsey has already admitted, was put in the committee.

An Hon. Senator: Substantially.

Senator Olson: Substantially the same motion was put in the committee, and was negative.

We then have to look at the rest of the scenario. A report was prepared by the committee and presented to the Senate, and the Senate, as I understand it, adopted the committee's report. Therefore, if the Senate is now going to entertain a motion to amend the bill at this stage, it would be necessary for it to reverse its position in adopting the committee's report.

I have no objection to Senator Forsey, or any other senator, making an argument on the motion for the third reading of a bill that there is something wrong with the bill. I have no objection to that at all, even though that same argument may have been made in the committee.

Certainly, any honourable senator has the right to move that a bill be referred back to committee for reconsideration, either with or without specific instructions. In this case, the instructions are specific enough. Senator Forsey wants to strike out certain lines and substitute other lines therefor. The determination the Senate should make is to refer the bill back to committee with instructions to do certain things, and not try to amend it by way of a motion in amendment on third reading. Such a course is not in keeping with the rules, particularly rule 1, which states, in effect, that all cases not otherwise provided for in the rules are governed by the rules and precedents of the other house—and honourable senators will be familiar with them.

But it is more than that, because both houses have relied on certain authorities—Erskine May, Beauchesne, Bourinot, and several others—in the Canadian experience and in the British experience. I quote rule 1:

In all cases not provided for in these rules, the customs, usages, forms and proceedings of either House of the Parliament of Canada shall, so far as practicable, be followed in the Senate or in any committee thereof.

If this has been followed in the past, I will accept that, but I think we will be setting a wrong precedent if a senator is allowed to move directly on the third reading of a bill any substitution of words without requiring that such amendment be made in committee.

What is even more serious—and the Senate has to take this into account—is that if we give such instructions to the committee, then we have to reverse the decision we made in adopting the report of the committee. I was not here when it happened, but I assume that the chairman of the committee reported the bill to the Senate, either with or without amendment. The adoption of that report certainly means something. It means that the Senate accepted what the committee had done. The committee had gone through the performance of hearing witnesses, receiving arguments, receiving amendments and voting on those amendments. When the Senate adopted the report of the committee it meant that, as far as my understanding goes, that the members of this house agreed with the report.

As I say, I do not argue with the right of Senator Forsey, or any other honourable senator, to disagree to the point where he wishes to move that the bill be referred back to committee for a specific purpose, or even to move that it be hoisted for six months or some other period; but to directly move a substitution of words for other words in the bill at the third reading stage certainly is not a practice that has been followed in the other place or, indeed, any other Parliament that follows the British tradition.

Senator Everett: Honourable senators, I certainly take cognizance of what the honourable senator says, although it is my view—

Senator Grosart: Are you speaking to the point of order?

Senator Everett: No, I am not speaking to the point of order.

Senator Grosart: There has been no ruling on the point of order.

Senator Flynn: Let the Speaker rule on the point of order raised by Senator Olson. It is so obvious he is wrong that we don't need to discuss it.

The Hon. the Speaker: If honourable senators wish to consult page 55 of the Rules of the Senate, they will see that, in general, the same kind of amendments as may be moved on second reading may be moved on third reading, with the restriction that they cannot deal with any matter which is not contained in the bill.

However, the Senate has exercised a great deal of flexibility in this regard. The Journals of the Senate contain many examples of amendments moved on the third reading of a bill that added a matter that was not contained in the bill, and precedents are referred to at page 55 of the Rules.

Hon. Douglas D. Everett: Honourable senators, now that the point of order has been disposed of and the motion in amendment has been ruled in order, I would say Senator Forsey stated that he relies largely on the speech he made on second reading, and some of my reply will, of course, relate to that speech as well as to the speech he has just made.

It is unfortunate—I agree with Senator Olson in this regard—that Senator Forsey was not able to stay in committee long enough to be able to move his motion. I think it would have been appropriate. I gather from what he says that he had to go to another committee.

Senator Forsey: Honourable senators, may I rise on a point of privilege? I am not a member of the committee. I could not have made a motion.

Senator Everett: I think that indeed you could have attended the meetings of the committee. If I recall correctly your speech on second reading, it was your feeling that this was probably one of the most important bills to come before Parliament in your tenure, and I would have thought you would have found it possible to be there.

• (1440)

Senator Flynn: Are you serious? The way this bill is drafted, how can you call it an important bill?

Senator Everett: That is what Senator Forsey said, that it was an important bill. However, we want to be fair and the amendment is before us.

Senator Grosart: Some chairmen don't even attend meetings of their own committees.

Senator Everett: I am astonished at that remark.

Senator Grosart: I make it simply because of the remark you made about Senator Forsey.

Senator Everett: This bill arises out of a recommendation made by the Auditor General, and I would like to read that recommendation. It was contained in the conspectus to his 1976 report. He recommended:

The establishment of the position of chief financial officer of the government, preferably with the title Comptroller General of Canada, with deputy minister status and a direct reporting relationship to the President of the Treasury Board, and with duties and authorities fully commensurate with the important responsibilities of such a key position—

Now, the Auditor General did not recommend the creation of an officer of Parliament. He recommended that the business of the Treasury Board be conducted by two deputy ministers; one who would be the Secretary of the Treasury Board and the other who would be called the Comptroller General. The Secretary of the Treasury Board would be in charge of the allocation of resources, and the Comptroller General would be responsible for accountability.

Now, Senator Forsey in his amendment has stated that the Comptroller General should report to Parliament. But in his amendment, as I read it, the Comptroller General takes direction from the Treasury Board. He is appointed by the Governor in Council. In the proposed subsection (2.6) we find that "The Comptroller General is the chief financial officer of the Government of Canada," and, in the final few lines of that subsection, that he "shall perform such additional duties and functions as may be assigned to him by the Treasury Board."

It seems to me that if the Comptroller General is going to be a servant of the Government of Canada and a servant of the Treasury Board, and if he is going to report to Parliament, he, in effect, is going to serve two masters, and as the President of the Treasury Board has stated, his reports to Treasury Board will lack forthrightness if he knows that those reports have to be tabled, each and every year, before the Parliament of Canada. He would be proscribed from doing the job of seeing that our expenditures are made in an effective and efficient manner.

He would also, it seems to me, take on the duties of the Auditor General. The Auditor General, according to the Auditor General Act, is required —to draw the attention of the House of Commons to any case in which he has observed that:

(d) money has been expended without due regard to economy or efficiency; or

(e) satisfactory procedures have not been established to measure and report the effectiveness of programs, where such procedures could appropriately and reasonably be implemented.

The Auditor General has stated in committee that he does not believe that a person can be a comptroller and auditor at the same time. If the Comptroller General has to report to Parliament, that is precisely what he will be doing. The Auditor General also said in committee that he will report on the shortcomings of the systems that are put into place by the Comptroller General. He has that authority. And the Auditor General has proven in the past that he is not one bit afraid to report, no matter how much it hurts the Government of Canada.

Senator Forsey has relied to a great extent in his argument on a position that exists in the United Kingdom, and the short title of that position is "Comptroller and Auditor General". He has stated that in the United Kingdom they have combined the two positions, and in that case there is a report to Parliament, and that particular person can only be dismissed by an address of both houses. So, relying on that, he says that if the Parliament of Britain has a Comptroller and Auditor General, then if we choose to divide those functions among two people they both should report to Parliament, they both should be officers of Parliament and they both should be dismissed only by Parliament. But I think, with respect to Senator Forsey, that he is confused by the name, for, indeed, the Comptroller and Auditor General of the United Kingdom is a very similar officer to our Auditor General except he does not have quite as many powers.

I should like now to read what the Encyclopaedia of Parliament, Wilding and Laundy, 1971, says about the Comptroller and Auditor General:

His main duty is to conduct an examination of the Appropriation Accounts (i.e., the accounts of the various departments of government) and to satisfy himself that all moneys appropriated have been applied to the purposes intended and approved by Parliament. All other public accounts, including the Consolidated Fund accounts (i.e., accounts in respect of charges which are made directly on the Consolidated Fund and not provided for in the Estimates), are subjected to the same scrutiny.

The Exchequer and Audit Departments Act sets out his duties. There are a number of duties, but I shall read just the first one because the others are very similar.

Every appropriation account shall be examined by the Comptroller and Auditor General on behalf of the House of Commons, and in the examination of such accounts the Comptroller and Auditor General shall satisfy himself that the money expended has been applied to the purpose or purposes for which the grants made by Parliament were intended to provide and that the expenditure conforms to the authority which governs it.

And the other four or five clauses of the act read very much the same way.

In short, the duties of the Comptroller and Auditor General of Britain are really similar to those of the Auditor General of Canada. He is protected in the same way as the Auditor General of Canada is protected, but his position is not comparable to the position that we are proposing here of Comptroller General, who will be a government servant charged with the accountability of government expenditures, and who will be taking over one of two branches that already exist in the Treasury Board. So I suggest to Senator Forsey that his reliance on the United Kingdom precedent is really not valid, and I think he has come a cropper on the names involved. Indeed, I understand that the Comptroller of the Treasury in the United States wants to have his name changed to something like "Auditor General" because, in fact, it describes what he does, although he is called a comptroller.

One of the suggestions in Senator Forsey's amendment is that there should be a statutory enumeration of the duties of the Comptroller General. We heard the minister before the committee on this matter, and he made what I thought was a rather persuasive argument. The minister has listed the duties of the Comptroller General. He tabled them in the House of Commons and they were printed as an appendix to Debates of the Senate.

● (1450)

The minister has argued that we have two deputy ministers—the Secretary of the Treasury Board and the Comptroller General. He says that we should wait to see how their duties work out before we put them in a statute. I suggest that that is a reasonable argument.

He has also suggested that the Lambert Commission will be reporting soon, and between the experience that is gleaned between now and that time, and the results of the report, he is suggesting that it will then be easy to enumerate the duties of the Comptroller General. And do not forget, honourable senators, that if we enumerate the duties of the Comptroller General, we also have to enumerate the duties of the Secretary of the Treasury Board.

The committee questioned the Auditor General very carefully on this matter, and he said he would prefer to see the duties enumerated in the statute. But he went on to say that this is a brand new position, that there are a number of grey areas between the position of Comptroller General and Secretary of the Treasury Board, and added—I think I am quoting him correctly—"I will be happy to wait a bit." But he promised that any changes in the duties that were enumerated by the minister in the list that is an appendix to our Hansard would—and again I think I quote him correctly—"be flagged and be commented on."

Again, I believe that Senator Forsey—if not Senator Forsey, then Senator Grosart and others, including Senator Smith (Colchester)—relied on precedent, and the precedent they relied on was Revenue Canada. They said that in the case of Revenue Canada where there are two deputy ministers, one for taxation and one for customs and excise, the duties are indeed enumerated. That is true. So if we rely on precedent, and that is the only precedent, we have to say that that custom should be followed in this case.

But there are other precedents. You see, there is the Department of Supply and Services which has two deputy ministers—the Deputy Minister of Supply and the Deputy Minister of Services. The Department of Supply and Services Act provides:

The Governor in Council may appoint an officer called the Deputy Minister of Supply to be a deputy head of the Department of Supply and Services in respect of all matters assigned to him by the Minister, and to hold office during pleasure.

The Governor in Council may appoint an officer called the Deputy Minister of Services to be a deputy head of the Department of Supply and Services in respect of all matters assigned to him by the Minister, and to hold office during pleasure.

So that is a precedent too. In other words, there is a precedent to enumerate the duties in statutory terms, and there is a precedent not to. There is a further precedent in the National Health and Welfare Act, where it says:

The Governor in Council may appoint an officer, or two officers, called the Deputy Minister, or Deputy Ministers, of National Health and Welfare, to be the deputy head, or deputy heads, of the Department and to hold office during pleasure.

It says nothing about the duties of those two deputy ministers.

So I suggest to honourable senators that the precedents can work either way and they are really of no value to us. We can have the duties enumerated in a statute or not, as we see fit.

In committee two amendments were proposed to the bill, and they were, as Senator Forsey says, similar to the amendment that he has now moved. However, they both failed in committee after considerable discussion. One of the reasons I think they failed is because they contained the provision:

The Comptroller General is the chief financial officer of the Government of Canada and as such shall be charged with the control, management and supervision of government expenditures.

I believe the legal interpretation of that is that with that kind of authority he could arrogate to himself all the powers both for accountability and allocation. The Secretary of the Treasury Board would have no powers under that amendment, and, indeed, it is questionable whether the President of the Treasury Board would have very much power if that amendment had gone through. So it just had to fail. But it shows how difficult it is at this stage to enumerate the duties in a statute, and how dangerous it would be.

I believe that in Senator Forsey's amendment he has something to the effect that the Comptroller General shall ensure that "government accounting procedures and financial statements conform to generally accepted accounting principles and standards." The minister told us that he was very unsure as to what that phrase meant and how far it would go, and that he would want a great deal more definition of it before he was willing to put it into a statute.

Senator Forsey's amendment does not suffer from the defect that the earlier amendments suffered from, and, indeed, I am in favour in the long run of an enumeration of the duties of both the Comptroller General and the Secretary of the Treasury Board. But, I think it is true that we need more experience before we do that, otherwise we will fall into the kind of traps that were contained in the amendments proposed before the committee, or the kind of traps that are incipient in Senator Forsey's amendment.

Finally, Senator Forsey's amendment proposes that there be tenure of office. Well, it seems to me that that entirely disregards the concept of the Comptroller General. He is a government official, and the government must have the right to replace him. The person who reports to Parliament if there is not proper accountability, if the estimates are not in proper form, if the Public Accounts are not in proper form, is the Auditor General, and I think, honourable senators, we can rely on the Auditor General.

Indeed, it seems to me that if we were to pass Senator Forsey's amendment, we would seriously undermine the power of the Auditor General—and the Auditor General also holds this view—and we would be worse off than we are now, with a Comptroller General who would take over the problem of accountability, and leave an Auditor General, who is the servant of Parliament, to report if the Comptroller General is not doing his job. Indeed, the Auditor General said, in effect, "I can get all the information I want. I will get the information; and if I feel that my suggestions or the suggestions of the Comptroller General are not being properly followed, then I would promptly report the matter to Parliament."

Senator Smith (Colchester): Honourable senators, I had intended to speak at some length today in support of the amendment but, having listened to Senator Everett, it seems to me that before I do so I should have before me the transcripts of the committee's proceedings on the bill and also the transcript of what the honourable senator has said today. Consequently, I move the adjournment of this debate.

On motion of Senator Smith (Colchester), debate adjourned.

The Senate adjourned until Tuesday, June 6, 1978 at 8 p.m.

THE SENATE

Tuesday, June 6, 1978

The Senate met at 8 p.m., the Speaker in the Chair.
Prayers.

HER MAJESTY THE QUEEN

FELICITATIONS ON OCCASION OF TWENTY-FIFTH ANNIVERSARY OF CORONATION

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, I move, seconded by the Honourable Senator Flynn, P.C.:

That the Senate extend to her Majesty the Queen warmest greetings and sincere best wishes on the occasion of the Twenty-fifth Anniversary of Her Coronation.

Motion agreed to.

THE LATE HONOURABLE HÉRVÉ J. MICHAUD

TRIBUTES

Hon. Raymond J. Perrault: Honourable senators, I know you were as shocked and saddened as was I to learn of the sudden death yesterday of our colleague, the Honourable Hervé Michaud. It was particularly distressing as Senator Michaud had been working here in his office on Friday before leaving for his home in Buctouche.

Honourable senators, we have lost a good friend and a dedicated colleague. Senator Michaud was a man of quiet dignity and admirable determination. He will be remembered by the members of this chamber as a man who represented one of the fundamental and original purposes of the Senate—to work on behalf of the various regions of this country. Senator Michaud was from Buctouche, in Kent County, eastern New Brunswick. He was a member of the great Acadian community. He loved it. He was born there. He worked and raised his family there. He brought national recognition to the problems of his region. He had worked on behalf of Kent County long before he was summoned to the Senate in the month of March, 1968.

[Translation]

Hervé Michaud was born in Buctouche on December 12, 1912. He was educated at the Immaculate Conception Convent in Buctouche and at the University of St. Joseph. He lived and worked all his life in Kent County among people he loved and to whom he dedicated himself so much. Being modest, he had his occupation recorded in the Canadian Parliamentary guide as "farmer-salesman". He was president of the New Brunswick Farmers' Association in 1943 and the first president of the Société des caisses populaires acadiennes.

[English]

The respect Hervé Michaud gained in his home district was shown by his election to the House of Commons in 1953 and his re-elections in 1957 and 1958. But I believe that it was through his efforts in the Senate that Senator Michaud made his greatest contribution on behalf of his people in New Brunswick.

He was Deputy Chairman of the Standing Senate Committee on Agriculture, and on his urging, and with the whole-hearted co-operation of the Chairman, Senator Argue, and the other members of that committee, an in-depth study of the problems facing Kent County was undertaken. As honourable senators know, the result of that intensive investigation was the widely praised report "Kent County Can Be Saved"—not that Senator Michaud saw publication of that report as the end of his efforts. He continued to press for the implementation of the recommendations contained in the report.

In his last speech in this chamber, delivered on March 22 last, Senator Michaud told us about the experimental farm to be established in Kent County under a federal-provincial agreement.

At that time he said:

It is a fair but general conclusion, based on the information that we have about the complete agreement, that many of the problems, objectives and solutions found, identified and recommended by our Agriculture Committee have been accepted as the basis for this multimillion dollar initiative.

He ended his speech with the words:

● (2010)

Through research and determination, the physical and human resources can be developed, and, if I may say it, "Kent County can be saved, Sauons le Comté de Kent."

He had a full life, a good life, a life of service. Of him it can be truly said, "He was a good man."

He leaves to mourn him his devoted wife and three sons and five daughters. Our heartfelt sympathy goes out to them in their bereavement.

[Translation]

Hon. Jacques Flynn: Honourable senators, I knew our colleague in the House of Commons from 1958 to 1962. He had been a member there since 1953. We met again here in 1968.

He had a remarkable career which the government leader just recalled. However, I think that if one had to give the main characteristic of Hervé Michaud, one would have to say his kindness. He was a kind man. He was a peaceful man. I doubt that he ever had an enemy. And he never considered anyone his enemy. With him, all was co-operation, a desire to be understanding and accommodating.

He served his fellow citizens well throughout Canada but especially his compatriots of New Brunswick, his Acadian compatriots.

I know all those who knew him will be sorry he left us so soon, because he still had much to contribute to the cause of agriculture, the cause of the Acadians, and the cause of Canada. It really is a pity he has left us.

To his widow and his children we extend our most sincere condolences.

[English]

Hon. Charles McElman: Honourable senators, it was my privilege to know our late colleague, Senator Hervé Michaud, for the past 25 years, since he was first elected to the House of Commons as the member for his beloved County of Kent in 1953. He served his constituents and our province well until his voluntary retirement in 1962. He earned, and was given, the respect of his fellow citizens in that capacity.

Hervé Michaud continued to serve his fellow New Brunswickers as a provincial civil servant during the administration of our other colleague from Kent County, the Honourable Louis Robichaud. Again he earned, and was given, respect for his dedication to and compassion for his fellow New Brunswickers.

We have all shared the warmth of knowing and associating with Hervé Michaud since his appointment to the Senate in 1968, and we know of the tremendous effort he poured into the establishment of the Standing Senate Committee on Agriculture and its beneficial accomplishments, particularly for his County of Kent. Again, he earned our respect for his quiet and persistent work.

I have known Hervé Michaud as a committed Liberal, who believed firmly in the basic tenets of his party and who practised its philosophy—the greatest good for the greatest number. He was formidable as an opponent on the hustings, but he always waged a fair battle and was respected by supporters and opponents alike.

Although I knew Hervé Michaud well and respected him in each and all of those capacities, I knew him and respected him best as a warm, gentle, understanding, loyal and Christian human being, a valued and irreplaceable friend. That is how I and thousands of his fellow New Brunswickers will long remember him, and I join in extending my most sincere sympathy to his beloved wife Anna and their wonderful family.

Hon. Hazen Argue: Honourable senators, I was greatly shocked and saddened to learn of the death of my friend and your friend, Hervé Michaud. I had known Senator Michaud since 1953 when he was elected to the House of Commons. I had listened to and been associated with him over the years, and had come to admire his devotion to those things in which he believed.

He was a champion of the rights of French Canadians and an advocate and protector of his culture. He was a sincere, aggressive and accomplished fighter for the agriculture industry, with which he was so closely associated.

His maiden speech in the Senate contained this opening paragraph:

Honourable senators, the views I am going to express on the question of which I gave notice are related to the economic situation which exists more specifically in the Kent County area in New Brunswick. Needless to say, I am very interested in this matter, since it involves the constituency I represented in the other place for almost ten years, and which I feel I represent in a particular way in this chamber.

He represented the County of Kent in a particular and most effective way during the term of almost ten years that he was in the Senate.

In his early speeches he put forward, as always, the causes of Kent County. When consideration was given to the question of forming a Standing Senate Committee on Agriculture, Senator Michaud was an enthusiastic supporter of the proposal, and the members of that committee recognized his stature in the Senate by electing him the committee's deputy chairman. Over the years that I worked in close association with him, I found him compatible, congenial and devoted to those causes in which he believed.

One could say that he had a tender personality; but he was also firm and tough in support of those things in which he believed. He never gave up. When agriculture was almost disappearing in Kent County, he took a major part in writing the report entitled "Kent County Can Be Saved," and it was through his efforts and leadership that some 20 students went to Laval University a few years ago to be trained in agriculture, eventually to return to eastern New Brunswick to serve that area.

Senator Michaud was instrumental in establishing in the University of Moncton a preparatory course to enable students to complete a degree in agriculture at Laval University. He fought hard and had much faith in the development of agriculture in his part of Canada. His faith was recognized on March 28 in the announcement that an experimental station would be established in Kent County. I would suggest that it is really the Hervé Michaud Experimental Station. That is his monument, as is his record in the Senate.

I had the privilege of meeting his wife Anna when they were both in the west during the Senate inquiry into the Canadian beef industry. I have not known a more pleasant person than his charming and lovely wife, who has been a tremendous support to him over the years.

● (2020)

I wish to offer my heartfelt sympathy and condolences to Mrs. Michaud and the family on the loss of a loving husband and father. For Canada his death represents the loss of one of its most devoted and accomplished citizens.

[Translation]

Hon. E. G. Côtteau: I would like to join with those who have taken the floor to pay homage to Senator Hervé Michaud who died suddenly yesterday in Moncton.

Senator Michaud was a personal friend of mine with whom I spent a great deal of time. Our bounds of friendship became established as soon as I joined the Senate in 1974. It is true indeed that at the time all senators extended a warm welcome to me but I think that Senator Michaud took a personal interest in me and made sure that I would benefit from his experience to ease my adaptation to what was for me a new way of life. This is why I have always been grateful to him.

In the course of these past four years, our friendly relations involved both our families and led to frequent exchanges of visits. This is the way I came to know and appreciate his true value and the fine soul he was. As a citizen and as a family man, Senator Hervé Michaud was a model of his kind.

[English]

As far as his activity in the Senate is concerned, his dedication to the Standing Senate Committee on Agriculture is well known to all of us. He also had other interests which, I am sure, had he lived, he would have developed. One of these was his concern for the current unity problem in Canada. He was a firm advocate of the need for all Canadians to rally together within the framework of Confederation in order to make of Canada one strong and united nation.

Proud of his family, proud of his religion and proud of his country, Senator Michaud died a great Canadian.

I take this opportunity to extend to his wife, Anna, and to his family, my deepest sympathy.

[Translation]

Hon. Michel Fournier: Honourable senators, I would like to add a few words of tribute to a long-time friend, Senator Michaud. I had known Senator Michaud for at least forty years. He was a friend of the family. We often had the opportunity to discuss his plans. I can tell you, as was so rightly suggested earlier, that Senator Michaud spent 25 years of his life serving his own people, his province, his country and his region.

Similarly, before entering active politics, Senator Michaud was a great supporter of all social movements which could be of help to his region and his people. He was very active particularly in the co-operative movement and he even became the director of the Co-operative Association and President of the New Brunswick Farmers Association.

Notwithstanding his very active political life he always had a liking for agriculture. As suggested earlier by the chairman of the Senate Committee on Agriculture, and the Leader of the Government, in recent years he did a great deal of work in this area. He was devoted to the work he had set out to do. I can say that he was very satisfied when he got a farm as well as a report on his county.

So, in conclusion, I can tell you that Senator Michaud was a simple but sincere man, and particularly a good father, and I believe that this was perhaps his outstanding quality.

[Senator Côtteau.]

[English]

WORLD WAR II

THIRTY-FOURTH ANNIVERSARY OF D-DAY

Senator Marshall: Honourable senators, may I beg your indulgence on rising at this time.

Today, June 6, marks the thirty-fourth anniversary of D-Day, and I am sure I speak for all members of the Senate and all Canadians when I request a few moments to pay homage to those valiant soldiers who took part in the Allied invasion of Normandy.

Canadian veterans who served our country are reflecting today, I am sure, wherever they may be, on the dangers they experienced on the beaches of France some 34 years ago and are thinking of their comrades who fell by their side and were denied the right to return to Canada to avail themselves of the great opportunities in our growing and potentially prosperous country.

It is significant that today, some 34 years later, one of the overriding topics that we are discussing across our nation is the preservation of national unity, and we are trying to prevent the threatened break-up of our nation by political debate, by confrontation, by meaningless words and by legislation.

Honourable senators, national unity cannot be legislated by committee, or by government appointment. National unity came about in Canada because our forefathers of all races suffered together in building our country, and we started to become a great nation when thousands of young Canadians in the late 1939-45 conflict, including many who sit in Parliament today, volunteered to fight for their country in far-off lands to defend not only Canada but the free world against the greed and lust for power of other nations. They fought together, not as different groups or different races or creeds or with different countries of origin; they fought together as Canadians with one purpose—to preserve our Canadian nation. In the words of Lord Tennyson in 1854, and I paraphrase, theirs was not to reason why, theirs was but to do or die, because they answered the call of the government of the day to defend and preserve peace and unity for our nation.

We can continue to build a greater nation if we take time to reflect and take an example from the comradeship which was instilled in our veterans through suffering together on the battlefield—a comradeship that will remain in their hearts and minds as long as they live.

We should think of this today, honourable senators, and let us ever remember, too, the thousands of our veterans who lie in graves in foreign countries because of their duty to their country.

Let us also remember those veterans who returned, maimed and disabled, and who must look to us for help. Let us never forget our responsibility to those veterans who, by their sacrifice, protected our freedom to govern and to build a great nation for those of us who remain—a nation with pride, prosperity and peace, a nation united and with a comradeship amongst all Canadians regardless of where we live.

Hon. Senators: Hear, hear.

FINANCIAL ADMINISTRATION ACT

BILL TO AMEND—MOTION FOR THIRD READING—SPEAKER'S RULING ON MOTION IN AMENDMENT

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, at the last sitting of the Senate, on Thursday, May 25, Senator Olson raised a point of order with respect to Senator Forsey's motion in amendment to the motion for third reading of Bill C-10, an Act to amend the Financial Administration Act.

Senator Olson's point of order was that on third reading of a bill one cannot move a motion that directly substitutes words in a bill for other words, or deletes words, or adds words that are not in the bill at that stage. He argued that if such an amendment is desired, the motion should be one to refer the bill back to committee.

My ruling on Senator Olson's point of order was that the Senate has always exercised a great deal of flexibility in this regard. I referred to page 55 of the Rules of the Senate, where, in Appendix II to the Rules, there is an explanation of the procedure on the third reading of a bill in the Senate. That ruling stands.

● (2030)

However, during the adjournment, I had the opportunity to examine carefully Senator Forsey's motion in amendment and I have now come to the conclusion that the proposed subsections (2.5) and (2.9) in the amendment are inadmissible because they infringe the long established principle that prohibits members from proposing amendments that affect the financial initiative of the Crown by creating public charges not covered by the royal recommendation. The proposed subsection (2.5) authorizes the payment of a salary to the Comptroller General of Canada whose office the bill proposes to establish, and the proposed subsection (2.9) authorizes the appointment of the necessary staff to enable the Comptroller General to perform his duties.

The authors on parliamentary procedure are unanimous in this regard. Paragraph (12) of May's Nineteenth Edition, found at page 523, reads in part as follows:

(12) Amendments or new clauses creating public charges cannot be proposed, if no money resolution or ways and means resolution has been passed, or if the amendment or clause is not covered by the terms of the resolution.

Reference may also be made to paragraph (3) of citation 246 of Beauchesne's Fourth Edition, which reads as follows:

(3) The guiding principle in determining the effect on an amendment upon the financial initiative of the Crown is that the communication, to which the royal demand of recommendation is attached, must be treated as laying down once for all (unless withdrawn and replaced) not only the amount of a charge, but also its objects, purposes, conditions and qualifications. In relation to the standard thereby fixed, an amendment infringes the financial initiative of the Crown, not only if it increases the amount, but also if it extends the objects and purposes, or relaxes the conditions and qualifications expressed in the communication by which the Crown has demanded or recommended a charge. And this standard is binding not only on private members but also on Ministers whose only advantage is that, as advisors of the Crown, they can present new or supplementary estimates or secure the royal recommendation to new or supplementary resolutions.

For the information of honourable senators, may I quote in extenso the Royal Recommendation upon which Bill C-10 is founded. It is found in the Votes and Proceedings of the House of Commons for October 31, 1977, at page 52, and reads as follows:

His Excellency the Governor General recommends to the House of Commons the appropriation of public revenue under the circumstances, in the manner and for the purposes set out in a measure entitled "An Act to amend the Financial Administration Act".

It is my view that the proposed subsections (2.5) and (2.9) of Senator Forsey's amendment would clearly create a public charge not covered by the terms of the Recommendation. I am informed that the senator himself had become aware of the deficiency in the amendment shortly after he had proposed it.

For the reasons I have stated I regretfully have to rule that the proposed amendment, as it now reads, cannot be considered. The proposed subsections (2.5) and (2.9) in the amendment must therefore be deleted and the question will then stand on the remainder of the motion in amendment.

Senator Smith (Colchester): Honourable senators, I wonder if I might, on this point, be allowed to read something which I was asked to read by Senator Forsey, in his absence, and which, of course, does not in any way contradict what you, Madam Speaker, have said so well. Since he asked me to do this, I now ask leave to do so.

The Hon. the Speaker: Is leave granted, honourable senators?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

Senator Smith (Colchester): It is a letter which the senator addressed to me, accompanied by a statement, and it reads:

Most unfortunately, I have a long-standing speaking engagement in Calgary, which necessitates my leaving Ottawa Tuesday afternoon, June 6. So I shall not be here for the sitting.

I should be grateful if you could read to the Senate the enclosed statement, presumably before you begin your speech on my amendment.

The statement is as follows:

A long-standing speaking engagement in Calgary prevents me from appearing this evening in the Senate in a white sheet, not to say sackcloth and ashes, to offer to honourable senators my most abject apologies for an inexcusable piece of stupidity in the drafting of this amendment.

I wish to emphasize here that these are Senator Forsey's words, not mine.

Hon. Senators: Hear, hear.

Senator Smith (Colchester): The statement continues:

Of course the proposed subsections (2.5) and (2.9) are completely out of order in this house, and of course I have known this for about 50 years. That I should have included them in my amendment is evidence of gross mental aberration, I hope only temporary. When the Law Clerk drew them to my attention, I was appalled. I owe a particular apology to the Honourable Senator Smith (Colchester).

Which is quite unnecessary. I did not notice it either. He refers to me, of course, as the seconder of this motion. Then he goes on to say:

The only consolation I have is that this may perhaps stop people from referring to me as a "constitutional expert" or "constitutional authority". After this performance, at least every honourable senator will be able to say: "Oh, yes! Forsey. He's the fellow who trips over his feet and falls down the stairs with the coal scuttle and the tea-tray when he tries to move a simple amendment. Constitutional expert, my eye!"

PENSION ACT COMPENSATION FOR FORMER PRISONERS OF WAR ACT

BILL TO AMEND—FIRST READING

The Hon. the Speaker informed the Senate that a message had been received from the House of Commons with Bill C-58, to amend the Pension Act and the Compensation for Former Prisoners of War Act.

Bill read first time.

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this bill be read the second time?

Senator Perrault moved, with leave of the Senate, that the bill be placed on the Orders of the Day for second reading at the next sitting.

Motion agreed to.

DOCUMENTS TABLED

Senator Perrault tabled:

Copies of the Canadian delegation assessment of the seventh session of the United Nations Conference on Law of the Sea, held at Geneva, March 28 to May 19, 1978.

Copies of Order in Council P.C. 1978-1684, dated May 18, 1978, approving the agreement expressed in the letters exchanged between the High Commissioner of the United Kingdom and the Minister of National Health and Welfare on November 10, 1977, pursuant to section 22 of the Old Age Security Act, Chapter 0-6, R.S.C. 1970, as amended.

Copies of Reports of the Anti-Inflation Board to the Governor in Council, pursuant to section 17(2) of the Anti-Inflation Act, Chapter 75, Statutes of Canada, 1974-75-76, reporting its reference to the Administrator of the said Act of certain proposed changes in compensation plans, as follows:

1. Dorr-Oliver-Long Limited and its hourly plant employees, represented by the United Steelworkers of America, Local 4697, Orillia, Ontario, dated May 9, 1978.
2. The Lethbridge Herald Company Ltd. and certain groups of employees, dated May 9, 1978.
3. Libby, McNeill & Libby of Canada Limited and its Chatham plant employees, represented by the United Auto Workers, Local 127, dated May 17, 1978.
4. Town of Fort Frances, Ontario and certain groups of employees, dated May 18, 1978.
5. The Corporation of the Town of Oakville and its employees, represented by the Oakville Professional Firefighters Association, Local 1582, I.A.F.A., dated May 18, 1978.

Copies of Reports of the Administrator under the Anti-Inflation Act, pursuant to section 17(3) of the said Act, Chapter 75, Statutes of Canada, 1974-75-76, respecting certain compensation plans, as follows:

1. Pullman Trailmobile Canada Limited, Brantford, Ontario and the group of its Vancouver service shop employees, represented by the Miscellaneous Workers, Wholesale and Retail Delivery Drivers and Helpers, Local Union No. 351. Order dated May 19, 1978.
2. Bell Canada and the group of its communications sales employees, represented by the Canadian Telephone Employees' Association. Order dated May 18, 1978.
3. Northern Transportation Company Limited and the group of its hourly employees, represented by the Public Service Alliance of Canada. Order dated May 19, 1978.
4. City of Victoria Police Board, Victoria, British Columbia and the group of its police inspectors, represented by the Victoria Police Senior Officers' Association. Order dated May 18, 1978.

Reports on operations under the Regional Development Incentives Act for the months of January and February, 1978, pursuant to section 16 of the said Act, Chapter R-3, R.S.C., 1970.

Second Semi-Annual Report of the Export Development Corporation on International Economic Boycotts for the period August 1, 1977 to January 31, 1978, issued by the Department of Industry, Trade and Commerce.

Copies of Reports of the Anti-Inflation Board to the Governor in Council, pursuant to section 17(2) of the Anti-Inflation Act, Chapter 75, Statutes of Canada, 1974-75-76, reporting its reference to the Administrator of the said Act of certain proposed changes in compensation plans, as follows:

1. Bonar and Bemis Limited and its Guelph plant employees, represented by the Canadian Paperworkers Union, Local 1178, dated May 23, 1978.

2. Bonar and Bemis Limited and its Burlington plant employees, represented by the Canadian Paperworkers Union, Local 1178, dated May 23, 1978.

Report of the Minister of Finance respecting Olympic coins for the period ending March 31, 1978, pursuant to sections 13(1) and 13(3) of the Olympic (1976) Act, Chapter 31, Statutes of Canada, 1973-74.

Report of the Postmaster General respecting Olympic coins for the period ending March 31, 1978, pursuant to sections 13(2) and 13(3) of the Olympic (1976) Act, Chapter 31, Statutes of Canada, 1973-74.

Report on the operations of the Exchange Fund Account, together with the Auditor General's report on the audit of the Account, for the year ended December 31, 1977, pursuant to sections 17 and 18(2) of the Currency and Exchange Act, Chapter C-39, R.S.C., 1970.

Copies of Reports of the Administrator under the Anti-Inflation Act, pursuant to section 17(3) of the said Act, Chapter 75, Statutes of Canada, 1974-75-76, respecting certain compensation plans, as follows:

1. Ozite Corporation of Canada Ltd. and the group of its employees represented by Le Syndicat des Salariés de Ozite, Saint-Jean, Québec. Order dated May 26, 1978.

2. Bendix Heavy Vehicle Systems Ltd., London, Ontario and its salaried bargaining group, represented by the International Union of the United Automobile, Aerospace and Agricultural Implement Workers of America (U.A.W.), Local 27. Order dated May 30, 1978.

3. Millar and Brown Ltd., Toronto, Ontario and the group of its British Columbia Office Union employees, represented by the Office and Technical Employees Union, Local 15. Order dated May 26, 1978.

Two documents entitled "Research and Development in Canada: A Discussion Paper" and "Measures to Strengthen and Encourage Research and Development in Canada", issued by the Minister of State for Science and Technology on June 1, 1978.

Copies of Note No. FLM-0092 from the Department of External Affairs to the Embassy of the United States, together with exchange of letters between the two special negotiators, dated June 2, 1978, with respect to the implementation of an Interim Reciprocal Fisheries Agreement for 1978.

Copies of Note No. 125 from the Embassy of the United States to the Department of External Affairs outlining the decision of the United States of America in response to Note No. FLM-0092, with respect to the implementation of an Interim Reciprocal Fisheries Agreement for 1978.

● (2040)

TRANSPORT AND COMMUNICATIONS

COMMITTEE AUTHORIZED TO MEET DURING SITTING OF THE SENATE

Senator Langlois, with leave of the Senate and notwithstanding rule 45(1)(a), moved:

That the Standing Senate Committee on Transport and Communications have power to sit while the Senate is sitting tomorrow, Wednesday, June 7, 1978, and that rule 76(4) be suspended in relation thereto.

Motion agreed to.

AGRICULTURE

CHANGE IN COMMITTEE MEMBERSHIP

Senator Macdonald, with leave of the Senate and notwithstanding rule 45(1)(i), moved:

That the name of the Honourable Senator Roblin be added to the list of senators serving on the Standing Senate Committee on Agriculture.

Motion agreed to.

INDIAN AFFAIRS

JOINT COMMITTEE OF THE GOVERNMENT OF CANADA AND NATIONAL INDIAN BROTHERHOOD—QUESTION ANSWERED

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, on May 11, the following question was asked by Senator Smith (Colchester):

Was there until recently, or is there now, a joint committee composed of members of the government and representatives of a native organization which, I believe, is referred to as the National Indian Brotherhood? If so, does that committee still exist? If it does not exist, when did it cease to exist, and why?

There was a joint committee known as the Joint Committee of Cabinet and the National Indian Brotherhood made up of representative cabinet members and representatives of the National Indian Brotherhood.

The Joint Committee and the National Indian Brotherhood ceased to exist when the Executive Council of the National Indian Brotherhood, at a meeting held on April 12, 13 and 14, 1978, decided to withdraw the National Indian Brotherhood from the Joint Cabinet-N.I.B. Committee.

Honourable senators, Senator Smith (Colchester) asked the following supplementary question:

If indeed such a joint committee has ceased to exist, was there, at or about the same time, a cutback in funds available for various Indian purposes, and, if so, to what extent?

In reply to that question, Treasury Board authority is required before funds can be provided to continue the consultation process with Indians which was established through the Joint Committee of Cabinet and the National Indian Brotherhood. At the time the National Indian Brotherhood withdrew from the process, it is my understanding that funding authority was being sought. Authority is being requested to provide interim funds for the consultation process to continue until a consultation process to replace the one that did exist is decided upon.

VETERANS AFFAIRS

MEALS AT SUNNYBROOK HOSPITAL—QUESTION ANSWERED

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, on May 24 a question was asked by Senator Marshall with respect to the breakfasts being served to veterans at Toronto's Sunnybrook Hospital. A copy of the reply to that question has been provided for Senator Marshall. The reply is a rather lengthy letter from the Minister of Veterans Affairs. I would be quite pleased to read the letter, if it is desired.

Senator Flynn: Put it on the record.

Senator Perrault: Of course, I am prepared to put it on the record, if that is satisfactory.

Senator Marshall: The letter is satisfactory to some extent, but I think it should be pointed out—even though it might seem facetious to worry about the breakfasts being served to veterans—that in the third paragraph the letter states:

The problem concerning a proposed change in the kind of breakfast to be served, arose as a result of restrictions placed on the budgets of all hospitals in Ontario.

I should like to say to the Leader of the Government that this is not satisfactory in view of the fact that the Government of Canada handed over at no cost, and by means of an order in council issued in 1963, a hospital which was supposed to take care of veterans. At that time there was no question of budgetary restrictions. Indeed, the Government of Canada handed over a valuable piece of property as well as providing many millions of dollars to the Government of Ontario. The Government of Ontario promised to look after the veterans. As I say, there was no question about budgetary restrictions. If restrictions are to be placed on the service to veterans, we might as well give up now.

The other point I wish to raise, with the forbearance of honourable senators, is that the continental-style breakfast, according to the letter, was "contemplated with the full support of the medical staff and the dietary of the hospital". This, to my mind, is absolutely ridiculous. How can the medical staff and dietary staff say that this has their full support, and that it "does not reduce the quality of either medical or nutritional standards", when just a couple of months ago, after some 44 years, the Government of Canada decided that the prisoners of war who served in World War I and World War II should be compensated for conditions resulting from their incarceration? The only thing that is optimistic in the letter is the fact that the minister was told that the decision to serve a continental breakfast was being held in abeyance. I hope that they will reverse that decision, and will continue treating the veterans of Canada as before.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, in view of the comments made by Senator Marshall who, together with many other members of this chamber, has a justifiable interest and concern with the welfare of veterans, I think it would be in the public interest, and in the interest of the Senate, to read the text of the letter into the record.

As I said at the outset, perhaps it is to be regretted that the Conservative government of the Province of Ontario has decided to impose budget restrictions which have made any cutback necessary at any hospital in that province.

The letter is addressed to the Leader of the Government in the Senate, and dated May 31, 1978. It is signed by the Minister of Veterans Affairs, the Honourable Daniel J. MacDonald, and it reads:

Dear Senator Perrault:

I am pleased to respond to the question asked by Senator J. Marshall in the Senate Chamber on May 24, 1978, concerning the breakfast served to veterans at Toronto's Sunnybrook Hospital.

Sunnybrook Hospital was transferred to the Province of Ontario in 1966 and as of that date the administration of the hospital became a provincial responsibility. My Department maintains a staff at the hospital to ensure that veterans receive the services to which they are entitled, and I take pride in the fact that the hospital authorities and DVA staff work together in a spirit of cooperation to make Sunnybrook the excellent facility that it is.

The problem concerning a proposed change in the kind of breakfast to be served, arose as a result of restrictions placed on the budgets of all hospitals in Ontario.

By a provincial government known to all of us, honourable senators.

In an effort to live within their budget, the administrators of Sunnybrook examined a number of measures which would reduce costs while still maintaining health care of the highest order. One such measure was the proposal to serve a continental-style breakfast. Let me assure you that this breakfast style was contemplated with the full support of the medical staff and the dietary staff of the hospital. I am told it does not reduce the quality of either medical or nutritional standards.

● (2050)

When word of this proposal reached us, my officials expressed their concern to the authorities at Sunnybrook and I, myself, have been in contact with the (Conservative) Minister of Health for Ontario. On May 17 the Executive Director of the hospital—

Senator Flynn: A Conservative minister, did you say?

Senator Perrault: I put the word "Conservative" in. It is not in the letter.

Senator Flynn: Oh, I see.

Some Hon. Senators: Oh, oh.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators can put the word "Conservative" in brackets.

Senator Croll: For clarification.

Senator Perrault: For clarification, yes.

Senator Grosart: Why introduce politics into this?

Senator Asselin: Shame!

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, I am attempting to edify, as completely as possible, members of this chamber, and I felt the addition of that particular modifying appellation might help in the understanding of the issue.

Senator Grosart: What is the matter with you? Keep politics out of veterans affairs.

Senator Perrault: The letter continues:

On May 17 the Executive Director of the hospital met with representatives of the Provincial Department of Health, and I am told that the decision to serve continental breakfasts has been held in abeyance until further negotiations on hospital funding have been completed. I am certain that the welfare of the veteran patients in Sunnybrook will be paramount in these negotiations, and I am confident that other ways will be found to resolve the financial problems of the hospital.

I sincerely appreciate the concern of Members of the Senate for the well-being of our veterans.

And the letter is signed by one of Canada's distinguished veterans, the Minister of Veterans Affairs, Daniel J. MacDonald.

Senator Marshall: Honourable senators, I have heard the words of the government leader. All I can say is that they emphasize the delinquency of the Government of Canada in relinquishing its responsibility by handing over a veterans' hospital to a province under any circumstance, regardless of the party in power in that province. The federal government, in so doing, has abandoned its duty to the veterans, and this is why we are having these problems today.

Senator Perrault: Perhaps it indicates that some provincial governments can be trusted more than other governments.

Senator Grosart: You have messed it up enough. Don't carry it any further.

Senator Lang: Honourable senators, I rise on a question of personal privilege. I have been a trustee of Sunnybrook Hospital—

Senator Flynn: Oh, that is the explanation.

Senator Lang:—since 1966, and I am also a veteran.

There is no question that the hospital situation in Ontario is serious. I should like to deal with some of the points raised by Senator Marshall.

Senator Flynn: And also those raised by Senator Perrault.

Senator Lang: Honourable senators, Sunnybrook Hospital was faced this year with a potential deficit of $2.5 million. By reducing the number of beds in that hospital by 30, we have been able to bring our potential deficit down to $1.5 million. The curtailment of breakfast to a continental style breakfast applies not only to the veterans, but to the other 500 patients in that institution as well.

Senator Asselin: That was not stated in the letter.

Senator Lang: The savings involved in that curtailment of breakfast amount to between $200,000 and $300,000.

I want to assure honourable senators that such a curtailment in breakfast standards has no deleterious nutritional effect on the veterans, and I resent the reflection that my colleague, Senator Marshall, has cast upon the medical and dietary staffs of that hospital, which are the finest of any hospital in Canada.

Senator Flynn: Do you resent what the Leader of the Government said? It is about time that you were fair.

Senator Lang: I resent your interruption. Let me carry on—

Senator Flynn: Carry on, but carry on properly.

Senator Langlois: Order.

Senator Lang: We have an alternative before us. We can effect the same savings in dollar terms by reducing the ancillary services available to veterans, and that includes social workers, physiotherapists and other paramedics. Faced with that alternative, the curtailment of breakfast to what is called a continental style breakfast from what previously was not what one would call a full breakfast—the veterans have not had bacon as part of their breakfast for two years—is a modest curtailment indeed, and one which will have little effect on the lives or happiness of our veterans.

I think it should be remembered by Senator Marshall that we have two classes of veterans at Sunnybrook, the chronic and the domiciliary. The domiciliary veterans are those who are in there on a permanent basis. The chronic veterans, who are housed in K wing, are those who are there for the purposes of rehabilitation and who will, hopefully, be returned to their families and friends. K wing which houses the chronic veterans was built in recent years by the federal government.

In K wing we are suffering already from an inability to create the turnover necessary, the reason being that under our budgetary constraints we are lacking an adequate number of social workers, physiotherapists, and other paramedical services. In trying to balance these two things, in trying to put them into equilibrium, there is no question that by far the better decision is to economize on the type of breakfast to be served, notwithstanding all this emotional nonsense.

As to whether or not we should turn veterans' hospitals over to other organizations, which would include non-veteran patients, I can tell you right now that if we at Sunnybrook hospital had to cut back 50 more beds, we would lose all of our excellent medical staff, including our excellent paramedical services. At the time of the takeover by the provincial government in 1966, Sunnybrook Hospital could not have continued in existence. It was impossible to attract an intelligent, ambitious young doctor to the kind of atmosphere involved in the custodial care of elderly people. We want to give our veterans the best medical and paramedical services available, and that can only be done in conjunction with the operation of a full-time active treatment hospital. In the combination at Sunnybrook of veterans and active treatment patients, we have the best combination of any hospital of this type in Canada, and it is a hospital that is considered to be of the highest standards.

Let us not forget to put these things into balance. I challenge Senator Marshall, or anyone else, to go to any veteran at Sunnybrook and ask him if he would rather be in any other institution.

I am not denying that the federal government has not made a tremendous contribution in this area. Every senator should go and take a look at K wing. It is the most magnificent tribute to our veterans that could be made. It is not part of the main building. It is a separate building. It is an architectural gem. It is a perfect place for veterans. They have everything in K wing to make them happy and provide them with the recreational and rehabilitative facilities they need. But we could not possibly service that wing without having an active treatment hospital available, not only to attract the best medical and nursing services, but also to have a facility available to which we can transfer our chronic or domiciliary care veteran patients into active treatment without dislocation.

Honourable senators, this breakfast business is a tempest in a teapot. It is a nothing issue. It was promoted for the purposes of the press. It is a press built-up issue.

However, there is a far more serious issue underlying this, and that is the health care budget in Ontario. We cannot run a 1,000-bed hospital at a deficit of between $1.5 and $2 million a year. The only way to get back inside our budget is to reduce the number of our beds again. As soon as we start to drop below 500 active treatment beds, it becomes impossible to operate a first-class active treatment hospital, and without a first-class active treatment hospital the veterans will have nothing like the services we can give them now. They will instead be back in a custodial environment, which is the last thing we want.

May I say in conclusion, on behalf of the trustees of this hospital, of whom I am one, and myself a veteran—and we have representatives of the Legion on our board; we have dedicated lay people and the finest medical staff—these decisions are not made unthinkingly or without the most serious contemplation. By making irresponsible attacks with respect to a small issue, created by the general budget constraints imposed on all hospitals in Ontario, the press is distorting the true facts, namely, that our Canadian veterans are getting better treatment in Sunnybrook Hospital in Toronto than they are getting anywhere else in Canada, and I know that treatment will be maintained.

● (2100)

Senator Marshall: Honourable senators, I do not want to belabour the point. I respect Senator Lang's remarks, but I want to tell him that I also have visited K wing at Sunnybrook Hospital in Toronto. I have also visited Shaughnessy Hospital in Vancouver, the veterans' hospital in Victoria, the hospital in Kentville, Nova Scotia, the hospital in Lancaster, New Brunswick, and the hospital in Montreal. I visited all the veterans' hospitals to consider and determine the treatment of veterans to which we, as Canadians, are committed.

The problem of the breakfast, whether it is cold or hot, is not the point at issue. The point at issue is a commitment made back in 1914 by the then Prime Minister of Canada that no Canadian would ever deny any veteran the rights that he deserved as a result of his service to his country. We failed along the way over the 60 years that have passed since; we have failed because we did not fulfil that commitment. Every veteran who lies in the Shaughnessy Hospital, and every other hospital today, in his later years is doing so because he needs care. They deserve every care, regardless of the savings. We should not consider making savings by reducing services to the veterans.

With regard to the medical staff I criticized, I have experienced, in all the veterans' hospitals across Canada, the realization that the medical staff are working in an age of diminishing consideration. They do not recognize why Canada became great, as I indicated in my comments on the anniversary of D-Day. They do not care, and they do not want to care, because they want the veterans to be assimilated with all others in Canada. I know I am not using the right words. I have every respect for medical staffs across Canada, nurses and doctors, but they have a duty to perform. It is because the Government of Canada is relinquishing its duty that we are facing these problems that we should not have to face.

Again I say that I respect Senator Lang's thoughts on this matter. I know he is dedicated to the hospital he serves as a trustee. However, we must not forget why Canada became great. We owe everything to those old veterans who sit and complain. Regardless of whether we think their complaints are innocuous or unfounded, we owe them that until the few years they have remaining are gone into the twilight.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, I do not want to prolong this debate.

Senator Grosart: Why do it then?

Senator Flynn: Why did you start it?

Senator Perrault: We have discussed the subject at great length.

Senator Grosart: Leave it alone then and it will stop.

Senator Perrault: I know that the Deputy Leader of the Opposition has great respect for parliamentary tradition, and I hope he will show enough forbearance to hear what I have to say. If the official opposition, or any other senator, wishes to have a debate on veterans affairs, the government would certainly welcome that initiative. There are certainly many of us here and elsewhere, however, who feel that Canada's veterans affairs program has been a model for the entire world, and facts could be brought into evidence to that effect.

Senator McElman: Honourable senators, I should like to correct a comment made by Senator Marshall. He referred to the veterans' hospital in Lancaster, New Brunswick. There is now no veterans' hospital in Lancaster, New Brunswick. It was replaced some years ago, as a result—since political parties have been mentioned—of the negotiations of the former Robichaud administration and the present Hatfield administration with the Government of Canada, and is now an integral part of the very efficient and first-rate Saint John General Hospital, where the veterans are receiving much superior treatment, in a far superior building, than they had for many years previously in New Brunswick.

Senator Flynn: Honourable senators, in view of the statement made by Senator Lang, I should like to ask the Leader of the Government if he would suggest to the Minister of Veterans Affairs that he meet with Senator Lang to try to reconcile his views with those of the honourable senator, and possibly write another letter.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, Senator Lang and the Minister of Veterans Affairs are in continuing amiable contact.

Senator Flynn: It does not show in a comparison of the letter with the statement.

Senator Smith (Colchester): It would help if their contact were useful as well as amiable.

FOREIGN AFFAIRS

KOLWEZI MASSACRE—QUESTION ANSWERED

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, on May 24 a question was asked by the Honourable Senator Wagner with respect to the situation in Zaire. This is the first opportunity that has presented itself to provide a reply to that question.

As far as we are aware, all Canadians residing in Zaire have been accounted for, including Mr. and Mrs. Barnes, missionaries for the Jehovah's Witnesses, who were caught in Kolwezi but who have now returned to Kinshasa safe and sound.

Should a threat to the safety of Canadians develop as a consequence of future rebel attack, our embassy in Kinshasa would attempt to contact them and advise them to leave. Arrangements are being made to include them in the contingency plans of other countries which have greater resources in the area.

Reports received show that the Katangese rebels were well trained and well armed. However, no concrete evidence exists of a Cuban presence in the Shaba Province at the time of the invasion.

The situation in Angola is being followed very closely. The presence of Cuban troops in that country is a matter which is the sole responsibility of the Angolan government. The Canadian government, and, for that matter, the governments of most Western countries, have always argued that the problems of Africa should be settled by the Africans themselves. This is a view which is shared by most African countries.

NUCLEAR WEAPONS

GOVERNMENT POLICY RE NEUTRON BOMB—QUESTION ANSWERED

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, on May 23 the Honourable Senator Forsey asked for information on the policy of the government with regard to the proposed neutron bomb.

In his statement to the U.N. Special Session on Disarmament on May 26, 1978, the Prime Minister stated:

The President of the United States has shown the way in recent weeks with his farsighted postponement of a decision to produce a special battlefield nuclear weapon. We must all hope that the response of the Soviet Union will be such as to make it possible to extend that postponement indefinitely.

The Prime Minister was pointing to the fact that the question of a decision to produce the neutron bomb has been postponed by President Carter. The ball is now squarely in the court of the Soviet Union, which in effect has been challenged by President Carter, to exercise equivalent restraint with regard to its own deployments or force levels.

BUSINESS OF THE SENATE

Senator Manning: Honourable senators, would the Leader of the Government indicate what legislation, if any, will be coming to this chamber from the other place in the next week or ten days, if that information is available?

Senator Perrault: That information is not yet available. There is, of course, a high degree of probability that Bill C-56, relating to certain taxation policies, will come before the chamber very shortly. Beyond that, without giving the titles of bills, it is not anticipated that major legislation will be brought before Parliament before the summer break.

● (2110)

FINANCIAL ADMINISTRATION ACT

BILL TO AMEND—MOTION FOR THIRD READING—MOTION IN AMENDMENT—DEBATE CONTINUED

The Senate resumed from Thursday, May 25, the debate on the motion of Senator Everett for the third reading of Bill C-10, to amend the Financial Administration Act, and the motion in amendment thereto of Senator Forsey that the bill be not now read the third time but that it be amended.

Hon. George I. Smith: Honourable senators, as it is some time since this debate was adjourned, I should like to begin by saying two things. First, my remarks at this time are addressed to the amendment, and consequently I will not feel barred—and I am sure the house will not feel that I should be—from speaking on any other motion that may arise relating to this bill. Secondly, we are dealing with the amendment moved by Senator Forsey at our last sitting, two portions of which have been ruled out of order by Madam Speaker this evening.

It might be helpful if I were to read the amendment as it now stands after the deletion of those two clauses. The amendment will be found in the Minutes of the Proceedings of the Senate for Thursday, May 25, 1978, a copy of which is on each senator's desk. The amendment as it remains reads as follows:

Page 1: Strike out lines 7 to 16, inclusive, and substitute the following:

“following subsections:

“(2.1) The Governor in Council may, by commission under the Great Seal, appoint an officer called the Comptroller General of Canada to hold office during good behaviour for a term of ten years, but the Comptroller General may be removed by the Governor in Council on address of the Senate and House of Commons.

(2.2) Notwithstanding subsection (1), the Comptroller General ceases to hold office on attaining the age of sixty-five years.

(2.3) Once having served as the Comptroller General, a person is not eligible for re-appointment to that office.

(2.4) In the event of the absence or incapacity of the Comptroller General or if the office of Comptroller General is vacant, the Governor in Council may appoint a person temporarily to perform the duties of Comptroller General.

(2.5) The Comptroller General is the chief financial officer of the Government of Canada and as such shall establish financial systems and procedures to ensure that

(a) the form of the Estimates provides a sound basis for budgetary control of government expenditures,

(b) public moneys and assets are kept under effective custody and control,

(c) government accounting procedures and financial statements conform to generally accepted accounting principles and standards,

(d) public moneys are expended with due regard to economy and efficiency, and

(e) satisfactory methods are used to measure the effectiveness of government programs, and shall perform such additional duties and functions as may be assigned to him by the Treasury Board.

(2.6) The Comptroller General shall report annually to Parliament on the work of his office.

(2.7) Every report to Parliament made by the Comptroller General under this section shall be made by being transmitted to the Speaker of the Senate and to the Speaker of the House of Commons for tabling in their respective Houses.

Since, as I believe was the case, Senator Everett spoke primarily about Senator Forsey's amendment, although he may also have mentioned some other matters, I shall contain my remarks to dealing with what Senator Everett said in this matter. I regret very much that through circumstances I find myself speaking at a time when Senator Everett is not in his seat. I would much rather have spoken when he was listening.

I should like to say also that I find myself quite surprised at having to disagree with the honourable senator on a number of points, because I have a high regard for his views and have frequently found myself in agreement with him.

Tonight, however, I cannot bring myself to agree very much with anything he said, and I shall draw attention to those things to which I take the greatest exception, and will indicate why. Remembering, if you will, that his remarks were devoted to the point of demonstrating why in his view he should not support the amendment, my remarks are intended to have just the opposite effect, namely, to demonstrate why I think his comments do not justify being against the amendment, and I shall mention those things that I feel justify supporting the amendment.

I should like to make this point at the outset of my comments. It has become the habit in debates here and in the other place, and also in committees of both houses, to refer to the Comptroller General, who is mentioned in this bill, as just another deputy minister. However, I submit, that he is not a deputy minister at all. He is a unique and special person. He is a person whom the bill says shall be the Comptroller General of Canada. It does not say that he shall be a deputy minister. It says that as Comptroller General of Canada he shall hold the rank and status of a deputy minister, which is a very different thing; and if honourable senators will examine the statutes which do appoint deputy ministers as such, they will find that in fact they do say that so and so shall be a deputy minister, or there shall be a deputy minister, or whatever the phraseology might be. It specifically makes provision for the appointment of a person who is designated in the statute as a deputy minister and who is called such.

Obviously, if this unique gentleman, holding this very important job, were a deputy minister, it would be quite unnecessary in the bill to say that he shall have the rank and status of a deputy minister.

So I submit that those comments which apply to a deputy minister do not necessarily apply to this unique gentleman, who will be, if he is appointed under this bill if it becomes law, the Comptroller General of Canada—a unique gentleman indeed; so unique, in fact, that the Auditor General officially described him, when giving evidence before committees in the other place, or in his report, or both, as the most important financial control officer in the public or private sector of Canada—which is a pretty emphatic description of the importance of his job.

In his report, or perhaps it is in his evidence, he refers to him as having a job ten times as important as the Auditor General himself. So I say this is not just any deputy minister, to be subjected to the application of the same principles as all other deputy ministers simply because he is thought to be one; but because he is unique and has a unique task, if this bill becomes law, so shall his position be unique, as it is obviously intended by the draftsmen to be, whatever may have been intended by the minister who introduced the bill.

One of the reasons that Senator Everett gave for the failure of certain amendments which were moved during the meeting of the National Finance Committee on this bill was that it included the provision that this officer should be the chief financial officer of Canada.

The following are the words of the honourable senator, as reported at page 831 of Hansard of May 25, 1978:

In committee two amendments were proposed to the bill, and they were, as Senator Forsey says, similar to the amendment that he has now moved. However, they both failed in committee after considerable discussion. One of the reasons I think they failed is because they contained the provision:

The Comptroller General is the chief financial officer of the Government of Canada and as such shall be charged with the control, management and supervision of government expenditures.

I believe the legal interpretation of that is that with that kind of authority he could arrogate to himself all the powers both for accountability and allocation.

● (2120)

The Secretary of the Treasury Board would have no powers under that amendment, and, indeed, it is questionable whether the President of the Treasury Board would have very much power if that amendment had gone through. So it just had to fail.

I am sure, however, that Senator Everett must have forgotten what he said at the beginning of the speech, on page 829, where we find the following:

This bill arises out of a recommendation made by the Auditor General, and I would like to read that recommendation. It was contained in the conspectus to his 1976 report. He recommended—

And just listen to this compared with what I have just said.

The establishment of the position of chief financial officer of the government, preferably with the title Comptroller General of Canada, with deputy minister status and a direct reporting relationship to the President of the Treasury Board, and with duties and authorities fully commensurate with the important responsibilities of such a key position—

I therefore say that what Senator Everett put forward to us as being the reason—or rather, a reason; I should not say it was the only reason he alleged—for the failure of these amendments in committee was that they provided that the establishment of the position of the Chief Financial Officer of the Government would do the things that I read a moment or two ago, which he thought were wrong. But that recommendation is the very recommendation, in his very words, of the Auditor General of Canada, in the conspectus to his 1976 report, quoted apparently with the approval of Senator Everett at page 829 of the Debates of the Senate of May 25, 1978.

I therefore say that that argument is not an argument at all, as far as I am concerned. The amendment seeks to do precisely what the Auditor General recommended should be done in respect of being the Chief Financial Officer.

Senator Everett also says, at page 829:

It seems to me that if the Comptroller General is going to be a servant of the Government of Canada and a servant of the Treasury Board, and if he is going to report to Parliament, he, in effect, is going to serve two masters—

But, honourable senators, the amendment does not suggest that he should be the servant of the Government of Canada and the servant of the Treasury Board. So that argument, if the facts upon which it is based were taken correctly, would have no validity. Nobody suggests in the amendment that he is going to serve the Government of Canada and serve the Treasury Board. So I think it is also incorrect for anyone to say, in the words of Senator Everett:

He would be proscribed from doing the job of seeing that our expenditures are made in an effective and efficient manner.

Senator Everett goes on to say:

He would also, it seems to me, take on the duties of the Auditor General.

But, honourable senators, no one can find anything in this amendment which in any way indicates that it would have the Comptroller General take on the duties of the Auditor General. These are two separate and distinct jobs. The amendment recognizes this, and everyone on this side of the house, at least, who has spoken about it, recognizes it. Everyone knows that the Auditor General's duty is to audit, to examine things after they have happened. Everyone who has looked at the description of what the Auditor General thinks the Comptroller General should do knows that the Comptroller General is going to take part in current events as they happen, and indeed may, in many of his duties or intended duties, shape the way in which those events will happen. There is no conflict. What the amendment seeks to do is exactly what the Auditor General asked and recommended that the Comptroller General should do. Therefore, to say that the amendment would duplicate the work of the Auditor General is, unless the Auditor General himself is very wrong, completely without justification.

Senator Everett also said this, at page 830 of Hansard:

The Auditor General has stated in committee that he does not believe that a person can be a comptroller and auditor at the same time.

Of course, that is so, and that is what we agree on. We do not want the Comptroller General to be an auditor. We want him to be the comptroller. The amendment makes that abundantly clear and does not give any ground for such an allegation.

Again, Senator Everett says this:

One of the suggestions in Senator Forsey's amendment is that there should be a statutory enumeration of the duties of the Comptroller General. We heard the minister before the committee on this matter, and he made what I thought was a rather persuasive argument.

I should like to deal with that for a moment. I should like to read certain things that the Auditor General said before the Standing Senate Committee on National Finance during the hearings on this bill. These excerpts will be found at page 10 of Issue No. 10 of the committee's printed proceedings. Senator Grosart asked certain questions of the Auditor General, and among them were these:

Do you have any objection to the authority of the Comptroller General being specified in the act so that his authority would come from Parliament, even though he were still an officer of the Treasury Board, just as in the case of other deputy ministers whose duties are spelled out in an act, particularly the National Revenue Act? Do you see any reason at all, from the point of view of your original recommendation or your subsequent thinking, why a very general description of his authorities and duties could not be spelled out in the act?

The Auditor General answered as follows:

Mr. Chairman, generally speaking, the Auditor General would be in favour of any measure strengthening the control of the public purse. The point Senator Grosart is raising certainly has been discussed with me. I raised this point myself. I accepted the explanation given to me—which I think is self-evident—with certain exceptions to which the honourable senator referred; that is, in the case of the two deputy ministers from National Revenue and perhaps one or two others, such as the Deputy Receiver General for Canada. I accepted the general reply that this is ministerial responsibility. This is a brand new position and not one easily agreed upon.

Senator Flynn, at page 10:12 of the same proceedings, asked a somewhat similar question:

In the case of any given department or deputy minister, you would know precisely what the duties and responsibilities are, whereas with the Comptroller General you will have to proceed on the general concepts you have or that which can be drawn from the list of duties that has been published. That being so, surely you agree that you would not be on as firm ground as you would were the minimum duties and responsibilities legally defined?

The Auditor General replied as follows:

As a servant of Parliament, responsible to Parliament for endeavouring to ensure that public moneys are administered well, I would have to say I would be automatically in favour of anything that would tend to strengthen the position. I have tried to qualify that at this time by pointing out that this is a position in another sense, while it is brand new, which has existed previously. The Secretary of the Treasury Board has basically attempted to do this job. He has not done it well, through no fault of his. The job has grown immensely over the past 15 years.

He goes along in that vein, and then adds:

I again emphasize that I would like anything that would strengthen that, including anything in the legislation, but I am perfectly happy to wait for it.

You will notice that never at any stage in his answers did he indicate that it was not a good thing to have eventually. "I am perfectly happy to wait for it," is the most he would say.

● (2130)

A little later, in an endeavour to make sure there was no doubt about this, I said to him, and this is at page 13 of these proceedings:

Before putting my question, I want to point out that I have read very carefully what you have said, Mr. Macdonell, before various bodies, including the Miscellaneous Estimates Committee of the other place. As a result, I have formed the opinion that, leaving the objection to it aside, you, as Auditor General, would have a preference to have the basic duties of the Comptroller General spelled out in the statute, and I have said so more than once. Having said that, I would now like to ask you whether that is a correct inference from what you have said previously and what you are saying today.

The Auditor General answered:

I think that is fairly stated, Mr. Chairman. I have tried to place on record that I am for anything that will strengthen the financial administration of public moneys. Certainly, if some of the basic duties were spelled out in the legislation that would, I suppose, over a period of years ensure, through the law, that any changes would indeed have to come back to and be ratified by Parliament. So I think that in that sense it is a safeguard. Perhaps I am so close to the picture myself, having recommended this and having a clear perception of what these duties should be, that perhaps I am a little biased—

Meaning biased in favour of his recommendation, which is somewhat natural.

Then he goes on to speak about the Lambert Royal Commission and says that he looks forward with great interest to its findings and recommendations. He says that he has publicly stated that he thinks that in its day that commission will likely have as much impact as the Glassco Commission did 15 years ago, which was immense.

In reading this and similar answers made by the Auditor General in the other place, which I referred to on second reading, and in reading his reports, it seems to me that from 1976, at least, he has been in favour not only of having a Comptroller General but of having his duties enumerated in the statute. It is simply not correct to say that he is not in favour of such a proceeding.

In another place the Auditor General goes on to speak of the fact that Senator Forsey and I—and I think he may well have added Senator Grosart and some others—have referred to the precedent of enumerating the duties of a deputy minister, and we referred particularly to the deputy ministers, there being two of them, in Revenue Canada.

Senator Everett agrees that this exists but then goes on to say that, of course, there are many other places where it does not exist and that consequently we should not regard Revenue Canada as a precedent for enumerating in this particular instance. What we were doing was replying to the allegation made by those who had overlooked the fact that there were two deputy ministers in Revenue Canada and also perhaps in one or two other departments. It was not correct to say that there was no precedent for enumerating the duties of a deputy minister in the statute. We were saying there was, and there is, and nobody can deny it. Therefore, we are not suggesting that anything should be done which has not been done before.

Although I have maintained and still maintain that the Comptroller General is not a deputy minister but a comptroller having a rank and status of a deputy minister, certainly he is one of two very senior persons who will be reporting to the President of the Treasury Board. Therefore, it is a perfectly good precedent for enumerating his duties to find the same thing done in Revenue Canada.

Honourable senators, while Senator Forsey's amendment contains more things than merely the enumeration of the duties of the Comptroller General under the bill, I submit that there is ample precedent and ample argument for doing just that. The Auditor General himself recommended it and has never retreated from that recommendation although, obviously after a great deal of discussion—I think the President of the Treasury Board said, after five or six meetings—he was prepared to modify his opinion about haste on the matter.

Honourable senators, I support the amendment put forward by Senator Forsey, minus the two portions which Madam Speaker ruled were out of order, and I ask other honourable senators to do the same.

On motion of Senator Cook, debate adjourned.

The Senate adjourned until tomorrow at 2 p.m.

THE SENATE

Wednesday, June 7, 1978

The Senate met at 2 p.m., the Speaker in the Chair.

Prayers.

[Translation]

NATIONAL CAPITAL COMMISSION

NEWSPAPER ARTICLE—QUESTION OF PRIVILEGE

Hon. Jean Marchand: Honourable senators, I rise on a question of privilege. I will not speak at length since the statement I want to read covers only two pages. Before doing so, however, I would like to mention a fact which appears somewhat ridiculous for an institution as important as the Canadian Senate. I drafted this statement myself last night, in French of course. Since nine o'clock this morning I have been trying to find someone who could translate it into English. Here in Ottawa we are used to experiencing difficulties finding someone to translate from English to French, but in this case the difficulty was to find someone to translate from French into English. To my mind, therefore, that is a great deficiency for an institution as important as ours.

So I will read you my statement as I wrote it, not that I am unable to read French, because I think I can. However, I think that an institution as important as the Senate should provide that service, not to translate love letters but official comments we make as members of this house. I would like that comment to be recorded in Hansard.

Honourable senators, an article published in the Ottawa Citizen on Monday last, June 5, compels me to take a few minutes of your time so that I will not be accused later of having neglected to correct mistakes which create serious prejudices to respectable citizens and institutions.

I refer, honourable senators, to a report which can be read on the first page of the newspaper, the Ottawa Citizen and which is entitled:

[English]

Fullerton blames Campeau project for glut of office space in region.

[Translation]

In short, the article professes to report what Mr. Doug Fullerton said on the occasion of the fifth anniversary of his leaving the chairmanship of the National Capital Commission. I think that the occasion was created artificially and I would have paid no attention to the article had it not been that reputations were being attacked viciously.

Why bring up the incident? First of all, because of the harm it can do to the National Capital Commission. Second, because it ascribes to the one who is now speaking to you a role that jeopardizes his integrity. Finally, I would have to resign as co-chairman of the Special Joint Committee of the Senate and the House of Commons on the National Capital Region if some of Mr. Fullerton's assertions were founded, as I fail to see how I could possibly continue in that position after the assertions of Mr. Fullerton.

I deplore the situation all the more because I have always held Mr. Fullerton in the highest esteem for several reasons in addition to his courage, his colorful personality and his imagination.

When I was minister responsible for the National Capital Commission, it was with the utmost confidence that I gave him full liberty, convinced as I was that his honesty and devotion to the public interest justified my trust.

What am I blaming that man for, who until now had my whole-hearted admiration? Simply, if he was correctly quoted, because of the following paragraph. Here is what is incriminating:

[English]

Despite the opposition of the NCC—

Remember, I was the minister responsible for the NCC at that time.

—Fullerton said that a "compromise" was worked out by the minister then responsible for the agency, Jean Marchand, that allowed the project to break the height by-law. "That was the project that did all the damage."

[Translation]

In fact, I would have made a compromise with Mr. Campeau—over the heads of the NCC, the City Council of Ottawa, the Ontario Municipal Board, which has jurisdiction, the government and responsible officials—to enable him to erect a building which greatly distracts from the architectural jewel which is Parliament Hill with its splendid buildings crowned by the magnificent Peace Tower.

Truth is not respected in this statement by Mr. Fullerton.

I hope he was misquoted and will hasten to make the required corrections. Otherwise, I shall have to take the means available to me so that those facts are set right and the responsibilities fairly attributed.

Honourable senators, I state solemnly that I never made—and I do not ask for any immunity when saying this, and I deliberately deprive myself of any—I state solemnly that I never made any compromise with Mr. Campeau to enable him to erect the downtown building mentioned in the Citizen, the building in downtown Ottawa. I am not talking about the matter in Hull, because I was not the minister responsible at that time.

The NCC, which was under my ministerial jurisdiction, opposed the project as designed by Campeau. Lawyers and experts appeared before the Ontario Municipal Board to oppose the height of the proposed building. The planners of the City of Ottawa opposed the project. Unfortunately the city council was divided. On the other hand, the Department of Public Works, in spite of the attitude of the NCC, decided to commit itself to leasing space in that building; since it was private land exploited by a private enterprise, the NCC did not have the right of veto.

It was the Ontario Municipal Board—and I must say that I know absolutely nobody there and that, subsequently, I have never been in contact with anybody from the Ontario Municipal Board—which, seeing the division among the people involved, decided to offer the compromise mentioned in the comments attributed, rightly or wrongly, to Mr. Fullerton.

Apparently, Mr. Fullerton took advantage of that opportunity to attack, as well as the person who is talking to you, Messrs. Campeau, Edgar Gallant and Pierre Juneau, the last two having been his successors. Strangely enough, all those people are French. The only ones who have been spared are those who are really to blame for what prompted Mr. Fullerton's complaint.

I think there are more decent ways to sell a book than taking the means used by Mr. Fullerton.

[English]

● (1400)

THE SENATE

DELAY IN DISTRIBUTION OF OFFICIAL PUBLICATIONS

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, some of our working documents are not yet available today because of the failure of a printing machine at the Printing Bureau. I understand this has caused a delay in the distribution of not only certain Senate publications but also publications of the other place.

DOCUMENTS TABLED

Senator Perrault tabled:

Report of the Science Council of Canada for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1978, pursuant to section 19 of the Science Council of Canada Act, Chapter S-5, R.S.C., 1970.

Copies of Reinsurance Agreement, issued by the Department of Transport, between Her Majesty the Queen and The Canadian Shipowners Mutual Assurance Association, dated May 8, 1978, pursuant to section 8 of the Marine and Aviation War Risks Act, Chapter W-3, R.S.C., 1970, together with Order in Council P.C. 1978-1055, dated April 6, 1978, approving same.

Capital Budget of The St. Lawrence Seaway Authority for the fiscal year ending March 31, 1979, pursuant to section 70(2) of the Financial Administration Act, Chapter F-10, R.S.C., 1970, together with copy of Order in Council P.C. 1978-1745, dated May 25, 1978, approving same.

● (1410)

HEALTH AND WELFARE

SALARIES OF NURSES IN NORTHERN REGIONS—QUESTION

Senator Lucier: Honourable senators, I should like to direct a question to the Leader of the Government in the Senate. As he is no doubt aware, the 2,000 or so federally employed nurses who provide services in the territories and the northern regions of the provinces have been without a contract since 1976. He is also no doubt aware of the important services these nurses provide in our more remote northern regions. In many areas it is impossible to attract doctors, with the result that these nurses provide the only health care available in many communities.

As I understand it, these nurses, whose wages are already some 20 per cent below those of nurses employed in other sectors, have been offered something like a 5 per cent increase. In view of that, perhaps the Leader of the Government could convince his cabinet colleagues that these nurses deserve better treatment than they have been getting. At the same time, I would ask him to inquire as to the status of the negotiations at this point in time.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, like many others, I am most certainly aware of the invaluable contribution made by the nursing profession to the communities of this nation, particularly those in remote areas where there is a shortage of doctors. In many cases in certain areas of our nation it is the nurse who is solely responsible for the maintenance of health services and lifesaving initiatives. Senator Lucier's question is a very important one, and in response I undertake to ask to have this matter placed before cabinet for discussion tomorrow.

Senator Buckwold: Honourable senators, supplemental to what we have just heard from Senator Lucier, I should like to emphasize the importance of a wage settlement to the nurses in northern Saskatchewan. Like those in the territories, they are very unhappy with the long delay in finalizing a contract. I think all honourable senators appreciate how important it is that this contract be concluded soon.

Senator Flynn: Is that a supplementary question or a supplementary answer?

Senator Buckwold: I leave that to the Leader of the Opposition to determine.

SPORTS

CBC TELECAST OF PEARSON CUP BASEBALL GAME—QUESTION

Senator Davey: Honourable senators—

Some Hon. Senators: Hear, hear.

Senator Flynn: You look relieved.

Senator Davey: Honourable senators, could the Leader of the Government inform the Senate whether the CBC plans to telecast the Pearson Cup baseball game to be played on June 29 between the Montreal Expos and the Toronto Blue Jays?

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, I have no information to that effect. However, as a baseball fan I would be pleased to fully support such an initiative, as I am sure would many other baseball fans in this chamber and in the other place. Indeed, this is the beginning of what could become an important national sporting event. I know that honourable senators will feel supportive of the position taken by Senator Davey.

Senator Flynn: Did the Leader of the Government know that Senator Davey, in addition to being a baseball fan, is also a football fan? That brings back memories.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, I am fully aware of Senator Davey's interest in athletics. Indeed, I think it is one of his endearing qualities.

THE ESTIMATES

DOCUMENT ENTITLED "HOW YOUR TAX DOLLAR IS SPENT"— QUESTION

Senator Smith (Colchester): Honourable senators, I wonder if I might ask a question of the Leader of the Government. As he no doubt recalls, on April 12 last, as reported at page 583 of Senate Hansard, he replied to a question I had asked the day before concerning a publication entitled "Federal Spending Plans, 1978-79," a copy of which I had shown him and a photocopy of which I now hold in my hand. At that time he made a number of comments, including the following:

The estimated total production cost is $44,000.

He then went on to say:

I should say that this represents an attempt by the government to demonstrate its own sense of restraint—

And then there was an interjection by Senator Flynn, following which the government leader continued:

—because the tabloid replaces the substantially more expensive booklet "How Your Tax Dollar is Spent," which was printed last year at substantially higher cost.

As I now hold in my hand the publication "How your Tax Dollar is Spent" for the year 1978-79, I am wondering whether the government leader can tell us when it was that the government decided to forego the restraint that he believed that it was about to achieve, or had achieved, by refraining from publishing this document for the year 1978-79.

Senator Perrault: As honourable senators are aware, I had answered that question only after seeking information from the appropriate source. I can only speculate that there was such an overwhelming public demand for further information on the subject of the government's restraint program that some official felt it necessary to proceed with a greater program of public education.

Senator Smith (Colchester): Is that the customary way in which the restraint practised by the government is carried out?

Senator Perrault: It is a most effective way.

Senator Smith (Colchester): Always do more than you say!

THE LATE HONOURABLE HERVÉ J. MICHAUD

NEW EXPERIMENTAL FARM IN KENT COUNTY, NEW BRUNSWICK, NAMED AFTER SENATOR

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, with leave, may I read a brief letter I received from the Minister of Agriculture? Dated June 7, 1978, it was delivered by hand just a moment ago. It reads:

Honourable Senator:

I have learned with great regret of the sudden passing of our esteemed colleague Senator Hervé J. Michaud. We all know the extent to which he held Agriculture close to his heart and of his major contribution to the Senate report on "Kent County Can Be Saved."

In order to recognize his contribution to the cause of Agriculture in Eastern New Brunswick, I wish to inform you that I have decided to name our new experimental farm in Kent County as follows:

THE SENATOR HERVÉ J. MICHAUD EXPERIMENTAL FARM

LA FERME EXPÉRIMENTALE SÉNATEUR HERVÉ J.
MICHAUD

You may wish to inform his colleagues of the Senate of my decision.

The letter is signed by the Honourable Eugene Whelan, Minister of Agriculture.

Senator Flynn: Honourable senators, we are very happy to see that the minister accepted the suggestion made by Senator Argue last evening.

Hon. Senators: Hear, hear.

FINANCIAL ADMINISTRATION ACT

BILL TO AMEND—THIRD READING

The Senate resumed from yesterday the debate on the motion of Senator Everett for the third reading of Bill C-10, to amend the Financial Administration Act, and on the motion in amendment thereto of Senator Forsey that the bill be not now read the third time but that it be amended.

Hon. Eric Cook: Honourable senators, it is difficult to follow Senator Smith (Colchester) with the intention of disagreeing with him. He generally builds up such a strong case that it is not easy to refute his arguments. However, I shall do my best because, unfortunately, I do not agree with him.

First I must express my regret at missing the meeting of the National Finance Committee when the Auditor General gave his evidence, and also the sitting of the Senate when Senator Forsey moved his amendment to the bill. However, just as I carefully followed the remarks of Senator Smith, so I have also carefully read the official report of the proceedings in the Senate and in committee. As a result of all this, I think Senators Forsey and Smith have said most if not all that can be said in favour of the amendment, and Senator Everett said most if not all of what there is to be said against the amendment. However, since I am the sponsor of the bill, and because, like Senator Forsey, I am unrepentant of the remarks I made on second reading, perhaps you will bear with me for a few minutes while I review the arguments advanced in favour of the bill as it now stands and those made against the acceptance of the suggested amendment.

I might begin by remarking that the senators who desire to amend the bill seem to consider that the new Comptroller General will carry little or no weight if appointed under the provision of the bill unless it is amended. I am reminded of the remarks that a Newfoundland statesman, long since dead, made 50 or 60 years ago. The members of the Newfoundland House of Assembly were debating a matter dealing with the Newfoundland Board of Trade. They were mainly a merchants' group. A member of the House of Assembly who supported the Fisherman's Protective Union rose in his place and said:

Mr. Speaker, there are a Board of Trade, but she ain't much good."

Senator Forsey in particular seems to share our fellow Newfoundlander's opinion when considering the merits of Bill C-10.

In order to prevent this state of affairs from coming about he has prepared his amendment. The thrust of the proposed amendment is threefold: (1) it will give the Comptroller General some extra security of tenure; (2) it will spell out some of the duties in the statute itself, (3) it will provide that the Comptroller General will report to Parliament.

Let us consider first in a general way whether there is any need for such an amendment. It seemed to me that the main reason, indeed the only reason, for moving this amendment is that Parliament should not and, indeed, must not trust or have any confidence in the President of the Treasury Board.

Senator Grosart: Hear, hear.

● (1420)

Senator Cook: We do not feel it is necessary to protect any other deputy minister or senior official from his minister, inasmuch as no other deputy minister or senior official has security of tenure. Now, all of a sudden, it is necessary to make sure that this public servant, who has the status of a senior deputy minister, must be protected from his minister and from the cabinet. It seems to me that, unless it is agreed that other important deputy ministers like the Deputy Minister of Finance, or important public servants such as the Chief of Staff, are given some security of tenure over and above that which they now have, I am not persuaded that we should make a beginning with the new Comptroller General.

It is utter nonsense to assume that the Auditor General could be dismissed at the mere whim of the President of the Treasury Board. The Comptroller General will not be in conflict with, or be required to be critical of, his own minister.

The whole burden of criticizing the operations of the Treasury Board and of all government departments remains undisturbed with the Auditor General. He remains the sole and only statutory official, the only officer of Parliament, required to report to Parliament on all the operations of all the government. There will be no change in this respect.

However, if we do have any fear that the President of the Treasury Board, having agreed to the appointment of the Comptroller General, is nevertheless going to thwart and sabotage his work, we should not only make an exception of the Comptroller General, but we should also go further and make sure the whole of the Treasury Board is put beyond the control of the president. We could create a sort of financial and accounting CBC. It would then be out of the control of everyone and no one in Parliament could interfere with it. This, of course, would be a ridiculous situation, but it seems that appointing a deputy minister who would not be controlled by his minister is just as ridiculous. The only difference would be one of degree.

Unless and until there is to be a complete restructuring of the public service, and a complete change in our federal governmental system involving all public servants, I suggest there is no good reason whatsoever for, or valid argument in favour of, giving one public servant, and only one, further or better security of tenure than that now enjoyed by all senior public servants. The senior members of the public service enjoy their own security of tenure under our present system, mainly because they have earned it as the result of years of devoted and distinguished service to their country. I am not persuaded that there is any need now to change the rules giving the public service, or any one member of the public service, whatever his title or duties may be, further and additional security of tenure.

If we carefully consider the second purpose of the amendment we must come to the conclusion that it also goes contrary to the general rule governing the public service. There are few deputy ministers operating within the public service whose duties are set out in detail in the statute creating the office. I do not say it cannot or should not be done, but in the present case we are breaking some new ground, and, while at some time in the future it may be a good thing to set out in the statute the duties of both deputies in the Treasury Board, there is no urgency to do so now. Indeed, it would be better to wait to see if it would be wise or necessary. This also seems to be the opinion of the Auditor General.

In support of this statement, let me quote the answers given by the Auditor General to Senator Hicks and Senator Barrow during the committee hearings:

SENATOR HICKS: Supplementary to that, would the Auditor General not agree, however, that if one attempted to spell out the duties in the statute, it would make the position of the Comptroller General somewhat less flexible and somewhat more difficult for the President of the Treasury Board or anyone else, for that matter, to change the arrangements which govern the activities of the Comptroller General?

MR. MACDONELL: I would certainly think that that would be so. Having had some modest experience with legislation, such as the Auditor General Act, I think I can well agree that one does not like to go about changing anything of that nature. Again, while I think the fundamental duties are easy to express, there are other grey areas right now, and to be perfectly practical about this I am not a bit unhappy that we are going to have another go at this, because, as I say, there are some grey areas that may evolve over the next year or two, and rather than having to change legislation, I think it is to be hoped that when the Financial Administration Act is reopened for consideration this will not be lost sight of. That might be a good time to raise this.

I come now to the question by Senator Barrow:

SENATOR BARROW: If these duties were spelled out, would there not be a tendency to think that they were the maximum rather than the minimum duties, and a tendency to hide behind that?

MR. MACDONELL: Mr. Chairman, I think I would concede the fact, and again I repeat that I am not unhappy that they are not spelled out right now because this is a new position and there is a split which is quite basic. But there are peripheral areas that have to be developed. I have already discovered in my relatively short period as a servant of Parliament, that sometimes the letter of the law is observed and the spirit may suffer somewhat. So I am torn between, on the one side, anything that will support the principle of even more effective control of the public purse, as against the practical values of allowing this to evolve over a period of time. I am sorry if it appears to the committee that I am wishy-washy, but I have found this is a difficult question to deal with.

THE CHAIRMAN: You have been very articulate.

In the present case the duties to be assigned to this deputy minister have been settled by agreement between his minister and the Auditor General, and, as Senator Everett pointed out, they are a matter of public record and public knowledge. They were placed on the record of the Commons committee by the President of the Treasury Board, and I placed them on record as an appendix to the Senate Hansard of May 2, 1977. This is more, I suggest, than has been the case with any other deputy minister or senior official.

What more weight or value can there be to spelling out again the duties and responsibilities in the statute itself at this stage? Perhaps, after some years' experience, there may be some weight to the view that the duties could be put in the statute, but inasmuch as other deputy ministers do not feel the need for having their duties enshrined in the statute creating their departments, I fail to see any good argument for doing so in this case. Indeed, there is less reason in this case than in the case of other deputy ministers.

I say this because, in the case of the Treasury Board, the Auditor General will constantly be looking over the shoulder of both the President of the Treasury Board and the Comtroller General, and he, the Auditor General, has stated, in no uncertain manner, that he will report any hanky-panky in respect of the duties and responsibilities of the Comptroller General directly to Parliament. Therefore, any failure on the part of the Comptroller General to carry out the duties already agreed upon, will be promptly and firmly reported upon and brought to the notice and attention of Parliament. I fail to see how putting these duties in the statute can make this situation better than it now will be.

The third purpose of the amendment is to require the Comptroller General to report to Parliament. We now have by statute the Auditor General reporting to Parliament, and the Auditor General has very wide statutory duties. These duties were greatly enlarged in the Auditor General Act of 1977, only last year.

● (1430)

I assume that the Auditor General has all the staff he feels is necessary to carry out his duties. One important part of his duties is, and will continue to be, to report on the Treasury Board, including the work and responsibilities of the Comptroller General.

The provisions of the proposed amendment would mean that the report of the Comptroller General to Parliament and the report of the Auditor General to Parliament would cover much the same ground, inasmuch as both persons will have to report on the manner in which the departments and crown companies are handling and accounting for public funds. In the case of the Comptroller General, the report would be on the continuing operations of the departments. In the case of the Auditor General, the report would also deal with the continuing operations, pointing out the errors and omissions not only already made but which will be made in the future if the defaulting departments do not mend their ways.

By the provisions of the Auditor General Act, the Auditor General reports on all aspects of the public finances, including the work of the Treasury Board. The final report to Parliament, the report which reviews and comments on all and every detail of the public finances, is that of the Auditor General. There is no possible virtue in having the Comptroller General report to Parliament. His report could only cover the same ground as the Auditor General's. At best it would be redundant, and at worst it would cause fears and doubts, particularly if they reached different conclusions and made varying recommendations. We either rely upon and trust the Auditor General or we do not. If we do not we should replace him. There is no point in appointing someone to sort of double check his work.

Honourable senators, notwithstanding my great respect for the judgment of the mover of the amendment and for all of my colleagues who urge its passage, I consider the amendment to be unnecessary and mistaken; indeed, if it is accepted it will do more harm than good.

The amendment will create a public servant who is half inside the public service and half outside, and the establishment of the outside half is pointless when the Auditor General already adequately fulfills the auditing requirements of the public finances.

By providing some statutory duties and by also allowing his minister to allocate duties, as is the case of all other deputy ministers, it can only confuse what now is reasonably clear or may be made clear after experience and consultation between the President of the Treasury Board and the Auditor General.

Finally, by imposing on the Comptroller General statutory duties plus the duty of reporting to Parliament, we create a very real risk of conflict between the Auditor General and the Comptroller General which could result in serious disruption in the operation of government.

What will happen if the Comptroller General, in pursuance of his statutory duties and powers, recommends that departments use systems devised by him and so reports to Parliament, and the Auditor General in his turn reports to Parliament that while the systems are excellent from an accounting point of view, nevertheless the operation of the departments following these systems would become so difficult and slow that the systems could not be implemented without adding 10 per cent or more staff, and the net result would be a substantial delay in the operations of the departments and a heavy increase in the cost of government? In such a situation, which "general" does Parliament decide has the last word? In the meantime, while Parliament debates and finally decides, what will happen to the operations of government during the state of uncertainty caused by the difference of opinion between two statutory officials?

Honourable senators, perhaps we should let the Auditor General have the last word. I quote from the printed proceedings of the Standing Senate Committee on National Finance, Issue No. 10, dated May 24, 1978. Senator Everett, the chairman, asked:

Mr. Macdonell, do you have any opening statement to make?

MR. J. J. MACDONELL, AUDITOR GENERAL OF CANADA: I have no prepared statement, senator. I would only put on record for this distinguished committee what I have said in another place on more than one occasion, that this is a recommendation based on an extensive study that was conducted by my office, and that I was extremely gratified that the government in due process of time decided to accept that recommendation. I would only conclude by saying that the incumbent has been selected, and certainly has the kinds of qualifications that I set out in my 1976 report as being essential. He is one of the outstanding people in Canada who should be in a position to do this job most effectively. Thank you very much.

Honourable senators, the bill as it stands is acceptable to the Auditor General, who made the recommendation on which it is based. The amendment is unnecessary and, indeed, for the reasons already advanced, unwise. The Senate should reject it.

Hon. Jacques Flynn: Honourable senators, I agree with Senator Cook when he says that practically everything that could be said for or against the bill, and for or against the amendment, has been said. I hope you will take it with a smile if I say that you did not have very much to say for or against the bill or for or against the amendment.

The question, of course, apparently becomes very important for the government, because I did not suspect that it would allow Senator Cook to make another rather repetitious speech on this question. This probably indicates that the government is somewhat afraid of the possibility of some of its supporters deserting it on this particular occasion. In any event, the debate, as it has gone up to now, has proven one thing. There are accessories or incidents in Senator Forsey's amendment that are not too important. Senator Cook mentioned the tenure of office, the obligation to report to Parliament and things such as that. I do not think that these accessories should blur the issue. The main question is whether—

Senator Lamontagne: It is a fundamental question.

Senator Flynn: What you consider fundamental, I may not consider fundamental.

● (1440)

I say again that the question of tenure of office, retirement at age 65, or even the question of reporting to Parliament, as far as this particular function is concerned, is not the main point. It is merely incidental. If Senator Lamontagne wishes to disagree with me, that is entirely up to him.

Senator Choquette: He always does.

Senator Flynn: Yes, and that always makes me sure of my position. The main point is whether the minimum duties—and I underline the word "minimum"—the minimum duties of the Comptroller General should be in the bill. I say minimum because something could be added at such time as the Financial Administration Act is revised.

The Secretary of the Treasury Board, while his duties are not defined as those of a deputy minister, is in fact the deputy minister. What would be the position of the Comptroller General vis-à-vis the Secretary of the Treasury Board? Undoubtedly, there is the possibility of conflict.

Senator Cook wants to avoid confusion between the responsibilities of the Comptroller General and those of the Auditor General. That is exactly what we are trying to achieve by saying that the Comptroller General acts before, and the Auditor General acts after. If the duties of the Comptroller General are not defined, confusion will quite likely follow.

It has been said that the duties of deputy ministers are not generally defined. Of course they are defined as they relate to the Department of National Revenue, the obvious reason being that there are two separate responsibilities in the department, one for taxation and one for customs and excise. So, in that case it is necessary to have the duties defined. When there is only one deputy minister, there is no need to define his responsibilities because his responsibilities are those of the department, and the responsibilities of the department are defined in the legislation.

When I am told that the reason for not defining the duties is to avoid confusion, I say the contrary will, in fact, take place.

Without the duties being defined, confusion is likely to occur; conflict is likely to occur. To pass the bill as it is now drafted would merely be a case of whitewashing by the government. In other words, the government, because the Auditor General recommended the creation of this office, is willing to set it up, but it will be just a title.

The Auditor General, I suggest to Senator Cook and all other honourable senators who attended the committee meetings on this bill, stated before the committee that he would very much prefer the minimum duties to be defined. However, he was willing to accept the office as created rather than lose it entirely. That is the position of the Auditor General. It is wrong, entirely wrong, for Senator Cook, or anyone else, to say that the Auditor General does not want the minimum duties of the Comptroller General defined in the legislation; it is something which is not borne out by the evidence before either our committee or the committee of the other place.

In order that the Senate may decide on the main issue—that is, whether the minimum duties of the Comptroller General should be defined in the legislation—I move, seconded by Senator Grosart:

That the motion in amendment of the Honourable Senator Forsey to the motion of the Honourable Senator Everett for third reading of Bill C-10, to amend the Financial Administration Act, be not now adopted but that it be amended to read as follows:

Page 1: Strike out lines 7 to 16, inclusive, and substitute the following:

“following subsections:

“(2.1) The Governor in Council may appoint an officer called the Comptroller General of Canada to hold office during pleasure and the Comptroller General of Canada shall rank as and have all the powers of a deputy head of a department.

And the proposed subsection (2.2) is merely the definition of the duties as is found in Senator Forsey’s motion in amendment. It reads:

“(2.2) The Comptroller General is the chief financial officer of the Government of Canada, and as such shall establish financial systems and procedures to ensure that

- (a) the form of the Estimates provides a sound basis for budgetary control of government expenditures,
- (b) public moneys and assets are kept under effective custody and control,
- (c) government accounting procedures and financial statements conform to generally accepted accounting principles and standards,
- (d) public moneys are expended with due regard to economy and efficiency, and
- (e) satisfactory methods are used to measure the effectiveness of government programs, and shall perform such additional duties and functions as may be assigned to him by the Treasury Board.”

[Senator Flynn.]

With the functions of the Comptroller General so defined, there could not be confusion with the Auditor General.

The Hon. the Speaker: It is moved by the Honourable Senator Everett, seconded by the Honourable Senator Cameron, that this bill be now read the third time.

In amendment, it is moved by the Honourable Senator Forsey, seconded by the Honourable Senator Smith (Colchester), that the bill be not now read the third time, but that it be amended as follows—

Hon. Senators: Dispense.

The Hon. the Speaker: In amendment to the amendment, it is moved by the Honourable Senator Flynn, seconded by the Honourable Senator Grosart, that the motion in amendment of the Honourable Senator Forsey to the motion of the Honourable Senator Everett for third reading of Bill C-10, to amend the Financial Administration Act, be not now adopted but that it be amended to read as follows—

Hon. Senators: Dispense.

The Hon. the Speaker: Is it your pleasure, honourable senators, to adopt the motion in amendment to the amendment?

Some Hon. Senators: Yes.

Some Hon. Senators: No.

The Hon. the Speaker: Will those honourable senators who are in favour of the motion in amendment to the amendment please say “yea”?

Some Hon. Senators: Yea.

The Hon. the Speaker: Will those honourable senators who are against the motion in amendment to the amendment please say “nay”?

Some Hon. Senators: Nay.

The Hon. the Speaker: In my opinion the “nays” have it. And more than two honourable senators having risen.

The Hon. the Speaker: Please call in the senators.

● (1450)

Motion in amendment of Senator Flynn negatived on the following division:

YEAS

THE HONOURABLE SENATORS

Asselin	Marshall
Beaubien	Phillips
Choquette	Quart
Flynn	Roblin
Fournier	Smith (Colchester)
(Madawaska-Restigouche)	Wagner
Grosart	Walker
Macdonald	Yuzyk—15.

NAYS

THE HONOURABLE SENATORS

Adams	Bell
Austin	Bird
Barrow	Bonnell

THE HONOURABLE SENATORS

Bosa	Lang
Bourget	Langlois
Buckwold	Lewis
Cameron	Lucier
Connolly (Ottawa West)	Macnaughton
Cook	Marchand
Cottreau	McDonald
Croll	McElman
Davey	McIlraith
Denis	Molgat
Deschatelets	Molson
Desruisseaux	Neiman
Fournier (de Lanaudière)	Norrie
Fournier	Paterson
(Restigouche-Gloucester)	Perrault
Frith	Petten
Graham	Riel
Haidasz	Riley
Hayden	Rizzuto
Hays	Smith (Queens-Shelburne)
Inman	Stanbury
Lafond	Steuart
Laird	Williams—52.
Lamontagne

The Hon. the Speaker: I declare the amendment to the amendment lost.

I shall now put the question on the amendment of Senator Forsey. Is it your pleasure, honourable senators, to adopt the motion in amendment?

Some Hon. Senators: Yes.

Some Hon. Senators: No.

The Hon. the Speaker: Will those in favour of the motion in amendment please rise?

Senator Flynn: That is not necessary.

The Hon. the Speaker: In my opinion, the amendment is lost.

Is it your pleasure, honourable senators, to adopt the motion for the third reading of this bill?

Hon. Ann Elizabeth Bell: Honourable senators, I rise to speak on the main motion. I would just like to point out that both amendments were proposed with the idea of helping to get our financial affairs in order—and I am sure that the taxpayers of Canada would be very happy to see that achieved—but they had some holes in them, and that is perhaps why they did not receive the support their proposers wished.

The chief problem here, in my view, is that in Bill C-10 we have the proposed Comptroller General being a financial officer of the Government of Canada. That is confirmed in both these amendments. This leaves unresolved the problem of Parliament's having adequate information with which to judge departmental activities.

The amendment which would confirm that the Comptroller General should report to Parliament by courtesy of the Treasury Board—that is the first one, the Forsey-Smith amendment—would still leave us dependent on what the President of the Treasury Board chose to let the Comptroller General let us know.

How much worse off are we with Bill C-10 as it stands? The Comptroller General will report through the Auditor General. I suggest that this will be a perfectly satisfactory arrangement, except that we are going to hear about it after, not before, we need the information. We will hear about it after, and the government will say, "We have been bad boys. We will try to do better next time." It would not make any difference as long as the Comptroller General is the creature of the Treasury Board, and when he reports he will have to report through the Treasury Board. It will not be helpful.

● (1500)

I think the Treasury Board needs all the help it can get. If we are to have a new executive officer called the Comptroller General, let us get on with this bill and pass it as quickly as possible. Let him take over the efficiency evaluation, and anything else. Let us also hear of some innovation in our financial policies, and in our financial structures and forms. I understand we are rather behind in this kind of thing. Innovation in respect of solving financial problems within the Treasury Board has not been recognized or rewarded.

Also, let us hope that we have expeditiousness; that this will not be one more layer of bureaucracy, so that when a good program, like the Salmon Enhancement Program, is put forward it doesn't get lost in a vortex of administration and sink without trace, but will re-emerge, as the Salmon Enhancement Program did, and provide a great return on the investment of the taxpayers of this country.

If we are here as watchdogs of the public purse—and surely we have to be—we have to be independent. I would like to support Senator Greene's suggestion that we have a parliamentary financial adviser. I think that is perhaps the way to get at what these two amendments were suggesting. In the meantime, I support Bill C-10 as it stands.

Motion agreed to and bill read third time and passed.

● (1510)

PENSION ACT COMPENSATION FOR FORMER PRISONERS OF WAR ACT

BILL TO AMEND—SECOND READING

Hon. A. H. McDonald moved the second reading of Bill C-58, to amend the Pension Act and the Compensation for Former Prisoners of War Act.

He said: Honourable senators, it gives me a great deal of pleasure to move the second reading of Bill C-58. I say that because I happen to be a veteran myself. In this country, and under all governments, legislation favourable to veterans has been brought into being.

Yesterday Senator Marshall drew our attention to the thirty-fourth anniversary of D-Day. I wish to congratulate him on the eloquence of his remarks, and to say that I believe every member of this chamber agreed with them. We all had the same feeling in our hearts as he did.

You will also recall, honourable senators, that yesterday we became involved in a rather unusual debate with respect to services offered to veterans in one of our health institutions. I do not want to continue that particular discussion because, in the first place, I know nothing about it, and, in the second place, I would be out of order. However, I do want to spend a moment or two in reviewing government policies—that is, the policies of past governments—in the period from 1919-1920 to the present time.

I am sure that all honourable senators will agree with me when I say that it took the First World War to make Canada a nation. Canada played a magnificent and important role in that war, considering the size of its population. We became Canadians and showed to the world that here was a new and vigorous nation, a nation that has since earned the respect of other nations. All this began with the participation of Canadian units in the Great War of 1914-18.

Legislation providing benefits to veterans following World War I was, in many instances, lacking. I suppose we can overlook that now because that was really the first conflict of any magnitude in which Canadians played a major role. I suppose the government was confronted with a problem in respect of which they had no experience to fall back on. Some of the programs implemented after World War I were inadequate. One measure with which I had personal experience was the Soldier Settlement Act, under which many young veterans were placed on farms—farms on which no one, not even a veteran, could make a living.

One cannot compare the legislation of that era with the legislation placed on the statute books following World War II. The re-establishment programs implemented at that time with respect to pensions and other programs were second to none. One need only look at the members of this chamber, or at one's friends outside this chamber, to recognize the fact that the educational program implemented following World War II was second to none. Many veterans took advantage of those programs, and they now play important roles in almost every walk of life. Many of them are members of this and of the other house.

In addition to the educational program, the housing program implemented at that time, including the small acreage program, was among the best programs ever introduced in the world.

The Veterans Land Act, which I happened to take advantage of, placed thousands of young men on farms. They were given credit assistance in purchasing farms, and help with respect to good agricultural practices, bookkeeping, and such matters. Thousands of veterans were solidly established under the Veterans Land Act. The same can be said of those veterans who entered the business world. Many of them have become extremely successful.

Certainly there have been failures in some of these programs, but I believe that no matter what program is implemented, there will be a few failures. I point out, however, that the failures were very few in number.

As far as the pension programs for veterans are concerned, again I think we have done well under all previous governments, and under the present government.

Bill C-58 is an updating of the legislation that has been in existence in a similar form since 1920. This act was last amended in 1973, when it was decided to update the scale of pensions for disabilities and pensions for death from time to time. This bill updates the 1973 legislation. I would have preferred that it spell out in legislative terms that this updating take place every year. For one reason or another, the government has not seen fit to do that at this time.

As set out in Schedule A to the bill, the increase in the pensions for veterans, their wives and dependent children amounts to approximately 4.3 per cent. It is not a large increase by any standard, but it must be remembered that it does re-introduce the principle of tying pensions to certain categories in the public service for purposes of determining percentage increases. That principle, established first in 1920, and re-established in 1973, ties pension increases to salary levels in five categories of the public service.

I was hoping to see included in this bill a provision for the payment of pensions to widows and dependent children regardless of the percentage of pension being received by the veteran. The legislation currently provides for such pensions only in those cases where the veteran has a 48 per cent pension or greater. Again, the amounts paid to widows and dependent children under that provision are set out in Schedule A to the bill.

A veteran in receipt of a 40 per cent pension, for example, receives $294.04 a month; the wife, $62.26 a month; the dependent child, $32.38; and so forth. Given the fact that the government is prepared to pay the veteran at that level of pension an amount on behalf of his wife and dependent children while he is alive, it seems illogical not to provide a pension for his widow after his death, as well as pensions for any dependent children. Surely it is then that the needs of the wife and dependent children are most acute.

The one fault that I find with this legislation is that the government has not seen fit to implement that suggestion. It is one that has been made by many members of both this house and the other place, as well as veterans' organizations. It is my hope that those who feel as I do will continue to press for the adoption of this principle—that is to say, that there be a widow's and dependent children's pension regardless of the percentage level of the pension of the veteran.

This increase should not be confused with the annual increment that is given to veterans in January of each year. As you know, that allowance is based upon the increase in cost of living. However, the cost-of-living allowances have not kept pace with the salary levels of the five public service categories on which veterans' pensions are based. Salary levels in those five categories have increased faster than have veterans' pensions, and hence this increase. To my mind, this is a good principle and one which should be continued into the future.

Seldom, if ever, have taxpayers' dollars in this country brought a greater return than those spent on veterans' pensions. As Senator Marshall pointed out, this nation owes its very existence to the men and women who fought and served in the two world wars, the Korean conflict, and other conflicts. Many of those who served gave their lives. We owe a debt to their families. The number of veterans is dropping every day. We certainly do not need another war in order to increase the number of veterans in Canada. To repeat, in no other area, in my opinion, are taxpayers' dollars better spent than in the area of veterans' pensions.

It is my understanding that if this legislation receives speedy passage, it can be given royal assent tomorrow evening. I would like to see that happen. I do not believe there is a senator who would oppose this bill. The bill, if passed, will go into effect on July 1 next. It is my hope that the cheques that go out to our veterans for the month of July will include this increase.

Senator Bell: Honourable senators, I wonder if I might ask a question of Senator McDonald.

The body of the bill does not seem to use the term "spouse," whereas the schedule does. Does the use of the term "wife" or "widow" preclude a dependent spouse of a female veteran from receiving a pension in the event of the death of the veteran?

Senator McDonald: It is my understanding that the act applies whether it is a widow or a widower.

● (1520)

Hon. Jack Marshall: Honourable senators, first of all may I say that I certainly was struck by the sincerity of Senator McDonald's remarks, and that I feel I am in good company in the Senate. Even though we were on opposite sides, I was very close to his namesake in the other place, the Honourable Minister of Veterans Affairs, and I think everyone knows that there was a spirit of non-partisanship in the Veterans Affairs Committee of the other place.

I must commend Senator McDonald for the sincerity of his words, and I want to assure him that it is not our intention to delay the passage of this bill beyond the length of my remarks. We realize that a time factor is involved in the processing of these cheques in order that veterans may benefit from a little extra comfort that the money will provide.

I wish to express my appreciation to my leader for allowing me to respond, on behalf of the official opposition, to Bill C-58, to amend the Pension Act and the compensation for former Prisoners of War Act, acts which were of particular interest to me in the other place, and the thrust of which I supported along with members from all sides.

The most important amendment in this bill is under clause 3, which Senator McDonald referred to as a "catch-up" amendment because it brings the basic rate of pension for veterans into line with the formula established in 1973. If I may ask for the attention of the Senate, I think it might be worthwhile to elaborate a little on the history of the factors surrounding the basic rate of pension, and to put into perspective the developments which finally produced a reasonable formula for establishing the basic rate in 1973. We must keep in mind that even though the basic rate was first established in 1920 it was not until 1973, some 60 years after World War I, that a reasonable rate was established with some semblance of recognition.

The basic rate was dealt with and given some extensive consideration by the Woods Committee which, as many senators are aware, studied and reviewed veterans legislation in all its phases, and came up with some 148 recommendations to improve the Veterans Charter. I feel also that it is appropriate at this time to pay special tribute to Mr. Justice Mervyn Woods and his committee for their efforts in bringing about long overdue changes in the act in line with the changing conditions of the seventies. But more particularly, honourable senators, should we give credit to the joint study group consisting of departmental officials and representatives of veterans' organizations who have, after more exhaustive consideration, come up with a formula to meet those changing needs and establish a rate based on the five lowest categories in the public service, as the honourable senator mentioned. This is certainly not an unreasonable formula and it is certainly an unselfish one.

But in addition to establishing the rate, that same committee recommended to the Standing Committee on Veterans Affairs that in order to keep pace with inflation, the rate should be indexed annually as related to the increases in the wages of public service salaries of the five categories, or with their standard of living, a formula endorsed in 1973 by the committee and, indeed, by the minister. Unfortunately, the government did not see fit to accept this part of the formula and the recommendation, but rather agreed only to indexing the rate to the increases in the cost of living. It is for this reason that we have to go through the exercise of amending the act to allow veterans to catch up with their public service counterparts, since they have fallen behind unnecessarily, by the provision in the bill of the basic rate increase by some $311.

Under the bill the basic rate for the 100 per cent single pensioner is increased to $7,741, and the married rate is increased to $9,338.95, and while we commend the minister for twisting the arm of his colleagues in cabinet and the Treasury Board to provide this increase, we should not have to go through this process of introducing amendments as an ongoing process to recognize the fast diminishing veteran community, whose members wonder why they have to beg for the recognition which Canada promised as a result of their service to their country. And just as sure as we sit here today, we will have to go through this process again, because surely the veteran will have fallen behind again in a year or two or three.

So it is very disappointing that, even though we recognize belatedly through this amendment the proof that the rate will continue to fall behind the formula established in the years to come, the government did not see fit to insert a clause in the bill that would rectify the apparent anomaly, a simple clause that would alleviate the problem rather than leaving it in such terms that we will be faced again with the continual pleading and begging of veterans organizations, dedicated to the welfare of their veteran comrades, for another amendment to catch up again.

Unfortunately, time is an important factor when we deal with veterans legislation, and despite the failure of the government to recognize and correct this inequity, as was the case with our colleagues in the other place, we must expedite the passage of this bill through all stages and fight the continuing battle another day. We must expedite passage of the bill because we have to meet the deadline of July 1 when the bill comes into force.

We must consider the time factor involved in processing the increase that will provide a little extra comfort to those veterans who depend on their pensions and who are at the mercy of those of us who govern.

As we consider these amendments in Bill C-58, I feel it my duty, notwithstanding my privilege to criticize, to point out that while we recognize other benefits in the bill that emphasize the continuing fight of veterans' organizations to influence legislation, we also recognize that there are other clauses in the bill which merit our attention. I refer to those clauses that recognize the fate of veterans who suffer from loss of limb, and I refer in the main to the war amputee.

Subsections 28(2) and (3) of the Pension Act are repealed, and the new subsections provide for increases for amputees, those who suffered most as a result of war. Subsection 28(2) is repealed and the new subsection would increase the allowance on account of wear and tear of clothing, to which a member of the forces is entitled on account of an amputation, to $224. Subsection 28(3) is repealed and the new subsection would also increase to $224 the allowance for wear and tear of clothing resulting from the use of an appliance by a member of the forces who is disabled. An amendment to subsection 28(5) would increase to $224 the per annum allowance for the purchase of specially made wearing apparel required to be worn by a member of the force who has lost a limb.

There are other amendments which increase allowances, and this emphasizes the fact that the veterans' organizations have the ear of the minister at all times. And the minister has responded, not only to the effort that we were making in trying to bring the basic rate of pension up to par but also to bring up to par the allowances of war amputees who are continually faced with inflation costs in the clothes they wear and in the appliances they have to bear with.

We should also recognize—and I think we can all be proud of this fact—that finally after 30 to 50 years the government saw fit to bring in a prisoners of war compensation act, and that pensioners under this act, as a result of this increase in the basic rate of pension, will benefit a little more, from $11 to $27.56, depending on the length of incarceration. I mention these clauses because it is an indication of the constant thrust of the veterans' organizations, who are watching on behalf of their comrades any needs that arise because of changing conditions.

• (1530)

The government leader and most others indicate that we probably have the best veterans' legislation in the world. I have to agree with that. In my experience as a veterans' affairs critic, I have to agree up to a certain point. As the honourable senator opposite rightly pointed out, there are still anomalies, and we will never have the best legislation until we deal with those very people to whom he referred. There is a lack of recognition of veterans' widows whose husbands died while in receipt of a disability pension of less than 48 per cent, which leaves them unprotected for their remaining twilight years.

Honourable senators, I ask you to consider this example. Under the scale of pensions for disabilities the married veteran with an entitlement of 48 per cent receives a pension, in dollar terms, of $389.13. If he dies, his widow is entitled to a pension amounting to 75 per cent of the 100 per cent pension rate for the single pensioner, or $466.95, which is reasonable and satisfactory. Someone must have recognized, some time, somewhere, that the widow is entitled to even more than she and her husband were receiving while he was living.

However, when we examine the rate for the married veteran whose pensionable entitlement is just one per cent less, at 47 per cent, or in dollar terms an amount of $350.21, which is just $38.92 less than his 48 per cent comrade, on his death, and unless his death is deemed to be related to or attributable to his pensionable condition, his widow is not entitled to a pension, and if without any other income is unfortunately left at the mercy of the welfare of the province in which she happens to live. I am not aware of the welfare rates in most of the provinces, but I know that in the province in which I live a widow in that category would receive a maximum of $151 a month. I can tell you, honourable senators, that in the province of Newfoundland that widow in a home of her own is paying $60 to $70 a month for fuel. How can she live? How can she have the nutrition that we are supposed to provide?

Last evening the Leader of the Government kept repeating that Canada should be proud of her veterans legislation. Again I say he is right, up to a certain point. However, one wonders why this serious and unexplainable inequity is not considered with more priority by those who promote equality for women, or even by the Human Rights Commission. We talk about equality for women, but nobody ever mentions that widow who is left alone, discarded by society, because for years she has been living with her husband who, at the rate of 48 per cent, has got to be disabled, at perhaps 100 per cent where he has to have constant 24-hour care.

The solution to correct the situation was evident in the recommendations of the Herman Report, supported by the Standing Committee of Veterans Affairs, as well as the minister, but was turned down by those within cabinet or Treasury Board, those who could only be classified as inhumane or, in military terms, "conscientious objectors."

The recommendation would allow for a reasonable formula to be used for widows in the less than 48 per cent category, which would provide double the rate of the deceased veteran's rate of pension, prorated to the maximum widow's pension. In other words, if the veteran died when in receipt of 30 per cent, the widow would receive 60 per cent of the maximum pension, or an amount of $280, which is certainly not unreasonable. At least that widow might be given the protection of a continuation of the married rate for a year. At least they should allow her married rate of pension to continue for a year so that she can adjust and get over the shock of dropping to almost nothing in order to live out her remaining years.

The fact that this does not happen emphasizes the inconsistency in the Veterans Charter, where, on the death of the recipient of a war veterans allowance in receipt of a married rate of $512, his wife is entitled to that $512 for a year, for 12 months, and that only reverts to the single rate, which is around $280, if my memory serves me aright. So she is also protected. The war veteran's allowance recipient's wife is protected for a year, and indeed for life, at half the rate. Yet for the disability pensioner, who it must be recognized has a more serious condition, his wife is left stranded.

There are many inequities and anomalies in the bill, and in the veterans legislation, which I could go over today. However, if I remember correctly, last evening the Leader of the Government indicated that if we wanted to have a day on veterans affairs we could do so. I hope the honourable senator opposite will join me in bringing up many of the other inequities of which I am sure he is aware.

We must pass this bill today, honourable senators. As we have both indicated, it is vital and important that it go through the process so that these First World War veterans, who are now over 80, can enjoy the $311 which will be forthcoming in the months ahead. I commend a speedy passage of this bill for the benefit of the veterans of the country, whom we all support.

Senator Haidasz: Honourable senators, I would like to reserve my remarks until third reading, in order to facilitate the passage of this bill.

Motion agreed to and bill read second time.

The Hon. the Speaker: When shall this bill be read the third time?

Senator McDonald moved that the bill be placed on the Orders of the Day for third reading at the next sitting.

Motion agreed to.

NATIONAL ANTHEM

DESIRABILITY OF PASSAGE OF BILL C-9—DEBATE ADJOURNED

Hon. Peter Bosa rose pursuant to notice of Thursday, May 25, 1978:

That he will call the attention of the Senate to the desirability of obtaining the speedy passage of the Bill C-9, intituled: "An Act respecting the national anthem of Canada", so that the Canadian Consultative Council on Multiculturalism may accede to the requests of ethnocultural organizations to have the words of "O Canada" translated into the various heritage languages.

He said: Honourable senators, the adoption of "O Canada" as our official national anthem is an issue close to the hearts of Canadians. By its very nature, Bill C-9, respecting the national anthem of Canada, is non-controversial, and it is unlikely to cause such heated debate and discussion as did the bill respecting our national flag in 1964. It was one of my responsibilities at the time, as special assistant to the government house leader, to keep a record of the speeches made during the debate on the national flag. If I recall correctly, there were some 300 speeches made in that debate. After the bill received second reading, it was referred to a special committee, which sat mornings, afternoons and evenings for a period of six weeks, and then submitted to Parliament a report, which was further debated and adopted after the imposition of closure. "O Canada" does not present such a dilemma, since it has been our unofficial anthem for more than seven decades. Three generations from coast to coast have sung it to express their feelings for this land.

● (1540)

Canada is now 111 years old, and in order to remain strong and united our country needs national symbols. We have an official and distinctive Canadian flag. In light of the discussion on Canadian unity, which has gained momentum in the past year and a half, the adoption of a national anthem is a high priority item.

It was at the French Canadian National Convention held at Quebec City in 1880 that "O Canada" was first introduced. The words came from the pen of Mr. Justice Routhier and were entitled "Chant national." The Lieutenant Governor of Quebec, Dr. Théodore Robitaille, invited Calixa Lavallée, perhaps our most distinguished and accomplished composer of the nineteenth century, to set Mr. Justice Routhier's words to music. Lavallée soon produced a musical score which became very popular in Quebec, and later throughout Canada, and which is now performed from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

Judge R. Stanley Weir's version of "O Canada", written in 1908, is considered today, with some modification, as the most appropriate for a national song. Weir's design was to create lyrics which would secure a much desired Canadian unity. Judge Weir, a fluently bilingual Montrealer, believed that one national song sung in different languages would strengthen more than anything else the unity of our country.

I can attest to this concept because, as Chairman of the Canadian Consultative Council on Multiculturalism, I am in constant contact with members of minority groups and members of the council, and I can assure honourable senators that we have been frequently asked to have the official version of "O Canada" translated into different languages. Some of the larger groups, such as the Polish, Italian, Ukrainian and German groups, already have "O Canada" translated in their languages. This does not mean that all members of minority groups wish to sing "O Canada" in the language of their origin. Nor am I implying that this is the main reason why we should adopt the official version of "O Canada". However, "O Canada" is the synthesis of many complex thoughts and emotions concerning our collectivity and ourselves, and ethnic groups are aware of the strength that can be drawn from it.

In less than a month we will be celebrating Canada Day, and in light of the intense discussions on national unity that have taken place during the last year and a half, and after our history of 111 years, I believe the time has now come to adopt the official version of "O Canada."

It seems to me that many Canadians take their national symbols for granted, but it is these very symbols that awake in us a sense of pride in our identity.

In December 1976, I was invited to be the guest speaker at a ceremony in Toronto during which students received their certificates following the successful completion of the grade 13 course in German. On that occasion the students sang "O Canada" in the German language. I was moved by the feeling of pride the students communicated while singing the anthem. Although I do not understand the language, I was aware that this was an example of a common feeling of being proud. At that moment they knew, and I knew, what it felt like to be a Canadian.

Before going to the next example I should like to express my regret at the adverse behaviour of some baseball fans at the Blue Jays' game in the CNE Stadium in Toronto on May 21 and 22 when they booed Ruth Ann Wallace's bilingual singing of "O Canada." I can assure honourable senators that those baseball fans who booed Miss Wallace's performance are not representative of the people of Toronto.

I quote now from one of the many letters to the editor that appeared in the Toronto Star of May 31 concerning that episode. The letter is headed "Booing fans didn't represent majority", and it reads:

I hate baseball but I had to go May 22 because my kids love the game.

I was horrified by the reaction to the French O Canada but noticed that most of the noise was coming from teenagers.

They would boo anything; I remember when I was that age I used to be against almost everything.

I do not believe that what took place in the game represents the opinion of the average mature Ontarian. The media should not emphasize that incident.

It is signed "Noe Zamel, Willowdale." This page is full of letters expressing the same feelings, but I will confine myself to simply reading some of their headings:

Show respect to fellow citizens.

Bilingualism is a part of Canada.

'No political significance'.

Applause for singing in French.

Singing in two languages 'pleasing'.

'Ashamed' for those who booed.

As I said, the whole page is filled with similar letters.

[Senator Bosa]

Last Friday, on June 2, I myself attended a Blue Jays' game in Toronto on which occasion the national day of Italy was acknowledged, and folkloric groups in national costumes performed traditional dances. They also sang "O Canada" in Italian in the presence of 25,000 fans who, it appeared, were singing it in English. There was no booing. Perhaps that small minority of fans who reacted adversely on a previous occasion now realize that national anthems must be treated with respect if we ourselves wish others to treat us with respect. It is my belief that the more Canadians are exposed to the diversities of our people, the more receptive they will be to one another.

The singing of "O Canada" in different languages will enable Canadians to express in unison their feelings about a united Canada.

For these reasons I urge members of all parties of both houses to adopt, without delay, Bill C-9, respecting the national anthem of Canada.

Senator Choquette: May I ask a question, Senator Bosa? I think you will agree with me that it is a well-known fact that the English version of "O Canada" is not an accurate translation of the French version. When you advocate that ethnic groups translate the official version of "O Canada" into their various languages do you mean they should translate the English version?

Senator Bosa: Honourable senators, I realize that it is next to impossible to translate word-for-word an expression from one language to another, but to me that is immaterial. So long as the translation expresses the general feeling contained in the message, I would be satisfied. If some minority group translates the national anthem into the language of its origin, the translated version would not represent the official version.

● (1550)

Hon. Stanley Haidasz: Honourable senators, having been charged with the responsibility of implementing the government's official policy of multiculturalism in the other place, I should like to associate myself with the remarks made by Senator Bosa, who today is Chairman of the Canadian Consultative Council on Multiculturalism. I fully support what he has said here this afternoon.

Canada is almost 111 years old, and it is a lamentable fact that we do not yet have an official national anthem. For that reason, I should like to urge all honourable senators to make the appropriate representations to their respective house leaders, both in the Senate and the House of Commons, to have Bill C-9 put into the parliamentary mill. I might add that the words and music of the song "O Canada" were recommended as the national anthem of Canada in 1967 by a joint committee of the House of Commons and the Senate.

To my mind, given the present political situation and the crisis that Confederation is facing today, it is urgent that we adopt an official national anthem. The citizenry of a country is inspired to patriotism not only by the glories of the past and their aspirations for the future, but by a fierce attachment to official national symbols, one of which is an official national anthem.

Unless we do something quickly to bring an official national anthem into being, we will be faced with the national anthem of the Quebec separatist movement.

Senator Asselin: They already have one.

Senator Haidasz: If we adopt "O Canada" as the official national anthem of Canada, it would be difficult for Quebec to ban it. I therefore urge all honourable senators to do what they can to expedite the parliamentary procedures necessary to make "O Canada" our national anthem.

On a motion of Senator Flynn, for Senator Yuzyk, debate adjourned.

The Senate adjourned until tomorrow at 2 p.m.

---

THE SENATE

Thursday, June 8, 1978

The Senate met at 2 p.m., the Speaker in the Chair.
Prayers.

CLERK'S ACCOUNTS

STATEMENT TABLED PURSUANT TO RULE 112

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, I have the honour to inform the Senate that in conformity with rule 112, the Clerk of the Senate has laid on the Table a detailed statement of his receipts and disbursements for the fiscal year 1977-78.

REFERRED TO COMMITTEE

Senator Langlois moved:

That the Clerk's accounts be referred to the Standing Senate Committee on Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration.

Motion agreed to.

NATIONAL CAPITAL REGION

SPECIAL JOINT COMMITTEE—CHANGE IN COMMONS
MEMBERSHIP

The Hon. the Speaker informed the Senate that a message had been received from the House of Commons to acquaint the Senate that the names of Messrs. Béchard and Bussièrès had been substituted for those of Messrs. Francis and Poulin on the list of members appointed to serve on the Special Joint Committee on the National Capital Region.

DOCUMENTS TABLED

Senator Perrault tabled:

Revised Capital Budget of The St. Lawrence Seaway Authority for the fiscal year ending March 31, 1978, pursuant to section 70(2) of the Financial Administration Act, Chapter F-10, R.S.C., 1970, together with copy of Order in Council P.C. 1978-1744, dated May 25, 1978, approving same.

Senator Flynn: The revised budget after the end of the year.

TRANSPORTATION

COMMITTEE AUTHORIZED TO MEET DURING SITTING OF THE
SENATE

Senator Langlois, with leave of the Senate and notwithstanding rule 45(1)(a), moved:

That the Standing Senate Committee on Transport and Communications have power to sit while the Senate is sitting on Wednesday next, June 14, 1978, and that rule 76(4) be suspended in relation thereto.

Motion agreed to.

BANKING, TRADE AND COMMERCE

COMMITTEE AUTHORIZED TO MEET DURING SITTING OF THE
SENATE

Senator Langlois, with leave of the Senate and notwithstanding rule 45(1)(a), moved:

That the Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce have power to sit while the Senate is sitting on Wednesday, June 14, 1978, and that rule 76(4) be suspended in relation thereto.

Motion agreed to.

BUSINESS OF THE SENATE

ADJOURNMENT

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, with leave of the Senate and notwithstanding rule 45(1)(g), I move that when the Senate adjourns today it do stand adjourned until Tuesday, June 13, 1978, at 8 o'clock in the evening.

Honourable senators, in informing you as well as I can at this time about the Senate work for next week, I shall deal first with the committees.

The Banking, Trade and Commerce Committee will meet at 2.30 p.m. on Tuesday, at 9.30 a.m. and 2.30 p.m. on Wednesday, and at 9.30 a.m. on Thursday. On Tuesday afternoon the committee will study the subject matter of Bill C-56, relating to Income Tax. On Wednesday it will consider the subject matter of Bill C-57, the Bank Act, at both the morning and afternoon meetings. It has not yet been decided which of the subject matters now before this committee will be dealt with on Thursday morning.

The National Finance Committee has scheduled a meeting at 2.30 p.m. on Tuesday on the main estimates. I have been informed that the committee expects to be in a position to present its report on the main estimates on Wednesday.

The Transport and Communications Committee will hold another meeting on Wednesday at 3.30 p.m. on Bill C-17, the Canadian National Railways Capital Revision Act. My information is that this bill will most likely be reported back to the Senate on Thursday next.

The Joint Committee on Regulations and other Statutory Instruments will meet on Thursday at 11 a.m.

In the Senate we shall proceed with the items now on the order paper and anything that may come to us from the other side. Bill C-56 could come to us during next week and, as I have just said, Bill C-17 could be reported back from the Transport and Communications Committee to the Senate on Thursday next.

Motion agreed to.

BANKING, TRADE AND COMMERCE

TEMPORARY RESIGNATION OF COMMITTEE MEMBER

Senator Manning: Honourable senators, because I am a director of one of Canada's chartered banks I have advised the Chairman of the Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce, and the Leader of the Government, that I wish to resign from the committee until it has completed its study of the Bank Act. I presume that the government leader will arrange for my replacement on the committee.

Senator Perrault: Yes. This matter has been discussed with the government whip, and the information has been transmitted to others involved.

NATIONAL FINANCE

SALES TAX PROPOSAL RELATING TO PROVINCE OF QUEBEC— QUESTION

Senator Flynn: Honourable senators, may I ask the Leader of the Government if the Minister of Finance has received from Quebec's Minister of Finance, Mr. Parizeau, the counter-proposal which was anticipated and, if so, what it is and what the reaction of the federal government has been.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, it is my understanding that there have been communications between the two governments with respect to this difference which appears to exist with respect to taxation policy.

Senator Flynn: Appears to exist?

Senator Perrault: I have no further information to offer at this time. Should some agreement be achieved, the information will be transmitted to the Senate immediately.

● (1410)

FOREIGN AFFAIRS

CANADA-UNITED STATES NEGOTIATIONS ON FISHING BOUNDARIES—QUESTION

Senator Marshall: Honourable senators, I have a question for the Leader of the Government in the Senate. It concerns the sensitive negotiations taking place between Canada and the United States on fishing rights. I have been reluctant to ask questions on this because of the sensitivity of the negotiations, but I should like to have a progress report on them.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, I shall take that question as notice, and cause inquiries to be made.

TRANSPORTATION

REPORT OF NEWFOUNDLAND TRANSPORT COMMISSION— QUESTION ANSWERED

Senator Marshall: Honourable senators, I am wondering whether we can obtain a progress report from the very important Sullivan Commission on transportation in Newfoundland. This is vital to that province, and perhaps the government leader, within the next few days, could give us a progress report.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, on Tuesday, May 23, a question was asked by Senator Marshall with respect to the report of the Newfoundland Transport Commission. In reply to that question, I can report that the commission presented its report to the Minister of Transport on May 29 last. That report is now in the process of being translated. The release date is expected to be mid-July.

AGRICULTURE

RIISING COST OF BEEF—QUESTION

Senator Austin: I have a question for the Leader of the Government in the Senate with respect to the rising cost of beef to consumers in Canada. The leader may know that the higher beef prices were responsible for an increase of 3.2 per cent in food costs during the four weeks ended May 19, 1978, as reported by the Anti-Inflation Board.

A representative of the Canadian Cattlemen's Association speaking last week stated, in part, that the higher beef prices are the result of heavy U.S. purchases of Canadian cattle brought on by the devaluation of the Canadian dollar. There have been fewer purchases of United States beef by Canadians for the same reason. The present price is also affected, of course, by lower Canadian beef production resulting from the earlier situation of lower prices and greater supply.

The Leader of the Government may also be aware that President Carter announced today that beef quotas for foreign beef would be lifted in the United States in an attempt to help control rising beef prices in that country.

My question is as to whether the Government of Canada is going to take steps to prevent unduly heavy exportation of Canadian beef to United States markets, which would result in higher beef prices to Canadian consumers.

Senator Perrault: The general question of rising beef prices in Canada is under consideration by the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs, the Honourable W. Warren Allmand, and by other ministers of the Crown. However, I must take this question as notice. I shall endeavour to make a statement on the subject in the chamber next week.

Senator Olson: When the government is considering these higher beef prices, I wonder if they could also take into consideration the fact that the beef producers in this country have lost from $400 million to $600 million, depending upon how the amount is calculated, which perhaps can be considered as a subsidy to the consumers during the past three or four years. The producers have a right to recover some of that money.

VETERANS AFFAIRS

ELIGIBILITY OF PENSIONERS FOR CASUAL EARNINGS— QUESTION ON THE ORDER PAPER ANSWERED

Question No. 11—by Senator Marshall:

Where a husband and wife, both veterans, qualify for war veterans allowance in their own right, are both eligible for casual earnings at the single rate of $1,500 per year, and, if not, why not?

Answer:

Prior to 1965, in cases where both the husband and wife were qualified veterans in their own right, war veterans allowance was payable at the married rate. In this situation, the annual limit for casual earnings was at the married rate as well. In 1965, the War Veterans Allowance Act was amended to allow that in such cases allowance could be paid to each spouse at the single rate. However, no similar change has been made to the casual earnings exemption. Thus, a husband and wife who are both veterans can still claim the casual earnings exemption at the married rate only, which is now $2,250 a year.

As a result of other enquiries similar to this one, I have directed my officials to conduct a review of our current legislation to look into possible recommendations to make it more viable and equitable. I have forwarded this suggestion to the study group so that it may be given careful examination. Although I cannot be specific as to when recommendations from this study will be forthcoming, I can offer assurance that this suggestion will be given careful consideration.

PENSION ACT

COMPENSATION FOR FORMER PRISONERS OF WAR ACT

BILL TO AMEND—THIRD READING

Senator Buckwold moved the third reading of Bill C-58, to amend the Pension Act and the Compensation for Former Prisoners of War Act.

Hon. Stanley Haidasz: Honourable senators, I welcome this opportunity to make a few remarks on Bill C-58, to amend the Pension Act and the Compensation for Former Prisoners of War Act. Having just observed the thirty-fourth anniversary of D-Day, I am pleased to associate myself with the remarks of those honourable senators who have participated in this debate. Also, I want to convey the highest possible praise and gratitude, on behalf of the Senate, to all of the Canadian men and women who took part in World War II and who played such an important role in its final outcome.

This bill is another milestone in veterans legislation. Canada is second to none in the generosity it has shown in compensating its veterans for injuries suffered during the course of service to Canada.

[Senator Olson.]

In congratulating the Minister of Veterans Affairs for bringing in such progressive legislation, I should like to direct his attention to a motion which I moved in the other place on February 10 last, which read:

That this House urges the Minister of Veterans Affairs to consider introducing appropriate amendments to the prisoners of war legislation so that compensation provided therein will apply to those who are Canadian citizens and were prisoners of war or escapees in World War I or World War II and who fought alongside the Canadian armed forces.

The House of Commons unanimously adopted that motion. I have also brought this matter to the minister's attention in other ways.

It is regrettable that no funds have been provided as yet to extend benefits to individuals in that category. They, too, fought for freedom and liberty, and the preservation of the democratic institutions. These people feel they should be included in the benefits available through this legislation. In fact, they presented what I thought was a convincing brief to the appropriate committee of the Senate a short time ago, and the Minister of Veterans Affairs undertook at that time to give consideration to their representations when next bringing in an amending bill.

Honourable senators, my only purpose in rising this afternoon is to once again direct your attention and the attention of the Minister of Veterans Affairs to the fact that these people are not yet included under this legislation for benefits, and to express the hope that Treasury Board will be able to allocate sufficient funds to the Department of Veterans Affairs so that, in turn, it can provide benefits to these people.

Motion agreed to and bill read third time and passed.

• (1420)

NATIONAL ANTHEM

DESIRABILITY OF PASSAGE OF BILL C-9—DEBATE CONTINUED

The Senate resumed from yesterday the debate on the inquiry of Senator Bosa calling the attention of the Senate to the desirability of obtaining speedy passage of Bill C-9, respecting the national anthem of Canada.

Hon. Paul Yuzyk: Honourable senators, the passionate plea of Senator Bosa, that the passage of Bill C-9, respecting the national anthem of Canada, be accelerated, is very commendable. He believes his exhortation might have some effect on the present government if the appeal comes from the Canadian Consultative Council on Multiculturalism, of which he is the chairman. Apparently this body has received requests from many ethnocultural organizations, which desire to translate the words of "O Canada" into their own languages when this national anthem receives official recognition.

The Special Joint Committee of the Senate and House of Commons on the National and Royal Anthems of which several senators, including myself, were members, tabled its report in both houses on February 16, 1968. The unanimous—and I emphasize “unanimous”—recommendation of this committee was “that the Government be authorized to adopt forthwith, one verse in each of the two official languages of ‘O Canada’ for the National Anthem.” The recommended English version was that of Judge Robert Stanley Weir, with minor variations, and it is found in Bill C-9. No changes were made in the French text.

It took the government several years to appear to take some action, but the various bills died on the order paper. In this session, the Secretary of State of Canada introduced Bill C-9 on October 28, 1977. Nearly eight months have passed since that day, and the bill is still at the first reading stage. It is apparent that the government has not yet made up its mind. The bill could again die on the order paper.

Senator Bosa is trying bravely to come to the rescue of the bill. I doubt that this method will produce the result which I would like to see. Since he is on the government side, why does he not ask the Secretary of State to move immediately the second reading of the bill in the other house? It could then, it is hoped, be passed without delay. Failing this, why does he not get the government to introduce the bill in this chamber, where he could be its sponsor?

Senator Bosa: Honourable senators, Senator Yuzyk has asked me some rather pointed questions. I am not really prepared to answer them now but, on the other hand, I should not like to see them go unanswered.

Senator Bourget: You can answer them now, if you like.

Senator Grosart: Certainly.

Senator Bosa: I would really prefer to do that at another time.

Senator Grosart: Well, then, do it at another time. Make up your mind.

Senator Bosa: All right. I will adjourn the debate.

On motion of Senator Bosa, debate adjourned.

The Senate adjourned until Tuesday, June 13, at 8 p.m.

THE SENATE

Tuesday, June 13, 1978

The Senate met at 8 p.m., Hon. Jean-Paul Deschatelets, P.C., Speaker pro tem, in the Chair.

Prayers.

DOCUMENTS TABLED

Senator Perrault tabled:

Report on the administration of the Canada Assistance Plan for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1976, pursuant to section 19, Chapter C-1, R.S.C., 1970.

Copies of document entitled "Canada-Ontario Radio-active Waste Management Program," together with a supporting background document, issued by the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources.

Copies of correspondence between the Prime Minister of Canada and the Premier of Saskatchewan, concerning the annual Western Premiers' Conference, together with copies of the joint communiqués issued at the Conference.

Copies of Notes exchanged between the Governments of Canada and the United States to implement a technical amendment to Annex III of the Agreement between the two countries on Principles Applicable to a Northern Natural Gas Pipeline, which was signed in Ottawa, September 20, 1977.

Copies of Reports of the Anti-Inflation Board to the Governor in Council, pursuant to section 17(2) of the Anti-Inflation Act, Chapter 75, Statutes of Canada, 1974-75-76, reporting its reference to the Administrator of the said Act of certain proposed changes in compensation plans between the Sudbury and District Health Unit and its public health nurses and part-time public health nurses and physiotherapists, represented by the Ontario Nurses Association, dated May 30, 1978.

Report on Prairie Farm Rehabilitation and Related Activities for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1977, pursuant to section 10 of the Prairie Farm Rehabilitation Act, Chapter P-17, R.S.C., 1970.

Copies of the Sixth Report of the Advisory Group on Executive Compensation in the Public Service, dated April 1978.

Copies of document entitled "A Time for Action: Toward the Renewal of the Canadian Federation," issued by the Prime Minister of Canada.

BANKING, TRADE AND COMMERCE

CHANGE IN COMMITTEE MEMBERSHIP

Senator Petten, with leave of the Senate and notwithstanding rule 45(1)(i), moved:

That the names of the Honourable Senators Cottreau and McNamara be substituted for those of the Honourable Senators Buckwold and Manning on the list of senators serving on the Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce.

Motion agreed to.

HEALTH, WELFARE AND SCIENCE

CHANGE IN COMMITTEE MEMBERSHIP

Senator Petten, with leave of the Senate and notwithstanding rule 45(1)(i), moved:

That the name of the Honourable Senator Bird be substituted for that of the Honourable Senator Hastings on the list of senators serving on the Standing Senate Committee on Health, Welfare and Science.

Motion agreed to.

INCOME TAX ACT EXCISE TAX ACT

BANKING, TRADE AND COMMERCE COMMITTEE AUTHORIZED TO STUDY SUBJECT MATTER OF AMENDING LEGISLATION RELATING TO SMALL BUSINESSES

Senator Hayden, with leave of the Senate and notwithstanding rule 45(1)(e), moved:

That the Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce be authorized to examine and consider the subject matter of Bill C-59, intituled: "An Act to amend the Income Tax Act and the Excise Tax Act in matters relating to the ownership and operation of small businesses," in advance of the said bill coming before the Senate, or any matter relating thereto.

Motion agreed to.

THE CONSTITUTION

RENEWAL OF THE CANADIAN FEDERATION—QUESTIONS

Senator Flynn: Honourable senators, we have all heard of the proposals made by the Prime Minister with regard to the renewal of the Canadian Federation. I have some questions to pose to the Leader of the Government in respect of this matter.

Naturally, one of the first questions of prime concern to the Senate has to do with the Prime Minister's proposal to replace the Senate by The House of the Federation. In speaking of providing Canada with a new Constitution, the Prime Minister said that he wanted phase I to deal with matters within exclusive federal jurisdiction. I wish to ask the Leader of the Government if in his view the reform of the Senate, or the change of the Senate, or the abolition of the Senate, is a matter of no concern to the provinces and if in this area the federal Parliament could act unilaterally?

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, it is the view of the government that the government and Parliament may proceed legally with respect to changes in the Senate without consultation with the provinces. However, in the spirit of co-operative federalism the intention is to discuss the proposal with respect to the Senate and a number of other proposals contained in this white paper with the provincial premiers and with many other Canadians from coast to coast. It seems apparent that before any of these matters become law they could be the subject of intensive scrutiny, examination and debate from coast to coast in Canada.

Senator Flynn: Does the Leader of the Government suggest that provinces can only be consulted, that they have no real input into the problem of changing the Senate, that this would be a matter coming under the exclusive jurisdiction of the Parliament of Canada, and that Parliament could act without the concurrence of the provincial legislatures?

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, we look forward to receiving the suggestions of provincial premiers, those who serve in provincial legislative assemblies and those who serve in Parliament, whether serving on the government side or in opposition. Surely the challenge is to construct a Constitution which will serve the needs of the Canadian people in this century as effectively as possible. In this regard, I hope that with respect to the Senate it may be possible at some point for me to meet with the distinguished Leader of the Opposition—

Senator Flynn: Very distinguished.

Senator Perrault —to discuss the future of this chamber. The subject of the Constitution is very important to all of us here and to the Canadian people—not only the future of the Senate but of the House of Commons and other institutions designed to serve the nation.

Senator Flynn: That leads me to this question: Does the Leader of the Government think that the problem of writing a new Constitution for Canada is the prime responsibility of the federal government in the areas which it considers to be exclusively its own, and that of the provincial assemblies in the areas which they consider to be exclusively their own, or whether the process should involve more than the federal and provincial governments and the federal and provincial parliaments? Even parliamentarians would agree with that.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, the government believes that the future Constitution of this country, if one can be achieved, will be the result of co-operative efforts in conjunction with provincial governments and, as I say, with parliamentarians who serve here in Ottawa. There are some areas which constitutionally primarily are within federal jurisdiction and others which are within provincial jurisdiction. I believe that the bill which will be presented at some time in the future, whether it be next week, the following week, or some months from now, whatever decision is finally taken, will specify in a more particular way the views of the government—

Senator Flynn: The government.

Senator Perrault: —with respect to a number of matters. However, in saying that let me say that there is no intention on the part of the government to impose any sections of the bill on this nation. It is the intention of the government that when this bill is presented there will be a vigorous and constructive dialogue involving all political parties and the premiers of all provinces. There will be no approach here, in my opinion, which could be designated or described as being unilateral. Neither the white paper nor the bill which will be presented eventually will be designed to be totally free from criticism or constructive change or amendment if that be desirable. The spirit of Canada in 1978 surely is one which suggests that we should dialogue very freely with provincial governments. Indeed, we should dialogue with as many Canadians as possible of all political persuasion.

● (2010)

There is no intention on the part of the government to impose on the Canadian people any rigid set of constitutional proposals. The white paper sets forth a number of options which are open. The bill will, in a more explicit way, set forth certain suggested approaches by this government. I want to say on behalf of the government that even when that bill is presented it is the intention to encourage and promote very free discussion and debate within Parliament and elsewhere. The options available will be fully explored and considered.

It is indicated that in the near future the Senate will have an opportunity to participate in a joint parliamentary committee. Indeed, perhaps honourable senators may wish to consider, in addition to participation in a joint parliamentary committee, a committee of the Senate itself to look into the future of the Constitution and/or the Senate.

The government will not rush into this process of constitutional reform oblivious of the need to consult with other parties and with Canadians serving at other levels of government and in other sectors of society.

Senator Walker: Is my friend the leader suggesting that there may be a free vote on this subject?

Senator Perrault: Perhaps that should be considered as a possibility.

Senator Manning: Honourable senators, I am not discussing the merits or otherwise of any proposed changes, but can we take from what has been said that the intention is legislation that creates a whole new Constitution rather than legislation to amend the British North America Act, which is our present Constitution? As all honourable senators know, the approach to this subject in the past has been in the form of amendments to the British North America Act. Is that approach being dropped in favour of an attempt to write a whole new Constitution without reference to the BNA Act as such?

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, I think we must await the introduction of the bill in the other house. I cannot as yet say precisely when that will take place. Certainly, the government will be very receptive with respect to possible changes or amendments to improve any bill which may be presented.

Senator Manning: Honourable senators, may I ask a supplementary question on the point raised by the Leader of the Opposition respecting this house? We are all aware that under the BNA Act an amendment fundamentally changing this house could not be made without the concurrence of the provincial and federal parliaments.

Senator Forsey: No, no.

Senator Manning: You can make certain changes, but you cannot abolish this house and substitute something else in its place.

Senator Forsey: Yes, you can.

Senator Manning: Is the new approach such that those provisions in the BNA Act which apply to this house, for example, will go by the board because we are starting from scratch as though we did not have a Constitution at all?

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, it is certainly within the power of the federal government to make certain changes in the Senate, but I want to assure you again that any changes which may be made will be made only after consultation at some length with the other political parties, and certainly with many Canadians in all regions of Canada.

Senator Forsey: Honourable senators, may I ask a supplementary of the Leader of the Government? Is it not true that under section 91, head 1, of the British North America Act, this Parliament legally—I am not talking about the political wisdom or propriety of doing it—but legally this Parliament, by an ordinary act of Parliament, can do absolutely anything it likes with the Senate? It can reconstitute it in any way; it can even abolish it, though it would, in my judgment, be most improper to do this without proper consultation, but I think in strict law it can be done, and I want to know what the Leader of the Government has to say about this.

I think it should also be pointed out that any such action by Parliament would be by Parliament and not by the House of Commons. It would require the consent of the Senate. We cannot be abolished, nor can the constitution of this house be changed, I venture to say, except by the consent of the Senate itself, and I ask the Leader of the Government whether he would concur in this.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, Senator Forsey is precisely correct in the observations he has made.

Senator Flynn: Well, don't take that for granted, for God's sake.

[Senator Manning.]

Senator Perrault: I should reiterate what the Honourable Senator Forsey has stated, namely, that the Senate must concur in any changes that are to be made in the Senate itself. In this regard it perhaps bears repeating that the honourable senators who know the Senate best, who know how it operates, and who know the significant achievements of the Senate over the years, and certainly in this immediate session, may wish to—and I am sure they will—participate in the dialogue that is to take place in the coming weeks with respect to the future of this chamber, with the object of making it an even more effective place.

[Translation]

NATIONAL CAPITAL COMMISSION

NEWSPAPER ARTICLE—QUESTION OF PRIVILEGE

Hon. Jean Marchand: Honourable senators, I rise on a question of privilege. Last week, I may have bored the Senate by reporting an attack made by Mr. Douglas Fullerton in one of the capital's newspapers. Since then, Mr. Fullerton has made a retraction which was published yesterday in the Ottawa Citizen. I am completely satisfied by this retraction which corrects certain errors about the facts. I would like to quote only the end of the article since it is a bit long. Mr. Fullerton held me responsible for having made a compromise with Mr. Campeau, which compromise violated the regulations on construction in the area of Parliament Hill.

Here is the part of the retraction which can be of special interest to the Senate and which fully satisfies me:

[English]

The "compromise" was a side issue, although it did result in reducing the projected building's height from 40 storeys (double the height of the first phase) to 32. Who was responsible for the compromise is not clear; if Senator Marchand says he was not involved, I accept his statement.

I am therefore satisfied with Mr. Fullerton's correction. Although there are many other things in the statement, I will not take up your time with them, but I would like this to appear in Hansard.

THE ECONOMY

VALUE OF CANADIAN DOLLAR—DEBATE ADJOURNED

Hon. Paul Desruisseaux rose pursuant to notice of Thursday, May 25, 1978:

That he will call the attention of the Senate to the question of the devaluation of the Canadian dollar.

● (2020)

[Translation]

He said: Honourable senators, most probably the matter I shall be dealing with, the devaluation of our Canadian dollar, will not be nearly as interesting, nor does it promise to be as spirited as a debate on the Senate itself would be.

Honourable senators know full well our international monetary policy, which generally has served us well over the years, always followed closely that pursued by the United States which, traditionally, dominates and influences global monetary policies.

Industrialized nations have been and still are affected by the abandonment some years past of the major rules of our international money game that evolved from the Bretton Woods' monetary arrangements.

It is now realized how much a new system would be needed that would reflect the respective sizes of the different nations of the world in the global economy.

As far as she is concerned, Canada could very well accommodate herself of a policy of practical dependence upon American monetary policy.

To many people's surprise the Canadian dollar, after the Quebec elections in the middle of November 1976, crashed through the psychological barrier of 95 cents U.S. to the Canadian dollar, to which we were accustomed and had more or less taken for granted.

Of course the political uncertainties as to Canada's future played a part, and the economic deterioration at home had a marked influence.

We had gone through, just before the Quebec elections, an untightening global monetary policy.

That untightening in my view will now be followed by expansionist budgets in Canada and many industrialized nations, with an aim to strongly stimulating investments which will further revive the economy and reduce unemployment in Canada.

A number of economists in other industrialized nations of the world feel that the termination of our Canadian program of price and wage controls will contribute in no way to our monetary stability.

In the face of certain unfavourable economic prospects, some influential bankers suggest we should now have a fixed exchange rate of 90 cents U.S. to our dollar. This is, however, opposed because of the ramifications.

Certainly it would neither be desirable nor advantageous to go through a further deterioration and significant downgrading of our economy where this would lead to a permanent change from the floating Canadian dollar, which has been used to a significant degree of success since 1970, to a fixed exchange rate vis-à-vis the U.S. dollar. This in my view would not serve us as well.

There is a suggestion in certain economic circles that an ideal arrangement of the international monetary system must of necessity recognize the respective sizes of the various nations in the world economy. It is also submitted that a uniform system of exchange rates, where all rates would be of the same nature, either all flexible or all fixed, could not work in a world comprised of states all having the same size—flexible rates—or in a world dominated by one nation—fixed rates.

In those circumstances, on an international scene made up of a super power, of several big states and a great many small nations, the system must provide for both fixed and flexible exchange rates.

It is suggested in financial circles that the formation of monetary unions is the solution to the problem of regulating currencies at the international level. Such unions would therefore have two features: fixed parities between the member states of the union and flexible parities between the union and the outside world, thereby allowing a uniformed monetary policy within the union.

The ideal solution for most seems to be the formation as soon as possible of a monetary union which would coincide with the creation of an institution regulating the co-operation of the various national economic policies. In that line of thought, we would end up with the following paradox: an Atlantic monetary union comprising the western European states and Canada—and also eventually Japan—which would have the right to intervene in decisions bearing on the monetary policy.

In its last issue the international economic review Chase Manhattan contained an article praising the recent decision by the Canadian government to take the necessary steps to support the exchange rate of the Canadian dollar up to a certain extent. The wisdom of such a decision is, however, questioned by some of our economists.

The teams of economists working for that review came up with the important conclusion that Canada and Quebec will remain safe places for American investments, that the separatist trend has already climaxed and that English Canada now has a much better understanding of the problems in that province than it had some two years ago.

Here is an extract of that review, and I quote:

● (2030)

[English]

Stung by criticism that a "do-nothing" policy was being followed and convinced that the Canadian dollar has been undervalued, the Canadian monetary authorities have embarked on a new "strong dollar" course. Following the Bank of Canada's unexpected increase in the discount rate to 8.5 per cent a few weeks ago, the government has announced a new series of funding packages to increase usable foreign currency reserves.

[Translation]

And this, I might add, to provide better protection for our Canadian dollar.

There is no arrangement on the level where the Canadian dollar could be seriously undervalued. There is some sort of consensus that a value of 90 cents U.S. for our Canadian dollar would very substantially help our national economy by considerably helping Canadian exports and, in addition, by increasing the cost of imports and thus making them less competitive on our domestic market.

Those promising factors in the climate of a resurging American economy allow us to anticipate an important revival of our exports.

Restricted as we are by our small population spread over a huge area, we too often forget that in fact we are a nation of dealers and that it is impossible for us to maintain our high standard of living without massive trade and intensive exports of our Canadian manufactured and unmanufactured goods.

Therefore, our economic survival dictates our return to an intensive export trade which from now on would allow us to reduce progressively the deficit of our international balance of payments.

● (2040)

[English]

The recent rapid rate of decline in the value of the Canadian dollar can only be artificially slowed by the administration's new and sincere effort. This effort will not cure the present sickness. Changes in the interest rate imposed by the central bank cannot help very much beyond a certain point to curtail the deterioration, or halt the erosion, of the value of the Canadian dollar.

The present high cost of the artificial float—what we have come to call the “dirty float”—to the Canadian treasury, incurred by the borrowing of billions of dollars at high rates of interest in an attempt to firm up the Canadian dollar, will, unfortunately, increase the federal deficit. Surely, but quite unwillingly, we will fuel the fires of inflation by responding to pressures to bring the dollar back to an international value of 100 cents, and hold it there at all costs.

Our unfavourable balance of international trade, which is the really important factor in what is happening to the value of our currency, has been building up these last few years, in good part, because of our imports and our economic policies. For instance, we permitted in the name of free trade, and without control or restraint, heavy importations and dumpings of products we were already manufacturing here. The manufacture of these products provided employment for many Canadians. In exchange, we were able to export products whose manufacture provided fewer jobs. In the process we created a net job deficit which added to our unemployment and welfare problems. We have helped, in this way, to develop gigantic disparity problems in some areas, and large welfare and unemployment insurance fund requirements which have cost the Canadian taxpayer billions of dollars. We have thus created considerable economic insecurity and instability in our country.

We now know that much of the cause of these problems is traceable directly to some wrong and erroneous GATT arrangements made on behalf of Canada in recent years; to policies, as I said before, that required the sacrifice of our labour-intensive manufacturing industries in favour of other manufacturing industries which provided fewer jobs and which could scarcely subsist by themselves without continuous and direct government support so as to be in a favoured exporting position, which was supposed to help the international trade in certain of our products but failed.

This attitude, of course, brought forth some direct angry intervention and protest by at least one provincial government at the GATT meetings in Geneva. Our negotiators were informed of the damage they had been causing in this way to important areas of Canada, and of the grave problems of unemployment, disparity and welfare they were thus adding to the Canadian economy, with little offsetting result.

We must become more realistic and more practical in our ways. We should stop nonsensical accusations on all occasions and become more concerned and more watchful. We must adopt policies that we know can better serve Canadians. It will then take little time to find our way to total full recovery and the resumption of our place among the industrialized nations of the world. It will then take little time for the Canadian dollar to become stable again and assume the place where it can best serve our international commerce which will keep our economy prosperous.

I believe that the cause of the present poor assessment of our currency on the international markets is the poor handling of economic policies by some of our economic arrangers and advisers. It must be more generally realized that our young federated nation is in real need of strong, energetic and constructive economic policies that are capable of helping in the next few decades. We must be prepared to support unreservedly such policies in the best interests of Canada. Policies like FIRA are creating a bad image for Canada internationally. Moreover, they are questionable as to their real value to our country.

Policies that assist foreign firms to become more competitive, while not giving the same advantages to Canadian firms, are not serving Canada as well as it could and should be served. Yet, we have just seen this happen in our pulp and paper industry. I believe there should be no place in our nation for unsound, untried, unproven maverick theories in governing and guiding our economic destiny.

There is now a real need for us to revalorize the great wealth we have been blessed with, and which we find so well distributed over the whole of Canada—the great treasures of culture that we possess, and the extraordinary vitality and achieving spirit of our people. It is all of this that constitutes the true value of our currency. It is its guarantee, and it exceeds many times its present quoted value in comparison with the values of the other currencies.

The actual drifting of the value of the Canadian dollar to a point below the value of the United States dollar has, I believe, served rather well our national interests, our international export commerce, our industries and the whole of our national economy at this time.

● (2050)

No other nation in the world presently can, in reality, offer as much collateral to guarantee its currency, its stability as a federated nation, its promise of future achievements of greatness in its developments, and the preservation of its nationhood and its social and economic accountability.

Much of our national indebtedness has been for investments in good income-producing projects. We have been fortunate with our crown corporations. They have grown and become profitable. We presently have an accumulation of far-reaching and challenging projects.

The Canadian people have not yet become indifferent and lazy; so far they have retained the spirit and urge to respond quickly to national challenges and have thus made great achievements for Canada.

I find that no matter how hard we look for a cause outside Canada for the discount of the Canadian dollar, we have to admit that whatever caused its devaluation was of our own doing. The world markets have only reacted to what they have seen. It is up to us to straighten out our own situation and redress the wrongs, the reprehensible things we have done to our economy. Indeed, the possibility of Quebec separating, or for that matter some other parts of Canada breaking up, makes little sense to any of the participating Confederation members, because, in its objectives and goals, separatist thinking is recessive and shared by only a few. Personally, I believe there is less likelihood of Canada breaking up than there is of a break-up of either Belgium or Switzerland, both of which are comprised of three peoples.

In my opinion it would be easier to solve the complicated problems we have internally, as among the participating members of Confederation, or even through the central government that the two pioneer peoples formed, than it could ever be through either a disassociation or a separation of those participating members. There is everything to lose and nothing to gain from a separation of any one or more parts from the rest of Canada.

Surely no one can believe in his own heart that to reduce our nation's cultures to just one official culture is the kind of promise we should hold out either to people wishing to become Canadians or to Canadians now. Surely Canadians want to be tolerant and broadminded. In my opinion, strong, factual statements should be made with respect to the real value of Canada's currency, Canada's ability to master its present problems, and its capacity to fulfil its world obligations. Such statements should be repeated over and over again. At the moment the separatist movement, which is supposed to have been one of the main causes of the devaluation of our currency, is waning rapidly. Indeed, in my opinion it never really truly endangered the unity of this country.

Honourable senators, right now all of the factors needed to guarantee a general Canadian economic recovery are here, and even now are working to guarantee our prosperity in the coming decades.

The devaluation of the dollar, which led many Canadians to condemn Canada's present economic policies, has actually made it possible for Canadian exporters to start a turnaround of the economy—a turnaround that will eventually lead to a strong Canadian economy. Because of devaluation, certain

Canadian businesses which were only marginally non-competitive before are now reconsidering their positions and are renewing their efforts to sell and export to the other industrialized countries of the world.

I believe there is now a chance to improve the balance of our international indebtedness, which over the last few years has increased by billions of dollars, and that this problem, which understandably although wrongly has come to be regarded as hopeless, is capable of solution, and that eventually we will level off the large Canadian accumulated export deficit. When that happens the Canadian economy will recover normally and the tremendous problems of unemployment and currency devaluation will gradually disappear.

In my opinion, the Bank of Canada, the institution to which we have given the responsibility for regulating credit and currency in the best interests of the economic life of Canada, is second to none in the world. That is partly because we have conferred on it the specific powers for discharging that responsibility. Surely no one can deny that.

At its present quoted price on international markets, the Canadian dollar has in fact much more backing, value and guarantee than most other currencies of the world. What, therefore, is the real significance of the present value of our currency? Let me quote a passage from a recent article by Mr. Earle McLaughlin, Chairman and Chief Executive Officer of the Royal Bank of Canada. He is one of the world's most highly regarded and ablest practical economists. The article appeared in the last issue of Chimo:

● (2100)

The value of currency reflects the strength and competitiveness of an economy. It is an indication, not a cause. And when world markets dictate a weaker currency, and we do not like this verdict, then we must strengthen our domestic economy, not try to prop up the exchange rate artificially. To do the latter would be like redrawing the scale on a medical thermometer in order to arrive at a better reading. Our friend the dollar is undergoing a badly needed cure. It will recover if the unexperienced medical students can be kept at bay. So, let's not talk about the Canadian dollar being devalued, or overvalued or undervalued. It has weakened because of most understandable, natural market forces. I am not sure that I am pleased that it has weakened; but that is what the marketplace tells us and we have no alternative but to accept that verdict.

Mr. Jean-Paul Langlois, Professor of the University of Quebec, in Montreal, wrote a good article in the May 25, 1978, edition of Le Devoir. I recommend its reading. Here is a quotation from this article:

It remains true that our currency is the reflection of two forces which determine its actual oscillation on the electronic boards of the foreign exchanges. They are, on one part, the pulsations of our internal economy (that is its productivity, its rate of inflation, its political stability, etc.) and, on the other part, the external factors (that is the movement of capital, the devaluation of the other currencies, the economic cycle of the foreign markets, etc.). So, if any currency is sensitive to the pressures coming from the outside, it will be so all the more if the economy it represents is open to the outside.

This shows us our own vulnerability because of the weaknesses in our national economy and warns us that we can and must control them at all times. To let our national economy weaken is to let the value of the Canadian dollar weaken. This, unfortunately, we have let happen in the past. This we must now correct and redress if we now want our Canadian dollar to stabilize on its own merits and resume a place where it will be most helpful to the nation's economy. Our careful and intelligent Canadian economic behaviour can give us the results we want.

On motion of Senator Austin, debate adjourned.

The Senate adjourned until tomorrow at 2 p.m.

---

THE SENATE

Wednesday, June 14, 1978

The Senate met at 2 p.m., the Speaker in the Chair.
Prayers.

THE ESTIMATES

REPORT OF NATIONAL FINANCE COMMITTEE ON MAIN ESTIMATES FOR 1978-79 PRESENTED

Senator Everett, Chairman of the Standing Senate Committee on National Finance, presented the following report:

Wednesday, June 14, 1978

The Standing Senate Committee on National Finance to which the estimates laid before Parliament for the fiscal year ending March 31, 1979, were referred has in obedience to the order of reference of Thursday, February 23, 1978, examined the said Estimates and reports as follows:

(1) The Committee was authorized by the Senate, as recorded in the Minutes of the Proceedings of the Senate of February 23, 1978, "to examine and report upon the expenditures proposed by the Estimates laid before Parliament for the fiscal year ending March 31, 1979, in advance of bills based upon the said Estimates reaching the Senate."

(2) In obedience to the foregoing, the Committee made a general examination of the Estimates and heard evidence from the Honourable Robert Andras, President of the Treasury Board, and from the following officials of Treasury Board: Mr. R. L. Richardson, Deputy Secretary, Program Branch; Mr. L. J. O'Toole, Assistant Secretary, Program Branch; Mr. E. A. Radburn, Director, Estimates Division, Program Branch.

Also Mr. W. M. McLeish, Administrator and Mr. L. G. Potvin, Director General, Policy, Planning and Program Air from the Canadian Air Transportation Administration of the Department of Transport and Mr. J. M. DesRoches, Deputy Minister; Mr. A. R. Bailey, Assistant Deputy Minister, Corporate Management and Mr. R. W. Jones, Comptroller from the Supply Administration of the Department of Supply and Services appeared before the Committee to give evidence concerning their respective departments.

(3) The Committee is continuing its detailed examination of the Department of Regional Economic Expansion and expects to complete its report on the Accommodation Program of the Department of Public Works shortly.

(4) The Main Estimates for 1978/79 amount to $48,732 million. Of this amount, $46,476 million is for budgetary items and $2,256 million is for non-budgetary items (loans, investments and advances). These Estimates are also divided into statutory requirements amounting to $27,979 million which represents 57.4 per cent of the total and non-statutory amounting to $27,953 million representing the remaining 42.6 per cent. Of the total budgetary Estimates, $19,875 million represents funds for which Parliament is asked to provide new authority. The following table summarizes this breakdown of the total Main Estimates for the year 1978/79.

BUDGETARY AND NON-BUDGETARY MAIN ESTIMATES

BY TYPE OF AUTHORITY 1978-79

($ MILLIONS)

Expenditure Authority	Budgetary	Non-Budgetary	Total
Statutory	26,601 57.2%	1,378 61.1%	27,979 57.4%
Non-Statutory	19,875 42.8%	878 38.9%	20,753 42.6%
Total	46,476 100%	2,256 100%	48,732 100%

(5) The President of the Treasury Board informed your Committee that the target ceiling for the total spending for 1978/79 is expected to be $48,800 million which would represent an increase of 9.8 per cent over the projected total expenditures for 1977/78 of $44,450 million.

(6) The Committee expresses its concern about the erosion of Parliamentary control which results from a practice related to the means of provision of resources to programs, that is, the financing of a program by foregoing tax revenue. The practice of financing a program by foregoing tax revenues amounts to a 'tax expenditure' in lieu of a direct budget expenditure.

The Committee recognizes that the tax system has long been used as an instrument of government policy in addition to its primary role as a source of revenue. The government's commitment to publicly announce expenditure targets, which constrain expenditure growth to less than the nominal growth of GNP, places the practice of using the tax system for non-revenue purposes in a new context. The commitment provides a strong incentive for the government to forego tax revenues as the means of financing the introduction of new programs and/or continuation of old ones. Thus government expenditures can literally be kept within the stated target. Yet government activity is not constrained to the same degree.

The Committee believes that an assessment of the actual and potential impact of this practice on parliamentary control as exercised by the estimates process should be undertaken to determine what, if any, changes are now required.

(7) The Committee was informed that the majority of the grants made by the Canadian International Development Agency (CIDA) did not meet the criteria for grants spelled out in Treasury Board Circular 1977-50, titled Grants and Contributions. In this circular a grant is defined to mean an unconditional transfer payment made to a recipient, for which the government receives no goods or services. In the case of CIDA, funds are in fact dispersed as a part of a procurement of specialized goods and services. To illustrate, monies labelled as a CIDA grant might be given to a foreign government with the condition that they purchase grain from the Saskatchewan Grain Pool.

The Committee suggest that where a transfer payment (grant or contribution) is made to a foreign country with a stipulation that part or all the funds be spent in Canada that the program description indicate this fact.

(8) The Committee expresses its continued opposition to the practice of using funds originally voted for capital investment for operating purposes while still maintaining that expenditure targets have been met, because the capital commitment has merely been deferred.

(9) The Committee is pleased to note that progress has been made in the continued reduction of net voting. The Committee looks forward to being informed of the outcome of the studies on the five remaining cases of net voting.

Respectfully submitted,

D. D. Everett,
Chairman.

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this report be taken into consideration?

Senator Everett moved that the report be placed on the Orders of the Day for consideration on Tuesday next.

Motion agreed to.

TRANSPORT

MOVEMENT OF GRAIN IN WESTERN CANADA—QUESTION

Senator Roblin: Honourable senators, I would direct the attention of the Leader of the Government in the Senate to the announcement last week by the Minister of Transport that he is convening a new committee to inquire into the movement of grain in western Canada. Might I ask the honourable leader when we may expect to get the terms of reference of that committee?

[Senator Everett.]

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, this question will be taken as notice. I have no information immediately available with respect to a possible date.

Senator Roblin: Perhaps I may follow that up with a supplementary question. Will this information be available to us in time for consideration before we conclude our review of Bill C-17, which deals with the financing of the Canadian National Railways?

Senator Perrault: I can only say that an inquiry will go forward immediately to determine whether information can be brought to this chamber today or tomorrow.

AGRICULTURE

RIISING COST OF BEEF—QUESTION

Senator Austin: Honourable senators, on June 8 last I asked the Leader of the Government a question with respect to the rising cost of beef to consumers in Canada. I should like to follow up that question by drawing attention to this morning's announcement by Statistics Canada that food prices soared in May by 3.3 per cent, led by beef. Prices of beef rose by 10.5 per cent in the month of May and were 52.5 per cent higher than a year ago.

Could the leader inform the Senate whether the government is prepared to set export quotas on Canadian beef to the United States at levels not higher than they have traditionally been, so that the value of the Canadian dollar is not unduly attractive to United States buyers of Canadian beef?

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, I have on my desk certain information with respect to beef exports which has been prepared in partial reply, at least, to the question posed by Senator Austin on June 8.

Beef exports are controlled under the Export and Import Permits Act and beef exports to the United States and imports from all sources are subject to individual permit requirement.

Canada's quota under the U.S. Meat Import Law (1964) for 1978 was 76.2 million pounds to June 3, 1978. With 42.3 per cent of the year elapsed, Canada has exported 44.2 per cent of its quota—that is, 33.7 million pounds. Shipments to date in 1978 are 13 million pounds below 1977 level.

Live exports of slaughter cattle, predominantly cows, for manufacturing quality beef, have increased. In the face of increased cow exports domestic cow slaughter has declined by nine-tenths of one per cent from year-earlier levels.

The expansion of Canadian exports of dressed beef to the United States by 11.8 million pounds is unlikely to have a significant impact on the Canadian domestic price in view of the fact that beef exports are below 1977 levels. The expanded access into U.S. markets for Canadian beef could have a beneficial economic effect in that cows now being exported could be slaughtered in Canada thus creating increased employment and enabling exporters to take advantage of the value-added element that would accrue from export boxed beef rather than from live cattle.

Total beef slaughter in North America is down from 1977 levels by approximately two per cent; however, the demand pull in recent weeks has been considerably stronger than in 1977. More people with increased disposable income, coupled with increased purchasing for consumer freezers, has sparked this demand.

Senator Flynn: When you speak of disposable income, are you speaking of the U.S. citizen?

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, I am pleased to speak as well of Canadian citizens.

Senator Flynn: That would have no effect on exports.

[Translation]

NATIONAL FINANCE

PROVINCIAL SALES TAX—QUESTION

Senator Asselin: Honourable senators, I have a question for the Leader of the Government. Could he tell the Senate whether the Honourable the Minister of Finance, Mr. Chrétien, has decided to accept either one of the two proposals made by the Quebec government regarding the sales tax?

[English]

Senator Flynn: Has he made up his mind?

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, I will bring to the Senate a statement on that subject just as soon as it is available from the Honourable the Minister of Finance.

Senator Flynn: Are you sure he made no announcement in the house today? Last week I asked if the Minister of Finance had received a proposal from Mr. Parizeau, to which the Leader of the Government replied, "Not to my knowledge", and at the same time Mr. Chrétien was confirming in the other place that he had received a letter from Mr. Parizeau.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, it is conceivable that the Minister of Finance made a statement in the other place this afternoon. If a statement has been made, I will ascertain whether, in fact, this has taken place, and that information will be communicated to this chamber.

Senator Flynn: Does the Leader of the Government not think he should be informed of what is happening in the other place so far as the government is concerned?

Senator Perrault: As the Leader of the Opposition is aware, that is customarily the case unless there have been late-breaking events which make it impossible.

Senator Flynn: I suggest the government should take into consideration the responsibilities of the Leader of the Government in this house, and inform him of what is going to happen.

Senator Grosart: They do not always know.

The Senate adjourned until tomorrow at 2 p.m.

THE SENATE

Thursday, June 15, 1978

The Senate met at 2 p.m., the Speaker in the Chair.
Prayers.

BUSINESS OF THE SENATE

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, I apologize for the delay in commencing today's sitting of the Senate. A meeting of considerable importance was scheduled to be held at 1.45 p.m. The meeting was late in starting, and as a result certain supporters of the government, including the Leader of the Government in the Senate, were unable to be present here at 2 o'clock. I sincerely hope all honourable senators will believe me when I say that the matter under discussion was of great importance.

DOCUMENTS TABLED

Senator Perrault tabled:

Copies of letters dated June 12, 1978, from the Prime Minister of Canada to the ten provincial Premiers concerning the document entitled "A Time for Action: Toward the Renewal of the Canadian Federation".

Report of the Correctional Investigator for the period from 1 June, 1976 to 31 May, 1977, issued by the Department of the Solicitor General.

CANADIAN NATIONAL RAILWAYS CAPITAL REVISION ACT RAILWAY ACT

BILL TO AMEND—REPORT OF COMMITTEE

Senator Smith (Colchester), Chairman of the Standing Senate Committee on Transport and Communications, presented the following report:

Wednesday, June 14, 1978

The Standing Senate Committee on Transport and Communications, to which was referred Bill C-17, intituled: "An Act to amend the Canadian National Railways Capital Revision Act and the Railway Act and to amend and repeal certain other statutes in consequence thereof", has, in obedience to the order of reference of Wednesday, May 24, 1978, examined the said Bill and now reports the same without amendment.

However, your committee wishes to observe that it noted the apprehension expressed on behalf of the Canadian Trucking Association that the passing of this bill might encourage Canadian National Railways from time to time to engage in acts of "acquisition or unfair pricing" in order to eliminate or reduce trucking competition. The committee wishes to record its view that such conduct would not be in the public interest, and that the proper authorities should give this matter careful and continuing attention.

Your committee also heard evidence concerning the funding and management of the Canadian National Railways employees' pension plan. Witnesses included representatives of the Canadian Railways Employees' Pension Association and of the Pension Benefits Division of the Department of Insurance. Your committee noted the importance of proper funding and management of such plans.

Respectfully submitted,

George I. Smith,
Chairman.

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this bill be read the third time?

Senator Langlois moved that the bill be placed on the Orders of the Day for third reading at the next sitting.

Motion agreed to.

BANKING, TRADE AND COMMERCE

COMMITTEE AUTHORIZED TO MEET DURING SITTING OF THE
SENATE

Senator Langlois with leave of the Senate and notwithstanding rule 45(1)(a), moved:

That the Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce have power to sit while the Senate is sitting on Wednesday next, June 21, 1978, and that rule 76(4) be suspended in relation thereto.

Motion agreed to.

BUSINESS OF THE SENATE

ADJOURNMENT

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, with leave of the Senate and notwithstanding rule 45(1)(g), I move that when the Senate adjourns today it do stand adjourned until Tuesday, June 20, 1978, at 8 o'clock in the evening.

Before Her Honour the Speaker puts the question I should like to give a brief summary of the work in the Senate for next week.

First, I shall deal with committees. On Tuesday the Banking, Trade and Commerce Committee will meet at 2.30 p.m. to consider the subject matter of Bill C-56, to amend the statute law relating to income tax and to authorize payments related to provincial sales tax reductions, and, if time permits, the Committee will consider the subject matter of Bill C-59, to amend the Income Tax and the Excise Tax Act in matters relating to the ownership and operation of small businesses. The Foreign Affairs Committee will hold in camera meetings at 10.00 a.m. and 2.15 p.m. to consider its report on Canada-United States relations; the Special Committee on the Northern Pipeline will meet at 2.00 p.m., and the Subcommittee of Health, Welfare and Science on Childhood Experiences will meet at 4.00 p.m.

On Wednesday the Banking, Trade and Commerce Committee will hold a meeting at 9.30 a.m. The matters to be considered have not yet been decided upon.

On Thursday at 9.30 a.m. the Banking, Trade and Commerce Committee will hold another meeting to consider the subject matter of Bill C-13, to amend the Combines Investigation Act and to amend the Bank Act and other acts in relation thereto or in consequence thereof, or Bill C-57, the Banks and Banking Law Revision Act, 1978. The Special Committee on the Northern Pipeline will meet at 10.00 a.m., and the Standing Joint Committee on Regulations and other Statutory Instruments will meet at 11.00 a.m.

The Foreign Affairs Committee may also meet on Wednesday and Thursday for further consideration of its Canada-United States report, but no times have yet been set for these meetings.

In the Senate we shall proceed with third reading of Bill C-17, to amend the Canadian National Railways Capital Revision Act and the Railway Act and to amend and repeal certain other statutes in consequence thereof, and consideration of the report of the Standing Senate Committee on National Finance on the main estimates for the 1978-79 fiscal year. My information is that the supply bill based on these estimates will pass in the other place next Thursday night, and it is possible that we shall also receive Bill C-56, the income tax bill, late next week. In view of the foregoing, it may be necessary for the Senate to sit on Friday next.

• (1410)

Senator Flynn: What! On the eve of St. Jean Baptiste Day?

Senator Langlois: Yes. We will celebrate here.

Motion agreed to.

THE CONSTITUTION

RENEWAL OF THE CANADIAN FEDERATION—QUESTION

Senator Flynn: Honourable senators, last Tuesday I asked the Leader of the Government a question relating to the intention of the government to proceed with legislation which would replace this Senate by another type of second chamber. I was wondering at that time if in the opinion of the government that could be done without the concurrence of the provinces. Following a rather vague answer by the Leader of the Government, Senator Forsey put a question inviting the leader to agree that this type of legislation was exclusively within the power of the Parliament of Canada, and the leader replied that Senator Forsey was entirely correct. He did not say, "for once," but said he was entirely correct.

I wish to ask the Leader of the Government today what the interpretation of the government is of the amendment to which Senator Forsey referred, which says that the amendment from time to time of the Constitution of Canada is within the powers of Parliament "except as regards matters coming within the classes of subjects by this Act assigned exclusively to the Legislatures of the provinces,"—and I understand that refers to section 92 of the British North America Act—"or as"—and this is the important part—"regards rights or privileges by this or any other Constitutional Act granted or secured to the Legislature or the Government of a province—"

What would be, in the opinion of the government, the rights and privileges, outside section 92, which are to be protected and which would need the consent of the provinces?

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, the comments of the Leader of the Opposition—

Senator Flynn: Not comments, but questions.

Senator Perrault: Well, the question and comments will be taken under careful review and consideration. I know that the honourable senator would not wish me to offer a reply anything less than complete on such an important question.

Senator Flynn: I agree with that.

Senator Perrault: I shall endeavour to have a statement made available to the chamber.

Senator Flynn: Thank you.

ENERGY

POSSIBLE CHANGE IN CONTROL OF ASSETS OF HUSKY OIL COMPANY—QUESTION

Senator Austin: Honourable senators, I should like to put a question to the government leader regarding one of Canada's great natural resource treasures. I am referring to the heavy oil deposits in Alberta and Saskatchewan which contain billions of barrels of oil vital to Canada's future needs. The crown corporation Petro-Canada is seeking to obtain control of certain heavy oil properties for Canadian development in accordance with Canadian energy policy.

I should like to ask the leader whether he can assure the Senate that the government will follow its own precedent in the case of Denison Mines and Home Oil and thus ensure that neither Occidental Oil nor any other foreign-controlled company would be allowed to control the Husky heavy oil deposits in the event of a decision by Husky directors and/or shareholders to sell control of those assets.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, that question had been anticipated. However, with no pun intended, may I say that the situation is extremely fluid. There have been further developments this morning: reports of a further counter offer by Occidental Petroleum, and then a counter counter offer by Petro-Canada. I really feel that under the circumstances some of the material which I had available yesterday to bring to honourable senators may be dated in view of developments in recent hours. Therefore I shall endeavour to obtain from the minister responsible for Energy, Mines and Resources further information within the next few minutes to see whether something can be reported to the Senate.

It can be said, however, that any proposed transaction of the kind contemplated by Occidental Petroleum would come under the review of the Foreign Investment Review Agency and would be carefully scrutinized to determine whether or not real and substantial benefits would exist for Canadians.

SPORTS

CBC TELECAST OF PEARSON CUP BASEBALL GAME—QUESTION ANSWERED

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, I have a reply to a question asked by Senator Davey on June 7. He wanted to know whether the CBC planned to telecast the Pearson Cup baseball game to be played on June 29 between the Montreal Expos and the Toronto Blue Jays.

There were some reports that the game would not be televised. I am now able to report to the house that both the French and English television networks of the CBC will indeed be carrying the game, starting at 7:30 p.m.

Senator Flynn: My wife will be very happy.

Senator Perrault: It should be pointed out that Senator John Connolly has been particularly instrumental in bringing into existence the Pearson Cup, this competition between Canada's two major league baseball teams. I hope that perhaps next week an appropriate description can be given of the Pearson Cup and the reason for its existence.

Immense credit goes to our colleague, the Honourable Senator Connolly, for the work he has undertaken to bring this fine trophy into existence.

Hon. Senators: Hear, hear.

CROWN CORPORATIONS

NAMES, RESPONSIBLE MINISTERS, 1976-77 SURPLUS OR DEFICIT—QUESTION ON THE ORDER PAPER ANSWERED

Question No. 14—By Senator Fournier (Madawaska-Restigouche):

1. What are the names of all Canadian crown corporations or agencies answerable to the Federal Government?
2. Who are the ministers responsible for such corporations or agencies?
3. What is the total amount of the surplus or deficit of each of such crown corporations or agencies as shown in its annual report for 1976-77.

Reply by the President of the Treasury Board:

(1) Canadian Crown corporations or agencies answerable to the Federal Government	(2) Responsible Minister	(3) Surplus (deficit) as shown in 1976-77 annual report
Schedule "B" Corporations-F.A. Act
Agricultural Stabilization Board	Hon. E. F. Whelan	1
Atomic Energy Control Board	Hon. A. Gillespie	1
Canada Employment and Immigration Commission	Hon. B. Cullen	1
Director of Soldier Settlement	Hon. D. J. MacDonald	1
The Director, Veterans' Land Act	Hon. D. J. MacDonald	1
Economic Council of Canada	Rt. Hon. P. E. Trudeau	1
Fisheries Prices Support Board	Hon. R. LeBlanc	(1,343,209) <sup>1</sup>
Medical Research Council	Hon. M. Bégin	1
Municipal Development and Loan Board	Hon. J. Chrétien	1
National Museums of Canada	Hon. J. Roberts	1
National Research Council	Hon. J. J. Buchanan	1
Science Council of Canada	Hon. J. J. Buchanan	1
Schedule "C" Corporations-F.A. Act
Atomic Energy of Canada Limited	Hon. A. Gillespie	(183,706,000) <sup>2</sup>
Canadian Arsenals Limited	Hon. J. P. Goyer	(1,233,020) <sup>2</sup>
Canadian Commercial Corporation	Hon. J. P. Goyer	(2,765,885) <sup>2</sup>
Canadian Dairy Commission	Hon. E. F. Whelan	(159,718,170) <sup>2</sup>
Canadian Film Development Corporation	Hon. J. Roberts	2,849,984 <sup>2</sup>
Canadian Livestock Feed Board	Hon. E. F. Whelan	(283,191) <sup>2</sup>
Canadian National (West Indies) Steamships Limited	Hon. O. E. Lang	227,712 <sup>3</sup>
Canadian Patents and Development Limited	Hon. J. H. Horner	166,471 <sup>2</sup>
Canadian Saltfish Corporation	Hon. R. LeBlanc	nil <sup>2</sup>
Centennial Commission	Hon. J. Roberts	3
Crown Assets Disposal Corporation	Hon. J. P. Goyer	111,304
Defence Construction (1951) Limited	Hon. B. Danson	(1,679,602) <sup>2</sup>
Loto Canada Inc	Hon. I. Campagnolo	nil
The National Battlefields Commission	Hon. J. H. Faulkner	dependent on appropriations
National Capital Commission	Hon. A. Ouellet	dependent on appropriations
National Harbours Board	Hon. O. E. Lang	(216,553,000) <sup>2</sup>

[Senator Perrault.]

(1) Canadian Crown corporations or agencies answerable to the Federal Government	(2) Responsible Minister	(3) Surplus (deficit) as shown in 1976-77 annual report
Northern Canada Power Commission	Hon. J. H. Faulkner	(4,530,000)
Royal Canadian Mint	Hon. J. P. Goyer	3,696,847
Uranium Canada Limited	Hon. A. Gillespie	Nil-company acts as Canada's uranium sales agent
Schedule "D" Corporations-F.A. Act
Air Canada	Hon. O. E. Lang	18,916,000
Canada Deposit Insurance Corporation	Hon. J. Chrétien	22,625,013
Canadian Broadcasting Corporation	Hon. J. Roberts	dependent on appropriations
Canadian National Railways	Hon. O. E. Lang	11,764,000
Cape Breton Development Corporation	Hon. M. Lessard	dependent on appropriations
Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation	Hon. A. Ouellet	6,008,000 <sup>2</sup>
Eldorado Aviation Limited	Hon. A. Gillespie	257,039
Eldorado Nuclear Limited	Hon. A. Gillespie	49,283,549
Export Development Corporation	Hon. J. H. Horner	57,098,000
Farm Credit Corporation	Hon. E. F. Whelan	(1,449,974) <sup>2</sup>
Federal Business Development Bank	Hon. J. H. Horner	43,534,675
Federal Mortgage Exchange Corporation	Hon. J. Chrétien	3
Freshwater Fish Marketing Corporation	Hon. R. LeBlanc	95,063 <sup>2</sup>
Northern Transportation Company Limited	Hon. O. E. Lang	(8,011,961) <sup>2</sup>
Petro-Canada	Hon. A. Gillespie	3,333,000
Pilotage Authorities:
Atlantic Pilotage Authority	Hon. O. E. Lang	(583,496) <sup>2</sup>
Laurentian Pilotage Authority	Hon. O. E. Lang	1,069 <sup>2</sup>
Great Lakes Pilotage Authority Ltd.	Hon. O. E. Lang	(713,450) <sup>2</sup>
Pacific Pilotage Authority	Hon. O. E. Lang	(200,282) <sup>2</sup>
St. Lawrence Seaway Authority	Hon. O. E. Lang	(172,838,827) <sup>2</sup>
The Seaway International Bridge Corporation Limited	Hon. O. E. Lang	nil
Teleglobe Canada	Hon. J. Sauvé	(103,770,000)

<sup>1</sup> Operations financed as departments considered part of Government of Canada accounting system.

<sup>2</sup> Includes Government appropriations.

<sup>3</sup> Inoperative.

THE ECONOMY

VALUE OF CANADIAN DOLLAR—DEBATE CONCLUDED

The Senate resumed from Tuesday, June 13, the debate on the inquiry of Senator Desruisseaux calling the attention of the Senate to the question of the devaluation of the Canadian dollar.

Hon. Jack Austin: Honourable senators, on February 21 last I initiated an inquiry in the Senate regarding the Canadian dollar, the floating exchange rate and its relevance to the Canadian economy. A few days later, Senator Desruisseaux provided additional views and comments to my own.

I think we were both right to be concerned with the matter of the impact of foreign exchange trading in the Canadian dollar and its influence on Canadian economic performance, and I believe that Senator Desruisseaux is correct to report again to the Senate his views on events which have taken place in the meantime in this critical area of national policy. For my part, I have a few comments to add of a reflective kind.

Economics combines within its nature both the empiric data of past performance and the subjective qualities that go with the future. We know from empiric data that in the last three quarters the economy has been in a recovery and growth phase. It is not a buoyant, bouncing, optimism-generating kind of recovery, but one that is careful and hesitating.

Each kind of recovery brings with it separate kinds of problems, but I for one prefer the present slow acceleration in our recovery, because I believe it gives us pause to think about and understand some of the real inherent and underlying issues of our society.

We have a little time yet available to us to evaluate the nature and effect of the demands of different components of our society on our available economic resources. It gives us the opportunity to place longer term responses in motion. Hopefully, we can continue the recovery without climbing on a roller-coaster which will zoom us up or down abruptly and leave us having to contend again with the much more difficult problems associated with major extremes of economic behaviour.

● (1420)

The present hesitation in the rate of economic growth in Canada is based on those general subjective qualities that are so important to future performance. There is a withholding of confidence at the industrial and commercial levels, and a hesitating confidence at the consumer level. Nonetheless, the present position of the Canadian dollar in foreign currency terms has enhanced our export balances, added to employment in manufacturing and other labour-intensive sections of our economy, and generated a sense of confidence in Canadian ability to compete for world markets.

Let us look for a moment more closely at the reasons for the caution and hesitancy. I believe that the single most important reason is the continuing concern of Canadians with respect to the inflationary factors within the economy. It may well be that the assurances of some economists that wage-push inflation is no longer an important factor in the economy is the case. It is the view of government economists that pay increases should be limited to 6 per cent this year, but many Canadians will wait for the demonstration of the evidence over the next few months, as the Anti-Inflation Board controls are removed. What Canadians are also aware of is the 12-month inflation rate, now standing at 9 per cent, and on a three-month basis, year over year, at an annual rate of 11.3 per cent.

A second important factor regarding inflation relates to the public's subjective belief as to whether government and private sector employees will have the courage, toughness and perseverance to resist inordinate claims for higher wages and higher profits. There have been some notably determined and successful fights recently for maintenance of a competitive profit and/or wage balance in Canada, but the major challenges are ahead of us. I refer, in the public sector, to such matters as the challenge from postal unions, and, in the private sector, to such demands as that for 32-hour week by trade unions. Future improper profit claims are harder to point to, but we all know that the problem is there.

At another level Canadians are hesitating in their confidence because they believe that the devaluation of the Canadian dollar in terms of the United States dollar—it is trading at about the 89-cent level—is a demonstration that there is something seriously wrong with the Canadian economy. We are all familiar with the phrase "Our Canadian dollar is worth less than the American dollar." I am not certain that those responsible for the education of the Canadian public about public-interest issues—and, in particular, I presume that honourable senators are supposed to be both teachers and students—have done a good job of explaining what is happening in the world and what has happened at home to bring about this result.

Senator Desruisseaux had an excellent theme in his speech on June 13 last. He placed responsibility for the condition of the Canadian dollar in terms of the United States dollar entirely on the Canadian people, and I believe he is essentially correct in this. I would like to quote from his speech, as reported at page 869 of Debates of the Senate for June 13, 1978, as follows:

I find that no matter how hard we look for a cause outside Canada for the discount of the Canadian dollar, we have to admit that whatever caused its devaluation was of our own doing. The world markets have only reacted to what they have seen.

Senator Desruisseaux went on to quote from an article by Mr. Earle McLaughlin, Chairman and Chief Executive Officer of the Royal Bank of Canada, in which he wrote:

The value of currency reflects the strength and competitiveness of an economy. It is an indication, not a cause.

[Senator Austin.]

To some extent it is true that Canadian industry and labour priced themselves out of world markets by making too many demands for economic rewards. Our largest market is the United States, with approximately 70 per cent of our exports sold in that market. If we push our competitive costs to a level higher than the costs of production of the same products in the United States, then obviously the United States consumer is not going to feel any obligation to recognize our commodities. If our over-all productivity is only as good as that of our competitors, then we can only be paid as much as our competitors receive for their productivity.

I believe there was a period following the onset of the energy crisis in 1973-74 when, because of Canadian government policies, the economy was shielded from the impact of increases in the price of energy. This shielding did not take place to the same extent in the United States or in other parts of the western industrial world. They took the higher cost burden of international energy more quickly into their economy, and absorbed the shocks sooner. The result was that the adjustment process to the new economic realities began sooner in those countries, and therefore their recovery began sooner.

In Canada we sought to maintain and enhance our competitive position for an interim report, but instead of using this advantage to become more competitive by making critical priority changes in the structure of the economy, the Canadian people scooped up much of the advantage of low energy costs for 1974 and 1975 in the form of higher claims, and thereby raised the cost base of what we do to earn a living in the world.

When the crunch came, it was all the more surprising and painful to Canadians because, I think, we thought, briefly, that we were smarter than our competitors—and perhaps we thought we were luckier.

By the same token, as we had postponed the crunch we had also postponed the time for recovery and the way in which we could recover. We saw, therefore, the American economy begin to recover at a time when the going was rough for us, and in making comparisons the critics lost their perspective. Today the American economy is still ahead of us in the recovery cycle, although we are now beginning to catch up—thanks, in part, the present fiscal and monetary policies, and to the world free marketplace for currency which has pushed on us the devaluation of the Canadian dollar, and with it a second opportunity to readjust our competitive position in the world economy.

While part of our problem was caused by too aggressive claims placed by Canadians on their own economic pie, another part of the cause of the inordinate swing in the Canadian dollar, from its high of approximately $1.03 in 1976 to its low of 86 cents earlier this year, in terms of the United States dollar, has been the result of what I believe is the excessive and very short-sighted behaviour by Canadians in the international money marketplace of a year or two ago.

Senators are aware that in 1975 and 1976 provinces and other borrowers raced to the United States and other capital markets, and the resultant total borrowing was in the range of $10 billion. Naturally, the Canadian dollar went to a premium based on this substantial bunching of Canadian purchases of Canadian dollars from abroad. Claims on foreign capital markets that should, in the ordinary course, have been made over a period of four or five years were perhaps made over a period of one or one-and-a-half years. When these claims were satiated, how could anyone expect that the Canadian dollar could do anything but drop—and drop dramatically. In a supply/demand situation the demand had been removed, and the supply of Canadian dollars was over-balanced.

It is my view that the federal government has a responsibility to prevent these boom/bust cycles in the demand for Canadian dollars purchased abroad by Canadian borrowers, and thus prevent the building up of the kind of shock waves which Canadians have felt in the last few months as a result of the rapid devaluation of the Canadian dollar. I believe the federal government should maintain a three-to five-year target of what would be acceptable limits to foreign borrowing by Canadian borrowers. The usual borrowing institutions should be asked to give notice, perhaps six to nine months ahead of time, of foreseeable borrowing requirements. The Canadian government should then look at the over-all demand and decide whether any restraint in borrowing is necessary or, alternatively, whether any acceleration in borrowing is advisable in order to prevent the roller-coaster ride the Canadian dollar has experienced in terms of the United States dollar over the last three years. This is, of course, another field for federal-provincial consultation, or perhaps in some cases, conflict, but I cannot see how a federal state, devoted to the maximum good for the greatest number, can allow the transfer of costs within the economy to be vested so erratically and in such an uncoordinated way.

Had the Senate been prepared to accept my proposal for a substantial inquiry into the devaluation of the Canadian dollar, this is one of the recommendations whose validity might have been considered.

Senator Flynn: We would have done that if the Prime Minister had not led us to believe we were going to have an election.

Senator Austin: I hope when we meet again after the summer I will have your support to pursue this inquiry.

Senator Flynn: If you say there will not be an election soon, you can move that motion now and we will support it.

Senator Austin: You know that I have no such information.

Senator Flynn: There was a time when you had.

Senator Austin: Yes, but I no longer have it, and sometimes I thank God that I do not.

Senator Flynn: So do we.

Senator Austin: Thanks for the compliment.

As honourable senators know, leaders of the industrial western world, among whom is certainly our Prime Minister, will have a meeting in West Germany in mid-July to discuss world economic conditions. I doubt if anyone is naive enough to believe that if they work hard they can achieve a miracle. There simply are no remedies of that type available to us.

● (1430)

Their focus has to be on the middle-term, the early 1980s, and on the key questions of trade, international debt and liquidity, balance of payments, world peace and security and the equitable distribution of costs, prices and profits among peoples of the world. These are the megaton questions. They are the ones to be tackled. Canada has a key role to play in the search for international equity.

So far as Canada itself is concerned, I very much believe that we are in a basically sound economic posture. We have a well-educated and healthy work force capable of high levels of productivity when properly stimulated; we have increasingly more sophisticated investor and managerial leadership; we have adequate reserves of energy and basic material resources, although these are not cheap resources; and we have all the capital resources we need to enlarge our productive capacity. Now what we need is to feel more sure of ourselves. Now what we need is to agree on our goals. We must ask: What kind of society do Canadians want? We must project the optimism about ourselves that the real facts of Canada make eminently justified.

What are those facts? In brief, they are:

1. Between 1967 and 1976 the Canadian GNP in constant dollar terms grew by 53 per cent, while by contrast the United States GNP grew by 26 per cent.

2. Real disposable income in Canada grew by 73 per cent, and in the United States by 33 per cent.

3. In each country the consumer price index grew by about the same percentage for that period—in Canada by 72 per cent and in the United States by 70.5 per cent.

4. In 1978 the GNP of Canada will grow by between 3 per cent and 4 per cent.

5. Canada's rate of job creation has been the highest in the western industrial world. According to Statistics Canada, 525,000 new jobs were created from January to May, 1978—an historic high.

Senator Flynn: Unemployment also.

Senator Austin: Honourable senators, as in all subjective matters, I think that the way we look at ourselves is the way we will in fact perform. I can understand, but I cannot accept, the attitude of Canadians over the last two or three years toward themselves. We have been a bitching, miserable, carping society; we have put ourselves down when the facts do not justify putting ourselves down; and we have been anxious about our present, yet we have never in any snapshot of Canada been more prosperous, had more personal freedom, or had more choices with respect to our time and our activities. We are a lucky society. While we have social and political problems in Canada, which sometimes are extremely difficult, I am absolutely convinced that if we so desire we can be a great society.

The Hon. the Speaker: As no other honourable senator wishes to participate, this inquiry is considered as having been debated.

The Senate adjourned until Tuesday, June 20, 1978, at 8 p.m.

THE SENATE

Tuesday, June 20, 1978

The Senate met at 8 p.m., Hon. Jean-Paul Deschatelets, P.C., Speaker pro tem, in the Chair.

Prayers.

DOCUMENTS TABLED

Senator Perrault tabled:

Copies of document entitled "Public Service and Public Interest: Submissions of the Public Service Commission of Canada to the Special Committee on Personnel Management and the Merit Principle".

Copies of Reports of the Administrator under the Anti-Inflation Act, pursuant to section 17(3) of the said Act, Chapter 75, Statutes of Canada, 1974-75-76, respecting certain compensation plans, as follows:

1. McAllister Towing and Salvage Company Limited, Montreal, Quebec and two of its groups, namely, the captains and engineers, represented by the Canadian Marine Officers Union. Orders dated June 9, 1978.

2. Abex Industries Ltd., Joliette, Quebec and two of its groups, namely, the hourly-rated production and maintenance employees, represented by the United Automobile Workers Local 1951, and the hourly supervision and clerical employees. Orders dated June 9, 1978.

3. Croven Limited, Whitby, Ontario and the group of its plant employees, represented by the International Union, United Automobile, Aerospace and Agricultural Implement Workers of America (U.A.W.) Local 1090. Order dated June 9, 1978.

Copy of Proceedings of the Royal Society of Canada, 1977, together with a copy of the 1977-78 Calendar and a copy of the Report of Council containing the financial statements of the Society for the year ended February 28, 1978, and the auditors' report thereon, pursuant to section 9 of An Act to incorporate the Royal Society of Canada, Chapter 46, Statutes of Canada, 1883.

Copies of correspondence between the Prime Minister of Canada and the Premier of New Brunswick concerning the publicity arrangements for the respective contribution towards shared-cost programs and certain joint activities in New Brunswick.

Copies of letters, dated June 16, 1978, from the Prime Minister of Canada to the ten provincial Premiers concerning the implementation of the proposals for action in Chapter IV of the document entitled "A Time for Action: Toward the Renewal of the Canadian Federation".

Document entitled: "The Constitutional Amendment Bill", with text and explanatory notes, published to encourage public discussion of proposed changes in the Canadian Constitution, as set out in a bill introduced in Parliament by the Government of Canada—June, 1978.

FOREIGN AFFAIRS

COMMITTEE AUTHORIZED TO PUBLISH AND DISTRIBUTE VOLUME II OF ITS REPORT ON CANADIAN RELATIONS WITH THE UNITED STATES

Senator van Roggen, Chairman of the Standing Senate Committee on Foreign Affairs, with leave of the Senate and notwithstanding rule 45(1)(e), moved:

That the Standing Senate Committee on Foreign Affairs be authorized to publish and distribute Volume II of its Report on Canadian relations with the United States as soon as it becomes available, even though the Senate may not then be sitting.

Motion agreed to.

NATIONAL FINANCE

COMMITTEE AUTHORIZED TO PUBLISH AND DISTRIBUTE ITS REPORT ON THE ACCOMMODATION PROGRAM OF THE DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC WORKS

Senator Everett, Chairman of the Standing Senate Committee on National Finance, with leave of the Senate and notwithstanding rule 45(1)(e), moved:

That the Standing Senate Committee on National Finance be authorized to publish and distribute its Report on the Accommodation Program of the Department of Public Works as soon as it becomes available, even though the Senate may not then be sitting.

Motion agreed to.

FOREIGN AFFAIRS

COMMITTEE AUTHORIZED TO MEET DURING SITTING OF THE SENATE

Senator Langlois, with leave of the Senate and notwithstanding rule 45(1)(a), moved:

That the Standing Senate Committee on Foreign Affairs have power to sit while the Senate is sitting tomorrow, Wednesday, June 21, 1978, and that rule 76(4) be suspended in relation thereto.

Motion agreed to.

THE CONSTITUTION

QUESTIONS

Senator Flynn: Honourable senators, I should like to ask the Leader of the Government in the Senate whether he has any comment to make on the document entitled "The Constitutional Amendment Bill," which he has just tabled, especially as it relates to the replacement of the Senate by a House of the Federation?

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, naturally there is a great deal of interest in this bill which has been tabled in both houses today, and the documentation in connection with the bill. The process of constitutional reform is of deep interest to Canadians of all political persuasion and, indeed, to Canadians wherever they live.

● (2010)

A few days ago the government issued a white paper on the subject of constitutional reform and constitutional change. The bill tabled in Parliament today is, in a sense, a form of white paper in itself. It is proposed that the proposals it contains and the variations and options open for the Constitution of Canada be given detailed and serious consideration by Parliament. Indeed, a decision will be made within the next few days as to whether Parliament will establish a joint committee of both houses to study the proposals and, perhaps, possible variations and alternatives. I favour the participation of the Senate in such a joint committee, and I think most honourable senators may feel the same way.

There will be many, many opportunities for honourable senators of all political persuasions to participate in the work of the committee and to participate in what may be termed the constitutional "dialogue". I want to assure honourable senators that alternative options have not been closed. There is a great area for further creative thinking and possible action with respect to the final form of any proposed legislation. The government is not adopting a "take it or leave it" attitude; the government is not taking the position that the contents of the bill tabled today represent the final words on the subject of constitutional reform, including changes in the Senate. However, there is a conviction on the part of the government that, after long years of discussion on the subject of constitutional reform, after the many statements made by various governments, political parties and individuals on the subject of reform, the time has arrived to make available in a more tangible form specific proposals detailing a set of constitutional proposals which could be adopted by Parliament.

I want to assure honourable senators that there will be no undue haste in the passage of this bill, or in efforts to have it approved by either house of Parliament. There will be time for consideration, time for reflection. I think that all parliamentarians are dedicated to the view that we must achieve in the ultimate that which is clearly in the interest of our great country and of all the provinces which make up our Confederation.

Senator Greene: I would ask the leader if it is true that this joint committee is to be known, on this side of Parliament at least, as the Kamikaze Committee?

Senator Flynn: May I ask a supplementary question? Does the leader suggest that the government, after having proposed the abolition of the Senate and its replacement by the House of the Federation, can then withdraw and consider only the reform of the Senate?

Since he is a member of the government, can we assume that the leader approves of the idea of abolishing the Senate as we know it, and replacing it by some other body? I am not saying it is wrong in itself, but does the leader believe that the government, having moved to abolish the Senate, can then propose an alternative that would result in the continuation of this house as we know it.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, what I am saying is that in the second stage it will be for parliamentarians of all political persuasions, representatives from both the Senate and the other place, to meet, to confer, to study the practicability and the desirability of the proposals set forth in this draft legislation. However, I repeat, the government is not bound and committed unalterably to these proposals to the exclusion of all other options. I suggest to you that the final bill which we may be called upon to consider and debate may be different in some respects from the measure tabled in this place tonight. I believe that many senators have constructive ideas with respect to the future of the Constitution, including the Senate. For example, I know that from time to time the Honourable Leader of the Opposition has spoken of the Senate and the institution of Parliament. He has spoken with great persuasion on that subject, just as have other honourable senators who serve here. Their views should be made known to any joint committee.

Perhaps the point to be made is that there is now a draft bill containing specific ideas which can be considered. I can provide assurance on behalf of the government that an opportunity will be provided for all of these proposed provisions to be brought under the closest possible scrutiny of Parliament. The provisions of the bill will be altered, changed and amended if Parliament so determines. The end purpose of this process is to develop a more effective Constitution, including a more responsive and representative parliamentary system.

That is the object of the operation, and I hope I will have an opportunity in the next few days to meet with the Honourable Leader of the Opposition to discuss ways in which the resources of the Senate can be brought to bear in this process of discussing the bill and considering the proposals which it contains. As members of this place, I think we should approach some aspects of this task on a co-operative basis.

[Translation]

Senator Asselin: A supplementary question. The Minister of State for Federal-Provincial Relations, the Honourable Marc Lalonde, a few days after the tabling of the white paper, said that the proposed changes concerning the first stage—that is, the replacement of the Senate by a chamber of the provinces and appointments to the Supreme Court—did not especially attract the attention of Canadians. More precisely, he said people did not seem very interested in that part of constitutional reform and would rather see constitutional changes introduced in the federal and provincial jurisdictions, which would constitute the second stage of the constitutional amendments. Considering also that the issue of Quebec participation in Confederation is, I believe, the only element which is really important for Canadians as far as national unity is concerned, would it not be wise, in view of the fact that the government has drafted legislation on the referendum, to recommend to the federal government, before rushing through constitutional amendments unwanted by Canadians, as the Minister of Federal-Provincial Relations, Mr. Lalonde, suggested, to ascertain the real wishes of Canadians with respect to constitutional changes, as they will have to live with the new Constitution and, in a democratic country, like Canada, they should be consulted through a referendum?

● (2020)

[English]

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, I know that all of us appreciate the views expressed by Senator Asselin. Indeed, I think that many of his colleagues may wish to see him serve on any joint committee formed to consider the subject of the Constitution, in view of his interest in the subject and his experience in both chambers of Parliament.

There will be a meeting of first ministers in September of this year. The Government of Canada will not proceed unilaterally to impose upon provincial governments, or upon the Canadian people, any constitutional "package" to which there appears to be substantial opposition. There will, then, be discussions with the premiers. Their ideas will be sought. Of course, already there have been preliminary discussions and meetings with respect to the contents of the white paper. We appreciate that constitutional change is a sensitive and vital matter which will touch upon the lives of all Canadians, whether they live in Ontario, Quebec, the west, the Atlantic provinces, northern Canada or the prairies. So during the preparatory, deliberative and consultative process, full consideration will be given to the sensitivities of the Canadian people, the views of the provincial governments, and other opinions.

We quite appreciate the fact that the process of "re-Confederation" must be considered carefully, and the reactions of all provincial governments must be gauged and assessed. We hope that the results of our labours will not be an intensifying of confrontation between the federal government and any of the provinces, but rather the development of a new co-operative spirit involving the federal government and provincial governments and Canadians from coast to coast. Greater unity and understanding are two of the major motivations of this constitutional package.

Again, honourable senators, I want to repeat that none of the proposals contained in the white paper, or contained in this draft bill, are etched in stone. The essence of the position of the government is flexibility, because flexibility may be required to achieve, finally, a good and acceptable set of constitutional changes.

Senator Manning: May I ask the Leader of the Government whether it is the government's intention that there be a formal debate, both in the other place and in this house, on the general principles of the legislation that was tabled in the two houses today, before the matter is considered by the proposed joint committee of the two houses?

It seems to me that if the matter is to be the subject of consideration by such a committee it would be advantageous to ascertain the general viewpoints of both houses of Parliament before the committee undertakes its deliberations.

I wonder if there is any intention on the part of the government along that line.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, there might be real merit in having a debate of the kind suggested by Senator Manning. It is my understanding that consideration is now being given to the possibility of a two-day debate in the other place. I do not know whether a final decision has been taken in that regard.

I think it would be quite remarkable if a chamber of Parliament, which it is proposed be transformed and changed, did not wish to debate its own future.

Senator Molson: Honourable senators, I should like to ask a supplementary question of the Leader of the Government. He has just said that he hopes, if a joint committee is set up, that the Senate will be represented and will play its full part on that committee.

If, in keeping with our practice, we do appoint members to this joint committee, will their terms of reference and responsibilities be fully set out in the motion setting up the committee?

As the leader knows, rule 74 provides that the Senate may appoint a special committee and may set the terms of reference and indicate the powers to be exercised and the duties to be undertaken by that committee. I am really asking if our representatives on that joint committee will go from here with terms of reference, instructions, or a point of view, if nothing else, of the Senate?

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators are aware, of course, that members of the Senate have made a very important and distinguished contribution to past committees on the subject of the Constitution. Indeed I think it can be said that the main impetus behind the last report on the Constitution, produced by a joint parliamentary committee formed for that purpose, was provided by members of the Senate.

I would not wish to offer an opinion until after adequate study, but it seems to me that it may be too much to ask that there be some unanimous position adopted in advance by members of the Senate who may participate in the deliberations of any joint committee formed to consider constitutional changes.

What is being suggested by the honourable senator is a possible bipartisan policy achieved in advance of meetings of the joint committee. It would be the kind of bipartisan policy that I think we have not sought to achieve in the past. There are strong individual opinions held by various senators on a number of subjects, and probably more particularly the subject of constitutional reform.

I hope that now this bill has been tabled I will have the opportunity to meet with the Leader of the Opposition tomorrow to discuss the contributions which the parties represented here may be able to make to this process. But unless the distinguished Leader of the Opposition holds a contrary opinion, I would think it rather difficult to hope to achieve bipartisan unity on some positions to be taken by senators serving on any committee.

Senator van Roggen: I have a question for the Leader of the Government. In view of the persistent rumours that Parliament may adjourn for the summer next week, and in view of Senator Manning's comment that there should be a formal debate on the general principles of this legislation before it is considered by the proposed joint committee, which would then have the benefit of the views of all members of Parliament during its deliberations, can the leader assure us that this joint committee will not be appointed to meet during the summer months and bring in a report with undue haste, and that the committee will meet during normal sitting hours when Parliament reconvenes in the fall, whenever that may be?

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, I would certainly be prepared to make a statement tomorrow on the subject of a possible debate on the white paper and the draft legislation tabled this evening. I see merit in the proposal advanced by Senator Manning, Senator van Roggen and others who have suggested that course of action.

Senator Flynn: Honourable senators, there will be opportunity for debate when the Senate is invited to join with the House of Commons to form a committee to study this document. But has the leader any idea how many senators will be appointed to the committee? Usually there are 30 members on a joint committee, with 20 being appointed by the House of Commons and 10 by the Senate. I would suggest that under the circumstances 10 members from the Senate might be too few, and that 20 from the House of Commons and 15 from the Senate would be more appropriate for this committee.

• (2030)

Senator Perrault: That suggestion and others have come to my attention today. There is certainly validity in the argument advanced by the Leader of the Opposition tonight that in view of the importance of this particular subject the committee numbers might well be expanded. There are other initiatives with respect to party membership that I hope we can discuss tomorrow at our meeting.

Senator Argue: Honourable senators, I would think, on an issue of this importance to the country, and in view of the fact that there are two houses of Parliament, that consideration might be given to making an exception in this case, namely, of having equal representation from each house of Parliament so that a fair and reasonable examination of the matter can be made in every way, and so that this house would not be at the mercy of a large majority of the other place.

I should like to ask a further question of the leader. I am wondering—and I am not necessarily looking for a definitive answer—if under the circumstances there might be merit, in addition to having a joint committee, in having a committee of the Senate look into these broad questions in order to give this examination the widest possible scope, in the greatest detail, so that the particular contribution that the Senate has made over the years, and can still make today, will be brought to light. The country can thus be made aware of the role that the Senate has played, and of our views as to how this role may be improved.

Senator Flynn: So that they can regret us!

Senator Perrault: All of the proposals that have emanated from the ranks of honourable senators have value. They are being noted and will be discussed, and I am sure we will have information with respect to committee participation by honourable senators, and the committee's structure generally, within the next day or two.

Senator Denis: Honourable senators, perhaps I could ask the Leader of the Government why, if the bill could be completely changed, the legislation was not presented first in the form of a white paper, or proposal, instead of in the form of a bill.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, during the long history of Parliament a number of bills have been completely changed and altered, some even beyond description. I am not suggesting that that will be the scenario for this particular bill, a draft of which has just been tabled; but I do suggest that there could be a substantial difference between the final form of the bill and the form in which we see it this evening. There is that possibility. It is government policy, however, to effect a change in the form of the second chamber of Parliament. From time to time senators have suggested their proposals for Senate reform, just as members of the other place have suggested many ideas for reform of that chamber, which is also necessary.

Hon. Senators: Hear, hear.

Senator Perrault: I do not think that a single senator in this place would suggest that we should maintain the status quo. All of us are aware that any institution, in order to remain effective, relevant and useful, must change from time to time. What we want to do is to make sure that constitutional changes are going to be constructive and helpful, and that they are going to advance the parliamentary process. That is the total dedication of honourable senators.

We must consider whether the proposals before us meet these objectives. I feel sure that honourable senators of all parties will be vigorous in their activities on the proposed committee in considering the draft proposals and in advancing the ideas which they espouse. Honourable Senator Denis asked: Why did we not have solely a white paper and, by implication, why should we not have a bill later in the year? I can only say that this was a decision made by the government to add, I think, some credibility to the white paper process. A number of white papers have been produced in the past. Indeed, I think four or five have been produced on the subject of parliamentary reform and constitutional reform.

There was a determination on the part of the Right Honourable the Prime Minister and the government to carry this one step beyond previous processes—in other words, to produce a bill which would lend itself to more specific and detailed consideration by a committee, and more detailed and specific consideration of the options which may be open. I think that is the only explanation that any government can give.

Senator Flynn: Is it true that Senator Davey was instrumental in this decision?

Senator Denis: It looked as if it were part of the amending of the Constitution. If Phase II is defeated or it fails to proceed, what are we going to do? We are going to stick with Phase I, which means the federal government will lose half of the nomination of senators.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, that is an observation the honourable senator may well wish to make before the joint committee when the joint committee has been established. Frankly, we are looking for a positive response in various ways from the provincial governments. In my view, there has to be a positive response from these other jurisdictions for this package to be carried forward to implementation in anything approaching its present form.

Senator Walker: Cheer up, honourable senators. I remember spending an hour listening to Mackenzie King during the 1925 election in a little town in Bruce County. He was going to abolish the Senate, and I can tell you he held the attention of the farmers for about 15 minutes, and then they lost interest. We never heard another word of it.

My leader and honourable senators on this side have felt all along, just as the Leader of the Government has, that there have to be changes. There is no question about that. It is not right that one party should be represented here by 15 senators, while the other party should be represented by 75. That is one thing. Whether the Senate should be an elected house is another question.

Let me say this, that Mr. Pierre Elliott Trudeau's initials are P.E.T. If this legislation goes through, people will be appointed for one term; then, if they are good boys, they will be appointed for another term, and all that sort of nonsense. In other words, we are going to have PET's pets. They are the only people who are going to last for two terms. It is obviously ridiculous.

When the government is licked—as it is inevitably going to be licked in the forthcoming election—we will then have some proper reform of the Senate, not these ridiculous high-flown ideas that we have listened to today.

We must not forget this: Nero fiddled while Rome burned, and now Trudeau is fiddling with constitutional reforms to take the heat off the economic chaos which we are in—a million unemployed clamouring for jobs and, what is most important of all, galloping inflation.

[Senator Perrault.]

My question of the Leader of the Government is: Don't you think that we are worrying unnecessarily about this latest of many fantastic ideas?

Senator Perrault: Well, Senator Walker may make his own judgment on this subject. Indeed, he has commenced the debate on the subject, and he may wish to speak again or conclude his speech next week. I am not critical of that fact. He always has strongly held opinions on subjects.

● (2040)

I want to say that the government is sincere in its determination to effect changes in the Canadian Constitution and Canadian institutions which are going to serve to improve and unite the country. I can only say that by any standard the motives are, I think, fully supportable.

Senator Smith (Colchester): I did not wish to make a comment, but merely to ask a question for information. I thought I heard the Leader of the Government say, when he said he was tabling the document entitled "The Constitutional Amendment Bill," that he was also tabling some other documents in connection with it. I wonder if he would mind telling us what the other documents are, and what the effect of them is.

Senator Perrault: They are explanatory notes of the type that accompany budget presentations in synopsis form. They are auxiliary documents to aid in the explanation of the bill. I understand they were delivered to all senators' offices today. If the honourable senator has not yet received his, I shall undertake to obtain a set for him.

Senator Smith (Colchester): Thank you. I would appreciate that. I have not received it, although from experience I have learned that sometimes things are in transit for quite a while, so it may be on the way.

Senator Williams: When this institution becomes the House of the Federation will it lessen the participation of the monarchy?

Senator Perrault: There is reference to Her Majesty the Queen in the bill that has been tabled this evening. The Queen remains the Sovereign of Canada. There is really no change in the role of the Queen as Sovereign of this nation.

Senator McDonald: Honourable senators, I am a little confused especially since the question asked by Senator Manning with respect to the debate on this bill. In both this house and the other house, a bill is normally debated on second reading. I am confused as to whether this bill is going to have second reading or not; whether it is to be referred to committee after first reading. Did it receive first reading tonight, and does it go directly to committee, or do we have second reading following which it will be referred to committee? At what stage does this bill go to committee?

Senator Perrault: As far as a discussion of the subject in the Senate is concerned, the proposal was advanced by the Leader of the Opposition—a proposal which, is perfectly valid and supportable—that debate on the subject of the white paper and the bill which we have tabled in this house could well take place in connection with the resolution to participate in a joint committee. So there will be ample opportunity for a debate in this house on the subject of these documents.

Senator Forsey: I should like to ask for a little clarification of that. Do I understand the Leader of the Government is replying to Senator McDonald's question by saying that it is not a question of second reading before this goes to committee? I want to be clear on that.

Senator Perrault: Yes, honourable senator, that is correct.

● (2050)

FOREIGN AFFAIRS

CANADA-UNITED STATES NEGOTIATIONS ON FISHING BOUNDARIES—QUESTION

Senator Marshall: Honourable senators, while it is obvious that constitutional reform has priority, there are other problems facing the nation, and I wonder if I may ask the Leader of the Government if he can give us a progress report on the negotiations between Canada and the United States which took place today to reconcile their differences with respect to fishing rights within the 200-mile limits, keeping in mind the need to establish reasonable negotiations between those two neighbouring countries.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, I must take the question as notice. No late information has arrived with respect to those negotiations which, as the honourable senator has pointed out, have taken place within recent hours. I shall endeavour to bring that information to the Senate at tomorrow's sitting. If time permits this evening perhaps I shall have a short statement to make, depending on the information received.

THE ECONOMY

YOUNG CANADA WORKS PROGRAM—QUESTION

Senator Marshall: Honourable senators, I would like to move to another area of concern. In view of the fact that unemployment figures emphasize the growing percentage of youth unemployment, now at 15.6 per cent in Canada, would the Leader of the Government use his influence in cabinet to point out the need to consider the allocation of additional funding under the Young Canada Works program? Since I am sure he will agree with the short-term measures that must be taken, will he direct his attention to this matter and report cabinet's reply at the very earliest opportunity?

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, the subject of student unemployment has been a source of concern and interest on the part of the Government of Canada for many weeks. I shall certainly communicate to the responsible minister the views of the Honourable Senator Marshall with respect to this subject.

SPORTS

CBC TELECAST OF WORLD CUP SOCCER GAMES—QUESTIONS ANSWERED

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, the following questions have been received from the Honourable Senator Bosa:

1. Considering the great following there is in Canada for the game of soccer, why did the CBC not broadcast the World Cup Games now being played in Argentina?

2. What is the criteria which the CBC uses to determine whether or not to broadcast sporting events of this nature?

3. Is the CBC aware that the World Cup Games are presently shown on closed circuit TV in the major cities of Canada at admission prices ranging from $10 to $15?

4. Will the CBC arrange to show, on its network, at least the final game which will take place this coming Sunday, June 25?

The answer is as follows:

Rights for 1978 World Cup Soccer were awarded by the Federation Internationale de Football Association (FIFA), the world soccer body, to the various broadcasting organizations around the world which had formed a consortium for the purpose of obtaining them. The CBC among others was invited to bid by OTI (Organization de la Television IberoAmericana), which held rights for the Western Hemisphere, but was outbid by Magnaverde, which is a New York Company which deals primarily in closed circuit television. Magnaverde bought North American rights to the World Cup matches and entered into an agreement with Mascia Enterprises of Canada which is presenting the games on closed circuit television. Mascia Enterprises was prepared to offer the CBC some games that were not being carried on closed circuit, but would not include the semi-final and final matches which the CBC was interested in carrying. Price was not discussed because the CBC could not accept the selection of games Mascia Enterprises was willing to make available.

Senator Bosa: Honourable Senators, I have a supplementary question to ask of the government leader. The final game will be played next Sunday in Buenos Aires. Will the CBC consider broadcasting that particular game, in view of the fact that it did not broadcast any of the preceding games?

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, in my reply I stated that price was not discussed because the CBC could not accept the selection of games that Mascia Enterprises of Canada was willing to make available. Earlier on in the negotiations, Mascia Enterprises apparently offered to make certain games available to the CBC for broadcast, but because it was not able to make a selection the CBC terminated negotiations. That seems to be the essence of the reply.

Senator Bosa: But it is still possible for the CBC to negotiate with that company for the final game in view of the considerable following that there is in Canada for the sport in question.

Senator Perrault: Honourable Senators, it may well be that it is possible for the CBC to negotiate, but there seems to be a lack of willingness on its part because of some other aspect of the negotiations which it apparently feels has been unsatisfactory.

Senator Forsey: If I understood the answer of the Honourable Leader of the Government a while ago, this enterprise declined to make the final game or the semi-final game available to the CBC. Was I correct in my hearing of that, or have my ears failed me once again?

Senator Perrault: Allow me to repeat part of the text, honourable senators:

Mascia Enterprises was prepared to offer the CBC some games that were not being carried on closed circuit, but would not include the semi-final and final matches which the CBC was interested in carrying. Price was not discussed because the CBC could not accept the selection of games Mascia Enterprises was willing to make available.

The honourable senator may have information which indicates that Mascia Enterprises is now willing to negotiate on the semi-final and final games, but apparently it has not been up to this time.

Senator Rowe: May I ask the Leader of the Government if he could find out from the CBC, directly or indirectly, how it is that these difficulties the CBC experiences in respect of international soccer tournaments do not seem to apply in respect of international golf, curling, and other games of one kind and another? This is a mystery that people such as myself and others of the probably several million people in Canada interested in soccer would like to have explained. There must be some explanation somewhere.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, I do not wish to place myself in the position of attempting to explain all the myriad aspects of CBC policy. However, it can be said that because of the great interest in World Cup soccer apparently it has been possible to arrange theatre television for that important international event at prices, as the Honourable Senator Bosa pointed out, ranging from $10 to $15 a seat. I understand that the same type of theatre alternative is not available ordinarily for those who wish to watch golf and certain other sports on television.

PROVINCE OF BRITISH COLUMBIA

PROPOSED TREATMENT FOR HEROIN USERS—QUESTION ANSWERED

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, Senator Austin asked a question on May 16 with respect to the drug program in the Province of British Columbia. The honourable senator was mistaken in his assumption and in the question which he put to the deputy government leader. I can now report as follows:

The provincial government in British Columbia has introduced legislation to implement a treatment relating to individuals dependent on heroin or related chemical substances.

That form of treatment will be administered by medical specialists and individuals will have, we understand, the full benefits of due process of law including rights of appeal and recourse to the provincial statutory judicial review procedure.

The government considers the plan to be innovative and looks forward to examining the success of it.

● (2100)

AGRICULTURE

WHEAT EXPORTS—QUESTION

Senator Olson: I should like to ask the Leader of the Government whether he will give an undertaking to obtain an updated report on the present situation with respect to the "catch-up", if that is the right word, on wheat exports, particularly those going out of the west coast ports? This is a very important matter now, as we are coming to the close of the crop season and in view of the additional significant sale to the Republic of China.

Senator Perrault: I shall take that question as notice.

ENERGY

POSSIBLE CHANGE IN CONTROL OF ASSETS OF HUSKY OIL COMPANY—FURTHER QUESTION

Senator Austin: Honourable senators, on June 15, I addressed a question to the Leader of the Government in the Senate with respect to the heavy oil properties in Alberta and Saskatchewan owned by Husky Oil. At that time I pointed out to the leader that the government, in the case of Denison Mines, and again in the case of Home Oil, had made it clear that it was not prepared to see control pass to foreign-owned entities.

I should like to ask the Leader of the Government whether, indeed, the government is prepared to see, in the case of Husky Oil, a foreign-owned entity obtain control of those particular properties which are held by Husky Oil, or whether the government will follow its previous precedents?

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, the decision as to the final conclusion of these takeover bids rests with the shareholders of Husky Oil Ltd., subject to review by the Foreign Investment Review Agency. It would be inappropriate to in any way prejudice the FIRA process. However, the government is concerned that Canada's heavy oil deposits be developed on a timely basis. In this regard developments will be closely scrutinized in the next few weeks prior to any decision being taken with respect to the government's position on the proposed takeover.

NATIONAL FINANCE

PROVINCIAL SALES TAX—QUESTION ANSWERED

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, on June 14 the following question was asked by Senator Asselin:

Could the government leader tell the Senate whether the Honourable the Minister of Finance, Mr. Chrétien, has decided to accept either one of the two proposals made by the Quebec government regarding the sales tax?

In reply to that question, Mr. Chrétien has indicated in House of Commons Debates that he is proceeding with Bill C-56 without amendment. As honourable senators are aware, this is a matter of history now. He had earlier announced that the federal government will be making payments to Quebec taxpayers this year of up to $85.

COMMUNICATIONS

BELL CANADA RATE CHARGES FOR PAY TELEPHONE CALLS—
QUESTION ON THE ORDER PAPER ANSWERED

Question No. 12—By Senator Marshall:

1. What is the rate charged by Bell Canada for pay telephone calls (a) in Newfoundland, and (b) in other parts of Canada?

2. If the rate charged in Newfoundland differs from those charged elsewhere in Canada, what is the explanation therefor?

Reply by the Minister of Communications:

Insofar as the Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission is concerned:

1. (a) Bell Canada does not provide telephone service in the Province of Newfoundland.

(b) The rate for pay telephone service in Bell Canada's serving area elsewhere in Canada (parts of Quebec, Ontario and the Northwest Territories) is ten cents ($0.10) per call.

2. Not applicable.

Note:

Telephone service in the province of Newfoundland is provided by three different companies.

1. The Newfoundland Telephone Company Limited, a Bell Canada subsidiary operating under the jurisdiction of The Board of Commissioners of Public Utilities of the Province of Newfoundland, serves approximately 70% of the population of the Province. Its rates for coin-operated telephones are ten cents ($0.10) per call for pre-pay type coin telephones, and twenty cents ($0.20) for post-pay type telephones that provide for free emergency calls. The number of telephones of each type in operation are about equal.

2. Telephone service in the town of Labrador City is provided by The Labrador Telephone Company Limited, a subsidiary of The Iron Ore Company of Canada, operating under the jurisdiction of The Board of Commissioners of Public Utilities of the Province of Newfoundland. We have no knowledge of the rates charged for pay telephone service by this company.

3. Canadian National Telecommunications, a department of the Canadian National Railway Company, provides telephone service to the remainder of the population on the island of Newfoundland. It operates under the jurisdiction of the CRTC and its rate for pay telephone service is ten cents ($0.10) per call.

NATIONAL REVENUE

CUSTOMS DUTIES APPLICABLE TO FOLKLORIC COSTUMES
IMPORTED BY ETHNO-CULTURAL ORGANIZATIONS—QUESTION
ON THE ORDER PAPER ANSWERED

Question No. 13—By Senator Bosa:

1. What is the position of the Department of National Revenue with respect to customs duties on folkloric costumes imported into Canada by ethnocultural organizations?

2. Is the Department of National Revenue contemplating changes to the Customs Tariff regulations to permit the duty-free importation of folkloric costumes by ethnocultural organizations?

3. How many requests for exemption from duty have been made to the Department of National Revenue?

4. What is the duty now charged on folkloric costumes?

5. Are folkloric costumes imported into Canada commercially?

6. Do the criteria used in establishing the duty on folkloric costumes imported by ethnocultural organizations differ from those used for commercial importers?

Reply by the Minister of National Revenue:

1. Under the terms of Tariff Item 97012-1, as set out in paragraph 4 of the Budget Resolutions tabled in the House on 10 April, 1978, a drawback of 99% of the duty payable is authorized on costumes or parts thereof, designed or decorated in a manner reflecting a specific ethno-cultural heritage, when for the use of bonafide ethno-cultural groups who require such costumes for the public manifestation of their ethno-cultural heritage.

2. The Department of National Revenue is prepared to allow a drawback of 99% of the duty payable on folkloric costumes, under the terms of Tariff Item 97012-1, when the necessary regulations have been established by the Governor in Council.

3. Departmental files show no record of any requests for exemption from duty on folkloric costumes during 1976 or 1977. One such request has been received in 1978.

4. Ethno-cultural costumes are dutiable at time of importation according to material viz.

Tariff Item		British Preferential Tariff	Most Favoured-Nation Tariff	General Tariff	General Preferential Tariff
52305-1	(Cotton)	22½p.c.	22½p.c.	35p.c.	N/A
53305-1	(Wool)	22½p.c.	25 p.c.	55p.c.	N/A
54305-1	(Vegetable fibres, in part)	22½p.c.	22½p.c.	35p.c.	N/A
55303-1	(Silk)	25 p.c.	25 p.c.	45p.c.	10p.c.
56300-1	(Man-made fibres)	20 p.c.	25 p.c.	50p.c.	N/A
56805-1	(Knitted)	20 p.c.	27½p.c.	55p.c.	N/A

Except that in the case of any such goods that are the manufacture of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, the Channel Islands, the Isle of Man, or Eire, the Most-Favoured-Nation Tariff applies.

It will be noted that the Budget Resolutions introduced in Parliament on April 10, 1978 provide for 99 per cent drawback under item 97012-1 for these costumes which qualify thereunder.

5. Yes.

6. As noted in the answer to question 4, the rate of duty is established by the material of which the costumes are made, and this criterion will be applied identically to importations, whether by ethno-cultural organizations or commercial importers. Eligibility for drawback under Tariff Item 97012-1 will depend upon the intended use of the costumes in Canada.

CANADIAN NATIONAL RAILWAYS CAPITAL REVISION ACT RAILWAY ACT

BILL TO AMEND—THIRD READING—DEBATE ADJOURNED

Senator Langlois moved the third reading of Bill C-17, to amend the Canadian National Railways Capital Revision Act and the Railway Act, and to amend and repeal certain other statutes in consequence thereof.

The Hon. the Speaker pro tem: It is moved by the Honourable Senator Langlois, seconded by the Honourable Senator Perrault, P.C., that this bill be now read the third time.

Is it your pleasure, honourable senators, to adopt the motion?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

The Hon. the Speaker pro tem: Adopté, carried.

[Translation]

The Clerk Assistant: Bill C-17, an act to amend the Canadian National Railways Capital Revision Act and the Railway Act, and to amend and repeal certain other statutes in consequence thereof.

[English]

Senator Smith (Colchester): Honourable senators, I wonder if I might inquire at what stage we are on this particular bill at the moment. Is Senator Langlois going to speak, or is he satisfied with just making the motion?

Senator Langlois: As I understand it, the bill has been read the third time.

The Hon. the Speaker pro tem: Honourable senators, when this order was called, the Honourable Senator Langlois moved the third reading of the bill, and since no other senator indicated that he wished to speak, I put the question, and then I said, "Adopté, carried."

Senator Smith (Colchester): That happened with unusual expeditiousness, I am sure, because I thought I had my ear well tuned to what was going on. I then suddenly thought I heard His Honour the Speaker say what he has just now announced.

I am sure honourable senators would like to be aware of what the situation seems to be from our point of view. It was anticipated that Senator Roblin would make a speech on third reading. We received a message not long ago, although it may have happened some time ago, that, although Senator Roblin had been confirmed on a flight from Winnipeg to Ottawa, a flight which would get him here in plenty of time to attend tonight's sitting, when he showed up at the airport, Air Canada refused him the seat. Consequently, he found himself in Winnipeg, and he can hardly make his speech from there.

The Hon. the Speaker pro tem: If Senator Smith would allow me, I would suggest this time that he speak on a question of privilege to explain certain aspects, because the bill has already been passed. If he wishes to give some additional information, I would suggest that he do so by means of a question of privilege.

Senator Smith (Colchester): I would be delighted to accept the timely suggestion of the Speaker. If I had anticipated I would immediately follow Senator Langlois, I might have been more alert and intervened in time to avoid this particular situation.

On the question of privilege, I would certainly like to convey to the house that according to our information, which I am informed came from Senator Roblin himself, this is what happened and this is why Senator Roblin is not here. He informed me previously that he intended to make a speech on third reading. If by some slackness I have impaired his opportunity to do so, I should like to see what can be done to remedy the situation, whatever the technical process may be.

The Hon. the Speaker pro tem: Honourable senators, as I indicated, as far as the Chair is concerned, the bill has already passed. On a question of privilege, Senator Smith has given some further information. It is now up to the Senate to decide. Perhaps it would be in order at this time to have the sponsor of the bill make a motion. Otherwise, I will have to stand by what has already happened—that is, the bill has been read a third time. If there is no unanimous consent to adjourn this debate, this will be the situation.

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, I am sorry, but I do not think I am in a position to replace the Chair. The Chair has already declared this bill passed. It is passed, and there is no way I can change that.

Senator Grosart: Perhaps I might suggest to honourable senators that it is not unusual in this chamber for us to revert to a previous point in our proceedings. It is often done, and I would respectfully suggest that it would be appropriate to move that we revert to the motion for third reading, because obviously there has been an oversight. Senator Smith has made it very clear on a point of privilege that it was the understanding of a senator who is absent that he would be in a position to speak on third reading.

I therefore move that we revert to the motion for third reading.

Senator Forsey: I second that motion.

● (2110)

Hon. Léopold Langlois: Honourable senators, I have no objection to reverting to the motion for the third reading of this bill. In fact, I do have some comments to make on it.

I thought I had exhausted the subject in the two speeches I have already made on this bill. I was even reproached the other day for having spent too much time in closing the debate on the motion for second reading. Having explained the bill, in moving the motion for second reading, I then spent some 55 minutes in closing the debate. As a consequence, there is not much left to be said.

However, I should like to bring to the attention of the house that, following the second reading debate in the chamber, a lengthy and interesting debate took place in the Transport and Communications Committee, which met five times to consider the bill, hearing some nine witnesses in the process. The first witness was Dr. Bandeén, President and Chief Executive Officer of the Canadian National Railways Company. Dr. Bandeén was accompanied by Mr. J. H. Spicer, Corporate Vice-President; Mr. G. M. Cooper, Vice-President and Secretary; and Mr. S. D. H. Thomas, Corporate Comptroller. Following Dr. Bandeén and his associates, the committee heard from Mr. J. Earl White, National President of the Canadian Railways Employees' Pension Association.

The Committee then heard from the Honourable Otto Lang, Minister of Transport, who was accompanied by Mr. Ralph MacGougan, his Assistant Deputy Minister, Finance. Then, at the request of your humble servant, Mr. G. W. Poznanski, Director of the Pension Benefits Division, Department of Insurance, was invited to appear before the committee. Mr. Poznanski gave us his comments on the testimony offered by Mr. White, following which he answered the many questions posed by members of the committee. Following Mr. Poznanski's evidence, Mr. White was recalled and asked for his comments.

The final witness heard by the committee was Mr. A. K. MacLaren, Executive Director of the Canadian Trucking Association.

Bill C-17 was the subject of very thorough study indeed, both in the house and in committee. After having heard this extensive and very interesting evidence, the committee decided unanimously to report the bill without amendment. It did, however, include two recommendations in its report, and those are recommendations with which I am in full accord.

The first recommendation concerned the possibility of unfair competition vis-à-vis the trucking industry as a result of acquisition of equipment and unfair pricing by Canadian National Railways resulting from the better financial position in which it will find itself after the passage of this bill. That recommendation is in full accord with what the minister said in the other place when he requested that the Canadian Trucking Association report to him and to the Canadian Transport Commission any unfair practices or unfair competition, or "dirty tricks", as it was described by the truckers in the committee of the other place. I am in full accord with that recommendation. I think it is fair warning to the minister to be mindful and watchful of what transpires in that respect.

The second recommendation had to do with the railway employees' pension plans. In this respect, I include both the CP and CN plans. The recommendation draws the attention of the government, and of the railway companies, to the importance of having the liabilities of the pension funds well-funded and well-managed. The committee did hear evidence from Mr. Poznanski to the effect that these plans were administered and managed in accordance with the law, and in accordance with the regulations made thereunder.

That, in substance, covers what transpired in committee. To the credit of this chamber, the study by the Transport and Communications Committee of this bill was one of the best studies I have had the occasion to participate in during my time in Parliament, which includes 13-some years in the Senate and 12 years in the other place. That is something of which I am proud. Senate committees generally do a splendid job, a thorough job, and this one was no exception.

I do not think there is very much more I can say in support of the motion for third reading. I will be very pleased, of course, to hear from my colleagues on the other side, especially my honourable friend, Senator Roblin, and the distinguished Chairman of the Transport and Communications Committee, Senator Smith (Colchester). We have a splendid chairman in the person of Senator Smith, and I hope he will be with us for a long time to come.

The Hon. the Speaker pro tem: Honourable senators, there was a motion by Senator Grosart, seconded by Senator Forsey, requesting that the Senate revert to the original motion for the third reading of this bill. A motion of this kind requires unanimous consent, so I shall now put the question—

Senator Langlois: Mr. Speaker, I agreed to revert to the motion for third reading. That being so, I do not think the motion is now necessary.

The Hon. the Speaker pro tem: I should like to have the matter perfectly clear. Do I understand that the Honourable Senator Langlois, the sponsor of the bill, agrees that the Senate now revert to the motion for third reading of the bill?

Senator Asselin: He had already agreed.

Senator Langlois: I have already agreed, Mr. Speaker, and in fact spoken on the motion for third reading.

The Hon. the Speaker pro tem: It is moved by the Honourable Senator Langlois, seconded by the Honourable Senator Perrault, P.C., that this bill be now read the third time.

Is it your pleasure, honourable senators, to adopt the motion?

Hon. George I. Smith: Honourable senators, I am grateful for two things: First, that the Senate should bear with me in the dilemma in which I found myself; and, secondly, for the extremely kind and complimentary words of the Deputy Leader of the Government, which I appreciate very deeply.

An Hon. Senator: They are very deserving.

Senator Smith (Colchester): I had not intended to speak on this matter at all this evening; rather, I had intended to speak some time after Senator Roblin. However, since Senator Roblin is not here, and since we have reached the stage that we now have, I should perhaps make the few comments I had intended to make.

I do not want in any way to disagree with what Senator Langlois has said with respect to what transpired in committee. His remarks were thorough and complete. I do not think Senator Roblin, who is not a member of the committee but who did attend all of its meetings on this bill, disagrees with anything the committee did either. And certainly it would not become me to do so, and I do not have any wish to do so. There are, however, two or three points I want to draw attention to, one of which was the subject of some comment before the committee and was, indeed, the subject of one of the paragraphs in the report by way of observation or recommendation. It has to do with the trucking industry.

● (2120)

It will be recalled, of course, that there is a paragraph in the report which draws particular attention to the apprehensions of the trucking industry that it might be subjected to unfair competition from CN by virtue of some of the financial resources and benefits which might accrue to CN as a result of this bill. I should say that some of the information that we obtained was to the effect that if this bill passes—and perhaps even if it does not—CN expects to expend by way of capital moneys in the trucking arm of its activities something like $51 million during the next five years. This, of course, is a very substantial expenditure and exceeds that which all but four or five of the independent companies in Canada could make. I suppose this is one of the sources of apprehension—apprehension that this would make pretty rough competition for the independent trucker whether he be large or whether he be small.

In this respect also I should draw attention to the fact presented to the committee that the greatest expenditure required of trucking companies is their capital investment in rolling stock which, to use their own rather picturesque words, “rots away every five years.” So when they have to compete with capital expenditures of $51 million over a five-year period, this does indeed pose for them a very serious question.

There is also the fact that when CN purchases franchises it becomes able to go into almost every substantial community in Canada by truck, by virtue of the distribution of the purchases it makes. When these franchises are operated in conjunction with the railway, which can go to a great many places in Canada—but, for some of us, not enough—you have some very substantial competition indeed. I think it is also desirable to emphasize, and to ask all honourable senators to keep in mind, that the independent truckers, for the most part, must operate entirely within the constrictions imposed by provincial jurisdictions, while the CNR can exploit its combined rail and truck franchise structure in a fashion which, in view of the truckers at least, creates most unfair competition.

I would also like to draw attention to the fact that the CNR indicates that over the next few years it is going to spend a very large amount of capital in improving its ability to serve some parts of the country, and it is a matter of considerable regret to those of us who live in the Atlantic provinces—not envying those who live in other parts of the country—that very little of this, indeed almost none of it, is going to be spent in our region. One would almost think from that fact and the replies given by some witnesses, when this question was put to them in committee, that everything is rosy in the Atlantic provinces with respect to railways, rolling stock and roadbeds. On behalf of those who live in the Atlantic provinces I should like to make it very clear that this is not so. And while there may be perfectly good reasons—and I have no doubt that there are—why large capital expenditures should be made to meet increasing traffic in other parts of the country, heavy capital expenditures are needed, and badly needed, to improve the railway facilities in the Atlantic provinces.

There is another point which was not made during the committee hearings, but which has since been brought to my attention. It concerns the fact that the CNR plans to spend about $250 million in the next five years in the field of communications. This is a very large sum of money, and creates concern for those of us who depend on the use of the telephone. Of course, there is a body which has to authorize what is proposed by CN, and I do not know whether that body will authorize it, but it is pretty clear, to some people at least—and I do not pretend to any first-hand knowledge of this, but I believe what I am saying to be well justified by such information as I do have—that it is the intention to spend a large proportion of that money on facilities, or installing new facilities, which are primarily to serve the larger centres of the country. That is understandable, but it should also be remembered that people who live in places other than the larger centres of Canada are just as concerned about having adequate communication facilities and systems at their disposal as anybody else. Indeed, today the ability to communicate quickly and accurately from any part of the country is a necessary adjunct to the development of that part of the country, and a necessary adjunct to the development of business and commerce. Anything which tends to denigrate these communication services which are available to the smaller communities of our country is something to be looked at very carefully.

[Senator Langlois.]

● (2130)

Now, this gets to be a somewhat involved argument as to how expenditure on servicing large areas can adversely affect the communications available in smaller areas, but really it runs something like this. The provision of what one might call bulk communication services to areas of large population allows the people who own those facilities to charge very inexpensive rates as compared with the rates that are charged in areas of less concentrated population. Thus, the people who serve the smaller areas are not able to take advantage of what one might call economies of scale in terms of the customers they serve and the volume of communications they carry. The ultimate effect of this is that the home subscribers and the small business subscribers in the smaller communities of the country find themselves in the position of sustaining the telephone networks of Canada without access to the more economic rates which might be offered by what some people call a bare backbone operation, such as is, I believe, contemplated by CN-CP.

Another point which was not made before the committee—although it could well have been, because certainly the chairman should have been aware of it—has to do with the passage of this bill resulting, or being likely to result, in a lessening of the opportunities available to Parliament to scrutinize the activities of the CNR. This is bound to lessen the influence of Parliament over CN's activities. When one considers the scope of those activities one realizes that there is certainly a wide spectrum of business covered by them.

Honourable senators, if you look at page 22 of Canadian National's annual report for 1977 you will find a list of its subsidiaries. There are 52 subsidiaries, the accounts of which are contained in the consolidated accounts of CN. There are 24 others in which the CNR has investments, or which are operated by CN with other companies. So there is a total of 76 subsidiaries and related companies besides the main organization of CN itself. It is pretty clear, therefore, that this Crown corporation reaches into a great many more aspects of our lives throughout the whole country than perhaps at first we readily realize. This, I feel, makes it all the more important that the scrutiny of CN by Parliament should be further facilitated rather than lessened.

I do not raise this in any way to oppose the passage of the bill, because, as Senator Langlois said, we have debated it at length and the committee has spent a considerable amount of time dealing with various aspects of it; but I do think it is a point which ought to be put on record as one to engage continuously the attention of Parliament in both houses.

Honourable senators, that completes the comments I had intended to make after Senator Roblin's speech, had he spoken, and which I have now made. I conclude by thanking you again for allowing the situation to be remedied so that this debate may continue and Senator Roblin is afforded an opportunity to speak tomorrow, should the adjournment of the debate be moved and the house agree.

On motion of Senator Grosart, for Senator Roblin, debate adjourned.

The Senate adjourned until tomorrow at 2 p.m.

THE SENATE

Wednesday, June 21, 1978

The Senate met at 2 p.m., Hon. Jean-Paul Deschatelets, P.C., Speaker pro tem in the Chair.

Prayers.

DOCUMENTS TABLED

Senator Perrault tabled:

Report of the National Farm Products Marketing Council, including a statement of expenses, for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1978, pursuant to section 16 of the Farm Products Marketing Agencies Act, Chapter 65, Statutes of Canada, 1970-71-72.

ENERGY

GARRISON DAM, NORTH DAKOTA—QUESTION

Senator Roblin: Honourable senators, I should like to draw the attention of the Honourable Leader of the Government to the fact that an appropriation bill is proceeding in the House of Representatives of the American Congress to provide funds for the completion of the Garrison Dam in North Dakota, a subject about which he and I have had conversation in the recent past. I should like to know if it is the intention of the Government of Canada to take any action with respect to the hearings that are proceeding in the United States on this matter.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, I must take that question as notice. I do not have that detailed information available.

Senator Roblin: If I may ask a supplementary question, could the honourable leader also ascertain whether it is the intention of the Government of Canada to enlist the support of the Government of Manitoba in any representations it might be making with the Congress or with others in the United States?

Senator Perrault: A supplementary inquiry will go forward immediately.

FOREIGN AFFAIRS

CANADA-UNITED STATES NEGOTIATIONS ON FISHING BOUNDARIES—QUESTION ANSWERED

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, yesterday Senator Marshall asked a question regarding Canada-United States negotiations on fishing boundaries. The information was not available yesterday, but it has become available this morning.

The question was:

I wonder if I may ask the Leader of the Government if he can give us a progress report on the negotiations between Canada and the United States which took place today to reconcile their differences with respect to fishing rights within the 200-mile limits—

The answer is that delegations from the two countries met Monday and Tuesday of this week to discuss a long-term fisheries agreement. While some progress was made, wide differences remain. But we are confident that future meetings can narrow those gaps. Progress can be made. Canada will be prepared to consider the resumption of reciprocal fishing.

PUBLIC SERVICE

MOVEMENT OF EMPLOYEES FROM SAINT JOHN, NEW BRUNSWICK—QUESTION ANSWERED

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, on May 23 Senator Riley asked why the Government of Canada is moving, as he said, "so many federal public servants out of Saint John, New Brunswick." He said, "I understand some employees of the Department of Transport are being moved to Halifax, and that some Revenue Canada employees are going to Newfoundland."

Senator Marshall: Good!

Senator Flynn: Oh, no. No.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, I can scarcely believe that there is a split in the opposition caucus on this subject.

Senator Flynn: I am saying that I would not want to go.

Senator Perrault: I am informed that there were only three employees concerned who were given the option of either remaining in Saint John or moving to Halifax. They chose to remain in New Brunswick.

THE CONSTITUTION

RENEWAL OF THE CANADIAN FEDERATION—QUESTION ANSWERED

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, a great rash of replies has come in recent moments.

On June 15, Senator Flynn, speaking about the renewal of the Canadian Federation, asked the following question:

What would be, in the opinion of the government, the rights and privileges, outside section 92, which are to be protected and which would need the consent of the provinces?

To identify, such as by reference to this or that section of the British North America Act, what are the rights and privileges granted by the act to the legislature or government of a province could be very difficult. For example, opinions may differ as to what sections constitute "rights and privileges" and what sections constitute matters "assigned exclusively to the legislatures of the provinces."

However, a discussion of what parts of the Constitution of Canada may or may not be amended by Parliament acting on its own may be found, in the view of the government, in the introduction to a document tabled in this house yesterday, intitled: "The Constitutional Amendment Bill", together with text and explanatory notes. I understand that a copy of the document has been distributed to all senators.

It should be pointed out that the phrase "may not be amended by Parliament acting on its own" is not, strictly speaking, equivalent to "would need the consent of the provinces," which is the wording used by Senator Flynn in his question.

The first phrase means that action would also be needed by Westminster and that, in asking Westminster to act, Parliament would, if it followed previous practice, seek a consensus of the governments of the provinces affected.

Honourable senators, perhaps we can keep the balance of the replies for tomorrow.

FOREIGN AFFAIRS

CANADA-UNITED STATES AUTO PACT—QUESTION

Senator Roblin: Honourable senators, I should like to address a question to the Leader of the Government with respect to the announcement last Friday by the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce about a special inquiry into the automotive pact that we have with the United States. Are the terms of reference of this study available?

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, the terms of reference have not as yet been made available. However, I shall undertake to bring a statement to the chamber about the proposed inquiry and provide any information which may be available.

Senator Roblin: Honourable senators, that reply encourages me to suggest to the honourable leader that he use his good offices to make sure that in those terms of reference there is a provision that will allow the commissioner to examine the possibilities of extending the geographical compass of this agreement from the central provinces in Canada to other provinces; and I am so bold as to suggest that Manitoba might be one.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, I can give the assurance that that constructive proposal will be brought to the attention of the minister responsible for the enterprise.

AIR CANADA

THREATENED STRIKE BY PILOTS—QUESTION

Senator Olson: Honourable senators, I should like to ask the Leader of the Government if there is anything new to report respecting the threatened strike by Air Canada pilots, and whether or not Air Canada will be announcing any contingency plans for alternative means of transportation, especially for those people who have made reservations with Air Canada over the very busy period of next week.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, I have no recent available information on the subject of the possibility of an Air Canada strike. As honourable senators are aware, initiatives are going forward to avert a work stoppage; but I think that to be of some importance to honourable senators, in view of the travel plans which will be necessary for next week, we should attempt to obtain information as quickly as possible. An inquiry will go forward during the next few minutes to find out if any useful information can be made available.

● (1410)

Senator Smith (Colchester): Honourable senators, I wonder if I might ask a supplementary question of the Leader of the Government. In view of the fact that many senators will have commitments which they have to keep in their home territories over the weekend, in view of the fact that there may be an Air Canada pilot strike which would prevent Air Canada from bringing honourable senators here next week, and in view of the fact that in some areas there are no alternatives to travelling by Air Canada—at least by air—is some special thought being given to dealing with such a problem?

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, Senator Smith has voiced sentiments shared by many senators. As I have stated, inquiries are under way at this very moment to determine what travel options may be available for the first of the week.

Senator Smith (Colchester): Perhaps I did not understand the honourable leader, or I did not phrase my question properly. I understood him to say that an inquiry is going forward, but I am concerned whether anything else is being done. In other words, is some positive action being taken to ensure that we will be able to return here next week?

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, the desirability of having some travel alternative available is part of the inquiry which is under way at the present time. Certainly, if any emergency transportation is to be made available to parliamentarians, honourable senators will share in those arrangements. The same treatment will be accorded to senators as to members of the other place.

NATIONAL REVENUE

DUMPING DUTY ON WIDE-FLANGE STEEL BEAMS—QUESTION

Senator Austin: Honourable senators, this question is addressed to the Leader of the Government. As the leader well knows, the Government of Canada rescinded the dumping duty in respect of the import of wide-flange steel beams for British Columbia and, I believe, Alberta. The effectiveness of that decision terminates at the end of six months, and I wonder whether the leader can, in view of the present market situation with respect to wide-flange steel beams, assure this house that that particular action will be continued for at least another six-month period.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, the question will be taken as notice.

CANADA WEEK

SLOGAN—QUESTION

Senator Godfrey: Honourable senators, I have a question for the Leader of the Government in the Senate.

Recently the country has been inundated with billboards and television commercials heralding the approach of "Canada Week" with a slogan designed to make every teacher of English grammar wince, and Senator Forsey have apoplexy, namely, "Canada, It's You and Me".

My question for the leader is: Does the government really think that it is impossible to stay united and grammatical at the same time, or does the slogan simply demonstrate the inadequacies of our educational system in English-speaking Canada? In the latter case, would the government consider establishing for certain officials of the Secretary of State Department a crash course in elementary English grammar to supplement their immersion courses in French?

Some Hon. Senators: Hear, hear.

Senator Perrault: I am sure that the honourable senator's advice, backed by a round of enthusiastic support, will come to the attention of the appropriate officials.

Senator Forsey: Can the honourable senator offer me any security against an attack of apoplexy?

THE CONSTITUTION

RENEWAL OF THE CANADIAN FEDERATION—QUESTIONS

Senator Flynn: Honourable senators, supplementary to the question to which the Leader of the Government replied earlier, does he suggest that the abolition of the Senate is something that could be done unilaterally by the federal Parliament, and does not involve any right or privilege granted to the governments or legislatures of the provinces?

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, the changes proposed in the draft bill tabled yesterday in this house are changes of a type which, it is believed, can be proceeded with unilaterally by the Parliament of Canada. However, in the spirit of co-operative federalism, the intention is to have full and widespread prior discussion with the provinces and with many Canadians of all political persuasions. I want to say again, and say very explicitly, that the government policy is changeable and everything is negotiable.

Senator Flynn: Do you feel that the government would go along with the proposed changes even if several provinces objected?

[Senator Austin.]

Senator Perrault: I can hardly conceive that if there is massive opposition to this proposal to alter one of our basic parliamentary institutions in the ways proposed, the government would wish to proceed with this measure in its present form. That is a matter of personal opinion.

Senator Smith (Colchester): Honourable senators, another supplementary, if I may. I should like to ask the Leader of the Government if, in the spirit of co-operative federalism, consultation with the provinces took place concerning the contents of the bill introduced yesterday, entitled: "The Constitutional Amendment Bill"?

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, as I endeavoured to explain yesterday, the bill which was tabled represents the determination of the government to place something tangible in front of the Canadian people and the provincial governments of Canada. These proposals can now be considered and discussed in tangible form at the forthcoming First Ministers' Conference in September. They can be discussed in at least some tangible form—if not, perhaps, in their final form—by members of both houses of Parliament. I repeat that if better solutions can be developed, the government will analyze those proposed alternatives very carefully and, if necessary, make the appropriate changes with Parliament's support.

Senator Buckwold: A supplementary to the question asked by the Leader of the Opposition. Should the Government of Canada in its wisdom decide to proceed with the constitutional amendment which would literally result in the abolition of the Senate as we know it, what would be the position of the government if the Senate itself were to reject the amendment?

I see Senator Grosart is, as usual, shaking his head. The fact is, that some of us feel very keenly about this matter, and I would be interested to find out whether we may be our own executioners. I apologize for not being here last night. This question may have been asked.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, the bill in its present draft form represents government policy. As far as the Senate is concerned, perhaps it can be stated more accurately that government policy supports the view that there be some degree of provincial participation in the second chamber of Parliament. However, the content of the measure before Parliament and before the Canadian people may not necessarily be in the final form of any bill which ultimately finds its way to Parliament, and indeed in any final bill developed by parliamentarians and which, in the regular process of our deliberations, will come before the other place and come before the Senate.

I would not wish to speculate what consequences would follow from a rejection by the Senate of a bill designed to alter radically the shape and nature of this chamber. It would be wrong to speculate at this time.

We do know that the Senate does have the right to consider measures which come to it from the other place and it does have a right to exercise a veto power. At the same time I am aware of the fact that parliamentarians who serve in this chamber are, above all, good Canadians and will take that action which is clearly in the interests of this nation, for the reducing of regional differences and the lessening of tensions and alienation in Canada. I have no doubt whatsoever that those who serve in this chamber will act clearly in the interests of the Canadian people in the ultimate.

● (1420)

Senator Smith (Colchester): Honourable senators, I should like to ask the Leader of the Opposition whether, in making that statement—

Senator Grosart: You are a little premature.

Senator Smith (Colchester): I am sorry, I was looking ahead to next fall. I regard it as inevitable that if the honourable gentleman occupies any position of leadership after the next election, it will be that of the Leader of the Opposition. But that is not what I rose to say.

I rose to ask the Leader of the Government whether he is indicating by his reply to Senator Buckwold that in his opinion the view of the government as to what is good for the country is necessarily the correct view and a view acceptable to the people of Canada.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, I have attempted to indicate over the past two days that we have before us in the Senate and in the other place a great challenge to do some constructive work on the subject of the Constitution. We will do that constructive work and I hope that down the line a consensus can be achieved which will be approved both by parliamentarians and by the Canadian people.

Senator Smith (Colchester): I must observe that today there does not seem to be as much good as usual in asking the honourable gentleman a question and expecting an answer in response to it. I asked him two questions which were capable of a straightforward yes or no answer, but in each case he insisted on delivering a dissertation which had little or nothing to do with the question but which enabled him, I suppose, to feel that he had delivered a homily to the members of the Senate and, no doubt, he was glad of the opportunity to do so.

Senator Bosa: I should like to ask the Leader of the Government in the Senate if he has any further information as to when the joint committee which is to study the proposed constitutional amendments is going to be constituted, and, if so, will that committee meet during the summer recess?

Senator Perrault: Honourable senator, I have no information as yet with respect to the exact date that the proposal will be advanced for a joint committee. I expect it will be before the end of next week. However, I hope to have some information available for honourable senators on that subject tomorrow.

Senator Flynn: Honourable senators, I have a pragmatic question which is somewhat related to the question just asked by Senator Bosa. If this joint committee and the Special Senate Committee on the Northern Pipeline should sit during the summer, would the leader agree to amending our rules so that changes in the membership of these committees could be effected by a notification thereof, signed by the whip, being filed with the Clerk of the House? That is the procedure followed in the House of Commons.

I would put the question to Senator Molson if he were here, but if the leader were to be in agreement with that procedure we could ask the committee to draft an appropriate amendment to our rules. This would make it much easier for these committees to operate should they meet during the recess.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, it may be necessary to undertake the initiative proposed by the Leader of the Opposition. Personally, I see a good deal of merit in the suggestion if those two committees should sit simultaneously.

Senator Flynn: Particularly if they are sitting during the recess, because if the Senate is not sitting we cannot make a motion for replacement of one member of the committee by another.

Senator Perrault: I feel that serious study should be given to the proposal. I see merit in it.

Senator Flynn: Immediately.

Senator Yuzyk: Honourable senators, I have a question to ask of the Leader of the Government. A few days ago I read in the papers that the Honourable Ron Basford visited the Queen, purportedly to discuss matters of either the patriation of the Constitution or something concerning the new Constitution. Would the leader have some information for this house regarding Mr. Basford's mission, and what was achieved in the course of that mission?

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, the Minister of Justice has reported to me that he had a very constructive, useful and amiable meeting with Her Majesty the Queen. The Government of Canada felt that it was very important that the Sovereign of Canada should be fully apprised of those changes anticipated for the Constitution of Canada. I understand that the meeting went very well. Of course, it was a private conversation and the exact contents of the meeting, as honourable senators can appreciate, cannot be made public at this time.

Senator Phillips: Honourable senators, is there any specific reason why the Governor General was not able to inform Her Majesty of the proposals?

Senator Perrault: Well, the Minister of Justice played an active role in the formulation of many of these proposals and knows in great detail the content of the draft bill and the white paper, and it was felt that he was the person who could discuss with Her Majesty the minute details of the proposal, and the rationale for the proposal. Her Majesty has a very lively, intelligent and informed interest in events which take place in the Commonwealth, and it was felt that she should have available to her this kind of detailed information.

Senator Forsey: Honourable senators, is it not true that the ministers of the Government of Canada are Her Majesty's Canadian ministers, and is it not quite normal that advice to the Queen and information to the Queen should be conveyed by a minister, one of her own Canadian ministers, to her? Am I not correct in this assumption?

Senator Perrault: Yes, honourable senator, of course.

Senator Flynn: You want to check your knowledge of the Constitution.

Senator Phillips: Lack of knowledge!

CANADIAN NATIONAL RAILWAYS CAPITAL REVISION ACT RAILWAY ACT

BILL TO AMEND—THIRD READING

The Senate resumed from yesterday the debate on the motion of Senator Langlois for the third reading of Bill C-17, to amend the Canadian National Railways Capital Revision Act and the Railway Act and to amend and repeal certain other statutes in consequence thereof.

Hon. Duff Roblin: Honourable senators, I feel obliged in the first instance to apologize for my failure to attend the sitting of the Senate last night when I had hoped to take part in this debate, and to report that I had with due diligence last Friday secured what I thought was a confirmed reservation, and, indeed, was a confirmed reservation, on Air Canada to get me here in time. I must also report that when I got to the airport I found there was no room for me on the airplane and that they were unable to honour the guarantee that had been given. I offer that as an excuse, as a reason for my failure to be present here last night.

I am also afforded the opportunity of thanking Senator Smith (Colchester) and all members of this house for their courtesy in dealing with the rules in such a way as to allow me to make a brief statement this afternoon. I wish I were certain that the content of what I have to say is worthy of that consideration.

● (1430)

However that may be, there are a few more things I want to say about this bill. On second reading I gave reasons why in my opinion the arguments advanced in support of the legislation really failed to convince me that the bill was required for any vital purpose of the Canadian National Railways or, indeed, of the Government of Canada. I report to the House that the examination in the committee did little to remove my doubts. In my view, it advanced no new arguments for the bill, but it did do much to substantiate the case which I had concluded could be made against it.

First, I want to say that the hearings were very helpful to me. I thank the chairman and the members of the committee, because they gave me an unrestricted opportunity to take part in the proceedings. I express as well my appreciation for what I thought were the frank and responsive attitudes of the witnesses, from the Canadian National Railways and the government and from other sources, who appeared before the committee.

I propose now to touch briefly on some of the major items which were of concern to me. The depreciation argument is probably a difficult one to follow. We all know that the government intends, or that the Canadian National Railways intends, to write off, or indeed has written off, the $808 million of depreciation. This is important because, as Senator Godfrey was quite right in stating when he spoke in this debate the other day, this action reduced the earnings or increased the loss, and it certainly affected the debt-equity ratio that appeared on the balance sheet.

My concern before the committee, as it was in the House, was whether we were being asked to approve an unreasonable write-off, or whether it was indeed a reasonable thing to do. In my view, the testimony on depreciation that was placed before the committee brought out the point that if the Canadian National Railways had followed the same write-off policy on depreciation as the Canadian Pacific Railway, in respect of the three categories of depreciation which were under debate on second reading and in the committee, the amount would not have been $808 million; it would have been $125 million. I must also say that in their written statement to the committee, the Canadian National stated that during the period from 1940 to 1955 the Canadian Pacific had a supplementary depreciation account of $629 million. That fact was thrown into the mix. But, in my opinion, we had no evidence as to its relevance to the particular point that was under discussion. I must think there is very little relevance.

Indeed, the testimony of the witnesses from the Canadian National Railways was to the effect that they were not making an argument to justify the transfer of debt based on the level of depreciation. That is an important change in the impression that I received about the importance of the depreciation matter, because the railway made it clear that they did not think there was that direct link between depreciation and what was in the bill. In fact, they said they were not basing their argument on the justification to transfer the debt because of the level of depreciation.

I conclude, therefore, that the Canadian National Railways may provide any depreciation they think may be justified. But it is certainly no argument at all, and no reason why we should support the bill. Indeed, we have their word for it. I am willing to take it.

With respect to access to money markets and the discipline of the market, which formed an important part of the advocacy for this bill, we found in the committee that this was really an unsatisfactory aspect of the rationale of the bill. Neither the president of the Canadian National Railways nor the Minister of Transport made any claim when being questioned that the bill would improve or better the financial ratings of the railway—except perhaps in the sweet bye-and-bye. I am not surprised that they took that view, because the Canadian National Railways has an AA rating, as we know, at the present time. It is of interest to know that the Canadian Pacific Railway, which they want to emulate in terms of their balance sheet, has also an AA rating. So it is quite understandable that the witnesses were cautious in claiming that they would be able to do any better than an AA rating when this bill came in, and, indeed, I think that anything better is most unlikely. So on that count the need for the bill is not apparent to me.

What of access to market, apart from the rating that is offered? I think no case was made. The witnesses strengthened my feeling that the implied guarantee of the Government of Canada is the real credit rating basis for the national railway. Indeed, when Dr. Bandeem confirmed that the government approves the Canadian National capital and operating budget, what more needs to be said about that particular aspect of where the financial strength of the CNR is coming from at the present time.

It follows that, if the argument is right in this case, the suggestion that the railway needs the Canadian Pacific debt-equity ratio as an essential instrument in their financing purposes also falls completely to the ground.

Canadian National finance is not based on a debt-equity ratio like the Canadian Pacific at all. If it were, after this bill is passed CNR might be persuaded to do without the government back-up or the government safety net. That would be the logical conclusion that one would come to. But when I questioned the witness as to whether he would accept this proposal, he resolutely declined to do so. Therefore, if the debt-equity ratio is not central to the issue in the need to cancel the $808 million-worth of debt and substitute common equity for it, then I fail to see the requirement for the legislation that is before us now.

On a further point of some consequence, I want to refer again to the forecast that was submitted in the committee by the Canadian National Railways with respect to their five-year projection of profits. It might interest the house to know that the assumption they made in making that forecast was quite reasonable. They had an inflation rate in Canada varying from 5.3 per cent to 6.2 per cent over the period. Perhaps that is a little on the bright side. They had an inflation rate for the United States of 4.9 per cent to 6.6 per cent—perhaps also optimistic, but I did not quarrel with it. They said that there would be an increase in freight rate charges that the consumers would bear in their projection of 4.7 per cent per year; that they looked forward to an increase in volume of 3.7 per cent per year; and that they had calculated an interest rate of 9½ per cent. You can always argue about the basis on which profit projections are made, but under the circumstances I saw no reason to quarrel with these. However, these figures showed that without this bill, as I said on the previous occasion, over the next five years the Canadian National profit would be over $400 million. With that profit, and without this bill, the debt-equity ratio, if left alone for the natural effluxion of events, would substantially improve from 61½ per cent to 55½.

But I want to go further than that, because I say that the Canadian National Railways is highly likely to do very much better than this forecast indicates. If we accept the forecast itself as being reasonable—and in the circumstances I do—then they will do very much better. I make that assertion because of the policy that the government has established of compensating the railways for their non-compensatory activities that the government mandates for them—this user-pay proposition and the consequences that flow from it, that you cannot ask users to pay for non-compensatory activities which the government mandates the railways. We have had one example of that already, as members of the house know, in connection with VIA, the passenger service. The witnesses in committee confirmed that VIA was worth about $100 million, plus or minus, on the profit side over the five-year period. Honourable senators can see that this is a substantial element of their profit forecast.

● (1440)

I submit to the house that the financing of VIA by the government is just the beginning. We have a clear policy that non-compensatory rates will be made good to the railway, and certainly the railway has a very clear expectation that that will happen.

The most prominent item under this heading is the Crowsnest funding by the government, which I believe is to come. One of the key recommendations of the Hall commission on grain handling and transportation in western Canada rests on the proposal that the government should pay the railways the difference between the actual cost of moving export grain and what they receive under the Crowsnest rates.

The next step was to establish the quantum, how much, and another body took an interest in that. It was run by a gentleman called Snavelly, a cost fact-finding commission with respect to the movement of Crowsnest rate grain, and they established the variable costs of moving that grain. Variable costs, of course, are costs that are calculated before any reference is made to capital requirements, or to regular overhead requirements that the railway may have anyway.

When the Minister of Transport was before the committee he gave a very clear statement of what his policy was. He said he would carry out in full the recommendations of the Hall commission that the railways be compensated in relation to grain. If honourable senators look at page 13:6 of the testimony before the committee, they will find the full statement that the minister made. At the same time, the president of the railway made it clear that he would be claiming $64 million, plus or minus, as his share of those costs which are not so far covered by any government subsidy.

To make the argument a little more solid, the Minister of Transport, speaking last Friday in Saskatoon, is reported by the Canadian Press as indicating that the federal government would soon accept a major recommendation of the Hall commission regarding compensation to railways to cover the actual costs of moving grain.

That is a pretty clear statement, and it is a pretty clear forecast of what we may expect. This item is to be over and above payments that have already been established with respect to the purchase of grain hopper cars, for the rebuilding of lines in western Canada, and one to two other things that are already in force.

So I suggest to the chamber that the federal government is fully committed in this respect. I think they are also similarly committed to pick up the non-compensatory costs of the Canadian National Railways in Newfoundland amounting to $22 million, a figure which was confirmed by the Canadian National Railways as their estimate of what the sum involved would be. In the relatively near future the Canadian National Railways can reasonably expect added government payments to cover these non-compensatory costs of up to $86 million per year. Honourable senators can imagine what that will do to the forecast of the profit of this railway before this bill passes, to say nothing of what will happen after it passes.

We were also told by Dr. Bandeen in committee—I found it interesting; it is on page 12:67—that the Canadian National Railways lost a rather large sum last year in operating its express services, namely, some $33 million. Dr. Bandeen, in my view, quite properly followed that statement with the comment, “We should be able to compete or else get out of it.”

That is another factor that should be taken into account. This house should not underestimate the determination of Dr. Bandeen to do a first class job in running the Canadian National Railways. I am quite willing to take his word that he will either make that express operation financially respectable or else he will find some other way of discharging that obligation or getting out of the very large deficit which the present operation involves.

I conclude that one could add some portion of the $33 million to the Canadian National profit and loss account in the next five years when—and I say “when” advisedly, and not “if”—this hemorrhage is staunch.

Therefore, this bill has little to commend it—certainly little to commend it to me. So far as depreciation is concerned, they can do what they like. They say it is not relevant to the bill, and I am willing to agree with their view on that, although it is debatable. It is clear, I think, from what we heard in committee, that the debt-equity ratio is not an issue on which anything in particular hinges insofar as the financing of the railway is concerned—either the rate of money it may get, or its access to the money market—and I think we could also conclude that the profit prospects are seriously understated, or underestimated, because of the $86 million per year, or some amount approaching that figure, that we may expect to be paid to the railway in line with present stated government policy, very clearly reiterated by the minister before the committee and confirmed by his statement in Saskatoon last Friday. When we add the possibilities of reducing the loss in the express department, on which Dr. Bandeen has given his opinion, I think the railway has a bright future. Indeed they say so themselves, and I am willing to take their word for it.

Now they want this bill. Well, I shall simply resume my seat while making the comment that they are asking this house to paint the lily unnecessarily and I think we should decline the invitation.

Motion agreed to and bill read third time and passed, on division.

[Senator Roblin.]

THE ESTIMATES

REPORT OF NATIONAL FINANCE COMMITTEE—DEBATE ADJOURNED

The Senate proceeded to consideration of the report of the Standing Senate Committee on National Finance on the estimates laid before Parliament for the fiscal year ending March 31, 1979, which was presented on Wednesday, June 14, 1978.

Hon. Douglas D. Everett moved that the report be adopted.

He said: Honourable senators, before I begin, I should like to congratulate the honourable Senator Roblin on what I consider was a succinct and lucid speech on a bill of some considerable complication. I listened to a number of the arguments, but found his the easiest to understand and, I believe, the most persuasive.

We are dealing here with the examination by the National Finance Committee of the spending estimates of the Government of Canada for the year ending March 31, 1979. This book, Estimates for the Fiscal Year Ending March 31, 1979, as honourable senators are aware, is some three inches thick and details expenditures of in excess of $48 billion.

● (1450)

As honourable senators will understand, it is very difficult for any group of people, no matter how they may be buttressed by staff and expertise, to wrap their minds around $48 billion, and the Auditor General of Canada has stated that the Parliament of Canada is having difficulty in doing so. You will note, therefore, that the report we have put together is a short one. It is short because it tries to do only that which can reasonably be done by a committee of the Senate—or, indeed, by a committee of the House of Commons—in respect of spending of this magnitude. It is because the estimates involve such huge amounts of money that the National Finance Committee embarked some time ago on detailed examinations of the operations of government departments, which is an undertaking that I believe has proved, and will continue to prove, to be worthwhile. The committee is now completing its study of the Department of Public Works, and has already commenced its study of the Department of Regional Economic Expansion.

In dealing with these estimates I will be brief, and mention only some highlights in which I think honourable senators will be interested.

There is a good side to the government's intentions in all this spending. The planned spending target for this fiscal year of 1978-79 is $48.8 billion, which represents an increase of 9.8 per cent over the spending of last year of $44,450 million.

That is within the nominal increase in the rate of growth of the GNP, which is estimated to be 11 per cent. If we compare that to previous growth estimates, we find that in 1973-74 the increase over the previous year was 22.7 per cent; in 1974-75 it was 28.3 per cent; in 1975-76, 18.4 per cent; in 1976-77, 10.2 per cent; in 1977-78, 8.2 per cent; and in 1978-79, as I have said, it is 9.8 per cent. Therefore, the rate of increase of spending by government has been decreasing. In addition to that the expenditure by the federal government in these estimates on actual goods and services—that is, without taking into account transfer payments to individuals and other jurisdictions—will be 30.9 per cent of budgetary costs, which is down from 31.4 per cent in the previous year.

Man-year increases have been held to six-tenths of 1 per cent this year over last year, despite the fact that the labour force in Canada in that period is estimated to grow at 2.4 per cent.

Honourable senators will recall that the Standing Senate Committee on National Finance made a strong recommendation against net voting in government spending. This has now been discontinued in six cases. There are five cases left to go, and we understand that the government is going to discontinue the practice in those five cases.

That is the good side of the estimates, but we ought to have a brief look at the other side, at some of the implications of this spending, and we ought to start by examining the major increases and the major decreases in spending this year over last year.

The major decreases are as follows: Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation will reduce its spending by $569 million, due to repayment of loans; Energy, Mines and Resources will save $224 million because of reduced oil compensation payments; the CNR, because of the refinancing that Senator Roblin was discussing earlier, will require $154 million less; the Canadian Transport Commission will save $122 million because the subsidy that is paid to it will be paid to VIA Rail; and the Federal Development Bank, due to reduced loans and repayments, will save $80 million.

The major increases, on the other hand, are as follows: hospital and extended health care, up $999 million; old age security and guaranteed income supplement, up $487 million; Canada assistance plan, up $347 million; medicare, up $121 million; family allowances, up $83 million; public debt charges, up $1,150 million; post-secondary education supplements and bilingualism education, up $58 million; unemployment insurance payments, up $371 million; and Department of National Defence purchases of equipment and increased personnel costs, up $331 million.

What is interesting in all this is that the decreases are, in almost every case, one-time decreases, and are all very undependable—in other words, we cannot look forward next year to those decreases—yet every one of the increases is probably repeatable in some form and in some magnitude in the following year, so at this stage the outlook for spending is not all that good.

Let us look further at the man-year increase of six-tenths of 1 per cent. That means that year over year the addition was only 1,848 man-years, but it should also be recognized that 1,276 of those man-years belonged to the Department of Veterans Affairs, and were transferred to the provinces when the veterans' hospitals were transferred to that jurisdiction. In addition to that, while the number of man-years is only up six tenths of 1 per cent, the federal government personnel costs have gone up by 11.3 per cent.

We should also look at the public debt. The gross debt of Canada in 1977 was $67 billion. The estimated gross debt in 1978 will be $76½ billion. Our annual interest charges are $6½ billion and, as I said, they have increased by $1,150 million in the last year alone. Since the early debt is the first to roll over, and since that early debt is at lower interest rates, without increasing the debt we will increase the cost of carrying it.

Finally I want to express some concern over spending targets. The government has stated that its spending will not increase faster than the increase in the nominal rate of growth of the gross national product. They are to be congratulated for that because it is a departure from what we had before. I have given the decreases in expenditure over the last five or six years. I feel the government is to be congratulated for taking that on and fulfilling it.

● (1500)

However, this raises a new issue in examining these spending estimates because that target can be accomplished in two ways. It can be accomplished by a reduction in actual spending; it can also be accomplished by reducing income. Let me explain how. Last year the Export Development Corporation, for example, decided to finance its activities through private borrowings instead of through government appropriation. That meant a saving in the estimates of $365 million. The La Prade heavy water plant was delayed for one year. That was a saving in last year's estimates of $72 million.

The committee has noted that the delaying of a number of smaller capital projects has reduced the estimates, but they will reappear at a later time and be part of spending at that time. Last year we transferred tax points to the provincial governments. That reduced the increase in planned expenditures of the federal government by two per cent.

I am not saying that anything is wrong, but I am saying that where there is an expenditure target we must be careful in ensuring that the realization of that target actually means a reduction in expenditure, and is not a transfer of revenues of the kind that I have just listed.

This puts a new obligation on Parliament, in looking at government spending, not only to look at the blue book of estimates, but to look very carefully at the annual budget of the government to see that both sides of the equation are balanced and that expenditures are not reduced by adding them into the budget.

On motion of Senator Grosart, debate adjourned.

The Senate adjourned until tomorrow at 2 p.m.

THE SENATE

Thursday, June 22, 1978

The Senate met at 2 p.m., Hon. Jean-Paul Deschatelets, P.C., Speaker pro tem in the Chair.

Prayers.

INCOME TAX ACT

BILL TO AMEND—FIRST READING

The Hon. the Speaker *pro tem informed the Senate that a message had been received from the House of Commons with Bill C-56, to amend the statute law relating to income tax and to authorize payments related to provincial sales tax reductions.

Bill read first time.

The Hon. the Speaker pro tem: Honourable senators, when shall this bill be read the second time?

Senator Perrault moved, with leave of the Senate, that the bill be placed on the Orders of the Day for second reading on Monday, June 26.

Motion agreed to.

DOCUMENTS TABLED

Senator Perrault tabled:

Report of the President of the Medical Research Council, including accounts and financial statement certified by the Auditor General, for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1978, pursuant to section 17 of the Medical Research Council Act, Chapter M-9, R.S.C., 1970.

Report on proceedings under the Canada Labour Code, Part III (Labour Standards), for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1978, pursuant to section 75 of the said Code, Chapter L-1, R.S.C., 1970.

INTERNAL ECONOMY, BUDGETS AND ADMINISTRATION

REPORTS OF COMMITTEE BUDGETS TABLED

Senator Laird, Chairman of the Standing Committee on Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration, tabled reports approving budgets of the following committees:

- Banking, Trade and Commerce,
- National Finance,
- Foreign Affairs,
- Northern Pipeline (Special).

(For text of reports, see today's Minutes of the Proceedings of the Senate.)

REPORT APPROVING SALARY REVISIONS TABLED

Senator Laird, Chairman of the Standing Committee on Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration, tabled a schedule of authorized salary revisions for certain Senate positions, effective April 1, 1978, as approved by the Standing Committee on Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration, at its meeting of Thursday, June 22, 1978.

BANKING, TRADE AND COMMERCE

COMMITTEE AUTHORIZED TO MEET DURING SITTING OF THE SENATE

Senator Langlois, with leave of the Senate and notwithstanding rule 45(1)(a), moved:

That the Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce have power to sit while the Senate is sitting on Wednesday next, June 28, 1978, and that rule 76(4) be suspended in relation thereto.

Motion agreed to.

BUSINESS OF THE SENATE

ADJOURNMENT

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, with leave of the Senate and notwithstanding rule 45(1)(g), I move that when the Senate adjourns today it do stand adjourned until Monday, June 26, 1978, at 8 o'clock in the evening.

In moving this motion to adjourn to Monday evening, we have taken into consideration the fact that we have at long last received from the other place Bill C-56, to amend the statute law relating to income tax and to authorize payments related to provincial sales tax reductions, and the fact that the main supply bill will pass the other place tonight. In addition, it is expected that Bill C-36, to amend the Export Development Act, will reach us early next week.

The committee schedule for next week is already heavy, and for that reason we are suggesting that the Senate should sit on Tuesday evening in order to leave Tuesday afternoon free for committee meetings.

On Tuesday the Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce will meet at 10 a.m. and probably 2.30 p.m., to hear the minister on the subject matter on Bill C-56, to amend the statute law relating to income tax and to authorize payments related to provincial sales tax reductions. The Joint Committee on Regulations and other Statutory Instruments will meet at 9.30 a.m.; the Standing Senate Committee on National Finance has called in camera meetings for 9.30 a.m. and 2.30 p.m. to consider its report on the Accommodation Program of the Department of Public Works. The Health, Welfare and Science Subcommittee on Childhood Experiences will meet at 4 p.m.

On Wednesday there will be meetings of the Banking, Trade and Commerce Committee at 9.30 a.m. and 2.30 p.m. on the subject matter of Bill C-57, the Banks and Banking Law Revision Act, 1978. Also on Wednesday there will be a meeting of the Standing Senate Committee on Agriculture when the Senate rises, and the National Finance Committee will hold another in camera meeting with respect to its report on the Accommodation Program of the Department of Public Works.

On Thursday the National Finance Committee will meet in camera at 9.30 a.m. to continue its consideration of the aforesaid report. At 9.30 a.m. on Thursday the Banking, Trade and Commerce Committee will continue its study of the subject matter of Bill C-57, and the Joint Committee on Regulations and other Statutory Instruments will meet at 11 a.m.

● (1410)

[Translation]

Senator Flynn: Might I ask the assistant leader if that program is meant to precede the summer adjournment of Parliament, and, if so, whether it is expected that the Senate will be able to pass all those bills, and the committees to complete the work they have been entrusted with from here to Friday of next week? As I understand it, the objective of the government is to adjourn for the summer on June 30. Is it expected that the Senate will have to sit beyond that date?

Senator Langlois: In reply to the question of the honourable Leader of the Opposition, I must say that is exactly what is expected—that is, a summer adjournment at the end of next week, possibly Thursday, or probably Friday. There is hope the Senate can dispose of the work I have just outlined for next week. That is precisely why we have suggested that the Senate come back for Monday evening.

Senator Asselin: If we adjourn on June 30, when will the Senate resume its sittings in the fall?

Senator Langlois: The Senate would resume its sittings when Parliament does, possibly early in the fall, but I cannot give you the date for the time being.

Senator Asselin: Does the Leader of the Government have a date in mind, so that we shall know when we are to come back in the fall?

Senator Perrault: No, the Leader of the Government cannot say.

[English]

Senator Asselin: Perhaps the Leader of the Government should answer the question.

Senator Perrault: The government is now reviewing a range of dates on which Parliament may be reconvened after the summer recess. Certainly, there is an intention to have the recess commence at the end of next week, but, of course, honourable senators are aware that the first priority is to make sure that legislation is given proper and detailed consideration. The reconvening of Parliament will be at some point in the fall, but the exact date I cannot present at this time.

Senator Flynn: Which fall, the fall of the government?

Senator Asselin: Would it be before October 15?

Senator Perrault: There is a very real chance it will be just before October 15.

Senator Flynn: On the same subject, may I ask the Chairman of the Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce if he expects that his committee will be able to complete, before next Friday, the workload that has been assigned to it? There are at least four bills before the committee, if I am not mistaken.

Senator Hayden: I can tell my friend that we do not expect to complete our study of the bank bill because there is not enough time, even if our sittings were to run into the month of July. Witnesses who have indicated that they wish to make submissions have also indicated that they will not be ready until towards the end of July or the beginning of August. Therefore, we have ruled out the possibility of being able to complete the study of the bank bill before the fall.

The bankruptcy bill, which is in committee, is to stand until the fall because several of the companies or institutions that wish to make submissions will not be ready to do so until after June 30, and they have requested that they be heard early in the fall.

We expect to table the report of the committee on the study of the subject matter of the competition bill next week. When it is tabled here, some explanation will be given, if the Senate permits. Then it will have to stand until the fall.

On Bill C-56, the income tax bill, I would expect that after the committee hears the Minister of Finance on Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock, we will be able, later that day, to table our report on the subject matter of the bill.

On Bill C-59, which is a companion piece of income tax legislation, we will be ready on Tuesday of next week to table a report on the subject matter of the bill. There is no indication yet as to whether that bill will come forward from the House of Commons before the end of June, so I cannot tell you what its course may be after that.

● (1420)

Senator Flynn: At this time, therefore, the chairman does not contemplate that the committee will sit during the recess?

Senator Hayden: If the urgency of sitting during the recess can be indicated, we have, of course, established a precedent in the past, when we have sat during a recess.

Senator Lang: May I ask a question of the Leader of the Government, which is really basically a supplementary question to the question put by the Leader of the Opposition a week ago?

Senator Langlois: We are not on the Question Period. We are on Notices of Motions.

Senator Flynn: Is it on the motion?

Senator Langlois: Is this a question on the motion?

The Hon. the Speaker pro tem: I was wondering if the question has to do with the motion now before us, which is that the Senate do adjourn until Monday next, June 26.

Senator Lang: No.

Senator Marshall: Honourable senators, with respect to the bills to be dealt with, I wonder if I could ask Senator Hayden whether it is expected that Bill C-56 should be completed and receive royal assent by June 30. Is this a demand from the other place?

Senator Hayden: I see no reason why not.

Senator Marshall: Would Senator Hayden clarify what he means when he says he sees no reason why not?

Senator Flynn: It does not depend on him.

Senator Marshall: Would the Honourable Senator Hayden say that the other place is demanding that the bill be completed by June 30 and receive royal assent?

Senator Hayden: If the other place is demanding, all the Senate committee will do is, as and when the bill itself is referred to committee, deal with it very expeditiously, the reason being that we have already completed study of the subject matter.

Senator Perrault: It is hopeful expectation.

Motion agreed to.

NORTHERN PIPELINE

SPECIAL COMMITTEE AUTHORIZED TO SIT DURING ADJOURNMENTS OF THE SENATE

Senator Langlois, with leave of the Senate and notwithstanding rule 45(1)(i), moved:

That the Special Committee of the Senate on the Northern Pipeline have power to sit during adjournments of the Senate.

Motion agreed to.

[Translation]

LEGAL AND CONSTITUTIONAL AFFAIRS

CHANGE IN COMMITTEE MEMBERSHIP

Senator Flynn, with leave of the Senate and notwithstanding rule 45(1)(i), moved:

That the name of the Honourable Senator Wagner be substituted for that of the Honourable Senator MacDonald on the list of senators serving on the Standing Senate Committee on Legal and Constitutional Affairs.

Motion agreed to.

[Senator Langlois.]

[English]

SENATE COMMITTEES

MEMBERSHIP CHANGES DURING SUMMER ADJOURNMENT— NOTICE OF MOTION

Senator Flynn: Honourable senators, with leave of the Senate and notwithstanding rule 45(1)(i), I move:

That during the coming summer adjournment of Parliament changes in the membership of Senate Committees may be made by notification in writing to the Clerk of the Senate by the Leader of the Government in the Senate, or any senator named by him, with respect to government members, and by the Leader of the Opposition in the Senate, or any senator named by him, with respect to opposition members; and

That such changes in the membership of Senate Committees shall be recorded in the Minutes of the Proceedings of the Senate when Parliament resumes.

The Hon. the Speaker pro tem: Is leave granted, honourable senators?

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators—

The Hon. the Speaker pro tem: May I put the motion first?

Senator Flynn: His Honour has asked whether leave is granted.

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, I regret that I have to oppose leave being given at this time.

Senator Flynn: No objection.

Senator Langlois: This is a serious matter, which deserves consideration. I have discussed this with the Leader of the Opposition. He simply has to put it as a Notice of Motion, which will be considered early next week.

Senator Flynn: That is agreed.

The Hon. the Speaker pro tem: Is that agreed, honourable senators?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

AGRICULTURE

COMMITTEE AUTHORIZED TO PUBLISH AND DISTRIBUTE REPORT ON THE CANADIAN BEEF INDUSTRY

Senator Argue, Chairman of the Standing Senate Committee on Agriculture, with leave of the Senate and notwithstanding rule 45(1)(e), moved:

That the Standing Senate Committee on Agriculture be authorized to publish and distribute a report on its inquiry into the Canadian beef industry, as soon as it becomes available, even though the Senate may not then be sitting.

Motion agreed to.

THE CONSTITUTION

RENEWAL OF THE CANADIAN FEDERATION—QUESTION ANSWERED

Senator Lang: Honourable senators, I should like to ask a question of the Leader of the Government in view of our imminent adjournment for the summer recess. My question relates to and is really a supplementary to a question asked by the Leader of the Opposition one week ago. The question deals with the powers of the federal government to amend the British North America Act unilaterally under section 91(1). I know we have a very definite opinion from our constitutional expert in the person of Senator Forsey. Could the Leader—I assume the government is acting upon legal advice from the Department of Justice—furnish this house, hopefully before we adjourn for the summer, with any opinion that the government has from the Department of Justice as to the powers of the government to amend under section 91(1) of the B.N.A. Act?

I note in Senator Flynn's question that he asked the opinion of the government. I would like that amplified so that it is not only an opinion of the government, but an opinion of the Department of Justice. My leader's reply was that he would have a statement made available to this chamber. I would hope that the leader might be able to furnish us with a copy of a legal opinion from the authority which is responsible for advising the government in these matters.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, I am pleased to inform Senator Lang that Senator Flynn's question was answered yesterday afternoon. The reply is to be found at page 892 of Hansard. I would be most pleased to receive his opinion on the views provided by the Ministry of Justice on that subject.

● (1430)

Senator Flynn: I don't think you answered the question as to whether the government has an opinion from the Department of Justice on this very point, and whether that opinion could be tabled.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, by way of clarifying my reply, the information I received was prepared by the Minister of Justice and, in fact, represents an opinion received from the Minister of Justice on that subject. If Senator Flynn requires further explanatory material or a firmer position which can be tabled in the form of a document, an inquiry will go forward. That is all I am able to say at this time.

Senator Flynn: Is the government prepared to refer the question to the Supreme Court?

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, I can give no such commitment on behalf of the government that there will be a referral of this matter to the Supreme Court. Indeed, in view of the response received from the Honourable Ron Basford, Minister of Justice, there would appear to be no inclination on his part to undertake any referral of that kind.

Senator Flynn: No inclination. That is a good one.

AGRICULTURE

WHEAT EXPORTS—QUESTION ANSWERED

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, on June 20 a question was asked by Senator Olson with respect to an undertaking to be given to obtain an updated report on the situation with respect to what he referred to as the "catch-up" on wheat exports, particularly those going out of west coast ports.

In reply to that question, I can state that a study of recent grain movement statistics indicates that exports are well ahead of last year at the same date. Exports of all grains are 13 per cent above those of one year ago while wheat exports are some 17 per cent higher. In spite of all the problems encountered this year, export movements are approaching those of the previous record year.

The number of ships waiting at Vancouver has recently been in the range of 17-20, down from the 24-25 of several months ago. Although the number of ships remains higher than we would like to see, we must bear in mind the severe winter conditions experienced this year. Severe snow conditions over a large part of the southern prairies closed lines which are not normally subject to snow problems. It would be unreasonable to expect the system to recover immediately from this blow.

The transportation system is working well with car turnaround times down to 17-18 days, compared with 23 days as late as two years ago. It is expected that the ambitious Canadian Wheat Board program will be completed this summer in time to embark on another similar program for next year.

FOREIGN AFFAIRS

CANADA-UNITED STATES AUTO PACT—QUESTION ANSWERED

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, on June 21 a question was asked by Senator Roblin with respect to the Canada-United States Auto Pact. He asked that the efforts of the Leader of the Government in this respect be directed to making sure that the terms of reference of the special inquiry into the automotive industry allow the commissioner to examine the possibilities of extending the geographical compass of this agreement from the central provinces in Canada to other provinces. He suggested that Manitoba might be one of those areas to be brought within the terms of reference.

I took this matter up immediately with the Department of Industry, Trade and Commerce and have been provided with the terms of reference of the inquiry. I have been informed that this appears on page 2 of the terms of reference, and if it is possible to table this document I shall be pleased to do so.

Of particular concern to Senator Roblin will be subparagraph (c) on page 2 of that document.

Senator Flynn: Would the Leader of the Government in the Senate remind us of the name of the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce?

Senator Perrault: A very distinguished westerner, the Honourable Jack Horner.

Senator Flynn: You can have him.

Senator Perrault: He is a man of very firm conviction, and he is doing an outstanding job for Canada.

Senator Flynn: That was very funny.

ENERGY

GARRISON DAM, NORTH DAKOTA—QUESTION ANSWERED

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, Senator Roblin directed an inquiry yesterday regarding the Garrison Dam Project in North Dakota. He drew the attention of the Senate to the fact that an appropriation bill is proceeding in the House of Representatives of the American Congress to provide funds for the completion of the Garrison Dam in North Dakota.

He asked whether it is the intention of the government to take any action with respect to the hearings that are proceeding in the United States on this matter, and whether efforts were being made to enlist the support of the Government of Manitoba in any representations it might be making with the Congress or with others in the United States.

I have been informed that the House of Representatives of the Congress of the United States is not voting new funds for the Garrison Dam project; rather, they are voting for the expenditure of funds previously appropriated. I am informed that the Canadian Ambassador recently called on the State Department of the United States in connection with this matter, so that the Government of the United States is fully aware of Canadian views.

Senator Roblin, and others, will be aware that the Canadian government, through the embassy in Washington, recently facilitated the transfer of a letter from the Premier of Manitoba to the United States Congress expressing the concerns of the Province of Manitoba with this project. The Government of Canada and the Government of Manitoba, I am pleased to report, have been co-operating and consulting closely in connection with this matter for some years, and such co-operation and consultation will very definitely continue.

[Later:]

Senator Roblin: Honourable senators, I have been trying to digest the answer which my honourable friend the Leader of the Opposition gave me in respect of the Garrison Dam situation in the United States.

Senator Flynn: Hah, hah; that's a good one.

Senator Grosart: The leader of what?

Senator Roblin: What did I call him?

Senator Grosart: The Leader of the Opposition.

Senator Roblin: My profound apologies, but coming events do cast their shadows before them.

Senator Langlois: Great expectations!

Senator Roblin: However, addressing him by his proper title—and I apologize for the lapsus linguae—I ask the

[Senator Perrault:]

Leader of the Government whether the answer that has been given to him does not imply a certain sense of complacency in respect of the matter. The suggestion that the amounts in the House of Representatives bill are merely reinstatements of previous amounts is really the whole substance of the matter, because they were cut out by the President and now the house is trying to get them back in again.

I wonder if the leader could obtain from the Department of External Affairs more information about the kinds of presentation our representatives are making to the American government so that we can be reassured in respect of the matter.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, of course this is an important matter for all Canadians, wherever they live. I shall be pleased to undertake further inquiries to see if this additional material can be made available.

TRANSPORT

MOVEMENT OF GRAIN IN WESTERN CANADA—QUESTION ANSWERED

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, on June 14 Senator Roblin asked a question about the possibility of a new committee being convened to inquire into the movement of grain in western Canada. He asked when we might expect to get the terms of reference of that committee.

I now have those terms of reference. Unfortunately, they are too long to be read in full, but with the permission of honourable senators they could be printed as an appendix to today's Hansard.

The Hon. the Speaker pro tem: Is it agreed, honourable senators?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

(For text of terms of reference, see appendix, pp. 911-912.)

Senator Perrault: As well, I have been informed that there was an involved discussion on this matter at the meeting of the Standing Senate Committee on Transport and Communications on Thursday, June 15, when the minister was present.

NATIONAL REVENUE

DUMPING DUTY ON WIDE-FLANGE STEEL BEAMS—QUESTION ANSWERED

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, Senator Austin made an inquiry yesterday regarding the possibility of extending the action taken by the Government of Canada rescinding the dumping duty in respect of the import of wide-flange steel beams for British Columbia and Alberta.

At this time I am only able to repeat what the Minister of Finance said last Monday in the other place, which is that we are looking into the problem and examining the various alternatives which may be open. An announcement may be made in the very near future on the subject. When more specific information becomes available, it will be provided to honourable senators.

Senator Austin: Honourable senators, I wonder if I might direct a question to the Minister of National Revenue in connection with the issue of wide-flange steel beams coming into Canada.

The minister will appreciate that there are a number of fabricators in British Columbia who are directly affected by the policy of the government with respect to the remission of the dumping duty, and it will be very difficult for them to manage their businesses in a competitive and commercial fashion without early guidance from the government as to the continuity of the government's recision of the dumping duty. Accordingly, I would ask the minister whether he can advise us, on an interim basis at least, of the steps that may be taken to prevent a total disruption of the fabricating business in British Columbia and Alberta.

● (1440)

Senator Guay: Honourable senators, this has been discussed in cabinet. I realize this is a very important matter, and one of great concern to those two provinces in western Canada. I am also aware of the deadline thereof, and I hope to make an announcement before that date.

THE SENATE

CONSTITUENCY ALLOWANCES—QUESTION

Senator Marshall: Honourable senators, I have a question for the Leader of the Government. Some former members of the House of Commons recently had the distinction and honour of being appointed to the Senate, even though it might be only for a short period of time. In view of the fact that it appears there is going to be a delay in the calling of an election, and in view of the fact that senators in this position still have the duty of providing services to the many hundreds of thousands of their former constituents, and in view of the fact that senators do not have constituency allowances, is consideration being given to providing these senators with some allowance so that they are able to fulfill their responsibilities to their constituents?

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, Senator Marshall has certainly raised an interesting point that is worthy of examination. I can give the assurance that inquiries will go forward immediately to determine what should be done and what can be done under those circumstances. Senator Marshall has always been very attentive to the needs of his constituents, as have many other senators, and I quite understand his desire to continue his previous level of service. I know that many other senators are engaged similarly in active regional work.

Senator Flynn: Honourable senators, in view of the question asked by Senator Marshall, I wonder if the Leader of the Government could assure us that when he invited Senators Guay, Haidasz and Marshall to join us, he indicated to them the possibility that within a few weeks he would propose the abolition of this body. I want to be assured that they did not come here under false pretenses.

FISHERIES

DESIGNATION AS STANDING SENATE COMMITTEE—QUESTION ANSWERED

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, on May 10 Senator Marshall asked a question regarding the designation of fisheries as a standing Senate committee.

In the initial consideration of the proposal there appears to be a concern that it might involve a great deal of the time of senior officials of the department, who are already required to spend a good deal of time before the Standing Committee on Fisheries and Forestry of the other place. However, the Office of the Minister, Fisheries and Environment Canada, have not rejected the idea. They feel it is important that their officials be available for committee meetings of this kind, and indicate their availability to attend sessions of such a committee, if one is set up in the near future, although perhaps on a limited basis. So, from that standpoint, the idea certainly has the interest of the minister responsible.

Senator Grosart: Honourable senators, I should like to direct a question to the Leader of the Government which is supplementary to the answer which he gave to the question asked by Senator Marshall. It was, rather, a suggestion that the very important subject of fisheries might be referred specifically to a standing committee of the Senate. Did I understand the leader to say in reply that this would be in any way affected by the willingness or otherwise of officials of the Department of Fisheries to give time to such a committee, and, if so, does he seriously mean that the decision will be in any affected by whether or not officials of that department decide they want to come before a committee of the Senate?

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, my reply was only a partial one and was intended to indicate the present availability of the officials of the Department of Fisheries and the Environment to provide the information that any such committee might conceivably require. Of course, the decision to establish such a committee would be one for the Senate, and the Senate alone, to take. Only honourable senators have the right to decide whether they wish to leave the committee system the way it is at the present time, or to establish new committees. I appreciate the opportunity to clarify that point.

Senator Flynn: This indicates the danger of having a reply made by someone else.

Senator Perrault: We have not as yet had an opportunity to discuss with members of the Rules Committee the proposal that Senator Marshall has advanced. I hope it can be done before we leave for the summer recess. But, as I have said, my reply was only partial and informational, and I would not want to create any other impression.

Senator Marshall: Honourable senators, as a supplementary question, I wonder if the government leader is keeping in mind that there is an intention on the part of the government to designate a department of fisheries and oceans, or oceans and fisheries, and that this should be collaborated with in whatever changes are made.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, Senator Marshall has advanced a persuasive argument. His point of view should most certainly be placed before the Rules Committee of the Senate. I state again: The reply given earlier was incomplete, but it was all the information I was able to provide at that time.

AIR CANADA

THREATENED STRIKE BY PILOTS—QUESTION

Senator Olson: Honourable senators, I should like to direct a question to the Leader of the Government respecting the question I asked yesterday about what was then a threatened Air Canada pilots' strike. I understand the leader did not reply to that question because of some news reports that have come through since then. Could the leader tell us whether all of the outstanding issues, in principle as well as in specific detail, have been resolved to the completion of the present contract so that we will not be faced with a similar situation during the course of the contract the pilots are operating under now?

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, I had hoped to be able to present a full statement to the Senate this afternoon on the subject of the threatened Air Canada stoppage. However, that document has not yet been made available to me. Honourable senators will be pleased to know, of course, that air travel will continue as scheduled next week and into the foreseeable future, because the differences which threatened to cause a stoppage have, I understand, been resolved. Consequently, there will be no need for alternative transportation arrangements to be made. It is to be hoped that a statement can be obtained from the Minister of Labour on the situation, and that information will be provided as soon as it becomes available.

NATIONAL REVENUE

ILLEGAL IMPORTATION OF JEWELLERY INTO CANADA—QUESTION

Senator Austin: Honourable senators, while offering congratulations to the Minister of National Revenue for the very alert action of his officials in detecting an attempt to import into Canada illegally approximately $1 million worth of jewellery, I wonder if I could ask the minister whether that appears to be a single instance or whether there seems to be a pattern of attempts to import into Canada large quantities of jewellery illegally.

Senator Guay: Honourable senators, I have not received a complete report on this particular incident. All I know about it is that this person had been in Canada several times in the last few months. Other than that I am afraid I cannot give any information at all.

[Senator Marshall.]

NORTHWEST TERRITORIES

INSTALLATION OF TELEVISION RELAY EQUIPMENT—QUESTION

Senator Adams: Honourable senators, I should like to direct a question to the Leader of the Government about Telesat relay facilities at two places in the Northwest Territories, Coral Harbour and Chesterfield Inlet. Equipment for this purpose was supposed to have been installed last spring, but as yet nothing seems to have been done to provide television facilities to these two communities. I should like to know when it is hoped to have that equipment installed to provide TV services for those two communities.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, that question, because of its detailed nature, will be taken as notice and the information will be obtained.

● (1450)

TRADE

TEXTILES AND TEXTILE PRODUCTS—QUESTION

Senator Buckwold: Honourable senators, I should like to ask a question of the Leader of the Government. The Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce recently announced that Canada has concluded a bilateral restraint agreement with seven countries involving the import of textiles and clothing. This will result in the elimination of quotas, but, in fact, they will be replaced by these restraints.

In view of the interest of this chamber in this particular question, as demonstrated by the fact that it was a matter of special study, I should like to have more information on what is involved and how these restraints will work. I should also like some information on the plan of the government to maintain the import permits. Apparently, import permits will be required, and I have been asked by an importer whether the government, in giving these import permits, will allocate them, or whether the allocation of the restraints will be done by the countries concerned rather than by the Government of Canada.

I realize this question may be beyond even the vast knowledge of the government leader. I am quite prepared, therefore, to wait for his answer.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, I am pleased to take that question as notice.

THE HONOURABLE DUFF ROBLIN, P.C.

QUESTION OF PRIVILEGE

Senator Roblin: Honourable senators, before the Orders of the Day are proceeded with, I wonder if I might make a statement of personal privilege which I trust may be summarized in a letter I have written to the Clerk of Senate. The letter reads as follows:

June 22, 1978

Mr. Robert Fortier,
Clerk of the Senate,
The Senate,
Ottawa.

Dear Mr. Fortier:

On being summoned to the Senate in April, 1978 I spoke with the Parliamentary Counsel to the Senate, Mr. R. L. du Plessis, to express my expectation to continue to take part in my regular business activities which I described to him. I requested his opinion as to whether or not these activities would involve a conflict of interest in the terms laid down in the Senate and House of Commons Act.

In his reply Mr. du Plessis has now given his opinion that there was nothing in the Senate or House of Commons Act that would prevent me, as a Senator, in carrying on the business activities I described. I have also had the benefit of other informal views to the same effect.

It seems advisable to me that as a matter of personal privilege I should acquaint the Senate with these facts and inform them that I have provided you with copies of the correspondence in the matter.

With appreciation for your cooperation, I am,
Sincerely yours,

Duff Roblin

I trust that this statement of my personal position in respect of these matters may be considered appropriate to the Senate in the circumstances.

THE ESTIMATES

REPORT OF NATIONAL FINANCE COMMITTEE ADOPTED

The Senate resumed from yesterday the debate on the motion of Senator Everett for the adoption of the report of the Standing Senate Committee on National Finance on the estimates laid before Parliament for the fiscal year ending March 31, 1979.

Hon. Allister Grosart: Honourable senators, I am speaking to the motion of Senator Everett that the report of the Standing Senate Committee on National Finance on the estimates be adopted. As a member of the committee, I have no objection, of course, to the adoption of the report.

I shall follow Senator Everett's example and make my remarks brief. I shall also follow his example in speaking to what he designated as the good and the bad in the presentation of the spending intentions of the present Government of Canada. I was interested to hear that he had four good things to say and four bad things to say.

Senator Flynn: He always balances these things.

Senator Grosart: Yes, he balanced the score, and I am sure that honourable senators will not expect me to maintain that same balance.

Senator Flynn: We certainly do not want you to do that.

Senator Grosart: Senator Everett drew attention to the fact that the government's spending intentions at the moment amount to about $49 billion. One of the good things he had to say about that was that it represented an increase in government spending intentions for the current year of only 9.8 per cent over the actual expenditures, or, to be more accurate, the forecast expenditures for last year.

The honourable senator found that good, because it is much lower than the annual percentage increases in the expenditures of the present government for some years now. I suggest that that is hardly a reason for finding an increase of almost 10 per cent a good thing.

Senator Lamontagne: Is that in current dollars?

Senator Grosart: This is in the dollars in which the main estimates are prepared, which are current dollars. It is assumed that we are dealing with the same dollars when calculating the increase in one set of estimates over another.

Senator Langlois: Except for inflation, which could have intervened between the two sets of estimates.

Senator Grosart: There could be a degree of inflation, I suppose, but it would be small because actually we are dealing with expenditures, from main estimates to main estimates. However, in the calculations put before us we do have the forecast of expenditures, which would be very close to being the amount that appears in the public accounts as the actual expenditures for the last calendar year. There would be a small differential in respect of inflation in certain items, particularly goods and perhaps services, which had taken place in that interim period, but I think honourable senators will agree that it is not cause for complimenting the government because they have not continued the fantastic increases in expenditures that were seen in former years.

It is all very well to say, "The estimates are increased by only 9.8 per cent," which is the actual amount this year, because naturally one asks, "Increased from what level?" For example, there was an increase of 22.7 per cent in 1974-75 over the previous year, and there was an increase of 28.3 per cent in 1975-76 over the previous year. Then there was a drop to 8 per cent; it then went to 10 per cent, back to 8 per cent, and it is now up again to 9.8 per cent. For them to say now that these increases are not very great because they used to be 28 or 29 per cent is no cause for paying any compliments to the government.

Indeed, the fact is that we are on an upward trend once again. Once again we are seeing higher year-to-year increases in government spending than we have had in the last few years. There may be explanations for that, but they do not alter the fact that the trend is on the way up again. This is alarming, because those huge increases of 28 per cent and 29 per cent a few years ago were a major cause of one of the most serious problems facing us today, and that is inflation.

● (1500)

As honourable senators are aware, inflation is again on the way up. We had an official government estimate that the rate would be 6 per cent this year. The President of the Treasury Board revised that upward to 7 per cent. It is now generally revised upward to 8 per cent, and my own view is that that 8 per cent will be less than the actual inflation when all the figures are in for this year.

I am glad to see that a very distinguished senator with great expertise in this field, Senator Lamontagne, is listening carefully, because only the other day he made a speech, which was widely reported, in which he said that if we are not very careful, and even if we are, we may be faced not merely with another recession but with a depression. I believe I am quoting him correctly; I am certainly quoting the press version of his remarks. I know he has held those views for some time. Perhaps the spending intentions and spending decisions of the government have a good deal to do with the difficulty which Canada is facing at the present time in dealing with these serious problems.

The second point that Senator Everett found good in the estimates is a slight drop in government expenditures on goods and services—that is, taking out transfer payments, transfers to individuals and to governments, from the total figures and narrowing them down to basic expenditures on goods and services. The drop is small. This year that amount is 30 per cent of budgetary costs, which is down from 31.4 per cent last year. That, however, may not be a very realistic figure in view of the drastic change which took place last year in the relationship of transfer payments, particularly to provinces, on a year-to-year basis.

Senator Everett also found some satisfaction in the nominal decrease, or the low level of increase, in man-year expenditures projected by the government. According to the main estimates, that increase this year would be merely 0.6 per cent—that is, six-tenths of 1 per cent—which, of course, is very much lower than the levels of increase in government employment that we have been used to.

However, as Senator Everett himself pointed out, this is not a very realistic figure, in view of the fact that it is only accomplished by substantial transfer of manpower requirements and obligations from the federal government to the provinces. If those transfers were taken out, it is certain that that increase would be higher. So Senator Everett himself has qualified his optimism on that particular point.

The fourth thing that Senator Everett found good in the main estimates this year is a change that has taken place in what is called net voting. I will not go into it in detail because we have discussed it before in this house. It is a device that was used by certain departments to hide—that is the only word that can be used here—the actual expenditure by the government. Honourable senators are aware that net voting is merely a system by which a department makes levies, and spends them without a direct vote from Parliament authorizing the expenditure.

Senator Everett has found in some six cases that that practice has been discontinued by order of the Treasury Board. There are about five cases left, and we have the assurance of the Treasury Board that it is the intention to completely do away with net voting as practised in those cases.

There are some other cases of what might be called net voting, which the committee found to be understandable and, in accounting terms, permissible.

However, it will be remembered, in connection with these very estimates this year, that when the Senate inquired whether a particular department intended to carry on net voting despite the prohibition by the Treasury Board, the answer given was yes, the department did intend to carry on the practice. As a result of the activities of this house and one of its committees, the department changed its mind. That is an indication of the fact that the Senate does on occasion—and perhaps on many occasions—exercise an influence on the expenditure decisions and intentions of the government.

On the bad side—I am paraphrasing Senator Everett; he called it the “other side”. After indicating these four items on the good side, he suggested we should take a look at the other side. His first consideration, strangely enough, was for decreases in spending in this year's estimates. It may seem extraordinary that these should appear on the bad side of the estimates, but the reason is that these so-called decreases are highly suspect. In the first place, they are ad hoc, or one-shot, decreases which will not carry on into next year, and, as Senator Everett himself said on behalf of the committee, we have to watch out; the outlook for spending at this stage is not all that good.

In these decreases we notice some approaches that can only be called devices to hide the real nature of expenditures, and I will speak of them in a moment. The decreases that Senator Everett noted are: $224 million in Energy, Mines and Resources, because of reduced oil compensation payments; $154 million as a result of the CNR capital revision bill, which was discussed by Senator Roblin and others; $122 million which—

Senator Roblin: That is the gross amount. The net amount is much less.

Senator Grosart: That is right. The amount that has to be provided for in the estimates, whether as a requirement for a vote or, as in this case, a non-budgetary item, is $154 million less.

Senator Roblin: But the revenues go down too.

Senator Buckwold: Who wrote that speech—Senator Roblin or Senator Grosart?

Senator Grosart: No one wrote it. That is a very good question. I think it is quite obvious that no one wrote the speech. I am not reading a speech; that is not my custom. I am making some comments, and I am very happy, as I always am, to welcome interjections, particularly interjections which improve the comments I am making, as Senator Roblin's interjection has done. I am very glad that Senator Buckwold asked that question. It was a good question because it gave me an opportunity to give him two good answers.

Senator Buckwold: That is your opinion.

Senator Grosart: Before that interesting interjection, and before I was interrupted, I was about to say that there was a decrease in spending as a result of a lowering of the demands for funds on the Federal Development Bank.

• (1510)

As I indicated, Senator Everett and the committee found that these decreases were one-shot decreases which were unlikely to carry on. They are, therefore, nothing to be very enthusiastic about. If Senator Everett put them on the bad side, it was probably because he wished there would be more such decreases decided upon by the Treasury Board and the departments, but I gather that he and the committee consider it unlikely that another billion dollars will be lopped off government expenditures next year.

The second bad point, if I may call it that, is the qualification, as I have already indicated, that has to be made on the nominally low level of increase in man-year expenditures.

The third matter that concerned the committee very much was the increase in the public debt. The increase this year alone is over a billion dollars, and it represents 20 per cent of the entire increase year to year. This is surely an alarming situation for any entity. I doubt if any business could survive today if 20 per cent of its expenditure increase was on its debt. However, that is the situation. There is an increase in the public debt of over $1 billion, because of increased expenditures and government deficit. The deficit this year is actually more than what the total national budget was when the present government took office. That is the situation we are faced with.

The government has suggested some ways by which it might reform some of the institutions of Canada, and there are some of us who feel that those suggested reforms will not do the kind of job that needs to be done if Canada is going to survive economically.

The fourth and last of the minuses that Senator Everett found were on what I call "the manipulation side". We can no longer rely on the main estimates for a clear and distinct picture of the actual spending intentions of the government. In a situation such as has recently developed, where the government has been forced to realize that its excessive spending has been a tremendous drag on the economy, certain things happen. On the good side, there is no question that the government suddenly realized that it had to exercise restraint. It could not go on increasing its expenditure year by year at rates as high as 28 per cent. This brought them down, for some years, within the scope of the year-to-year increase in the gross national product. This is now government policy, and I am sure we all hope that the government will hold to that policy. It would appear that this will be done this year when the expectation is that the GNP will increase by perhaps 11 per cent, and the government's spending intentions will increase by just under 10 per cent.

However, the government is now coming out roughly half way through the year with what they call a new ceiling or a new target. This is a reassessment of the budgetary proposals with emphasis on such things as lapsing. For the first time the government actually estimates the lapse in the estimates. This has never been done before. This year the estimated lapse is $1 billion; otherwise, the $48.8 billion would be $49.8 billion. The government says there will be a lapse of $1 billion; that is, they say they will see to it that departments do not spend all the money that they may think they are entitled to spend under the main estimates. I commend the government for this.

Lapsing has had very interesting effects. The committee heard evidence from Mr. Andras, the President of the Treasury Board, that many deputy ministers are now coming to his department towards the end of the year, and actually indicating pride in the fact that they have not spent all of the money that they might have spent. Of course, this is a complete reversal of the practice in earlier years when there was a tremendous rush in the last few months to make sure the department spent all the money that appeared to have been allotted to them.

Senator Langlois: That is good news indeed.

Senator Grosart: I am complimenting the government on having this effect on deputy ministers who are, perhaps, the hardest set of nuts to crack in the whole spending circle—but it has been done.

On the other side, the non-spending challenge appears to have brought out all of the ingenuity of the spenders. They have come up with all kinds of devices to make the spending look less than it actually is, and I am glad to say that the committee's report deals at some length with one of these devices which has come to be called "revenue expenditure." This is a way of spending money without its showing as an expenditure. In other words, a tax remission to an industry or a group of industries will decrease the revenue side, and will have exactly the same effect as an expenditure on the budget side. There are several examples of this.

Another type of hiding of the actual expenditure situation is exemplified in such cases as the decrease for the Export Development Corporation. The Export Development Corporation has, up to this year, obtained its funds from the government. Therefore, the amount required would appear as a non-budgetary expenditure by the government. In this case, it is some $365 million. The Export Development Corporation, either on its own initiative or by persuasion, decided to go to the public markets for these funds.

However, there is no fundamental difference. They are still borrowing over $300 million, but borrowing it in the open market rather than from the government. Therefore, it appears as a decrease in government expenditure, which, indeed, it is, but the problem that this creates is that this could be done almost anywhere, even by the CBC. It would be a marvellous thing if we could say to the CBC, "You go and borrow in the public market." This would not only greatly decrease government expenditure, but it would do a lot of other things also. However, that is a matter of opinion not directly related to the subject of the motion.

Honourable senators, it may be that some further comments will be forthcoming on this whole matter when we debate the supply bill which, I understand from the deputy leader, we will probably have early next week. Until then, those are my comments on the motion. As the report is a report of a committee, there is no requirement that it be dealt with other than in the chamber.

● (1520)

Senator Langlois: It is expected that the supply bill will reach us early next week.

Motion agreed to and report adopted.

The Senate adjourned until Monday, June 26, 1978, at 8 p.m.

APPENDIX

(See p. 904)

TRANSPORT

GRAIN TRANSPORTATION OPERATIONS ANALYSIS—TERMS OF REFERENCE

1. BACKGROUND

In recent years the Federal Government has made major investments in the purchase and rehabilitation of railway rolling stock in order to retain in service a fleet of cars adequate in type and number to respond to the requirements of grain traffic originating in Western Canada. This results from the inability of the railways under current arrangements to finance major investments in railway rolling stock for the movement of grain.

Throughout this winter there were numerous complaints expressed by the Canadian Wheat Board, the Grain Companies and other groups concerning the alleged inability or unwillingness of the railways to respond adequately to transportation requirements imposed by current grain sales on the export market.

In addition, grain company management representatives and certain producer organizations have expressed uncertainty as to whether the present grain car allocation, control and co-ordination system, is functioning as efficiently as possible.

A continuing dilemma from the Federal Government perspective has been the difficulty in determining the validity of these criticisms in general.

Furthermore, in view of the production and export projections prepared by the Canadian Wheat Board, the scale of Federal Government investment, reductions in the size of the boxcar fleet predicted by Canadian National Railways and C.P. Rail, and in the light of present institutional and operating arrangements, the time is now appropriate for a comprehensive assessment of any operational and administrative inefficiencies that may exist in the transportation system.

2. OBJECTIVES:

a) To make an assessment of the operational efficiency of specified components of the contemporary grain transportation system in Western Canada.

b) To define key institutional, operational and capacity constraints in the present system and prescribe cost minimizing remedies in accord with a range of alternative export volume and system configuration scenarios.

c) To identify probable operating and capital equipment needs for the movement of grain over the next several years under these scenarios.

d) To establish an improvement plan which would:

- i) minimize-institutional and operational constraints;
- ii) be based on specified techniques (e. g. systems analysis and management, computer applications, etc.)

e) To establish the appropriate implementation mechanism; i.e.

- i) The role of key personnel
- ii) The required level of expertise and training

iii) The reporting relationship most appropriate for the overall control function.

3. DEFINITION:

For the purpose of this study the grain transportation system shall be defined as the interrelated process whereby grain is called forward from on-farm storage, collected by means of quotas imposed by the Canadian Wheat Board and forwarded via the grain block system and regional rail network to export terminal position for cleaning prior to loading on vessels. The focus will be restricted to movements within Western Canada hereby defined as the area bounded by the ports of Vancouver, Prince Rupert, Thunder Bay and Churchill.

4. METHOD OF APPROACH:

The study shall be undertaken in two sequential parts.

Phase I. INITIAL IMMERSION

In recognition of the fact that the consultant must be permitted adequate time to develop familiarity with the complexities of the Western Canadian grain transportation system there will be an initial period of approximately one month allowed for this purpose. This will enable the consultant to have discussions with the following:

Grains Group	—Ottawa
Canadian Wheat Board	—Winnipeg
Canada Grain Commission	—Winnipeg
United Grain Growers Ltd.	—Winnipeg
Manitoba Pool Elevators	—Winnipeg
Cargill Canada Ltd.	—Winnipeg
Pioneer Grain Co. Ltd.	—Winnipeg
Canadian National Railways	—Winnipeg, Edmonton Winnipeg, Vancouver & Montreal
C.P. Rail	—Edmonton
Northern Alberta Railways	—Regina
Saskatchewan Wheat Pool	—Regina
Prairie Rail Action Committee	—Weyburn
Weyburn Terminal Co.	—Calgary
Alberta Wheat Pool	—Vancouver and Thunder Bay
Canadian Transport Commission

Other Organizations or Groups as Specified by the Client

No formal written report will be required at the conclusion of this initial stage although the consultant will be required to give a satisfactory briefing to the client that will demonstrate the acquisition of an adequate basis of understanding of the system and its problems. The consultant will not proceed on the Phase II of the study until the client is satisfied that an adequate level of understanding has been developed.

Phase II. THE MAIN STUDY

In this phase the consultant shall undertake an evaluation of the following aspects with respect to the effectiveness and efficiency of the whole system.

A) Canadian Wheat Board

i) Grain and oilseeds traffic projections both export and domestic.

- volume
- directional flow
- seasonal variation
- origins and destinations by type of grain

The consultant will base the analysis on a range of optimistic, median and pessimistic volume assumptions.

ii) Quota System

- inventory control
- producer responsiveness
- grading system

iii) Block Shipping System

- car allocation formulae
- definition of blocks and possible rationalization
- producer cars
- efficiency (matching terminal requirements with country originations by grade and type of grain)
- efficiency (railway operations)

iv) Movement of Non-Board Grains

- C.W.B. control of non-board grains
- car allocation
- switching of board and non-board grains

v) Liaison

- Canadian Wheat Board and the railways
- Grain Companies and the Wheat Board
- Grain Companies and the railways

All of the above to be reviewed in relation to selected demand scenarios.

B) Railway System

i) Collection Network (Overview)

- ultimate configuration (basic network)
- present and planned capacity
- rehabilitation
- car cycles
- relationship of grain to other bulk traffic

ii) Branch Line Network

- operating practices and constraints
- seasonal restrictions
- car spotting and waiting time
- demurrage

iii) Line Haul

- capacity constraints

- interlining/reciprocal agreements
- joint track usage
- routing practices

iv) Terminal Operations

- constraints
- assessment of ongoing studies, etc.
- demurrage

v) Motive Power & Equipment

- reduction in boxcar fleet
- efficiency of utilization
- future hopper car requirements
- motive power

C) Grain Trade

i) Primary Elevator System

- evolution and rationalization
- storage function versus throughput
- allocation of cars within blocks
- non-board grains and oilseeds
- impact of competition
  - primary elevators
  - terminal elevators
- operating problems

ii) Terminal Elevator System (Ports)

- car co-ordination
- pooling
- non board grains

5. TIMING:

Phase I—One month from date of authorization

Phase II—Nine months from date of authorization

6. REPORTS:

A verbal report only will be required for Phase I. Thereafter the consultant will provide reports at 60 day intervals on items a, b and c respectively. A final system evaluation report together with all relevant appendices shall be provided upon completion of the study.

STUDY DIRECTION

The study will be carried out under the direction of the Director-General, Transportation and Handling, Grains Group, Ottawa, or his designate.

7. COST

The consultant shall provide two quotations:

- a) fixed price basis—Phase I and II.
- b) Basis—agreed schedule of rates (with estimate of total costs)—Phase I and II.

THE SENATE

Monday, June 26, 1978

The Senate met at 8 p.m., the Speaker in the Chair.
Prayers.

APPROPRIATION BILL NO. 2, 1978-79

FIRST READING

The Hon. the Speaker informed the Senate that a message had been received from the House of Commons with Bill C-61, for granting to Her Majesty certain sums of money for the Government of Canada for the financial year ending the 31st March, 1979.

Bill read first time.

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this bill be read the second time?

Senator Langlois, with leave of the Senate, moved that the bill be placed on the Orders of the Day for second reading later this day.

Motion agreed to.

CRIMINAL CODE

BILL TO AMEND—FIRST READING

The Hon. the Speaker informed the Senate that a message had been received from the House of Commons with Bill C-42, to amend the Criminal Code.

Bill read first time.

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this bill be read the second time?

Senator Langlois, with leave of the Senate, moved that the bill be placed on the Orders of the Day for second reading at the next sitting.

Motion agreed to.

DOCUMENTS TABLED

Senator Langlois tabled:

Report on operations under the Regional Development Incentives Act for the month of March 1978, pursuant to section 16 of the said Act, Chapter R-3, R.S.C., 1970.

Report of the National Librarian for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1978, pursuant to section 13 of the National Library Act, Chapter N-11, R.S.C., 1970.

Report on the administration of Allowances for Blind Persons in Canada for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1977, pursuant to section 12 of the Blind Persons Act, Chapter B-7, R.S.C., 1970.

Report on the administration of Allowances for Disabled Persons in Canada for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1977, pursuant to section 12 of the Disabled Persons Act, Chapter D-6, R.S.C., 1970.

Report of Telesat Canada for the year ended December 31, 1977, including its accounts and financial statements certified by the Auditors, pursuant to section 37 of the Telesat Canada Act, Chapter T-4, R.S.C., 1970.

Copies of Ordinances passed by the Council of the Yukon Territory during its 1977 Second Session, pursuant to section 20(1) of the Yukon Act, Chapter Y-2, R.S.C. 1970, together with copy of Order in Council P.C. 1978-464, dated February 16, 1978.

Document entitled "Proposed Standing Orders of the House and Rules of The Senate," with respect to Bill C-62, "An Act respecting the independence of Parliament and conflicts of interest of Senators and Members of the House of Commons and to amend certain other Acts in relation thereto or in consequence thereof".

BUSINESS OF THE SENATE

ADJOURNMENT

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, with leave of the Senate and notwithstanding rule 45(1)(g), I move that when the Senate adjourns today it do stand adjourned until tomorrow, Tuesday, June 27, 1978, at 8 o'clock in the evening.

Motion agreed to.

INCOME TAX ACT

BILL TO AMEND—SECOND READING—DEBATE ADJOURNED

Hon. Salter A. Hayden moved the second reading of Bill C-56, to amend the statute law relating to income tax and to authorize payments related to provincial sales tax reductions.

He said: Honourable senators, there are a few things about this bill that are unusual. First of all is its shortness. We have become accustomed to voluminous bills which are almost books. Secondly, many of the provisions are relieving in their effect and therefore provide some benefit to the taxpayer. As a matter of general principle, of course, we would be inclined to favour such amendments. However, there are certain principal ones in the bill which I intend to speak about in a particular way.

The first amendment concerns provincial sales tax. While this has provoked a great deal of discussion in many areas, in substance it can be briefly stated as to its scope and intended purpose. The federal government offered to the provincial governments to defray the cost of a reduction in the general retail sales tax rates on certain terms and conditions, the idea being, as was stated, to stimulate the economy in an immediate way.

The terms of the offer were as follows. For the Atlantic provinces the offer was to reimburse them for 3 percentage points on their sales tax rates for a period of six months; for the provinces other than Alberta, which has no sales tax, the proposal was to offer to reimburse them to the extent that they would reduce their retail sales tax rates by 3 percentage points, 2 percentage points of which would be reimbursed by the federal authority, and 1 percentage point was to be the responsibility of the provinces.

● (2010)

The overall effect of this so far as the federal authority is concerned is a liability to the federal authority of 2 percentage points on the provincial retail sales tax rates for a period of six months. The provinces other than Alberta had the option of selecting a form of reduction of 3 percentage points for six months or 2 percentage points for nine months. That was the beginning of this so-called offer to deal in this way. However, the Province of Quebec elected to reduce its sales tax on selected items, and this appeared to disrupt the proposal. Whatever went on in the way of discussion, of course, received its fair share of publicity and it is not my intention to repeat any of that tonight. I should say that so far as Quebec was concerned, the fact that it had selected certain industries for receiving the benefit of the sales tax reduction and had not accepted the proposal in the form in which it was presented ultimately brought to the fore a solution proposed by the federal government. That solution was as follows: A calculation was made of the amount of loss of income by the reduction of sales tax in Quebec on the selected items. It was estimated that this would amount to $40 million. It would appear that the calculation was a rough and ready method of arriving at a figure. However, if it errs on the side of not providing enough, then clause 59 provides that in order to make up any underpayment the moneys may be drawn from the Consolidated Revenue Fund. This would apply to all payments which the federal authority has undertaken to make by way of reimbursement. So the Quebec proposal included the $40 million.

Then we have in clause 30 a method for providing this money by way of reimbursement to the provinces. The method provides that a taxpayer, other than a taxpayer residing in the provinces of Quebec and Alberta, will be entitled to deduct, from his tax otherwise payable for 1978, the lesser of $100 or his tax payable for that year. By way of example, if the total tax payable were $2000, the taxpayer could deduct $100; but if the total tax payable were $75, he could then deduct only the $75. That is why it appears to me that there may be need for adjustments. There are bound to be taxpayers over the length and breadth of the various provinces who have a tax bill which is under $100. So the question is: To what extent do payments under $100 amount to the sum and total of the reimbursement the federal government has agreed to provide?

[Senator Hayden.]

As far as the province of Quebec is concerned, the proposal is that an individual taxpayer would be entitled to deduct the sum of $85 from his tax otherwise payable in 1977. That is provided for in clause 30 of the bill. The $85 is arrived at by a method of calculation which translates the $40 million into a per capita amount. It is estimated that the $40 million payment broken down into the number of taxpayers in Quebec would represent approximately $15 per person, so the $100 which otherwise might have gone to the province of Quebec under the general rule now becomes, in fact, $85.

The Minister of Finance indicated in a recent statement that there will be no other bill in connection with this matter of reimbursement for the abatement of the provincial retail sales taxes. That means that this bill now before us, as far as the federal authority is concerned, represents an agreement in respect of this matter.

That is as far as I intend to take this subject at this time. I have exposed the purpose of it, the plan of it, and how it works.

The next item I intend to deal with concerns registered retirement savings plans. First of all, I should like to deal with the options at maturity that are available under this bill, and you will find them set out in clauses 34 and 35 of the bill.

For some time—and I know this is true of committee meetings last year—there was considerable discussion with respect to the inflexibility of the rule dealing with the maturity of registered retirement savings plans at age 71. The owner of a plan had only two options—that is, he could take the proceeds out of the plan which would be taxed at his regular rate, or acquire a life annuity. There was a great deal of complaint about this inflexible rule. The suggestion was that there were other ways by which the owner of a plan might be able to do better for himself.

● (2020)

In its report last year on Bill C-11 the committee referred to this situation, and the representations that were made to it in this regard. This year, there are some changes. The options that are now open at maturity of the plan, which would be age 71 or 60, as the case may be, are as follows: The owner may take all or some portion of the funds out of the plan, with which he is entitled to purchase an annuity, with or without guaranteed term, payable to him for his life, or the joint lives of himself and his spouse; he may take an annuity for a fixed term equal to the number of years remaining before he or his spouse—if she is younger and he so elects—reaches the age of 90; or he may take an annuity under a Registered Retirement Income Fund.

This is a new type of plan which parallels the RRSP. Its main provision is that a specific fraction of the total assets of the fund, composed of capital plus accumulated earnings, may be withdrawn each year by the holder to provide an annual income to age 90. The fraction would be related to the age of the taxpayer in the year in which it is, withdrawn—that is in the year of maturity of the plan, it would be equal to one divided by the number of years remaining to age 90. By way of example, if the holder of the plan were 75 at the time he decided he wanted to take this type of annuity, the first year he would withdraw one-fifteenth of the moneys in the plan; in the second year, one-fourteenth; in the third year, one-thirteenth; and so on, to the age of 90, at which point he would have exhausted the funds in the plan. Someone in committee asked what happens at age 90. There were a number of answers volunteered, from which, I suppose, one can conclude that he would have to look elsewhere for money—that is, if he were in a position to look.

The financial and other institutions that issue these plans are also those who may issue RRIF plans. Each taxpayer will be limited to one RRIF, because that involves the whole amount of the plan—the capital funds and the accumulated earnings in the plan—at the time it matures and he makes his election.

That is one option which I construe as being a concession to the submissions that we made in our report last year. It is an attempt to answer the demand and criticism from holders of registered retirement savings plans that the conditions at maturity were too inflexible.

The second matter I would like to discuss in relation to these plans is the proposal in this bill to establish a minimum age below which the plan may not be collapsed or matured, and that age is 60. There has been a great deal of complaint about the establishment of this minimum age. All we had in the whole history of this kind of retirement planning heretofore was a maximum age at which the plan must mature, and that was age 71. We had representations made to our committee which indicated that this obligation that one had to stay with the plan in all circumstances until one reached the age of 60 was bound to work hardship. The Life Underwriters' Association, who appeared before us—and they are certainly knowledgeable in relation to the attitudes and feelings of policy holders and of people who participate in RRSPs—assumed a circumstance in which a husband, whose wife was aged 40 or thereabouts, and who had some children, died at age 45 or 50. Their representations to us were as follows: The surviving spouse faces a period of severe emotional trial and financial readjustment. The present RRSP law is flexible, and well suited to emergencies of this kind because the surviving spouse can rollover the deceased's RRSP into his or her own RRSP. There "rollover" means that it involves deferral of tax. This provides a continuing tax shelter and an opportunity to plan the future. It may be that the maturity of the RRSP as an annuity should be deferred five or ten years because of other assets currently available.

The proposed amendment would prohibit this type of arrangement. The income-averaging annuity option is of limited use in such circumstances because it must be exercised within a few months, which may not be practicable in such circumstances. Or, if the surviving spouse in the example given decides to take employment and defer the maturity of the RRSP until later at age 50, then if at age 50 she becomes disabled, and the needs to convert the RRSP into regular income at that age become quite emphatic, under the law as now proposed the only option would be to cash out the RRSP and suffer the tax burden in one year.

Now when we were presented with this situation, I, as chairman of the committee, made some inquiries, and sure enough I had confirmation of something that I thought could be done. Sure enough, I had confirmation of something that I thought could be done. That is, there was a way under the existing law by which the spouse could do it, when she was caught in circumstances of that kind in the early death of a husband, say, before the age of 60, and was stuck with the plan until she would reach age 60 herself, because with the minimum age that is the earliest age at which you can mature or collapse the plan. But it is an involved, a cumbersome and an expensive way of doing the same thing. For instance, the widow could create an RRSP herself, and then settle on the amount of annual payments she felt she needed as supplementary income in the first year to see her through that year. She could transfer the balance of the moneys in the late husband's RRSP to her RRSP tax-free, or with deferral of tax, and then she could take out of the late husband's plan the first annual payments that she figured she needed for supplementary assistance, and on that she would pay tax at whatever her marginal rate was. But then the cumbersomeness of it is that in the next year she would have to establish another RRSP and go through this procedure again, and so on each year until age 60, at which point these restrictions cease to have any effect.

● (2030)

The position of the committee was that, when the reason for establishing the minimum age was provided, which was that RRSPs have a character of retirement income about them, not having a minimum age and thereby permitting an early dealing with funds that are earmarked in this way, you are defeating the purpose of those who established this type of plan as a retirement plan in the first place. But necessity is the mother of invention—although I have heard a paraphrase on that, sometimes in relation to the baseball season, that a mother is the invention of necessity at times. So our position was quite simple: If the character of retirement is lost because there is no minimum age, then that character can be lost in any event by the procedure that presently exists in the law. In the report which your committee will be making on the subject matter of this bill in the next day or two, the recommendation is made that the minimum age should be deleted. There appears to be a logical basis for that. It does not defeat, shall I say, the goodness of the plan and the wider choices or options that you are given at present.

The next item in connection with RRSPs is the proposal in the bill to tax the benefits of the RRSP and the RRIF, where the owner of the plan dies, does not have a spouse living but does have children and the children are the beneficiaries. The proposal under the bill is that the fair market value of the plan shall be determined and that that amount shall be added to the income of the estate and shall be taxed in the estate at the rates which are the rates attracted by the owner of this RRSP.

Your committee heard evidence on the point and in view of the submissions we felt that the proper way to do it was to permit the beneficiaries, the children, to take the benefits from the plan, and they could do that by way of either rollover or deferral of tax, and then they would be the logical persons to pay the tax because they would be getting the proceeds of the plan. As it is, none of the proceeds of the plan goes into the estate but the estate has to pay the shot. So by doing it the other way about, the beneficiaries would have a marginal rate of tax considerably lower than the estate's, and in the circumstances it would appear to be a preferred way of dealing with it.

I am just presenting both sides of the question.

The other item was on life insurance policies. If you remember, last year this was quite an issue.

In our report we made certain recommendations. One was that the interest on life insurance policy loans either should be deductible or should be added to the adjusted cost base of the plan. This was done last year, but this year there is an amendment which provides a new definition for the adjusted cost base, namely, the premiums which have been paid and what, up until this year, would be the interest which has not otherwise been deducted—the interest on the policy loan. That would make your adjusted cost base. Since the excess in a policy loan, when it is paid out—that is, the difference between, say, the cash surrender value at that time and the policy loan—if there is an excess there in favour of the cash surrender value as against the adjusted cost base, then that excess is regarded as income and is taxable in the hands of the policyholder who has secured the loan. If it is not, why, then, he is not subject to tax.

In respect of that, your committee was concerned as to why the suggested changeabout took place with respect to meeting the recommendations of the committee in December of last year and then this change in the plan which excludes interest from any calculations of adjusted cost base for the period pre-1978. The explanation given was that the information on this particular point would not be readily available through the insurance companies. That is as much as I wish to say on that point at this time. We may have more to say in our report.

● (2040)

The next item that I wish to discuss for a few moments is scientific research. Since 1961 scientific research has been recognized as an item entitled to 100 per cent deduction. Last year there was an additional allowance in respect of scientific research of from 5 per cent to 10 per cent. This year the minister proposed that there should be a 50 per cent extra allowance for expenditures on scientific research for the years from 1978 to 1989, and the 50 per cent was to be calculated on the excess of expenditures for the current year as related to the annualized—that is their word, not mine—rate during the base period.

The base period which the bill provides is the prior three years of operation and the average rate of expenditure in those years for scientific research; and if there is an excess in the current year, as against what was spent in the base period there is then entitlement to the 50 per cent write-off on that amount.

I should explain that there is also a provision in the bill to the effect that if the property which earns the scientific research is sold at any time, there is recapture of that 50 per cent, and the recapture may be of the 50 per cent or the recapture may be on the basis of the fair market value of the property at that time, or in relation to the original cost of the property.

There is a great deal that I could say about that, because the bill goes on for three or four pages, as honourable senators might expect, to provide for alternative situations which have to be met. However, I do not think any good purpose would be served in my going into details on that tonight.

I should like to speak for a moment about family farms, a subject which arose in 1970 when your committee was studying the White Paper on Taxation. At that time we had, as deputy chairman of the committee, Senator Lazarus Phillips, whose name is well known to most people. He was an excellent senator and lawyer.

One of the recommendations the committee made at that time in connection with farms was that the benefits should be extended to the farmer in order to encourage him to stay on the farm. The situation at present is that, as a general rule, any increase in the value of a farm accruing on the death of the owner would be included in computing the income of the owner in the year of his death. That was the general rule, but, in order to encourage the children of farmers to carry on the operation, the act provides special rules, which can be found in subsections 70(9), 70(9.1), and 73(3), whereby farms may be passed from one generation to another without immediate tax liability for accrued gains in value. However, as Senator Phillips has pointed out, the direction of farming and the ownership of farms had changed, and much of the structure for the holding of farms was becoming by way of either incorporation or partnership. He suggested that the situation should be recognized and that the deferral of tax should also encompass shares and interest in qualifying farm partnerships as well as qualifying farm corporations. The bill before us does provide for that.

The subject of reserves is a rather complicated one, but I shall try to be brief in dealing with it. In 1968 the federal authority created a new set of rules governing the accounting for income by life companies—domestic life companies and multinational companies.

There was provided in regulations a formula to determine the actuarial reserves. An actuarial reserve is the kind of reserve to which a life company is entitled to reserve against premium income. For the first year of a life policy there is a portion of the premium that is permitted as an actuarial reserve, and when it comes to accounting for income from the premiums received on the first year of life insurance policies, the actuarial reserve is deducted in arriving at the income for tax purposes.

[Senator Hayden.]

Another element that was determined in 1968 and passed into law in 1969 was what was called non-capital losses. Investments held by life companies, which they trade to improve their position and yields, are treated as trading transactions, and therefore one can develop out of those transactions non-capital losses or non-capital gains. If it was a loss, one was entitled to write it off, and if it were a gain, one had to add whatever was the tax since we brought in capital gains taxation.

There were also certain other elements by way of reserve that were provided, all in 1969.

Throughout the years from 1969 until the end of 1977 the life insurance companies have operated on the basis of the actuarial reserves, the non-capital reserves, either losses or gains, and the other reserves, and they have made their statements on that basis.

However, in the evidence before the committee the income tax officials indicated that a close study of the volume of business of the life companies, or many of them, showed that having regard for the volume of operations, the industry was not really paying its way in the provision of revenues and that the actuarial reserves formula must have been too generous. Therefore they proposed to reduce it. They proposed to deal with the treatment of non-capital losses in another way which would reduce the benefit of such losses.

● (2050)

Some life companies appeared before the committee and complained that they had in 1972, 1973 or 1974 sold low-yielding securities at a loss and acquired higher-yielding securities in order to improve their income. Under the proposals which were made last year, some of which are incorporated in this bill this year, those losses are not going to be allowed and the whole scheme of reserves is going to be rewritten from 1969 down to 1977. The net result of that will be that many of these companies—not all of them because some of them still have a profit position notwithstanding the loss write-off and the reserve provision—will carry into 1978 much less in the way of write-offs which they were entitled to take and have carried by way of loss carry-forwards down to the end of 1977. They will also be subject to substantial taxes when the accounting is done.

The real complaint that we have heard from some of these companies has been that they observed what the law provided from 1969 to 1977 and that while it is perfectly all right prospectively to change the basis for calculation of actuarial reserves, non-capital losses and other write-offs, the government cannot go back and pick up the loss carry-forwards which reflect the taking of those reserves which were at the time allowable under the law. So these companies then move into 1978 without the benefit of the full amount of those reserves and are subject to very substantial taxes.

In summary, I think that is a statement of their position. This is quite a serious question which has to be resolved. Our committee is seeing the minister tomorrow morning to find out what the attitude will be in relation to that, and whether there is any elbow room for change.

The real complaint your committee has is that we were promised the regulations in December of last year. Periodically I have asked for them ever since, and about four weeks ago I asked for them again and was told I would have them in two weeks, but I still do not have them. It is very difficult to do calculations of a revised formula for actuarial reserves if you do not have the regulations that provide the formula, and if you do not have the regulations that provide what the departmental officials said were compensating benefits in the changes that were being introduced. We do not have the regulations and we do not have any indication as to what the compensating benefits are. The question will ultimately have to be seriously considered.

Certainly, if some of the life companies are not providing the proper revenues having regard to their volume of business, then there is no question that the government has the right to move in to change the formula and the allowances. How far that may extend is for Parliament to say, and Parliament has spoken in the Commons by sending the bill to us. Now we have to deal with these provisions.

I have taken a fair amount of time, but it is hard to shorten these matters. Perhaps I might just take a quick run at one or two things, realizing that there is something for almost everybody in the bill this year.

The next item may not hold much interest for senators, but it is interesting to note that the government is thinking of various classifications of people. This comes under the heading of "Employment at special work site or remote location" and is dealt with in clause 1 of the bill. Generally, the law is that an employee is subject to tax on the value of any benefit he receives through his employment. To qualify for an exemption in respect of board or lodging or transportation at a special work site at a remote location while performing duties of a temporary nature, under the existing law the employee must have a residence at another location where he supports a spouse or a person dependent upon him for support and connected to him by a blood relationship, marriage or adoption. This was a break for married men. However, the amendment which is provided by this bill would allow such exemptions to apply to all employees working at remote locations such as logging camps or construction projects in the far north.

If you remember, some years ago we were dealing with the subject matter of depreciable business property and eligible capital property. In clauses 2 and 3 of the bill the subject of replacement property is dealt with. You know, for instance, that depreciable property would include buildings and machinery. For example, under the income tax provisions, if a fire occurred and there was an insurance loss and the proceeds were payable, the taxpayer had to bring the proceeds of the insurance into his income unless he made a replacement for the same use and for the same business. That same rule applied in relation to eligible capital property. They are now changing it because it seemed to work hardships in many cases. They have changed the expressions "for the same use" and "for the same business" by putting after the word "use" the words "or similar use" and "or a similar business". This broadens the scope and permits a broader deferral of tax which would otherwise be payable. I think this clause could be called "sensible" in its provisions.

One other thing I should mention concerns loans to employees. Last year there were a number of provisions made in connection with allowing loans to employees, where the interest rate was a fair rate, without attracting tax. Clause 4 of the bill provides an exemption for loans to employees of a corporation to enable or assist them to purchase from the corporation fully paid shares of the corporation, or from a corporation related to that corporation fully paid shares of the related corporation, to be held by them for their own benefit. That is an extension of the provision because, in the original form, the loan could be made only to purchase the shares from the corporation which was lending the money. Yet there are many instances in which the corporation of which this person was an employee was not in a position to make the loan, while the related company was in a position to do so. This provision authorizes such a loan by a related company in relation to shares of the related company, and the employee of the corporation still benefits tax-wise. However, of course, they cannot lend the money tax-free, because if that were done the amount of the loan would be added to income.

● (2100)

There are many other items, all of which are interesting, but I believe I have given you a run at the principal features of the bill. When you see our report on the subject matter of this bill in a day or two you will have a great deal of the detail of other provisions contained in the bill. I feel, for purposes of obtaining a working knowledge of the bill, that this is as far as I should reasonably take it tonight. I should point out that when I was making what might be regarded as critical remarks about some of the proposed treatment of interest on policy loans and reserves in connection with life insurance companies, these were not intended as criticism of the bill so much as a suggestion that I feel that in this area there is much to learn about how things operate, and attention should be paid to those who live, work and operate in this area and who are the best ones to explain their positions and problems and the extent to which they feel they should have the benefits to which they are entitled extended.

Honourable senators, that is all I intend to say tonight with respect to this bill.

[Translation]

Hon. Claude Wagner: Honourable senators, I had hoped that when time came to make my first speech in this distinguished house, I would be able to support without any reservation or restriction whatsoever the spirit and the wording of Bill C-56. I cannot.

[English]

I thought that at least I could offer my congratulations, both to the federal and Quebec governments, for having for once buried the hatchet in order to achieve by means of the contents of Bill C-56 an understanding satisfactory to both parties and, above all, beneficial to Canada as a whole. Unhappily, I cannot do so.

[Translation]

Of all the legislation presented in Parliament in the last few years, Bill C-56 is probably the one that has created most controversy and aroused most acrimony. The reason is that during the debates it has given rise to, the main purpose of this legislation has been forgotten.

Whatever each side may say, the basic issue is the right of one province to run its fiscal system as it likes, and the need for the central government to respect that right. The ideologies of the parties concerned may have inspired ambiguous attitudes, but they must not make us lose sight of what is at the core of the matter, namely, the conditions under which a federal policy that has an incidence in a field of provincial jurisdiction must be implemented.

It is not enough, for instance, for the Ottawa government to do violence to the Canadian Constitution, on the pretext that its Quebec counterpart wants to undermine the federal system. Nor is it not enough for the Quebec government to claim that its counter-proposals have more economic value than those of the Canadian authorities.

What we must regret about Bill C-56 is that the good initiative of the federal Minister of Finance turned sour and led to one of the most dangerous infringements by Ottawa in a field of provincial jurisdiction.

In his desire to involve the provinces in some provisions of his April 10 budget, the Minister of Finance of Canada was innovating. He was opening a new chapter in the history of federal-provincial relations. At the risk of endangering the inviolability of the budget secret, he did not hesitate to confide in his provincial colleagues in an attempt to elicit from them a consensus calculated to ease his task. That gesture, which can be described as imaginative and daring, could not but please those who, for so many years have hoped to achieve a harmonious federalism putting an end to the exhausting struggles Canadians have had to witness helplessly in the past. In the final analysis, the budget of April 10, of which Bill C-56 is in fact the legal version, represents an honest and positive beginning to that harmonious federalism we want passionately.

It is unfortunate that political passions ended up by spoiling an initiative that augured well for better coordination of the economic and fiscal policies of the federal and provincial governments.

I have no intention, honourable senators, of repeating here all the arguments invoked ad nauseam against Bill C-56, nor do I intend to mention those that may have been put forward in its support. Suffice for me to say that the foxiness of the Quebec minister of finance did nothing to add to his prestige throughout that quarrel.

The acme of cynicism—I think, it must be said—was reached in the last few days when, after having announced with great fanfare that Quebec had imagined a way of recovering the moneys paid directly to Quebec taxpayers, Mr. Parizeau simply stated that the solution would come next fall. He thus reached the end of a rather dull scenario, while also giving the clearest possible example of the bankruptcy of a separatist policy, stuffed with slogans, built on the quicksands of propaganda, and impotent when time comes to really act. Governments have always behaved this way on the eve of their decline.

This new conflict between the federal government and the province of Quebec illustrates once again the urgency of a drastic reform of the Constitution of Canada.

The white paper and Bill C-60 on constitutional reform should provide us in the debate on the second reading of Bill C-56 with the opportunity to deal with this problem where the very survival of Confederation is at stake. Let us take the opportunity of this debate to think about it.

The Senate, whose existence is questioned and usefulness challenged in several circles, stands among all political institutions as the one most apt in the present circumstances to free itself from party considerations and to indicate the way to the Canadian people. Let me, quite modestly, outline the challenge which is ahead of us in this chamber.

● (2110)

[English]

Honourable senators, the challenge that faces this very house is one of competence and creativity. Instead of looking for a confrontation, we should use all our energies toward the consideration of new solutions and new ideas. We should never forget that the spirit of Confederation was a spirit of experimentation, a spirit of openness and a spirit of tolerance. We should not reject offhand any suggestion or change; we should explore every proposal in order to see whether it could help to achieve a better relationship between Canadians from all walks of life and from every province, a relationship which can be lasting and meaningful.

We must develop a new capacity to accept change and to seek change. We must toil together in order to bring about a greater closeness between Canadians from every part of the country. We must do our best to alleviate the feeling of isolation which prevails now in too many parts of Canada and which, in Quebec, has given birth to a party committed to the breaking up of our Confederation.

[Translation]

Bill C-56 particularly illustrates the isolation which can separate two government levels as well as the lack of agencies to coordinate their policies.

With that in mind, while we should maintain the separation of powers and clarify jurisdictions, we should practice what I shall call a true participatory federalism. I believe it should be supported by wider jurisdictional decentralization, not to weaken the central authority but to avoid interpretation conflicts and ensure better efficiency in the implementation of national policies.

Of course, we should not deny the federal government the authority which is essential to maintain national unity. It is obvious that, in some sectors, and particularly the economy,

Ottawa should enjoy the legislative supremacy without which our nation might find itself in a state of chaos. But at the same time the federal government, when it steps into a provincial jurisdiction—as it does with Bill C-56—should leave the provincial governments free to interpret the global objectives of the federal proposals in the light of their own priorities.

In that respect, we must deplore the lack of adequate and permanent structures for the discussion and formulation of major national policies. Federal-provincial conferences represents a significant progress over the period before World War II but they fall far short of being an entirely adequate approach to eliminate potential conflicts and resolve quarrels over the interpretation or implementation of national policies.

[English]

Referring to economic planning, I happen to think that there should exist what I would call a national ministerial council whose functions would be to devise national policies and bring all levels of government to co-operate for their implementation.

I believe that truly national policies born of a consensus among all governments would have a better chance of being accepted by all sectors of the population than those which the central government attempts to force upon the provinces. If there had been proper and meaningful consultation on the advisability of a general reduction of the provincial sales tax, clause 30 of Bill C-56 would not have been necessary.

This kind of pre-consultation can and should be extended to all issues in which Canada as a whole, and some of the provinces in particular, are vitally interested. In this respect, I am thinking of the GATT negotiations and, naturally, of the determination of national policies in such areas as the dairy industry, the textile industry, and so on.

[Translation]

A country does not live only on economic relationships between its various parts. It could not continue to exist for long if something nobler did not cement its various parts and inspire its various communities. It is in that spirit that we must undertake the drafting of a charter of human rights as well as its natural complement—a charter of linguistic rights for the official language minorities.

Since the election of November 15, 1976, in Quebec, we have been hearing from all parts of Canada many declarations of friendship toward the French-speaking province. There is a willingness to accept new constitutional arrangements to allow Quebec to strengthen its economy and particularly support its own culture more effectively.

That response is healthy and encouraging but it is clearly insufficient as it seems to leave out an important aspect of Canada's French-speaking community, namely, the presence of French minorities in every one of the nine English-speaking provinces of this country.

French Canada, let us not forget, does not stop at the borders of Quebec, and its right to exist is not limited only to Quebec residents. Until Canadians as a whole accept that a legal minority in Canada is a French-speaking or an English-speaking minority, as long as the English-speaking majority does not consider the members of the other founding people as having equal rights throughout the territory, the Canadian problem will never be solved. A painful wound will remain in the side of our country because a significant part of the people will feel rejected.

And so, after one hundred and eleven years of federal regime, the time has come to give Canada a charter of minorities which will define the language and school rights of each and every one of its components from both the French-speaking and English-speaking parts of Canada. The time has come to proclaim a mari usque ad mare the equality of our two major national language communities. The time has come to say that the local communities of their descendants have the right to live and develop freely under the protection of the law and inasmuch as a heterogeneous environment will allow.

If our French-speaking minorities are incapable of obtaining de jure and de facto that confirmation of equality of status—to which the English-speaking minority in Quebec is also entitled—how could we make French-speaking Quebecers in particular feel that all of Canada is their homeland?

This protection of language and school rights of the official language minorities must be provided in the first place by provincial authorities. They have jurisdiction over the schools, which is the main line of defence for the culture of the various groups. It rests with them to show through practical policies that they accept Francophones on an equal footing and that they are prepared to give them fair and adequate school systems. Quebec should not be the only one to give the example in that matter.

As for the federal government, in the case of minorities it is practising what I would call a cultural standardization; that is, a support inversely proportional to the dangers of assimilation by a given group.

That is how we can all contribute to shape a new Canada. I already see it emerge grown and strengthened as a result of the trials and hardships that it will have experienced. Those trials and hardships will enable the country to find itself and be ready to undertake its second century of existence.

Whenever we finally decide to live up truly to federalism, the causes of separatism will disappear and the separatist threat will only remain a bad dream.

It is not too late to save the Canadian federation and, at the risk of borrowing words spoken by others, I would say that more than ever it is "a time for action".

● (2120)

[English]

Honourable senators, as I try to draw certain conclusions from this lengthy, historical debate on Bill C-56, I should like to leave you with an appeal for a better understanding of the workings of a real and effective Confederation. It has often been said that rivalry between both levels of government leads to a healthy state of creative tension which, in the last analysis, could only be beneficial to the democratic process. That may be so; but before I agree I should like to be convinced that the recurrence, if not the permanence, of controversies between Ottawa and any province is not utterly harmful to our country.

[Senator Wagner.]

In the case of the sales tax dispute, for instance, I am afraid that, in the long run, and no matter who is claiming victory, Canada has been weakened once more. The wounds inflicted on national unity by this quarrel will not be easily healed.

That is why I am confident that the members of this chamber, whose main preoccupation should be to make our Constitution work properly, will see to it that justice is done to the people of Canada.

Senator Steuart: Honourable senators, I should like to say a few words about this bill this evening and then adjourn the debate.

I want the Senate to take a look at that portion of this bill which relates to the provincial sales tax reduction, and I want it to look at that portion both from the point of view of what it did or did not do for the economy of this nation, and what it did or did not do in respect of the unity of this nation. I am afraid that on both counts I must agree with Senator Wagner's view, which is that it failed.

To begin with, there have been some indications that, as a result of the Minister of Finance getting some provinces to agree to a sales tax reduction, there was an improvement in sales and a consequent improvement in the economy. But there is also a very serious doubt in the minds of many people that this will have a long-term effect. In fact, there is a feeling that it has only a short-term beneficial impact; that in the medium or long term, it will not prove nearly as beneficial.

As to what it has done for Canadian unity, I think that is a very open question. There is no question about the feelings of the Province of Quebec, nor is there any question about the feelings of the three prairie provinces. The premiers of the three prairie provinces met in Yorkton some time ago and denounced the move by the Minister of Finance, in effect forcing them to reduce their sales tax—not particularly against their will, but after what they themselves stated was little or no consultation. I think that we in the Senate should take a very serious look at what the effects will be, and have been, if we pass this bill without serious and due consideration.

● (2130)

So I want to be allowed to adjourn this debate, because I want to ask the Senate to consider the possibility of setting up a committee that will allow not only the premiers of the ten provinces, but also the leaders of the opposition in the ten provinces—in fact, the leaders of all political parties in the ten provinces—to have their say about this federal intrusion into what up until this point has been a strictly provincial fiscal matter, namely, the adjustment and the charging of a sales tax.

Honourable senators, unless the honourable senator from Quebec wishes to speak on this now, I move the adjournment of the debate because I shall have more to say on this subject tomorrow.

Senator Frith: Will the honourable senator permit a question? When he says that there is no question as to the attitude of the Province of Quebec, is he speaking of the government, the separatist government of the Province of Quebec, or is he speaking of the people of Quebec? What does he mean by "the Province of Quebec"?

Senator Steuart: I am speaking about the Government of Quebec, as represented by the premier, the leader of the opposition as represented by the leader of the Quebec Liberal Party, and also the leader of the other party in Quebec. I am speaking of everyone who spoke, as far as I can gather, in the Quebec National Assembly, and who opposed this bill. I am also speaking of the premiers of the three western provinces who joined together in a meeting at Yorkton to condemn the actions proposed in this bill. I am not necessarily speaking of the entire population of Quebec, but I am speaking to the fact, from what I have read in the press, that their representatives in the Quebec National Assembly spoke against this bill.

Senator Asselin: Honourable senators, I myself intended to move the adjournment of this debate, but I defer to the senator who has just spoken and reserve my right to reply tomorrow evening.

On motion of Senator Steuart, debate adjourned.

APPROPRIATION BILL NO. 2, 1978-79

SECOND READING—DEBATE ADJOURNED

Hon. Léopold Langlois moved the second reading of Bill C-61, for granting to Her Majesty certain sums of money for the Government of Canada for the financial year ending the 31st March, 1979.

He said: Honourable senators—

Senator Roblin: Honourable senators, have copies of this bill been distributed in the house? Has everyone had a chance to read it?

Senator Langlois: Yes, I understand copies have been distributed.

Honourable senators, due to the lateness of the house I shall endeavour to be as brief as possible.

The bill before us this evening, Appropriation Bill No. 2, 1978-79, provides for the release of the balance of the main estimates amounting to $15,096 billion. These estimates, as honourable senators will recall, were tabled on February 22 and referred to the Standing Senate Committee on National Finance on February 23, 1978. The report of that committee was debated in this house and adopted on Thursday last, June 22.

As previously stated, this bill provides full supply for the balance of the main estimates in the amount of $15,096,298,970. There was a previous appropriation act, Appropriation Act No. 1, 1978-79, which provided for expenditures for the months of April, May and June, by releasing a general proportion of three-twelfths of all votes plus additional proportions for some 23 votes.

The main estimates for 1978-79 may be broken down as in the following table:

ESTIMATES, 1978-79

	To Be Voted	Statutory	Total
Main Estimates
Budgetary	$19,875,760,461	$26,600,708,718	$46,476,469,179
Non-Budgetary	877,561,001	1,377,985,091	2,255,546,092
	$20,753,321,462	$27,978,693,809	$48,732,015,271

● (2140)

These main estimates were, as I said, discussed in committee in the presence of the President of the Treasury Board and his officials. That discussion took place on March 14, 15 and 16, and again on June 13. Moreover, as I mentioned earlier, the National Finance Committee tabled its report on June 14 and that report was adopted last week.

I should now like to add, as a final comment, that the form of this bill is the same as in past years; the bill contains no additional borrowing authorities.

Honourable senators, having made these preliminary remarks, I commend this bill to your favourable consideration.

On motion of Senator Flynn, for Senator Grosart, debate adjourned.

SENATE COMMITTEES

MEMBERSHIP CHANGES DURING SUMMER ADJOURNMENT— MOTION STANDS

On the Motion:

That during the coming summer adjournment of Parliament changes in the membership of Senate committees may be made by notification in writing to the Clerk of the Senate by the Leader of the Government in the Senate, or any senator named by him, with respect to government members, and by the Leader of the Opposition in the Senate, or any senator named by him, with respect to opposition members; and

That such changes in the membership of Senate committees shall be recorded in the Minutes of the Proceedings of the Senate when Parliament resumes.

Senator Flynn: Honourable senators, I am ready to proceed with this matter now, but if the acting leader would rather I stood the motion now, I would have no objection to doing so. I have had occasion to discuss the matter with Senator Molson, the Chairman of the Rules Committee, and he has no objections at this time. Nevertheless, possibly we should leave the matter until tomorrow, which would give you time to consider it.

Senator Langlois: I am in complete agreement with that.

Senator Flynn: Then I will stand the motion.

Motion stands.

The Senate adjourned until tomorrow at 8 p.m.

---

THE SENATE

Tuesday, June 27, 1978

The Senate met at 8 p.m., Hon. Maurice Bourget, P.C.,
Speaker pro tem in the Chair.

Prayers.

THE CONSTITUTION

PROPOSED SPECIAL JOINT COMMITTEE

The Hon. the Speaker pro tem: Honourable senators, the following message has been received from the House of Commons:

Tuesday, June 27, 1978

Resolved,—That a Special Joint Committee of the Senate and the House of Commons be appointed to examine and report upon proposals that have been and in the future are from time to time made public by the Government of Canada, on subjects related to the Constitution of Canada;

That twenty Members of the House of Commons, to be designated by the House at a later date, be members of the said Committee on the part of this House;

That the Committee have power to examine and enquire into all such matters as may be referred to them by the House, and, to report from time to time, and, except when the House otherwise orders, to send for persons, papers and records, to sit while the House is sitting, to sit during periods when the House stands adjourned, to print from day to day such papers and evidence as may be ordered by them, and to delegate to sub-committees all or any of their powers except the power to report direct to the House;

That the Committee have power to adjourn from place to place within Canada; and

Ordered,—That a message be sent to the Senate requesting Their Honours to unite with this House for the above purpose, and to select, if the Senate deems so advisable, some of its members to act on the proposed Special Joint Committee.

Attest

Alistair Fraser

The Clerk of the House of Commons

Honourable senators, when shall this message be taken into consideration?

Senator Langlois, with leave of the Senate, moved that the message be taken into consideration at the next sitting.

Motion agreed to.

DOCUMENTS TABLED

Senator Langlois tabled:

Copies of Report of the Administrator under the Anti-Inflation Act, dated June 21, 1978, pursuant to section 17(3) of the said Act, Chapter 75, Statutes of Canada, 1974-75-76, respecting failure to file a compliance report form on the part of Mr. Jean Boucher, La Prairie, Québec.

Copies of Reports of the Administrator under the Anti-Inflation Act, pursuant to section 17(3) of the said Act, Chapter 75, Statutes of Canada, 1974-75-76, respecting certain compensation plans, as follows:

1. Mount Sinai Hospital, Toronto, Ontario and the group of its medical doctors. Order dated June 20, 1978.

2. Les Produits Laitiers de Marieville Limitée, Marieville, Québec and the group of its Marieville plant employees, represented by the Teamsters Union Local 973. Order dated June 20, 1978.

Copies of Report of the Anti-Inflation Board to the Governor in Council, pursuant to section 17(2) of the Anti-Inflation Act, Chapter 75, Statutes of Canada, 1974-75-76, reporting its reference to the Administrator of the said Act of certain proposed changes in the compensation plan between the Board of Trustees, Middleton Regional High School and its janitors, represented by the Canadian Union of Public Employees, Local 1187, dated June 22, 1978.

Memoranda of Understanding relating to the export of certain textiles and textile products between the Government of Canada and the

1. Government of the Socialist Republic of Romania;
2. Government of the Republic of the Philippines;
3. Hong Kong Government;
4. Government of Poland;
5. Government of the Republic of Korea;
6. People's Republic of China.

Statement of Intent relating to exports from Taiwan to Canada, dated May 24, 1978.

Copies of Ordinances, Chapters 1 to 5 inclusive, passed by the Council of the Northwest Territories during its 1976 Third (60th consecutive) Session and assented to October 27, 1976, pursuant to section 16(1) of the Northwest Territories Act, Chapter N-22, R.S.C., 1970, together with copy of Order in Council P.C. 1977-639, dated March 10, 1977.

Copies of Ordinances, Chapters 1 to 9 inclusive, passed by the Council of the Northwest Territories during its 1977 First (61st consecutive) Session and assented to March 28, 1977, pursuant to section 16(1) of the Northwest Territories Act, Chapter N-22, R.S.C., 1970, together with copy of Order in Council P.C. 1977-1694, dated June 16, 1977.

Copies of Ordinances, Chapters 1 to 6 inclusive, passed by the Council of the Northwest Territories during its 1977 Second (62nd consecutive) Session and assented to May 19, 1977, pursuant to section 16(1) of the Northwest Territories Act, Chapter N-22, R.S.C., 1970, together with copy of Order in Council P.C. 1977-2121, dated July 21, 1977.

Report by the Tariff Board respecting Fresh and Processed Fruits and Vegetables, Volume 2, Processed Fruits and Vegetables, Reference No. 152, pursuant to section 6 of the Tariff Board Act, Chapter T-1, R.S.C., 1970.

Report by the Tariff Board respecting Bakers' Yeast, Reference No. 153 (English and French texts), together with a copy of the transcript of evidence presented at public hearings (English text), pursuant to section 6 of the Tariff Board Act, Chapter T-1, R.S.C., 1970.

INCOME TAX

INTERIM REPORT OF BANKING, TRADE AND COMMERCE COMMITTEE ON SUBJECT MATTER OF BILL C-56 TABLED AND PRINTED AS APPENDIX

Senator Hayden: Honourable senators, I desire to table an interim report of the Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce on the subject matter of Bill C-56, to amend the statute law relating to income tax and to authorize payments related to provincial sales tax reductions. I ask that the report be printed as an appendix to the Debates of the Senate and to the Minutes of the Proceedings of the Senate of this day and form part of the permanent records of this house.

The Hon. the Speaker pro tem: Is it agreed, honourable senators?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

(For text of report see Appendix "A", pp. 942)

FINAL REPORT OF BANKING, TRADE AND COMMERCE COMMITTEE ON SUBJECT MATTER OF BILL C-56 TABLED AND PRINTED AS APPENDIX

Senator Hayden: Honourable senators, I have a further report. I desire to table the final report of the Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce on the subject matter of Bill C-56, to amend the statute law relating to income tax and to authorize payments related to provincial sales tax reductions. I ask that this report be printed as an appendix to the Debates of the Senate and to the Minutes of the Proceedings of the Senate of this day and form part of the permanent records of this house.

[Senator Langlois.]

The Hon. the Speaker pro tem: Is it agreed, honourable senators?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

(For text of report see Appendix "B", pp. 947)

INCOME TAX ACT EXCISE TAX ACT

REPORT OF BANKING, TRADE AND COMMERCE COMMITTEE ON SUBJECT MATTER OF AMENDING LEGISLATION RELATING TO SMALL BUSINESSES TABLED AND PRINTED AS APPENDIX

Senator Hayden: Honourable senators, I have a further report which I should like to table at this time. It is a report of the Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce on the subject matter of Bill C-59, to amend the Income Tax Act and the Excise Tax Act in matters relating to the ownership and operation of small businesses. I ask that the report be printed as an appendix to the Debates of the Senate and to the Minutes of the Proceedings of the Senate of this day and form part of the permanent records of this house.

The Hon. the Speaker pro tem: Is it agreed, honourable senators?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

(For text of report see Appendix "C", pp. 948)

● (2010)

Senator Fournier (de Lanaudière): Honourable senators, I should like to know when the French translation will be available.

The Hon. the Speaker pro tem: I do not understand what it is you are requesting.

Senator Fournier (de Lanaudière): It is very simple, Your Honour. We have a document before us which seems to be quite interesting, but we have only the English version. It is probably very good, but I should like to know when the French version will be made available.

Senator Hayden: To which report are you referring?

Senator Fournier (de Lanaudière): The final report of the Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce on the subject matter of Bill C-56, to amend the statute law relating to income tax and to authorize payments related to provincial sales tax reductions.

Senator Hayden: The translation of the document is developing at this very moment. You will notice that I did not add any explanation on the contents at this time. So, in due course, possibly tomorrow, the French version will be distributed.

Senator Fournier (de Lanaudière): Thank you.

[Translation]

Senator Flynn: In English, in English.

The Hon. the Speaker pro tem: Order, please. Is Senator Fournier satisfied with the explanations which have just been given by Senator Hayden?

Senator Fournier: Senator Hayden always explains away the problem brilliantly, and I am satisfied.

The Hon. the Speaker pro tem: Senator Flynn, I apologize for having interrupted you.

Senator Flynn: I simply wanted to say that Senator Fournier was privileged because he at least received the report in English, which is more than I can say for myself.

Senator Denis: So we could not receive it in French.

The Hon. the Speaker pro tem: Are there other committee reports? If not, then we shall proceed to "notices of inquiries—avis d'interpellations".

[English]

TRANSPORT

REPORT OF NEWFOUNDLAND TRANSPORT COMMISSION— QUESTION

Senator Marshall: Honourable senators, I should like to ask the Deputy Leader of the Government a question with respect to the Sullivan Commission on transportation in Newfoundland.

In view of the fact that this matter is so important to the future economy of Newfoundland, and particularly because certain officials of the CNR have indicated an attitude to abandon freight and passenger rail service in Newfoundland over a period of time, could the deputy leader obtain from the Minister of Transport any information as to the deadline for the submission of this report to Parliament?

I am wondering whether this matter can be treated as urgent and whether he can report back to the Senate before we adjourn for the summer.

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, I shall do my very best to extract that information without delay. I cannot guarantee that I will have the information requested before the summer adjournment, but I shall do my best.

[Translation]

NATIONAL ANTHEM

"O CANADA"—QUESTION

Senator Asselin: Honourable senators, I should like to direct a question also to the Deputy Leader of the Government. In view of the fact that the government is dying to make changes—

Senator Flynn: Why do you not say "is dying", period.

Senator Asselin: —is dying to make changes to the Canadian Constitution, could he find out whether the government would be prepared, before July 1, to proclaim "O Canada" as the official national anthem of this country?

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, I do not share the opinion of my honourable friend when he says that the government is dying. According to the latest polls, it is far from being in a death struggle.

As to the national anthem, should my honourable friend read the recently introduced proposals to amend the constitution, he would realize that a national anthem entitled "O Canada" is to be made part of the Constitution.

Senator Flynn: Not before 1979.

Senator Asselin: I rise on a point of order. When I said that the government was dying, I indicated that it was dying to make changes to the Constitution. If the honourable senator feels that it is dying otherwise, that is his own opinion.

Senator Langlois: My honourable friend made a remark which was far from being a question. I replied, however, that if he felt that the government was dying, I felt differently, for the polls show that it is not dying.

Senator Asselin: That is not what I said. You did not understand me.

PROVINCE OF NEWFOUNDLAND

ROYAL DESIGNATION FOR NEWFOUNDLAND CONSTABULARY— QUESTION

[English]

Senator Marshall: Honourable senators, I wonder if I might ask a question of the deputy leader having to do with the efforts of the Monarchist League of Newfoundland to have Her Majesty the Queen designate the Newfoundland Constabulary as the "Royal Newfoundland Constabulary." This thrust was mentioned in the other place, but did not receive much attention.

In view of the fact that the Monarchist League of Newfoundland has made advances in this regard to those responsible in the other place, I wonder if the deputy leader could provide us with some information as to why this very justifiable request was turned down and, apparently, ignored.

Senator Langlois: Given the importance of this question to the people of Newfoundland, I would not dare answer it without making the appropriate inquiries. I shall take the question as notice and provide an answer at the earliest possible moment.

FISHERIES

PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND—SCALLOP FISHING—QUESTION

Senator Bonnell: Honourable senators, I have a question for the Deputy Leader of the Government, which he can take as notice. I would ask him to inquire of the Minister of Fisheries as to whether the scallop fishing season will be open in the waters off Prince Edward Island by July 1.

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, while I was born in a part of the country in which fishing is an important part of the livelihood of the people, I am afraid I know very little about the Prince Edward Island fisheries. I shall make appropriate inquiries and respond to the honourable senator's question at the earliest possible moment.

NATIONAL REVENUE

DUMPING DUTY ON WIDE-FLANGE STEEL BEAMS—QUESTION

Senator Austin: Honourable senators, I would like to pursue my questioning of the Minister of National Revenue on the matter of the remission of duty on wide-flange steel imported into the province of British Columbia.

I asked questions in this regard on two occasions last week and was given the answer that an announcement would be made before the end of the month, which is the date on which the present remission of the duty will be terminated.

On the front page of the Vancouver Province of today's date, the headline reads "B.C. Construction Chaos Seen," and, according to the story, it is alleged by a member of the opposition in the other place that the remission of duty will not be continued. Accordingly, I would like to ask the minister whether he will, either tonight or during the course of this week, be in a position to make a clear statement on what will happen to the importation of wide-flange steel into British Columbia, this being a commodity which is essential to the competitive level of the construction industry in my province.

● (2020)

Senator Guay: Honourable senators, I would like to take that question as notice. As I said before, it is my intention to give some information on this particular matter soon, and I hope to be able to do so within the next couple of days.

FILM "THE MANY FACES OF CHRIST"—QUESTION

Senator Marshall: Honourable senators, I wonder if I could ask a question of the Minister of National Revenue? It has to do with a pornographic film which has been banned in many countries. In the other place the minister was asked what action he was taking to ban the movie called "The Many Faces of Christ," which was made in Sweden. Has the minister made a decision in that regard, and will he advise the Senate as to what that decision is?

Senator Guay: Honourable senators, as I said before, I do not believe the film has been made. I understand that the person in question has been trying to get some money, or to get some persons to back him, so that the film can be made. In any case, as far as the ports of entry are concerned, I have given orders to all staff not to allow this particular film, if there is such a film, to come into the country. If by any chance it should arrive at any port, the staff has been directed to get in touch immediately with the deputy minister who will deal with the matter at that time.

I want to reassure you that the matter has not been neglected, and if by chance anybody should know that the film has been made, then I would appreciate being told about it.

ENERGY

GARRISON DAM, NORTH DAKOTA—QUESTION ANSWERED

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, on June 22 the Honourable Senator Roblin asked for information about the kind of presentations the Canadian government representatives are making to the American government on the Garrison Dam diversion project. In response I wish to state—and the response is quite lengthy—the Canadian government is following closely recent developments in the United States with regard to the Garrison diversion project, and is actively doing everything it believes can most effectively ensure that Canadian interests continue to be protected. In doing so it is also working closely with the Government of Manitoba, which of course has considerable interest in the issue.

[Senator Langlois.]

Several actions have recently been taken. First, Congressmen are well aware of the most recent Canadian views on the project, as they received the Canadian letter of April 3, prepared in consultation with the Province of Manitoba, and forwarded to the State Department. It will be recalled that this letter was in response to the draft revised plan, required as a result of the out of court settlement of the Audubon Society suit against the Department of Interior, and issued by the Secretary of the Interior, Mr. Andras, in February. The Canadian letter indicated that the draft revised plan, while reduced in scope, did not address Canadian concerns, and requested consultations to consider the 1977 report of the International Joint Commission. Canada has been assured of an opportunity for such consultations in the context of the Administration's review of the revised plan.

Second, the Government has been in close consultation with the province of Manitoba concerning recent developments in the U.S. Congress regarding the Garrison question. In response to these developments the Canadian Ambassador in Washington, Mr. Towe, expressed Canadian concerns to the State Department in early June. He was assured that U.S. treaty obligations, the IJC report and Canadian interests would be given careful consideration by the Administration in its handling of the matter. In co-operation with the Province of Manitoba, the Department of External Affairs also facilitated the transmittal through the embassy of a letter from Premier Lyon to the Congress which expressed similar concerns. More recently, a senior official of the department visited Winnipeg to discuss with the Manitoba government the possible implications for Canada of the current situation.

Third, the Canadian embassy in Washington is endeavouring to ensure that those concerned in both the U.S. Congress and the administration are fully aware of Canadian concerns on this issue. With this objective in mind they have, for example, made available to congressmen the text of the exchange between the Secretary of State for External Affairs, Mr. Jamieson, and the honourable member from Winnipeg South Centre, Mr. McKenzie, in the Standing Committee on External Affairs and Defence, June 6.

In approaching this question the government is, of course, aware of the need to ensure that whatever representations it makes are both timely and calculated to be effective in support of Canadian interests. It is also very conscious of the assurances which the U.S. government has provided to the effect that no construction on the Garrison potentially affecting Canadian waters will be undertaken unless it is clear that U.S.

obligations under the Boundary Waters Treaty will be met. These assurances have been reiterated at the highest level, including by President Carter, and we have every confidence that the government of the United States will abide by them.

CANADIAN BROADCASTING CORPORATION

POLITICAL POLLS—QUESTION ANSWERED

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, on May 16 last, Senator Roblin asked some questions with respect to the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation. He said:

I am sure that the acting leader is aware that the CBC has announced that it has conducted a poll to investigate the political preferences of the people of Newfoundland.

My question is to the point as to whether this poll was conducted within the established policies of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation. If we could have a statement with regard to the background of this move on their part, I would be grateful.

I should also like to know who authorized this particular poll, how much it cost, and whether any similar polls have been conducted by the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation.

The answer to the question is as follows:

I am informed by the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation that a comprehensive information service periodically includes reports of public opinion polls on a variety of questions. The CBC from time to time makes use, in its information programs, of the results of public opinion polls conducted by poll organizations independently of the corporation. Occasionally such use is supplemented by surveys commissioned by the CBC. In the conduct of such polls and the use of such information the CBC proceeds under the objects and powers set out in section 39 of the Broadcasting Act.

In the particular case referred to in the question, the poll was conducted during the last week in April and the first week in May by a St. John's research firm for the local CBC news and current affairs program "Here and Now". The survey involved over 1,900 respondents in the entire province of Newfoundland, including Labrador, all demographically selected. The results were broken down demographically and covered the opinions of the people on both provincial and federal political subjects.

The poll was authorized by the executive producer of "Here and Now", in consultation with the CBC's regional director of television in St. John's.

With regard to the cost of the survey, the CBC has not, as a matter of custom, been required to provide such details of its internal management and administration as costs incurred in the production of its programs. The background to this custom is explained in detail in the CBC's reply to Senator Norrie's question printed in Debates of the Senate on March 8, 1977.

● (2030)

INCOME TAX ACT

BILL TO AMEND—SECOND READING

The Senate resumed from yesterday the debate on the motion of Senator Hayden for the second reading of Bill C-56, to amend the statute law relating to income tax and to authorize payments related to provincial sales tax reductions.

Hon. David Gordon Steuart: Honourable senators, Bill C-56 deals with a number of items which Senator Hayden dealt with last night in great detail and, as usual, he did an excellent job. For a few minutes tonight I would like to deal with that portion of the bill concerning the sales tax reduction as it applies across Canada.

I do not think there is any question that when the Minister of Finance, the Honourable Jean Chrétien, embarked on the idea of cutting the sales tax, he was convinced that what he was doing was innovative, would give the economy an immediate shot in the arm, and believed that the move would be well received. But he obviously miscalculated.

To begin with, there are very serious questions as to whether the shot in the arm will have a long-lasting effect. Statistics show that there has been some immediate increase in sales, but there is a serious question whether that increase will last for any length of time. Some people may have decided to buy a car or some large item at this time rather than three or four months from now, and the result may be that we have an upsurge in the economy from sales in the last month or two; but whether that upsurge will be accompanied a down-turn two or three months from now is open to question.

The other part of the reason why he did this was that, as I have said, he was being innovative. It was an honest attempt, I think, to involve the provinces in an effort to do something that would help the economy; and they would all be involved. But what was the result? Well, we know the result with regard to Quebec. He never had an agreement with Quebec. The Quebec Minister of Finance, Mr. Parizeau, gave him no answer. Surely, knowing the position of the governing body of Quebec and its attitude toward Canada, he should have been warned, when they did not agree in writing or even verbally, that he was in trouble—and he found out subsequently that he was in trouble. That is why we have this portion of the bill today.

The question was asked last night, "Is this the feeling of the people of Quebec"? Who knows? I do not know. All that I know, all that you know, and all that the public knows, is that the Government of Quebec, the official opposition of Quebec—in fact, every party represented in the National Assembly of Quebec—have opposed what the federal government has done in this case.

Let me turn to the west. There has been a great question lately whether we as senators are representing the regions as we should. I will now deal with the prairie region. Obviously they gave some indication to Mr. Chrétien that they were prepared to think along these lines. He felt, sincerely I am sure, that he had an agreement, so he offered this sales tax reduction, and they went along with it. However, at a meeting in Yorkton about four or five weeks after the budget, the three premiers of the three prairie provinces, Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, opposed what he had done and said that it was an intrusion into their taxation powers.

What was the result? The result of helping the economy is questionable, but certainly there is no question that the result of helping Canada to be more united and to do something that could please the provinces was, without a doubt, a disaster. Quebec is opposed to it. I do not know what the attitude of the Maritimes is, but I know what the attitude of the prairie provinces is. They did not like it and they still do not like it.

This is a very broad bill. The part I am talking about is, you might almost say, a very minor portion of the bill, but it is the most serious portion.

In this country we are now engaged in a debate as to whether, in fact, this nation shall stay together, and whether the provinces, including the prairie provinces, shall feel at home in this Confederation. We now have a situation where the federal government moves into an area of taxation that has been traditionally that of the provinces.

We all know that the federal government has the right of taxation across the board. There is no question of that. The federal government can move into any field of taxation that it feels it wants to. However, sales tax has traditionally been the field of the provinces. The federal government has moved in and has forced the provinces to make a reduction in the sales tax when obviously—at least, for four provinces; the three prairie provinces and Quebec—it was against their will and against their better judgment. As far as Alberta is concerned, there was no reduction.

Honourable senators, from the point of view of the people of the prairies, this deal to give the taxpayers of Quebec a bonus or some refund or some money in their pockets—I understand the province of Quebec will immediately take steps to see that they don't get—is again a special deal for Quebec. I do not think it is, but they think it is, and that is what is important. At a time when the federal government should be doing everything in their power to convince the people across the country that there is no special deal, and that we are all treated the same, we have this intrusion into what is normally considered provincial jurisdiction, and we have this sort of special deal handed to Quebec. Whether it is in fact a special deal or not does not really matter. The people of western Canada think it is a special deal, especially the people of Alberta.

● (2040)

In Alberta they have no sales tax, so they get no reduction; they get nothing. It is all very well to say, "They are so wealthy, they have no sales tax, they have no gas tax, so why should they get anything?" One can easily foresee a situation in which one province decides that they will have no sales tax because they want to cut expenses. Manitoba is a good example at the present time. They have a government that has embarked on a program of cutting back wholesale on expenses.

[Senator Steuart.]

You may agree with them or you may not agree. That is beside the point. The fact is that if they cut expenses back far enough they may decide to do away with the sales tax, so if this sort of thing continues and the federal government decides in future to make some kind of a sales tax deal the people of Manitoba, who may have given up some social welfare, or some other form of government hand-out, will be cut out because they are not imposing that tax.

That is the way the people of Alberta feel. They say, "You are discriminating against us because we do not have a sales tax. We do not have a sales tax for a variety of reasons." Those in the rest of Canada can say, "You do not have a sales tax because you have got so much oil. You are so wealthy and your attitude is, 'We will sell the oil turn off the lights and let those so-and-so Easterners freeze in the dark'." But they don't feel that way. They feel, rightly or wrongly, that they do not have a sales tax because they have a government that does not believe in big spending. I do not happen to agree with them, but that is the way they feel.

Here we have the federal government deciding on its own that it will give certain benefits to Saskatchewan, especially to Quebec, to Ontario and all the other provinces, but not to the province of Alberta. I am going to tell you something, honourable senators. The people of western Canada—and they are the only ones I can speak for—object very strongly to this kind of move.

I believe this is the kind of bill the Senate should take a serious look at. Unfortunately, it has been coupled with many income tax deals that I think are very good and are welcomed by the people of Canada. This provision to which I have been referring was put in as a kind of rider, so if we decided to defeat this bill we would do a great deal of harm to many innocent Canadians who, I would say, like 80 or 90 per cent of the clauses of this bill. However, I think it should be stated in the Senate that what the federal government has done is wrong in principle and wrong in the way it has been done. There was not enough consultation. The government was supposed to be representing the regions of Canada, and I think that senators from all over this country should speak up, as I am doing, and say that they do not agree with this bill. I do not agree with this bill and I do not intend to vote for it.

Hon. Martial Asselin: Honourable senators, I have listened very carefully to what Senator Steuart has just said about this bill. I hope he will maintain his opinion and will vote against the government and against this legislation when it comes to a vote.

[Translation]

Honourable senators, I followed very carefully Senator Hayden's remarks on the bill we are now considering, namely, Bill C-56. I share his opinions about several chapters of the bill. However, I hope he will not mind if I say that I disagree with him on the explanation he gave of clause 30, limiting explanations strictly to the mechanism and omitting to define its substance and also the basic principle of the bill.

Incidentally, last evening in his first speech to the Senate, Senator Wagner made that point very clearly. I would like to be among the first to congratulate him for his contribution in the study of Bill C-56.

Some Hon. Senators: Hear, hear.

Senator Asselin: Like Senator Steuart, I am also wondering how it is that in 1978 a federal Minister of Finance can take the risk of invading in this way a field of exclusive provincial jurisdiction. It was said in this debate in the other place that the Minister of Finance wanted to innovate, that he wanted to join with the provinces in finding economic incentives and that the sales tax was in the opinion of the minister the step that had the most chances in the short run of getting the economy of this country going again.

Of course, those objectives are commendable. However, what we do not accept is that when the Minister of Finance introduced his budget on April 10 last he did not make sure he had the complete agreement of all provinces on that matter of the sales tax, particularly if you consider—and that is what Senator Steuart said tonight—that the premiers of the Western provinces were informed but not consulted.

The Minister of Finance of Quebec did not give his full agreement, since when the Honourable Jean Chrétien introduced his budget, he was waiting the day after for the answer from the Quebec Minister of Finance, Mr. Parizeau.

All this is to say that if the Minister of Finance, the Honourable Jean Chrétien, wanted to innovate, he should have made sure first in an unequivocal way, as the senator who spoke before me suggested, he had the agreement of all the provinces as he was legislating in an area that was of exclusive provincial jurisdiction.

I would have thought that the Minister of Finance would have first reduced the federal tax which is of 12 per cent on building materials and agricultural implements. That is a tax which in my opinion should have been done away with a long time ago, which is outmoded, inflationary and repressive. That might have been one of the first economic incentives to offer Canadians.

So one still wonders today why the Minister of Finance, the Honourable Jean Chrétien, stirred up such a hornets' nest in view of the tense atmosphere and the constitutional tension prevailing in this country.

Why, as Senator Steuart said, divide the country in three separate parts? Alberta in a sense is being treated as an outcast and will not get any of the benefits of that legislation announced in the budget of April 10 last as contained in Bill C-56, as Senator Steuart suggested earlier. Eight provinces will benefit from the April 10 budget. And then Quebec taxpayers will get special treatment since they will enjoy a maximum rebate of $85 on their income tax.

Why divide our country by presenting this measure concerning the sales tax? We must then ask ourselves if the provincial government alone should be blamed for that failure of a concerted federalism as it was also called in the other place. Of course, I am far from approving in this house the decisions and the actions of the Quebec Minister of Finance, Mr. Parizeau. However, I am not prepared to consider him as the only one responsible for the failure of those negotiations.

First, as I said earlier, when the minister presented his budget on April 10, he had not been given a complete agreement from Quebec on that proposal. So, the Minister of Finance of Quebec, Mr. Parizeau, did not commit himself to accept the Chrétien formula. Why then was Finance Minister Chrétien so anxious to present his budget on April 10? He might have waited a few days to do so when he was sure to have full agreement from Quebec, which he did not have last April 10.

Senator Flynn: There was an election pending.

Senator Asselin: Yes, of course, it was urgent. Furthermore, as Senator Flynn pointed out, it was necessary to gain a few votes and they were anxious to present their budget. They said: Here we are. We must come up with remedies for the economic problems of Canadians, here is the budget we propose to you. It might be also for that reason that the Prime Minister decided not to call an election.

Senator Flynn: He pushed his Minister of Finance around.

Senator Asselin: So a few days later Mr. Parizeau tabled his budget and, considering the particular situation of the Quebec economy and its industrial structure, he abolished the sales tax in four sectors—textiles, clothing, furniture and footwear—instead of cutting a few points of the sales tax on all products as demanded by the federal government. Then the federal finance minister, Mr. Chrétien, accused Mr. Parizeau of indulging in economic separatism. It was a rather surprising allegation which, as you know, was rejected by all opposition parties at the National Assembly of the province of Quebec, including the newly elected leader of the Liberal party, Mr. Claude Ryan, who supported the thesis of Quebec Finance Minister Parizeau against that of the federal finance minister. As I said, that formula was rejected by all opposition parties in Quebec, by the newly elected Liberal leader, Mr. Ryan, and people unanimously disagreed with the Chrétien sales tax proposal.

● (2050)

So, by taking selective action on the sales tax, the Quebec finance minister was moving into a provincial taxation field as a member of a federation in which economic issues can vary considerably from one region to another. Many times, what is profitable for Ontario is not necessarily good for the Atlantic provinces or for Quebec.

Honourable senators, by taking such action the central government violated the letter and spirit of federalism. First, as I said earlier, it moved into a fiscal field belonging exclusively to the provinces without first concluding an agreement with each of them. Then it flouted federalism by not recognizing that the provinces can use their sales tax as they want, according to their needs.

Lastly, honourable senators, what about the payment formula proposed by the finance minister? I have here an article from Le Devoir of May 16, 1978 by Michel Roy concerning repayment of the tax. I would like to quote some paragraphs. Mr. Roy wrote this:

—by giving back directly to taxpayers rather than to the provincial government those $186 million he owes to Quebec, Mr. Chrétien is using a lame, unfair and regressive method. The shirts, the dresses, the shoes and the furniture which Quebecers have purchased in recent weeks have not been subject to the retail sales tax. It is not Mr. Parizeau who has saved money, it is the taxpayers of Quebec. It is therefore to those who grant the tax relief and not to the citizens who are making an 8 per cent saving that the money must be reimbursed in all good logic.

Furthermore, Mr. Chrétien is unduly favouring those who are paying more than $85 in income tax. The taxpayers in the lower income brackets who are not paying any income tax or have been assessed at less than $85 are thereby penalized, and yet the sales tax still applies to everybody. If he had meant to be consistent, the minister would have sent the same cheque to all the citizens without regard to their income tax returns. He is therefore favouring the wrong creditor and he is handing out tomatoes in exchange for oranges.

To solve this dispute which has arisen between the two governments, Ottawa is offering the Quebec taxpayers a gift which the government of Quebec will have to recover later on. This is tantamount to saying that Mr. Chrétien does not want to deal with the Government of Quebec. Indirectly, he is trying to pit the citizens of Quebec against their provincial government. To extricate himself from a bad situation, he has just taken another wrong step which sets a serious precedent in federal-provincial relations.

All newspapers in Quebec have carried similar comments about this crisis which has been qualified as serious in a federal system. This is the reason why the Conservative members in the other place have defended the position taken not only by the Government of Quebec but unanimously by the National Assembly regarding this dispute. As Senator Wagner stated yesterday evening, this is happening at a time when we are experiencing tensions on the constitutional level in this country; at a time also when attempts are being made at the last minute to save the ship of the Canadian Confederation by hastily proposing devised constitutional changes which will have absolutely no influence on the views held by the French-Canadians, and Canadians in general regarding the way this Confederation operates today; given the fact that the constitutional measures presented today, especially the first phase, are not measures essential to the survival of Canadian unity. This is the reason why during this Canadian unity crisis, the Conservative Party has again urged the minister to withdraw from this tax field in view of the fact that the provinces were not happy with this formula. He has been asked to grant a tax rebate to the governments concerned, and this, in our opinion, would have been in keeping with the spirit and the letter of the Constitution.

[Senator Asselin.]

Honourable senators, in view of all these facts, I could speak at length on Bill C-56. But, because of all the facts before us, I feel, like Senator Steuart, that the Canadian Senate once more must play its role fully and must deserve the credibility of Canadians before its demise as a parliamentary body. This is a piece of legislation which concerns the provinces, the regions. This is a legislation which, from a constitutional point of view, is a serious infringement upon the exclusive jurisdictions of the provinces. Will the Canadian Senate remain silent faced with this situation, this constitutional infringement?

Honourable senators, I will not vote for this legislation as drafted. I know that Senator Hayden and his committee have worked very hard with the members of his committee to bring about some changes, but a mere glance at his preliminary report shows he did not manage to get significant concessions from the minister. In this sad situation, I appeal to the responsibilities which the Senate must assume as the protector of the regions and minorities. We should, in my opinion, send this bill to the other place to have it amended and have a more acceptable, a more legal, a more constitutional formula submitted to the provinces, in order to settle this dispute which, in my opinion, will have disastrous consequences for the future of this country and for Canadian unity.

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, I would like to make two slight corrections to the present debate to date. First of all I would like to correct Senator Steuart on what he said last night, and on what he repeated in substance tonight about what happened between the federal finance minister and the provincial finance minister, Mr. Parizeau.

First of all I must correct an erroneous interpretation—and I do not question anybody's good faith, either on the part of those who spoke tonight or who spoke last night. But I believe that what happened then in Quebec has been wrongly interpreted, specially as regards the opposition parties in Quebec. The opposition parties simply took up the position that it was better to reach a government-to-government agreement. They never approved of Mr. Parizeau's attitude during the discussions with the federal finance minister, even less the hide-and-seek game which he played continually. As Senator Wagner said yesterday evening, I do not believe that Mr. Parizeau will get any credit for his little game. I think he tried to show how smart he was. Perhaps he scored a few points on this aspect of the problem but I am sure we have not yet reached the stage in Canada where it is possible to try to be clever, even on constitutional matters.

In support of what I just said, even though Mr. Parizeau himself blames the federal government for its intrusion in a provincial taxation field, as my good friend Senator Asselin said tonight, he himself included this in his budget after Mr. Chrétien's budget speech—and I have here a photocopy of Mr. Parizeau's budget, Table No. 2 for the 1978-79 budget. Here is what it says at the first item, in millions of dollars:

Tax on incomes and assets; Personal income tax; Employers' contributions and so on—$5,254

There is a note at the bottom of the page, and I quote:

Including $225 million as federal compensation for the suppression of the sales tax on some consumer goods. This compensation is made by way of a deduction of federal personal income tax and of an equivalent tax levied by the federal government and transferred to Quebec.

Therefore Mr. Parizeau was not objecting to the policy proposed by Mr. Chrétien. He accepted it and he had it included in his own budget.

In addition, I think it is important to point out the attitude of Mr. Parizeau who during the debate, particularly after the debate, changed his mind many times when he first refused the Chrétien proposal, then accepted it, until his leader, Mr. Lévesque, contradicted him, by saying: It is not acceptable. Finally, the whole thing is put off to next fall.

It is very difficult in a federation such as ours to negotiate with a government that no longer wants this federation, that has decided in advance that Canada should die, disappear. Furthermore, no minister of finance, whatever the party he belongs to, could resist in front of those people. Mr. Parizeau could not discuss in good faith, and that is what happened in Quebec and what will happen until the referendum settles the question.

Senator Asselin: That is small politics.

Senator Langlois: Those are facts.

● (2100)

[English]

Hon. H. A. Olson: Honourable senators, I feel deeply concerned about this bill, especially the way in which the rank and file of the population of my province will perceive its application. I say that because there seems to be the idea abroad in Canada, perhaps in Ottawa—and perhaps even in this chamber—that somehow every single person in Alberta is substantially better off than people in other parts of the country. I should like to have a serious discussion about that for a few minutes.

I would be the first to admit that the revenues to the treasury of Alberta are buoyant, especially in relation to expenditures. It perhaps would not take long to make the argument that the management of the energy resources by the present and previous governments has been such that the financial position of the Province of Alberta is probably as good or better than any other province. I am not trying to challenge that argument at all. I expect that, given that the unemployment level in Alberta is the lowest in the country, and the other economic factors at work in that part of the country, there is perhaps at least a percentage, however small, of people in Alberta who feel somewhat more confident of the future in terms of the ways and means which will be available to them to make a living than is the case in other parts of the country.

But it is also fair to say that the vast majority of Albertans—those working in construction, those working in the supermarkets, the farmer, the school teacher, and so on—are exactly the same as the vast majority of people all over this country, including places like British Columbia, Ontario,

Quebec, and even most parts of the maritimes, including Newfoundland. It seems to me that if we are to retain the fundamental basis of unity in this country, people in similar circumstances, regardless of where they live in Canada, ought to be treated in the same way.

Part III of this bill, which deals with compensating payments, does not treat people in exactly the same circumstances in the same way, simply because they live in different parts of the country. I understand the government's position, its motive, which is to stimulate the economy of the country by the most direct method, and that, of course, is a cut in the retail sales taxes. I think it is an admirable approach. It is one that has the immediate effect of lowering prices, thereby encouraging increased consumer spending.

As a matter of fact, the Economic Council of Canada, of which I am a member, recommended that precise action in its fourteenth report, which was published in the fall of 1977. So, I have no argument with the approach taken. I also understand the argument that this constitutes a new initiative, if that is the right word, or a new intrusion into provincial affairs. I am not going to argue that point this evening. Honourable senators have already heard two speeches on that aspect of it. But now we have come to the point where, because of some disagreement with a provincial government respecting this initiative, there is a new method being proposed for the distribution of federal funds for the originally stated purpose. There is to be an adjustment in federal income taxes for people living in a certain part of the country in order to achieve reasonably the same distribution of federal funds as would have been achieved under the original proposal. However, as is stated in the bill, and as has been explained by the Chairman of the Banking, Trade and Commerce Committee, this does not apply to Albertans.

Sadly, there are many people in Canada, including some in this chamber, who feel that every single Albertan is rich. Those who feel that way are more ignorant of this country than I dare believe. Yet, that is the attitude we run into from time to time.

I honestly feel that a farmer at a certain level of income in Alberta, or a carpenter, or a plumber, a policeman, a nurse, a school teacher, ought to be treated in exactly the same way under federal laws as those living in any other part of Canada. Certainly, being treated in the same way by the federal government is most important when it comes to the area of taxation. If this bill becomes law, as I expect it will, there is going to be a difference. I do not think that we should assume that the rank and file of Albertans are going to be so naive or so uninformed that they do not know they are being treated differently from the taxpayers in other parts of the country. Anyone who makes that assumption should at least take into account that the opposition parties will make sure that they do know about it. I say, with regret, that Part III of this bill is going to be perceived as discriminatory, unfair, as it relates to people in the same circumstances but living in different parts of the country.

This is not the first time this has happened. Alberta has, under both Liberal and Conservative governments over the years, been discriminated against as far as taxation is concerned, and especially as far as equalization payments are concerned. I am not blaming any one particular party over the other. I would presume that most members of this chamber are not aware of the fact that all of Alberta's income from natural resources is treated as taxation revenue for equalization payment calculation purposes. Alberta is not eligible now, and has not been for many years. Yet, the Alberta government and people have argued for a long time—and I think with some justification—that some of the revenue from natural resources is production income, but a very large part of it is in fact the sale of a capital asset, a depleting asset, and it therefore should be treated as revenue from the sale of capital. To treat it the same as production income is unfair. Yet, this has been going on for a number of years.

I would also presume—I think justifiably—that most people in this chamber do not know that, for equalization payment purposes, the Alberta treasury has always been regarded as having imposed a sales tax. In other words, an amount equal to that which a sales tax would yield has always been added to Alberta's income for purposes of calculating equalization payments.

● (2120)

It may be that you can argue that access to that revenue was there, but whether the Government of Alberta or, indeed, the people of Alberta wished to impose upon themselves a sales tax, for whatever purpose, in my view was and ought to remain at the discretion of that government and those people. Yet, this is what has happened. I do not want to keep honourable senators any longer, but I would just like to point out how this is going to be perceived, and I think I would have been remiss in my duty if I had not drawn to the attention of the Senate another case which may add some fuel to the fires of alienation. It is not the only one. I could spend another two hours, if you wanted me to do so. I happened to bring the notes with me, but I am not going to use them.

However, I want to repeat, with sadness, that I hope nobody in this chamber will say that he or she cannot understand this feeling of alienation, and the sometimes feeling of frustration, on the part of people who live in Alberta when they see this kind of discrimination, and when they are treated differently simply because they live in that province and because there is a perception somehow that everybody who happens to live there is wealthy. Perhaps this is because the provincial treasury is doing rather well. We do not deny that. My request, in conclusion, honourable senators, is that the standing committee at least try to find some way by which taxpayers and citizens in similar circumstances as far as wages, the cost of living and that sort of thing are concerned, no matter whether they live in Canada, under federal law are treated the same.

Senator Denis: May I ask the honourable senator a question? He just said that Quebec has not been treated in the same way as the rest of Canada. But you must understand that that was because the Minister of Finance refused to accept the way it was decided by the other provinces. Nevertheless, the compensation is the same as that granted to the other provinces. Do you think it would be more fair or more equitable if Quebec should get nothing as compensation?

[Senator Olson.]

Senator Olson: No, honourable senators, I certainly do not think that. I think there should be a very diligent search to make certain that citizens in all parts of the country benefit equally from whatever the amended or new federal taxation law happens to be. I think this was the main thrust of my discourse. Quebec is in a somewhat different situation from the other provinces, because Quebec has chosen to reduce its sales tax in a different way. Right from the beginning, because of the nature of the payment, Albertans were excluded. That is the point I am trying to make.

I would like also to point out that if you take seriously the statement that the purpose of the reduction in provincial sales taxes—which are, in effect, consumer sales taxes—is to stimulate the economy—in other words, to encourage consumers to increase their spending—then it seems to me that all the consumer goods on the shelves in Alberta come from the same places as the goods you find on the shelves in other provinces of Canada. If an increase in consumer spending were desirable, then I am sure the consumers of Alberta would have responded and spent those additional funds, in this case $85 or $100, to stimulate the wheels of industry in this country.

In conclusion, let me say that I do not quarrel for a moment with the proposition that Quebecers have an equal right to the benefits under federal law, and I hope my honourable friend will agree with me that Albertans have that right too.

Hon. Duff Roblin: Honourable senators, if the Senate is to be considered as representative of regional rights and interests, this bill certainly deserves more than passing consideration. It is a comfort for me to realize that this is a view widely held in this body, having had the opportunity of listening to distinguished contributions from all sides by those who have spoken in this debate this evening.

I think I would like to start by recognizing that the Minister of Finance has taken an important step in a new direction in consulting with the provinces about ways and means of co-operatively enhancing the operation of our national economy, a step which I for one certainly approve as being in step with our evolving economic and constitutional position. Thus it is more in dismay than with a sense of reproach that I have to acknowledge that the political fall-out from what was potentially a constructive step has been so maladroit and so counter-productive for the great purposes of our nation.

Canada needs better federal-provincial co-operation and planning, not so much in the management of the economy—because much of government economic planning is, in my view, singularly inept and unsatisfactory—as in reducing the inflationary pressures that we have in the nation today and improving the prospects for employment. The need for this co-operation, I suggest, is obvious when we take note of the changing role of the central government in the economic atmosphere of our nation. It is no longer the undisputed master. Federal public spending comprises 40 per cent of the total; provincial public spending comprises 60 per cent of the total, as the Minister of Finance told us in committee this morning. That speaks volumes in itself. The provinces are acting more and more on their own behalf in the oversight of economic affairs in their areas.

● (2130)

The federal government has saddled itself and the nation with a deficit this year of $11½ billion, making it crystal clear that there is less and less room for it to manoeuvre effectively by itself in dealing with the economic problems of the nation. We have seen how provincial moves in some of the provinces can undo the federal intentions and underline, if it needed any emphasis, the need for better machinery to arrange the co-ordination of this great sector of our national concerns.

When I originally prepared my notes for this speech I had some extended comments to make upon the sales tax idea, what its possible effects on the economy might be, what substitutes there were for it; but in view of the present hour I will spare senators and myself the necessity of belabouring a thought that perhaps can be expressed on another occasion.

I want to limit my remarks now to the means chosen in this bill to reduce the inflationary pressures on society and to improve the economic prospects, and I want to consider the question of the interaction between the federal and provincial governments on the sales tax measure.

First, I personally applaud the minister for attempting to co-ordinate these two levels of government. Second, I have a certain amount of sympathy for him in his efforts to reconcile the unreconcilable—because surely that has to be his position with respect to Quebec under its present administration. But I think it appropriate to inform the Senate that there are other views than those that have been offered by the government in this debate, or by the Province of Quebec in this debate, and to warn the house, as has already been done to some very effective degree by those who have preceded me, that Quebec is not alone in its constitutional protest.

Other provinces also take strong exception to what is being done. They are led, I suggest to this chamber, by men who are anxious and concerned to preserve our Confederation and to place it in a sound position to face its future.

I also suggest that it is no good—as some have done perhaps in the heat of debate; the temporary heat, I trust—to bring into question the patriotism, or lack of it, of those who hold opposing views throughout the whole nation, of those who disagree. I suggest that we will be better off if we deal with these issues on the merits of the issues themselves rather than indulging in comments that might, on reflection, better be left unsaid.

I maintain that the four western premiers are fully entitled to be considered good Canadians. They are just as good as any member of this house or of the other house, and they are fully entitled, I suggest, to put forward—indeed, obliged to put forward—the views which they hold, even if they are somewhat inconvenient to those who are ruling the nation today.

I appreciate the reference made by the Honourable Senator Stuart to the protest of the four western premiers, which I attempted to present to the house, perhaps improperly, in the course of the question period, but it would be, I think, advisable that the house should be aware of what they really said and how they really feel. The question as to whether or not you agree with their sentiments, or even whether they are right or wrong, is not the material point; you can never meet the other man unless you know what his point of view is and how best the two of you can compromise to reach workable solutions. And when you listen to their language you realize that they are very serious.

This is a reference to the meeting at Yorkton of the four western premiers on April 13, three days after the federal budget, and I will just read some of it to you. I hope I will not trespass on your good nature, because there is a lot of it. I will not read all of it, but they opened their conference with a reference to the federal budget of April 10.

The premiers stated that they too had shared this view to a certain extent... but that the federal budget had directly contradicted the spirit of federal-provincial co-operation and consultation which the February Conference—

That is, of the first ministers.

—had been intended to foster and could be prejudicial to ongoing discussions on national unity.

The Premiers stressed that they were not debating the principle of the sales tax cut as a fiscal measure, but they were sharply critical of the unilateral and intrusive way in which it had been put forward.

They noted that the federal government had not used the opportunity afforded by the February Conference of First Ministers to raise its proposal but instead gave provinces only days to consider the plan. Insistence on budget confidentiality by the federal minister made normal interprovincial consultations difficult if not impossible.

The Premiers had several specific concerns.

1. The severe distortion of provincial fiscal and economic priorities caused by the unilateral exercise of federal budgetary policy. They were particularly concerned that the federal plan was put forward so late in some provinces' budgetary planning cycles, and after others had brought down their budgets.

2. The dangerous and unacceptable implications the measure may have for other possible federal fiscal initiatives and intrusions into areas of provincial taxation, budgetary responsibility, and constitutional jurisdiction.

3. The fact that provinces did not participate in the decision concerning the federal compensation formula which treats Canadian taxpayers differently depending on the region in which they live.

4. The total reversal of the policy toward greater flexibility in the new cost-sharing arrangements between the federal government and the provinces achieved in 1976 and 1977—

The Premiers emphasized that they were putting the Federal Government on notice that their Provinces did not accept the federal plan as a precedent for future invasions of provincial tax fields by the Government of Canada.

There is more, but I have referred to the part that bears most closely on the nature of this debate. I do not submit these remarks as my own. I do not submit them as being not debatable or to be accepted at their face value. Nothing of the sort. They were made by men who are active in public affairs, and we know what that means. But I do suggest that it is important that we should know the attitude with which they are approaching these serious problems which beset us.

I should draw your attention to what I think to be the key phrase in that statement, "unilateral and intrusive intervention by the federal government", because these men, and some who held their jobs before, have very keen memories of this tendency of the federal government to introduce unilateral and intrusive measures. I can recall that being done in the fields of medicare, hospitals and welfare, which are surely provincial concerns, and the federal government used its financial power to dictate provincial priorities in provincial fields on the pain—and it is a considerable pain—of foregoing federal money that their own provincial taxpayers had helped to provide.

It has been lately, and I think with hope, recognized in Ottawa that the provincial stand had much to be said for it, because we have seen the conversion of the health and welfare grants old style, which were subject to detailed federal direction, into new block grants in which the spending discretion is left with the provinces. So I think it is probably with a sense of shock that some provinces thought that Ottawa might be settling back into the bad old habits of using fiscal pressure to get their own way in matters which were within the jurisdiction of the provinces.

I want particularly to give you some extracts from the budget speech of the finance minister of the Province of Manitoba, the Hon. Donald Craik. This speech was given on April 10, the same evening as the federal budget speech. I think it illustrates very well the state of mind of people on the other side of this argument, a state of mind which I think we have to keep in our minds. This is part of the statement, from page 18:

● (2140)

It has been barely two weeks since the provinces were first advised that the federal government might be prepared to underwrite a portion of a provincial sales tax reduction... and confirmation that the plan would proceed only came late last week. As Members will appreciate, negotiations were quite intense during that period, and, in fact, further discussions will have to take place to resolve a number of outstanding details. We would have preferred more time to negotiate possible variations in the size, term and selective application of the abatement.

Obviously we favour a cut in taxes—

[Senator Roblin.]

It goes on to deal with that whole proposition, and concludes by saying:

The measure... while stimulative to the economy in the short run, and therefore desirable, has all the unacceptable qualities of initiatives taken by the Liberal Governments of the 1960's—

I interject to say, "And sometimes by Conservative governments too."

—which distorted provincial budgetary planning by utilizing the offer of "50¢ dollars"—or in this case "66⅔rd's-cent-dollars"—to accomplish federal aims by intrusion into provincial areas of constitutional and fiscal authority.

This nation has been too long subjected to such intrusive and sometimes ill-conceived impositions of federal political priorities on the programs and budgetary processes of the provinces...

We also put the federal government on notice that we do not accept this hastily-devised plan as any precedent for future invasions of provincial tax authority by that government.

I think that very well sets out the view that is held by the government of one province, and I suspect that if we were to canvass some others we might find that their opinions are not too far away from what I have already said.

In committee this morning we heard a very eloquent and, I am sure, sincere statement by the federal Minister of Finance of his side of the story. I do not lose sight of the validity of some of the points he made, and I certainly do not ignore the spirit in which I think he is approaching his responsibilities in this matter.

I would like to hope that even in our present difficulties all is not lost. I do not think it is necessary for us to sit in judgment on the federal minister or the provincial ministers, but what we have to do, I suggest, is to know how they are thinking, because it is only by application of those facts to the future that we will find the answers to the problems we have.

What is necessary now, I think, is for us correctly to read the lessons of this episode. Both parties have politicians and they come up with political judgments, but I think there are real lessons in this episode that will be of guidance for us in the future, and I will take the liberty of suggesting three of them to the Senate.

First, I think we have to define, or perhaps redefine, the meaning of "consultation." Consultation can no longer be what it has been for far too long—certainly in my experience—and that is, "Listen while I tell you what we are going to do." That is not consultation. It goes by that name. It is in the federal plan for reforming the Constitution, but it is not consultation. "Listen while I tell you what we are going to do. We will listen to your arguments, but listen while I tell you what we are going to do."

What we need is real collaboration. We need collaboration in the joint development of policy, with sufficient flexibility to recognize the possibilities of provincial variations on the federal theme.

My second suggestion would be that budget secrecy is a convention of the Constitution which could well be discarded in days to come. There has been a very eloquent statement made by Alan Lambert, who is heading up one of the royal commissions looking into the affairs of government. I have it here before me. I will not read it because senators will probably have read it themselves. But he makes, to my mind, an unanswerable argument for dispensing with an outworn convention of the Constitution which no longer has any significant application in respect of the secrecy of budget measures.

If there had not been this convention of secrecy, I am sure that many of the problems that afterwards arose could have been amicably settled and ironed out before the crisis came out into the public the way it has done.

We need to open up the budget-making processes to the public view. There is no aspect of government which more affects the individual citizen than what we do in framing our budget. Yet there is no aspect of government, I suggest, where he has less input or less say; indeed, he is never even heard until far after the event and far too late to do any good.

There has to be an opening up to public view of the budget-making process. There has to be meaningful debate and representation in committees, where the public can be heard and where all options can be canvassed; and we must do it in such a way that we provide an opportunity for the government in Parliament to amend or modify its budgetary proposals after debate and examination without loss of face or, what is more important, without loss of office.

If anyone has been following the development of the Constitution in the United Kingdom these days, he cannot help but be struck by the fact that the government's budgetary policies have actually been amended by the House of Commons in Great Britain on the motion of members of the opposition, reducing the government revenue in certain respects, without the government's falling or without the question of the secrecy or matters of confidence being brought into the issue. It seems to me that we could catch up with what is going on there in terms of framing our budgetary policies so that these things could be done.

My third suggestion is that we must seek ways and means—and this is an obvious current necessity—of institutionalizing the methods of co-operation, particularly in economic and fiscal matters, between the federal government and the provinces of this country. They are going to establish between them the economic and fiscal climate of the nation. The influence of the provinces grows day by day, and they have to be brought into this new system of settling our economic norms and fiscal policy.

Surely, when we are considering reforming the Constitution, as we are these days, this has to be the prime area of attention. This is where the reform is needed. This is where the new initiatives must be discussed. This is where new constructs must be created, so that this aspect of cooperation between the two levels of government can be made to work—because in that way we can make our country work better for everyone who lives in it.

When I think of the measures that are actually in this document that we are to discuss in a little while—reform of the Senate, the Supreme Court, the Governor General—how many parsnips does that butter? It seems to me that we would be well advised if we devoted our attention to the main problems confronting our Confederation, rather than matters which are important only in a personal way. I like the Senate in many respects, but it is peripheral, not central, and we need to put first things first in our country today.

That is a challenge, honourable senators, that I think is worthy of the best minds and the wisest judgment that Canadian politicians and statesmen can bring to bear, because they are engaged in nothing less than the continuing task of reviewing the national dream.

Senator Godfrey: Would the honourable senator permit a question? I agree with what he said about budget secrecy, which is often carried to excess; but in this particular case, if it had got out in February that the federal government was proposing this scheme to reduce the sales tax, which would not take effect until May, would that not have had a detrimental effect on the economy for the three-month period before it actually came into effect?

Senator Roblin: I agree with the honourable senator that this is not an easy proposition. It is all very well to say, "Let us do away with budget secrecy", but when we come down to certain practical aspects of it we have to use common sense and good judgment. It may be that the answer lies in the time element involved.

I must say, with respect to the general proposition, that I have some doubts as to whether, having disclosed your hand on the sales tax prior to the actual announcement in the house, it would have done any particular harm to the economy as a whole, particularly as it is such a temporary matter.

It seems to me that if anyone is placing his hopes on this limited reduction in the sales tax, which is to expire in September or shortly afterwards, as doing anything more than bunching up purchases in that period and leading probably to a falling-off of purchases afterwards, then he is much more optimistic about it than I am. It is a small mercy. I am grateful for small mercies. I am not turning it down. On the exact point that the senator raised, I grant him that there are problems, but I think that once you make up your mind that the principle is not sacrosanct, you will be able to find ways and means of handling it safely in the public interest.

● (2150)

Hon. Allister Grosart: Honourable senators, under our rules it is within five minutes of the time that we would be required to end this sitting. I do not know what the disposition of the Senate may be, but I have some comments to make which I think are of some importance in respect to this bill. I am in the hands of the Senate, because my understanding is it would be in the interests of expedition, if nothing else, to have the Senate dispose of this bill on second reading tonight so it can go to committee and be discussed there tomorrow.

Senator Choquette: I never thought we were limited to an hour.

Senator Grosart: I am referring to the 10 o'clock rule.

Senator Langlois: Stop the clock.

Senator Grosart: If that is the disposition of the leadership of the Senate, I am very happy, and I will make my remarks as brief as I think it is fair to make them in view of the importance of the matter that I am going to call to the attention of honourable senators.

My remarks will be entirely limited to one clause of the bill, and that clause is clause 6, which deals entirely with a matter which has occupied the attention of a special committee of the Senate for some ten years, and on which that committee has made recommendations over the years.

Clause 6, as Senator Hayden mentioned, runs to six and a half pages of the bill itself, and is the subject of discussion in Hansard of the other place. This is not because there is a great deal other than a single concept here, but it has been necessary to deal with the ramifications of those suggestions in the other place and that is why it takes as much space as it does in the bill before us.

It is unfortunate, in my view, that the government has decided to introduce measures of very great significance to a very important part of our economy in this kind of omnibus bill. It is an old device or trick that is used continually towards the end of a session. I know we all regret it, and I am sure that honourable senators will agree with me that is not the way to legislate in important matters.

When I say important matters, I say that we are dealing here, in this one clause of this omnibus bill, with a matter of government expenditures on science activities which amount this year to $1.8 billion, which is 3.75 per cent of the total budget. It is introduced in a single clause in an omnibus bill.

What is even worse, this bill and this clause were the subject of the guillotine twice in the other place: once on second reading and once in Committee of the Whole, so that those who had contrary views as to how this important matter should be handled were prohibited from introducing their amendments and putting before the Parliament of Canada alternative suggestions to those of the government which, in their view, and in the view of the industry as a whole, will not work.

Honourable senators may wonder why, at this late stage, I am introducing a discussion of this one clause. Senator Hayden referred to it in a few words, understandably, when he introduced the bill. The minister in the other place dealt with it in one paragraph of his speech. Why? The intention, I think, is to hope that nobody will be concerned too much with the effects or the non-effects of this very fundamental change in our national science policy. It is fair to say that this is an attempt by the government to do something about the government's appalling neglect of the great problem of the funding of research and development in Canadian industry.

[Senator Grosart.]

It amazes me, and I am sure it will amaze some honourable senators, to know that in this age when technological innovation is the key to world markets, the funding of research and development in Canadian industry has declined since 1970. Since 1970 the funding of research and development of Canadian industry has steadily declined in constant dollars. In current dollars it shows an increase, but in constant dollars it has actually decreased. That has been the policy of this government. I cannot believe that there is a senator in this chamber tonight who would not know that this is one of the fundamental causes of the troubles of Canadian industry: the troubles we are in in international markets, and the troubles we are in in our own domestic markets, which are being invaded by foreign companies that are funded by their own governments, generally at twice the Canadian rate, sometimes three times the rate.

Canada is at the bottom of the ladder in every type of assessment of government funding of technology, research and development, and innovative technology in industry. It does not matter how you look at it, we are at the bottom of the ladder in terms of federal funding of net percentage of GNP in R & D and in science activity generally. We are at the bottom of the ladder in the percentage of the total funding by the government of R & D in industry. We have a figure of about 43 per cent as compared to 60 or 70 per cent for every other country with which we are competing.

We may wish to believe that this clause in this bill is an attempt by the government to catch up on its own neglect which has had these almost fantastic and horrendous effects on the Canadian economy generally.

What we have to ask immediately, of course, is: Is this a successful attempt? Nobody could quarrel if we could say that the government has finally awakened and become aware of the problem and has said, "Now, we are really coming up with a remedy." Is this remedy going to be effective? The answer appears to be no. On the surface it looks good.

Let me indicate to honourable senators what the government intends. In this clause I am discussing, it intends to legislate a very great increase in the funding of R & D generally and particularly in industry. The clause provides for a 50 per cent allowance on the increase by companies in their expenditure on R & D based on a three-year moving base. It is a tax allowance, in spite of the fact that Canadian industry, almost without exception, said to the government, "Don't go the tax allowance route. Go the tax credit way." There were before the government presentations by the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, by the Science Council of Canada, by SITEC and by the industry associations concerned, saying, "The only good answer is to go the tax credit way."

● (2200)

I will not burden the house tonight with a long discussion of the difference between the tax allowance route and the tax credit route, except to say this. Honourable senators will be aware that there was a former plan, part of which was known as IRDIA, which was an incentive program to industry. Government spokesmen have made it clear that their intention is that clause 6 of this bill will replace IRDIA and give much better beneficial support to R & D in Canadian industry. Yet the projections that have been made objectively would indicate that the benefits to Canadian industry under this tax allowance plan are actually lower in terms of dollar benefit to Canadian industry than under the former IRDIA plan.

I will not bother honourable senators with all the arithmetic, because it is involved and is, of course, subject to different kinds of interpretation. However, I should like to indicate that one of its fundamental faults is that it discriminates completely against R & D expenditures by small business. The best calculation I have is that with respect to the 50 per cent additional allowance, plus the investment credit—I will not go into all the details or the background—the effect of this bill will be to decrease the actual expenditure on R & D to 35 cents per dollar spent for large firms but only to 59.4 cents for small firms.

It is a fundamental defect in this bill, because anyone who knows anything about technological innovation knows that most of the important and effective dollar winning innovation occurs in small- and medium-sized industry. It is a strange fact that large businesses are not great technological innovators, for the simple reason that they have an established product—they are satisfied with their product—and are not all that keen to see innovation in their product mix. It is the small firms that come up with it, yet under clause 6 the small firms are discriminated against.

Furthermore, unless there are regulations, unless we are going to be told something we have not been told about the intent or effect of this clause, there are large loopholes and leaks. There is nothing in the bill, and nothing in anything that has been said about the bill, to make it clear that these tax allowances will be restricted to R & D performed in Canada. There is nothing to say that it will be restricted to R & D exploited for the benefit of Canadians.

We know that this bill has been put together in a hurry for various reasons. It is window-dressing; it is smokescreening. If this bill goes to a committee, I hope this question will be asked: Does it really mean that any corporation can get a 50 per cent additional tax allowance on top of the existing allowances if it does R & D somewhere in the United States, in Great Britain or in Bulgaria? Is there anything in this bill or in the regulations to protect that expenditure of Canadian money?—because it is expenditure of Canadian money, as lost revenue is an expenditure. Is there anything in this bill or in regulations that will protect an expenditure of Canadian money from exploiting R & D innovation outside of Canada? We have not heard a word about this. This is why I have drawn attention to the fact that in the whole discussion of this bill there are not more than three paragraphs in any official statement dealing with this very important issue. There were only three paragraphs in the pre-budget statement by the minister.

The assumption seems to have been that nobody would bother about this, that nobody would pay any attention to it. As I have indicated, when an attempt was made to bring this matter to the attention of Parliament, the guillotine or closure was imposed on second reading, and again when an attempt was made to raise the same question that I am raising in this place now in Committee of the Whole of the other place. If some such consideration in the Senate of a bill with this kind of history does not justify the existence of this place, I don't know what will.

I will just put on the record the changes that have been suggested by those who have carefully studied this matter, people with long experience of this great and important problem of the funding and performing of R & D in respect of Canadian industry. Suggestions have been made that instead of the tax allowance there should be tax credits. Again I say I will not go into that; it would take 15 minutes to indicate the difference, the dollar effect, of this as an incentive to innovating in industry. I merely say the suggestion is that the wording of the amendment to the Income Tax Act should be:

(a) the qualified current expenditures of the eligible corporation on scientific research and development, up to a maximum of one million dollars, in the taxation year other than expenditures made from amounts paid to the corporation in the taxation year by

- (i) Her Majesty in right of Canada or a province in respect of scientific research,
- (ii) another corporation resident in Canada for scientific research related to the business of that other corporation, or
- (iii) a corporation not resident in Canada if it is entitled to a deduction under subparagraph 37(1)(a)(v) in respect of the amount so paid, and

● (2210)

(b) the amount by which the total qualified current expenditures exceed the aggregate of

- (i) one million dollars,

This takes in another area where the expenditures are over $1 million. Paragraph (b) continues:

- (ii) the expenditure base of the corporation for the year, and
- (iii) the aggregate of all amounts paid to the corporation in the taxation year by

Then (A), (B) and (C) as in the bill:

- (A) Her Majesty in right of Canada or a province in respect of scientific research,
- (B) another corporation resident in Canada for scientific research related to the business of that corporation, or
- (C) a corporation not resident in Canada, if it is entitled to a deduction under subparagraph 37(1)(a)(v) in respect of the amount so paid.

The paragraph continues:

where the qualified current expenditures of the eligible corporation exceed one million dollars in the taxation year.

There are also suggestions concerning situations, not dealt with in this bill where a corporation does not have a tax base on which it can obtain tax allowances. It has been suggested that the bill should provide that a company which is not in a position to benefit from its tax liability is eligible for specific grants related to the situation that this bill contemplates.

Honourable senators, I regret having taken up your time and having gone beyond the normal closing time of the sitting. However, I think it is important that this particular aspect of the bill be brought to the attention of the house and perhaps it may receive some attention if the bill is referred to committee.

Senator Godfrey: Would the honourable senator permit a question? It is with some diffidence that I ask the question, because you earlier referred to a 10 o'clock rule and I have not been able to find any such rule in our rules. I find that there is a 6 o'clock rule. Is there a rule of which I am not aware? If there is not a 10 o'clock rule, I do not think we should allow it to appear in the record that there is.

Senator Molson: No, there is no such rule.

Senator Godfrey: To what rule are you referring when you say there is a 10 o'clock rule, that we must stop at 10 o'clock?

Senator Perrault: It is with reference to the other place.

Senator Langlois: It is an opposition rule.

Senator Grosart: I am delighted to find that I was mistaken.

Senator Godfrey: I did not want you to invoke it this evening, that is all; that would be a precedent.

Hon. Salter A. Hayden: Honourable senators—

The Hon. the Speaker pro tem: I must inform the Senate that if the Honourable Senator Hayden speaks now his speech will have the effect of closing the debate on the motion for second reading of this bill.

Senator Hayden: Honourable senators, I do not intend to take long at this time of the evening—

Senator Grosart: You cannot.

Senator Hayden: Even if what my friend Senator Grosart mentioned is correct; that is, that we are violating what he calls a 10 o'clock rule. I am sure the Speaker could adjust his eyes to the clock and decide that it is not even approaching 10 o'clock at this time.

Senator Perrault: It is a quarter to six.

Senator Hayden: So on that basis I will proceed and not take long. I have enjoyed the debate. It has mainly concerned itself with charting the course of future federal-provincial relations, and for this reason it has been an interesting debate. It has not necessarily been on the subject matter of this bill, but at some place or other in the bill can be found a peg on which to hang the various points of discussion. So I am not objecting to what was said.

I was concerned about a suggestion that Senator Roblin made in his reading of what Premier Lyon had said with respect to this bill and the legislation proposed by the federal authority, which is that this is not to be taken as a precedent. He was not, therefore, condemning so much what had been done and what he had participated in himself and in respect of which his own legislature had enacted a bill increasing the provincial sales tax by the $100.

[Senator Grosart.]

Senator Flynn: It is income tax.

Senator Molson: Income tax.

Senator Hayden: Yes; increasing the income tax by $100, so that he would recover what the federal authority was giving back to the individual. With respect to the expression "this is not to be taken as a precedent," it had been my practice to call the meetings of our committee at 9 o'clock in the morning. Then, under pressure, I made it 9.30. When we were to hear the Minister of Finance this morning, he asked if he could appear at 10 o'clock. So I sent the notices out calling the meeting for 10 o'clock. However, I instructed the Committee clerk to notify all the senators that this was not to be taken as a precedent. So there are many applications of this rule, and if it is applied on a particular occasion it must be that it is desired to do it.

May I now tell you what the Minister of Finance had to say about the negotiations when he appeared before the committee this morning. It will only take a minute. He said:

Last October I became convinced, looking at the American experience, that the best way to stimulate the economy was to improve the demand in the economy. Many economists last year concluded that the come-back of the American economy was caused greatly by a surge in demand. I started to talk to my provincial colleagues about the possibility of what I felt was the best incentive I could give to the people who were spending their money, and that was to cut sales tax.

Honourable Mr. Chrétien continued:

I started to talk to my provincial colleagues, offering them the possibility of compensation if they were to reduce their sales tax. The idea was not too popular in October, and I started to talk about it again in January at the Ministers' Conference. There was no interest shown at that time. By the time I had decided to have a budget I had decided to move in that direction.

I am told that for the first time in the history of Canada the Minister of Finance went to visit and talk to all the ministers of finance of the land and try to incorporate them in an economic package. I offered to compensate them for a reduction of sales tax and for three weeks we discussed the matter and came to an agreement with eight out of nine provinces. Following the signing of an agreement of all other ministers of finance, the ninth province, after 48 hours, wanted something else, and, unfortunately, I had to tell them no. I had no choice. I had offered a deal and they did not want the same deal. I had given my word to the ministers of finance so I had to live with it.

He said further that on the very day or night of budget, on April 10 and on the day following, eight out of the nine provinces enacted legislation amending their income tax so as to take back the $100 which the federal authority was allowing under this proposal. When I look at this factual situation I have no reason to doubt that what the Minister of Finance said fairly represents what went on, and it would appear from what Senator Roblin read in relation to what Premier Lyon of Manitoba said that it is corroboration of his statement.

● (2220)

Senator Roblin: Would my learned colleague allow me to correct the record. I was quoting the Minister of Finance, Donald Craik; not Premier Lyon.

Senator Hayden: I understood you to say Premier Lyon. However, the record will indicate what you said. In the meantime, in case it does not, you have made your correction.

What I was saying was that it is difficult to conceive that eight out of nine provinces should amend their provincial income tax legislation in this fashion if there was not some understanding or some arrangement whereby they were going to be reimbursed by the federal authority. I must disagree with the comments made by Senator Steuart last evening, in which he stated:

The premiers of the three prairie provinces met in Yorkton some time ago and denounced the move by the Minister of Finance, in effect forcing them to reduce their sales tax—not particularly against their will, but after what they themselves stated was little or no consultation.

All I can say is that, whatever degree of consultation they may have had, at least it was adequate enough for them to go back to their legislatures and present an amending bill to implement, as far as they could, the arrangement which the Minister of Finance proposed.

Those are the circumstances we should look at. It is impossible to suggest that the provincial premiers were forced into doing what they did in this case. They may not have liked the deal, but as the Minister of Finance for the Province of Manitoba said, accepting Senator Roblin's correction for the moment, what was done was not to be taken as a precedent. I would direct your attention to look at what was done, and what was done certainly indicates knowledge, co-operation and approval.

Senator Steuart made reference to a "breach of faith" or something to that effect, on the "disaster". He is entitled to those views. I do not challenge his views, but I would say that if you read them and put them beside what was said and what was done by the provincial premiers, it is difficult to draw the same conclusion.

Senator Olson, in his plea on behalf of the Province of Alberta, is entitled to say what he has stated. Yet, it must be measured in terms of what the situation was. When he refers to Part III of the bill, the part dealing with compensating payments, then he is on shaky ground, because clause 59, Part III, of the bill provides for the situation where the formula of $100 or $85, as the case may be, does not produce enough remuneration to enable the federal authority to reimburse the various provinces for the actual cost of the reduction of the provincial sales tax. Clause 59 was put in to provide for payment out of the Consolidated Revenue Fund of an amount which is necessary and needed in order to bring it up to an amount which would enable the federal authority to make full payment of the remuneration to each of the eight provinces by virtue of the agreement. This is not a special gifting of any money to a particular province. This is simply the implementation of an arrangement under which the provinces would reduce their sales tax, and the federal authority would reimburse them for doing so. The method that was followed was a method that was available—that is, by making use of the individual taxpayers, and I described this last evening.

I should like to discuss for a moment what Senator Grosart raised with respect to scientific research. I hope he noted that scientific research first developed in Canada as a write-off or a deduction from income in 1961 when the government of that time permitted the 100 per cent write-off. I do not think I have to mention what government it was. My friend knows that. So the principle, if there is a principle in recognizing research, was really established on a 100 per cent basis in 1961. A year or so ago the present government provided an additional 5 to 10 per cent for further deduction, and this year they proposed 50 per cent further deduction based on the excess of the expenditures in this year over the average of the expenditures in the previous three years. That is the formula.

Now, if there are people who object to the formula—and according to my friend there are people who would object to the formula, unless I misunderstood him—they have a means of voicing their objection. If their voice is not recognized, well, it is not the first time that people have not got what they want. It is a judgment decision as to what the formula is, but the formula, at least, has the character of being fair in its measuring of what is excess of expenditure.

They still enjoy the 100 per cent write-off; they still enjoy the 5 to 10 per cent write-off; and now they get, on top of that, an extra 50 per cent write-off. It has been suggested by the minister that this would break down the cost of such development to about 20 per cent.

This is all I intend to deal with this evening. I am not going into the question of the formula for Quebec. This was a situation that developed and it may well be that the Minister of Finance was in a too readily acceptable mood to recognize that there might possibly have been some intention or plan behind the objections by the Quebec Minister of Finance. It may have been for irritation purposes; it may have been for political purposes, or whatever. In any event, it reached a point where the Minister of Finance said, "I am not going to make any concessions that will create a different situation from what I have given the other provinces." Therefore, since Quebec had committed itself to certain industries and reduced the sales tax affecting those industries, an estimate was made of what that amount would be. The government agreed to pay $40 million as its estimate of what was needed to remunerate the Province of Quebec for the commitments it had made.

● (2230)

When it came to making the deductions insofar as individual taxpayers in the Province of Quebec were concerned, the $100 deduction, which was the basis of the concession made by the federal authority to the eight provinces, was reduced by $15 per taxpayer. The estimate was that the $40 million in relation to Quebec taxpayers translated into $15 per person. The net result was an equivalent measure in dealing with the Province of Quebec to what was arranged with the other provinces. I am not saying it was the same measure. It was hoped to be a solution to the problem.

My friend Senator Grosart is enjoying what I am saying. I know that, because very often he smiles when he disagrees, and frowns when he approves. I know him well. I have been talking with him on the opposite side for many years, so I know how to interpret his attitude.

Senator Flynn: What about mine?

Senator Grosart: I should be frowning now.

Senator Hayden: Well, you should take heed, I would say.

The question of federal-provincial relations, and what the future holds in respect of such relations, and what has been wrong with the federal attitude to date are matters which make for interesting debate, but not necessarily a productive debate insofar as this bill is concerned, particularly when most of those who spoke along those lines, as I understood them, accepted the sincerity of the minister and the innovative and imaginative character of the proposals and the solution.

Senator Flynn: It is too bad he bungled it.

Senator Hayden: The approach taken by the minister was a good one. No one can challenge that. Its purpose was to stimulate the economy at the level where the demand is.

I have enjoyed the debate. As and when this bill is given second reading, if it is in fact given second reading, I shall move that it be referred to the Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce.

Motion agreed to and bill read second time.

REFERRED TO COMMITTEE

The Hon. the Speaker pro tem: Honourable senators, when shall this bill be read the third time?

Senator Hayden moved that the bill be referred to the Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce.

Motion agreed to.

APPROPRIATION BILL NO. 2, 1978-79

SECOND READING

The Senate resumed from yesterday the debate on the motion of Senator Langlois for the second reading of Bill C-61, for granting to Her Majesty certain sums of money for the Government of Canada for the financial year ending the 31st March, 1979.

[Senator Hayden.]

Hon. Allister Grosart: Honourable senators, Senator Langlois, in introducing this bill, made the shortest speech he has ever made on an appropriation bill—

Senator Flynn: And consequently his best.

Senator Langlois: For a change, you understood it.

Senator Grosart: That remark by Senator Flynn was not arranged.

Senator Petten: It sounded orchestrated.

Senator Grosart: I was about to follow my opening remark by saying I would follow suit.

Hon. Senators: Hear, hear.

Senator Grosart: Senator Flynn bet me that I would take more than five minutes, and I intend to win that bet.

Honourable senators, we are dealing with Appropriation Bill No. 2 for 1978-79. I think we are all thankful that, as a result of some representations made in the Senate, Treasury Board is now numbering these bills sequentially in the year to which they refer. We have already passed Appropriation Act No. 1, granting roughly three-twelfths supply, and we are now dealing with the aggregate of the total amount of the main estimates less the amount already voted by Appropriation Act No. 1. We are dealing now with $15 billion of the $20 billion in budgetary and non-budgetary voted items, which is roughly three-quarters of the total voted budget, and, of course, an equivalent amount in statutory items which do not have to be voted but which are included in the schedule to the bill.

The Standing Senate Committee on National Finance dealt with the main estimates on which this bill is based, holding four sessions directly on the estimates and further sessions on peripheral matters relating thereto. I congratulate the Chairman of the National Finance Committee on this greatly accelerated examination of the estimates.

I am sure we can all remember when it took only one session of the committee to deal with the estimates. It is now four and more. Senator Everett has now established a routine by which the committee examines individual departments, or programs or branches within departments, and I commend the committee and Senator Everett on that very important innovation.

For that reason, I think I can say to the Senate that the committee examined, to the best of its ability, the necessary matters in the estimates and, therefore, the necessary matters in the appropriation bill that should be brought to the attention of the Senate. We are satisfied, therefore, that there is no particular reason why this appropriation bill as presented should not be passed by the Senate.

Motion agreed to and bill read second time.

The Hon. the Speaker pro tem: When shall this bill be read the third time?

Senator Langlois moved that the bill be placed on the Orders of the Day for third reading at the next sitting.

Motion agreed to.

● (2240)

SENATE COMMITTEES

MEMBERSHIP CHANGES DURING SUMMER ADJOURNMENT

Hon. Jacques Flynn moved, pursuant to notice of Thursday, June 22, 1978:

That during the coming summer adjournment of Parliament changes in the membership of Senate committees may be made by notification in writing to the Clerk of the Senate by the Leader of the Government in the Senate, or any senator named by him, with respect to government members, and by the Leader of the Opposition in the Senate, or any senator named by him, with respect to opposition members; and

That such changes in the membership of Senate committees shall be recorded in the Minutes of the Proceedings of the Senate when Parliament resumes.

He said: Honourable senators, if the Senate is prepared to adopt this motion, then I do not intend to speak to it because in fact it speaks for itself.

Motion agreed to.

The Senate adjourned until tomorrow at 2 p.m.

APPENDIX "A"

(See p. 924)

INCOME TAX ACT

INTERIM REPORT OF BANKING, TRADE AND COMMERCE COMMITTEE
ON SUBJECT MATTER OF BILL C-56

JUNE 27, 1978

On May 15, 1978, Bill C-56, intituled "An Act to amend the statute law relating to income tax and to authorize payments related to provincial sales tax reductions" received first reading in the House of Commons. This Bill is intended to implement the Notice of Ways and Means Motion that was tabled by the Minister of Finance with the Budget presented in the House of Commons on April 10, 1978.

By resolution of the Senate on May 23, 1978, the Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce was authorized to examine and consider the subject-matter of any Bill based on the Budget Resolutions relating to income tax in advance of any such Bill coming before the Senate, or any matter relating thereto.

In accordance with the Order of Reference, your Committee has given careful consideration to the said Bill C-56 arising from the said Ways and Means Motion and in connection with such consideration has engaged the services of Mr. Charles Albert Poissant of Thorne, Riddell & Co., Chartered Accountants, and retained as its counsel, Mr. Thomas S. Gillespie of Ogilvy, Montgomery, Renault, Clarke, Kirkpatrick, Hannon & Howard. The Committee has also heard Mr. R. A. Short, Director, Tax Policy Legislation Division, Mr. R. A. Friesen, Special Advisor and Mr. A. Mitchell, Tax Policy Officer, all of the Department of Finance (Tax Policy and Federal-Provincial Relations Branch). In addition, the Committee has heard submissions from the Life Underwriters Association of Canada, Excelsior Life and North American Life Assurance Company.

Bill C-56 contains amendments to the Income Tax Act and the Income Tax Application Rules and provides authority for the Minister of Finance to pay out of the Consolidated Revenue Fund to provinces amounts related to provincial sales tax reductions.

Your Committee would like to make the following comments with respect to the Bill:

PROVINCIAL SALES TAX

The federal government has asked the provinces to cooperate to effect a temporary reduction in their general retail sales tax rates and has offered to compensate them in part for loss of sales tax revenue. The government's offer to finance the provincial reductions would take the form of full compensation for a reduction of three percentage points for six months in the Atlantic provinces. It was proposed that for other provinces except Alberta, the federal government would compensate for the revenue foregone arising out of a two-point reduction for a period of six months, provided such provinces agree to effect a further reduction of one point. Such provinces would have the option of reducing their sales taxes by three points for six months or by two points for nine months. In either event, the federal government would compensate these provinces to the extent of a two-point reduction for six months.

The province of Quebec decided upon a full elimination of sales tax on selected items.

To implement the temporary reduction of retail sales tax rates in provinces other than Quebec (and Alberta), Clause 30 of the Bill proposes that individuals residing in the former provinces deduct from tax otherwise payable under Part I of the Act for the 1978 taxation year an amount equal to the lesser of $100 and the amount of tax that would have been otherwise payable by them for the year. It is anticipated a like amount would be payable by the individuals as income tax to the provinces.

Authority is also given by Part III of the Bill to make payments out of the Consolidated Revenue Fund to provinces who do not receive the full compensation promised by the transfer of tax in the manner outlined in Clause 30.

With respect to the province of Quebec, it is proposed that the federal government transfer directly to the province $40,000,000, being the federal government's share of the anticipated cost of the reduction of tax on the items selected by the province of Quebec. In addition, the Bill proposes (Clause 30) the immediate reimbursement to each Quebec taxpayer of an amount equal to the lesser of $85 and the tax otherwise payable by him for the 1977 taxation year. This represents the balance of funds per Quebec taxpayer that the federal government anticipates paying as a result of the proposed reduction in retail sales tax rates.

REGISTERED RETIREMENT SAVINGS PLANS

Options available at maturity

The report of your Committee dated December 9, 1976, indicated your Committee's concern with the inflexibility inherent upon maturity of Registered Retirement Savings Plans (RRSP's). Only two options were available at maturity of a plan: to take all funds out of the plan and be taxed immediately thereon or to purchase a life annuity from an insurance company. The Minister of Finance undertook at that time to determine whether these inflexible provisions could be changed in the interests of the taxpayer and your Committee encouraged such study.

As a result, changes are proposed by the Bill making more options available at the maturity of a plan. The Bill proposes (Clauses 34 and 35) that a taxpayer not wishing to take all the funds out of his plan at maturity be entitled to purchase:

(1) an annuity, with or without a guaranteed term, payable to the taxpayer for his life or the joint lives of the taxpayer and his spouse, or

(2) an annuity for a fixed term equal to the number of years remaining before the taxpayer (or his spouse if she is younger and the taxpayer so elects) reaches the age of 90, or

(3) an annuity under a Registered Retirement Income Fund (RRIF) whereby a specific fraction of the total assets of the Fund composed of capital plus accumulated earnings would be withdrawn each year by the holder to provide annual income to age 90. The fraction would be related to the age of the taxpayer in the year and would be equal to one divided by the number of years remaining to age 90. For example, a taxpayer would be entitled to receive 1/15 of the fund at age 75, 1/14 of the fund at age 76, and so on.

Financial and other institutions that are now eligible to issue RRSP's will be permitted to offer these options. Presently, these are mainly life insurance and trust companies.

Each taxpayer will be limited to one RRIF. RRIF owners will be entitled to manage the investments of the RRIF through directions to the institution holding the funds, similar to the existing provisions for self-administered RRSP's.

Minimum maturity age

The Bill also proposes (subclause 34(9)) that RRSP's may mature only after an annuitant attains 60 years of age and before the end of the year in which he attains 71 years of age. The current requirement is that the maturity date for an RRSP must be on or before attainment of age 71 with no minimum age limitation.

It appears to your Committee the imposition of a minimum age will create unnecessary and severe problems for persons who require annuity payments prior to the age 60. For example, an individual encountering permanent impairment of health may be forced to a limited work schedule and reduced income. It might be beneficial for him to convert his RRSP into an annuity to supplement otherwise inadequate income.

Another example would be a holder of an RRSP dying at an early age and survived by a spouse 40 years of age and dependent children. As observed in the brief of the Life Underwriters Association of Canada presented to your Committee on June 7, 1978:

"The surviving spouse faces a period of severe emotional trial and financial readjustment. The present RRSP law is flexible and well suited to emergencies of this kind because the surviving spouse can roll over the deceased's RRSP into his or her own RRSP. This provides continuing tax shelter and the opportunity to plan the future. It may be that the maturity of the RRSP as an annuity should be deferred five or ten years because of other assets currently available. The proposed amendment would prohibit this type of arrangement. The income averaging annuity option is of limited use in such circumstances because it must be exercised within a few months which may not be practical in such circumstances.

Suppose the surviving spouse in the previous example decides to take employment and defer the maturity of the RRSP rolled over from the deceased spouse. Ten years later at age 50 the spouse becomes disabled and needs to convert the RRSP into regular income at that age. Under the law as now proposed the only option would be to cash out the RRSP and suffer the tax burden in one year."

There is another option available. An individual may obtain a partial withdrawal of funds from an RRSP by contracting a second plan, requesting a direct transfer to the second RRSP of the funds he wishes to have remained in an RRSP and receive as a taxable amount the balance remaining in the first plan. This alternative is cumbersome and costly and if not performed in the proper manner, the individual may be taxed on the full amount of his first plan.

Your Committee feels there is no apparent need for a minimum age requirement and because of the hardships such requirement may cause, it recommends there be no minimum age requirement for maturity of RRSP's.

Taxation of RRSP and RRIF benefits at death

The Bill also proposes (subclause 34(15)) that, except where the spouse is the beneficiary, benefits pursuant to an RRSP shall be required to be commutable at death and the annuitant shall be deemed to have received the value thereof immediately before death. As a result, the deceased will be taxed in the year of death on the fair market value of his RRSP. Similar provisions apply to RRIF's (subsection 146.3(6) of the Act as proposed by Clause 35 of the Bill).

Under the present Act (paragraph 61(2)(d)), an amount received by any beneficiary as a refund of premiums under an RRSP on or after the death of an annuitant under such plan is considered as a special income receipt that qualifies for the purchase of an income averaging annuity contract. The advantage of deferring tax through the acquisition of an income averaging annuity contract is available to beneficiaries receiving single payments out of deferral plans, that is to say, payments out of or under a superannuation or pension fund or plan, and is also available to any beneficiary of a single payment from a deferred profit sharing plan on the death of an employee or former employee covered by such a plan (subparagraphs 61(2) (a) (i) and 61(2) (a) (ii)).

Furthermore, the proposal may create hardship for the deceased's estate. The beneficiaries receive the proceeds whereas the estate is obliged to pay the tax—and usually at a higher rate than that which would be applicable to the beneficiaries.

It is recommended that in the event the deceased dies without a spouse and the children of the deceased are the beneficiaries of his RRSP, there be no commutation of the RRSP benefits at his death and he not be taxed in the year of death; rather, the children be taxed on the benefits received with the option of deferring tax through the purchase of an income averaging annuity contract.

LIFE INSURANCE

Interest on policy loans

Bill C-11 (which received royal assent on December 15, 1977) amended the Income Tax Act to provide that a policy loan would be considered a disposition of an interest in a life insurance policy and the amount of the loan received in excess of a policyholder's adjusted cost basis would be included in computing his income subject to tax. Interest paid on policy loans would increase the adjusted cost basis of a policyholder's interest in his policy (paragraph 148(9) (a) and subsection 148(9) (e.1) of the Act).

Bill C-56 proposes (Clause 36) that in computing the adjusted cost basis of a life insurance policy after March 31, 1978, the premium paid on the policy exclude any interest paid before 1978 on a policy loan. Officers of the Department have indicated that justification for such a proposal is that many insurance companies have indicated they do not have complete records as to prior interest payments.

Your Committee notes that the adjusted cost basis of an interest in a life insurance policy will be increased in some instances by the amount by which the cash surrender value of the policy at its first anniversary date after March 31, 1977, exceeds the adjusted cost basis of the policy as otherwise determined. Therefore the effect of excluding interest paid before 1978 on a policy loan from the adjusted cost basis may not be severe in many instances.

Notwithstanding this mitigating consideration, your Committee feels many insurers or policyholders have records of payments of interest on policy loans and if such records are available, policyholders should be allowed to use them to establish their adjusted cost basis. It is recommended Clause 36 be deleted.

Reserves

In 1969 amendments were introduced giving different treatment to actuarial reserves and non-capital losses of life insurance companies. By 1977 the reserves accumulated by life insurance companies in compliance with the 1969 amendments were perceived as being excessively generous. Consequently, the level of Part I tax payable was negligible considering the size of the industry.

As a result, changes to the Act were introduced in 1977 reducing the amount of reserves available to life insurance companies as deductions from income. Instead of taxing insurance companies on the difference at the end of 1977 between the reserves previously permissible and reserves under the new method over a ten-year period, as was originally proposed, clause 63(b) of the Ways and Means Motion tabled on October 20, 1977 proposed that non-capital losses and other deferred deductions that might otherwise be carried forward as reserves from the end of 1977 be substantially reduced or eliminated.

Such proposition was effected in part by the enactment of Bill C-11, which added subsections 13(22), 13(23) and 111(7.2) to the Act and amended Section 138.

With reference to this matter, your Committee noted in its report tabled in the Senate December 7, 1977, that losses incurred from the disposition of Canadian securities, as defined in the Act, would be disallowed but it was understood that it was the Department's intention to introduce compensating benefits. The extent of such benefits was unknown to your Committee at that time. Your Committee recommended that a thorough study be made of these proposals and that the results of the study be made available for consideration by your Committee.

In its second and final report tabled in the Senate December 14, 1977, your Committee noted that the Minister of Finance had undertaken to make a further study of this proposal.

As a result, by letter dated March 7, 1978, addressed to the Chairman of your Committee, the Minister of Finance forwarded a memorandum entitled "Transitional Rule For Policy Reserves Of Life Insurers". In his letter, the Minister noted as follows:

"Over the last two months, officials of my Department have had extensive discussions with the life insurance companies concerning the new method of computing policy reserves. They have met individually with each of the companies that had communicated concerns to us with respect to this issue. They have also received communications from a significant part of the industry that found our general approach to be totally satisfactory."

This is in contrast with the comments made by Mr. A. R. McCracken, Senior Vice President, North American Life Assurance Company before your Committee on June 7, 1978:

"You may wonder why more companies have not come to this hearing. The only thing I can suggest would be that we and several other companies have had appointments with Department of Finance people, and, quite frankly, we were very discouraged at the reception we received. Some of the companies may have been sufficiently discouraged to the extent that they have "given up the ghost," as it were."

Bill C-56 contains Clause 28, which would apply where an insurance company's 1977 carryforward deduction (an amount to be prescribed by regulation) would exceed its 1977 policy reserves computed on the new basis. This amendment is silent as to the treatment of loss carryforwards.

The methods to determine the amount of loss carry-forwards to be eliminated is as follows. A company would calculate the amount of the difference in reserves at the end of 1968 between the new and the old reserve methods. A similar calculation would be made as of the end of 1977. The difference of reserves at the end of 1968 would then be subtracted from the difference at the end of 1977. The difference would then be compared with the total loss carryforward at the end of 1977. Only the excess would be available in 1978 and subsequent years. For companies transacting group term insurance, the amount compared with the total loss carryforward would be increased by the company's additional reserve at December 31, 1977, for group term insurance. Their 1978 loss carryforward position would be reduced further accordingly.

As an example, let us assume a company has the following reserves available at the end of 1968 and end of 1977 under the new old reserve methods:

	End of 1968 ($000,000)	End of 1977 ($000,000)
Old reserve method	$54	$114
New reserve method	50	100
Difference	4	14

The $4 million difference in reserves at the end of 1968 is subtracted from the $14 million difference at the end of 1977 to obtain a net amount of $10 million. Only amounts of loss carryforwards in excess of $10 million will be available in 1978 and subsequent years.

Representations were made to your Committee to the effect that (a) the proposals will have a retroactive effect by denying tax loss carryforwards which were legally available to insurance companies and (b) such measures are discriminatory in favour of companies with no less carryforwards at the beginning of 1978.

The full effect of the proposals to reduce reserves and reduce or eliminate loss carryforwards cannot be determined until your Committee has seen the proposed regulations—which are not available. As a result, your Committee does not feel it is in a position to comment on the proposals until it has seen the regulations.

Your Committee has found itself in 1977 and again in 1978 in the position of attempting to review proposals to reduce reserves and reduce or eliminate loss carryforwards in the absence of regulations implementing such proposals. Your Committee finds it most regrettable that it has been unable to study the full effect of these proposed changes. It is hoped the Minister will make the regulations available to your Committee within the shortest possible delay to enable the Committee to complete its examination and report on these proposals.

SCIENTIFIC RESEARCH

Since 1961 Canadian taxpayers have been allowed a full deduction of current and capital research and development (R & D) expenditures in the year they are made. This was supplemented last year by the introduction of an investment tax credit on current and capital R & D expenditures from 5 to 10%, depending on the region in Canada where they were incurred. The Minister of Finance recognized the need to continue to encourage Canada's research and development efforts in his Budget Speech of April 10, 1978, noting that an adequate level of R & D is crucial to achieve gains in productivity and to strengthen Canada's position in an increasingly competitive world.

As a result, the Bill contains measures (Clause 6) whereby taxpayers will be entitled to deduct an extra allowance of 50% on qualified current and capital expenditures incurred in taxation years ending after 1977 and before 1989 on scientific research in Canada. The amount deductible as an extra allowance will be the amount by which the scientific research expenditures in the year exceed the taxpayer's average scientific research expenditures over the previous three-year period (base period).

As a result, the taxpayer's after-tax cost of additional amounts spent on research and development may be reduced to as low as 20%.

If a research property is disposed of, there may be included in a taxpayer's income the lesser of the extra 50% allowance previously deducted and one-half of the lesser of the research property's fair market value or its capital cost.

Your Committee welcomes the introduction of this additional incentive. However, it notes inequities may arise if extraordinary expenditures were made by a taxpayer in its base period. Recognizing the difficulties in establishing a satisfactory alternative, and in order to minimize any inequities that might result, it is recommended that the base period be extended to five years.

FAMILY FARMS

As a general rule, any increase in value of a farm accrued up to the time of the death of the owner would be included in computing the income of the owner in the year of his death. To encourage children of farmers to carry on the operation of family farms, the Act provides special rules (subsections 70(9), 70(9.1) and 73(3)) whereby farms may be passed from one generation to another without immediate tax liability for accrued gains in value.

Your Committee recommended in its report on the White Paper on Taxation tabled September 1970 that there be an exemption from capital gains tax to the extent of the first $75,000 of aggregate net lifetime gains derived from the sale of farms. The report recognized the modern alternative of farms being owned by corporations by extending the proposed exemption to dispositions by corporations. Recognition of the modern practice of corporations and partnerships owning farms is contained in Clauses 14 and 15(5) of the Bill whereby the rollover treatment available to family farms will be extended to transfers of shares of qualifying farm corporations and interests in qualifying farm partnerships.

The Bill also extends the rollover treatment to agricultural quotas and other eligible capital property (Clause 15(2)).

FAMILY LAW REFORM

The Act presently allows (subsection 70(6) and section 73) inter vivos transfers of properties between spouses and spousal trusts without immediate tax consequences. Realization of gains or losses are postponed until the transferee spouse or trust disposes of the property.

The Bill proposes (Clause 15) that where capital property has been transferred to a former spouse in settlement of rights arising out of their marriage or to an individual pursuant to a decree, order or judgment of a competent tribunal, the realization of gains or losses on the transfer will be postponed in the same manner. As a result, tax on any gain or the deduction of any loss will be postponed until the transferee spouse or individual disposes of the property, at which time the transferee spouse or individual will include any gain or deduct any loss being the difference between the proceeds of disposition and the transferor's adjusted cost base.

FOREIGN NON-BUSINESS INCOME TAX

Canadian taxpayers frequently find they are unable to claim tax credits for foreign taxes paid, particularly with respect to foreign taxes paid to a country with which Canada has no treaty to avoid such double taxation. The Bill proposes (Clause 5(3)) that taxpayers not able to enjoy the full Canadian tax credit for foreign non-business income taxes paid be entitled to deduct such part of foreign non-business income tax from income as was not creditable from tax.

Your Committee welcomes this relief but notes the relief is less than complete and applies to non-business income tax only.

Canadian taxpayers paying foreign business-income tax are often deprived of claiming a full credit against Canadian taxes notwithstanding a foreign-tax carryover of five years (reference is made to subsection 126(2) and paragraphs 126(7)(a) and 126(7)(b)).

Your Committee encourages the Minister to take such measures as may be available to ensure that Canadian taxpayers obtain complete credit for foreign taxes paid.

PART IV TAX (TAX ON TAXABLE DIVIDENDS RECEIVED BY PRIVATE CORPORATIONS)

Your Committee welcomes the proposed amendments contained in the Bill (Clauses 32 and 42) relating to Part IV tax.

Bill C-11 extended the exemption from Part IV 25% refundable tax to dividends received by a private corporation that owned more than 10% of the fair market value of shares of the paying corporation unless the cumulative deduction account of the recipient corporation and associated corporations exceeded in the aggregate $750,000 for the year in which it received the dividends.

Your Committee noted in its report tabled December 7, 1977, that "large" private corporations, that is to say, private corporations with cumulative deduction accounts in excess of $750,000, would not enjoy the exemption from Part IV tax unless they controlled the corporation paying the dividend and therefore would be prejudiced.

As a result, Bill C-56 proposes that there be an exemption from Part IV tax for all dividends paid to a private corporation that holds more than a 10% interest in the paying corporation. As a consequence, there will be no deduction available to the payor corporation in determining its cumulative deduction account where a dividend is received by a corporation owning more than 10% of the payor corporation and on which no Part IV tax is payable.

TAXATION YEAR

Clause 55 of the Bill was inserted to make sure corporations would have a taxation year in each calendar year. The clause achieves this result for a corporation's first taxation year but not necessarily for subsequent years.

It is your Committee's recommendation that the clause be amended to enable corporations to have taxation years in all calendar years.

CONCLUSION

Your Committee wishes to express its appreciation for the services rendered in the review of the Bill by Messrs. Charles Albert Poissant and Thomas S. Gillespie.

Your Committee has examined and considered the subject-matter of Bill C-56 in accordance with its terms of reference and, except as noted above, has no comment to make on the Bill.

Respectfully submitted,

SALTER A. HAYDEN,
Chairman.

APPENDIX "B"

(See p. 924)

INCOME TAX ACT

FINAL REPORT OF BANKING, TRADE AND COMMERCE COMMITTEE
ON SUBJECT MATTER OF BILL C-56

JUNE 27, 1978

By resolution of the Senate on May 23, 1978, the Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce was authorized to examine and consider the subject-matter of any Bill based on the Budget Resolutions relating to income tax in advance of any such Bill coming before the Senate, or any matter relating thereto.

In accordance with the Order of Reference, your Committee is presenting its interim report to the Senate concurrently herewith.

Your Committee has heard the Honourable Jean Chrétien, Minister of Finance, and now reports as follows:

PROVINCIAL SALES TAX

The Minister explained to the Committee the purpose of the federal government proceeding to ask the provinces to co-operate to affect a temporary reduction in their general retail sales tax rates. Based on Ontario and U.S. experience, it was felt a reduction in the general retail sales tax rates was the quickest and most effective way of stimulating demand in the Canadian economy.

He also explained the reason for Clause 30 of the Bill providing that there will be a deduction from federal tax payable by Quebec taxpayers for 1977 and a deduction from federal tax payable by taxpayers of other provinces (other than Alberta) for 1978. The federal government collects income tax for all provinces except Quebec. The federal deduction from income tax proposed by Clause 30 together with the simultaneous imposition of a similar tax by all provinces except Quebec and Alberta will mean that taxpayers in those provinces will pay the same aggregate amount of federal and provincial income tax. The less a taxpayer in those provinces pays to the federal government, the more they will pay to their provincial government. On the other hand, Quebec collects its own tax. If a deduction were deferred until the 1978 taxation year, a refund would be payable to Quebec taxpayers in the spring of 1979 only. It is the federal government's desire to stimulate the economy immediately and not wait until 1979.

UNDERTAKINGS OF THE MINISTER

The Minister gave the following undertakings to your Committee:

Registered Retirement Savings Plans (RRSP's)

A further study will be made of your Committee's following recommendations:

- (1) that RRSP's be allowed to mature before age 60; and
- (2) that in the event a deceased dies without a spouse and the children of the deceased are the beneficiaries of his RRSP, there be no commutation of the RRSP benefits at his death and he not be taxed in the year of death; it is recommended, rather, that the children be taxed on the benefits received with the option of deferring tax by the purchase of an income averaging annuity contract.

Interest on Policy Loans

He will study further your Committee's recommendation that policyholders having available to them records of payments of interest on policy loans should be entitled to use them to establish the adjusted cost basis of their interests in their insurance policies.

Reserves

In its interim report on the subject matter of Bill C-56, your Committee indicated its hope that the Minister will make recommendations available to your Committee within the shortest possible delay to enable the Committee to complete its examination and report on the proposals to reduce reserves and reduce or eliminate loss carryforwards available to life insurance companies.

The Minister has undertaken to furnish the regulations to your Committee by the end of next week and, if invited, to appear before your Committee in September or October to review these proposals.

CONCLUSIONS

In view of the foregoing explanations and undertakings by the Minister of Finance, your Committee recommends that the Bill receive favourable consideration.

Respectfully submitted,

SALTER A. HAYDEN,
Chairman.

APPENDIX "C"

(See p. 924)

INCOME TAX ACT

EXCISE TAX ACT

REPORT OF BANKING, TRADE AND COMMERCE COMMITTEE ON SUBJECT MATTER OF AMENDING LEGISLATION RELATING TO SMALL BUSINESSES

JUNE 27, 1978

On June 7, 1978, Bill C-59, intituled "An Act to amend the Income Tax Act and the Excise Tax Act in matters relating to the ownership and operation of small businesses" received first reading in the House of Commons. This Bill is intended to implement the Ways and Means Motion tabled by the Minister of Finance in the House of Commons on May 25, 1978.

By resolution of the Senate on June 13, 1978, the Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce was authorized to examine and consider the subject-matter of the Bill C-59, in advance of the said Bill coming before the Senate or any matter relating thereto.

Bill C-59 contains proposed amendments to the Income Tax Act and the Excise Tax Act providing tax relief for the small businessman.

INCOME TAX ACT

Allowable business investment losses

The Income Tax Act provides that a corporation may deduct allowable capital losses from taxable capital gains only.

Such losses that are not deductible currently may be carried back one year and forward indefinitely but may offset taxable capital gains only. The same rules currently apply to individuals except that $2,000 of allowable losses may be offset against any other income in each taxation year.

The Bill proposes (Clauses 1, 2, 3 and 7) that allowable capital losses incurred by a taxpayer, whether an individual or corporation, upon the disposition of shares of a Canadian controlled private corporation to persons with whom he deals at arm's length or dispositions of debts owing to him by Canadian controlled private corporations to persons with whom he deals at arm's length be deductible for tax purposes against income from any source. Any excess may be carried back one year and forward five years and applied against income from any source.

The Bill also proposes (Clause 4) an amendment to section 50 of the Act to the effect that taxpayers shall be deemed to have disposed of shares of companies should they become bankrupt for proceeds equal to nil. The taxpayer will be allowed a full loss measured from his adjusted cost base in the year of bankruptcy.

Transfer of shares of the capital stock of small business corporations

The Bill also proposes (Clauses 5, 6 and 9) a deferral of up to $200,000 of capital gains which may be realized upon the transfer between generations of a family of shares of the capital stock of Canadian controlled private corporations whose property consist substantially of:

- (a) assets used in a manufacturing, processing, mining, logging, farming, fishing, construction, wholesaling, retailing or other business that may be prescribed; or
- (b) shares and debts of another small business corporation.

(It is to be noted that tax relief is proposed with respect to the disposition of shares of family farm corporations in Bill C-56 as well.)

The $200,000 is a lifetime maximum and the deferral will apply whether the shares be transferred during the taxpayer's lifetime or at his death.

Capital gains tax payable on death

Under existing law, the capital gains tax arising on death of an individual may be paid in equal instalments over a six-year period. The Bill proposes (Clause 8) to extend the period to ten years.

EXCISE TAX ACT

Every person required by Part III, IV or V of the Excise Tax Act to pay taxes is obliged to file monthly returns showing taxable sales for the previous month. Furthermore, persons granted licences by Part III, IV or V of the Act must, if no taxable sales have been made in the preceding month, make a return each month so indicating.

The Bill proposes (Clause 10) amendments to authorize persons to make returns in respect of accounting periods of less than one month and to allow persons whose sales are seasonal and whose tax for the last preceding calendar year did not exceed $2,400 to make returns in respect of one to six months.

CONCLUSION

In view of the benefits extended by the Bill to small businessmen, your Committee recommends the Bill receive favourable consideration.

Respectfully submitted,

SALTER A. HAYDEN,

Chairman.

THE SENATE

Wednesday, June 28, 1978

The Senate met at 2 p.m., the Speaker in the Chair.

Prayers.

DOCUMENTS TABLED

Senator Langlois tabled:

Report of the number and amount of loans to Indians made under section 70(1) of the Indian Act for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1978, pursuant to section 70(6) of the said Act, Chapter I-6, R.S.C., 1970.

[Translation]

ECONOMIC COUNCIL OF CANADA

PUBLICATION OF A REVIEW—QUESTIONS

Senator Wagner: Honourable senators, I should like to put two questions to the Deputy Leader of the Government as a result of the publication of a review by the Economic Council of Canada.

I would like first to ask the deputy leader to inquire and report to the Senate whether it is Canada's new policy to reorganize the bilateral aid program by restricting to 35 per cent of our total public development assistance disbursements the funds allocated to the multilateral non-food programs, by cutting down to about thirty the total number of recipient countries and by gradually removing the status of recipient country of project assistance, thus gradually getting away from "tied" assistance?

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, as suggested by Senator Wagner, I am taking this question as notice and will provide an answer at the first opportunity.

Senator Wagner: Honourable senators, in the second place, I would like to ask the deputy leader if the Council's suggestion to create a new department using CIDA as a core and entrusting it with the responsibility of integrating the various policies concerning our relations with underdeveloped countries, as is now done in the United Kingdom and in the Netherlands, has now been endorsed by the government, a proposal which I personally put forward in 1972?

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, since I am not a member of the cabinet, I am taking this question as notice. A reply will be given at the earliest opportunity.

Senator Flynn: Is the deputy leader suggesting that as a member of the cabinet he would be better at providing answers than Senator Perrault?

Senator Langlois: Absolutely not. Once again, my honourable friend's fertile imagination is playing tricks on him.

[English]

ENERGY

POSSIBLE CHANGE IN CONTROL OF ASSETS OF HUSKY OIL COMPANY—QUESTION

Senator Austin: Honourable senators, I wonder if the deputy leader could either answer or take as notice this question with respect to Husky Oil. Does the government have information as to whether the funds being used by Alberta Gas Trunk Line Company Limited are sourced in the Heritage Fund of the Government of Alberta; that is to say, may the equity owner of Husky in fact be the Government of Alberta?

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, to my knowledge that information is not yet available, but I will make inquiries and present the information at the next opportunity.

NATIONAL REVENUE

DUMPING DUTY ON WIDE-FLANGE STEEL BEAMS—QUESTION ANSWERED

Senator Austin: Honourable senators, may I ask the Minister of National Revenue whether he is yet ready to provide an answer to my question regarding wide-flange steel imports into the province of British Columbia?

Senator Guay: Honourable senators, with regard to Vancouver and Alberta, the f.o.b. price will be set at $306 per ton. To that figure must be added the freight of $40 and duty of $31, making a total of $377.

Of course, if by chance the price of steel goes up or changes at all, we shall revise our figure. There is the possibility that the price of steel will go up, but in the interim that is the valuation that we are presenting at the moment.

Senator Austin: As a supplementary, can the minister tell us whether this import duty price level is competitive with import duties in, say, the neighbouring port of Seattle, and whether it is based on British or other foreign steel costs?

Senator Guay: With reference to the close-by port of Seattle, we took into consideration the various exporters to the United States and Canada when we came to that decision. The honourable senator may rest assured that we are well within that concept.

Senator Smith (Colchester): Honourable senators, I should like to ask a supplementary question of the minister. He says the price is set at $340, plus some other things. May I be perfectly clear on who set that price and on what criteria?

Senator Guay: Honourable senators, the price is set by the authority given to me by cabinet. Under sections 9 and 11 of the Income Tax Act the minister has the right to prescribe to his deputy minister and to the officers of the department, who can then make a fair value of the commodity in question. That is how we arrived at the price I quoted, having taken into consideration, as I said, the landed price in Seattle when shipped from various countries in the world.

We feel that this is a fair value at the moment. As I said previously, if by chance the price of steel increases, we shall have to look into it.

One reason we had to use that system, which is not used too often, is that we could not get the information we wanted from certain countries. I believe that Great Britain gave us a price of $414 per ton, not counting freight or duty. That was the only country which gave us a price. At the same time, Britain was shipping it to Seattle at $354 per ton. So we had to make a decision. This was in response to the request that had been made by Alberta and British Columbia. We feel that we are well within that concept.

Incidentally, the honourable senator mentioned $340 per ton. I said $306 per ton, plus freight at $40, duty at $31, for a total of $377.

Senator Smith (Colchester): The minister will understand my rather intense interest in steel and its price because of the steel mill in Nova Scotia and its problems. Am I to understand that the landed price at Seattle is the only criteria that was taken into consideration in fixing the price at $350?

Senator Guay: No, that is not the case. We also take into consideration the price in Japan and other countries. We also take into consideration the price of Algoma Steel, and the current trigger price in the United States and in European countries. We made an evaluation of the whole concept, of the possibility of anyone shipping into those areas. That is how we arrived at that fair value.

Senator Smith (Colchester): Was one of the criteria the cost of steel—although I appreciate it would not be the same type of fabrication which a steel plant in Nova Scotia could land on the west coast? Just in case the honourable senator thinks this is a matter that is somewhat in the distance, may I remind him, as I am sure he knows, that a contract has recently been entered into between the Sydney steel plant in Nova Scotia and customers which requires shipment through the Panama Canal.

● (1410)

Senator Guay: I also know that they are shipping through the Panama Canal at $2 a ton cheaper. I am quite aware of that.

BANKING, TRADE AND COMMERCE

MEETING OF COMMITTEE—QUESTION

Senator Flynn: Honourable senators, I should like to put a question to the Chairman of the Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce. Do I understand the committee is sitting this afternoon to consider Bill C-56? I did not receive any notice of such a meeting, and I should like to know whether the committee is sitting this afternoon while the Senate is sitting, to consider Bill C-56.

Senator Hayden: That is right.

Senator Flynn: I did not receive any notice. I don't know if anyone else did.

Senator Croll: I did.

Senator Flynn: You did?

Senator Croll: Yes.

Senator Walker: I got a notice.

Senator Flynn: Well, if important members of the committee received a notice, then that's fine.

THE CONSTITUTION

PROPOSED SPECIAL COMMITTEE OF THE SENATE—QUESTION

Senator Asselin: I should like to put a question to the Leader of the Government. The third item on the Orders of the Day is consideration of the message from the House of Commons requesting that a Special Joint Committee of the Senate and House of Commons be appointed to examine and report upon proposals related to the Constitution of Canada. Yesterday Senator Connolly (Ottawa West) gave notice of motion asking this house to establish a special committee of the Senate to examine proposed changes to the Constitution and the structure of the Senate. If this proposed special committee of the Senate is established, I should like to know if these two committees will work in the same way and will try to attain the same goals. What will be the purpose of this special committee, if it is set up, as proposed in Senator Connolly's motion?

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, I hope this matter will be discussed this afternoon. I was about to rise to ask leave to bring Senator Connolly's motion forward so that it can be discussed before we reach the Orders of the Day. Senator Connolly will then provide the information the honourable senator wishes to have.

PEOPLE'S REPUBLIC OF CHINA

VISIT OF DELEGATION—QUESTION

Senator Bosa: Honourable senators, I should like to address a question to the Leader of the Government. Could he inform the Senate of the purpose of the visiting delegation from the People's Republic of China here today? Is it a trade mission or is it a friendly visit?

Senator Flynn: You should have invited Brezhnev as well.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, over the past eight years since the establishment of diplomatic relations, there have been a number of visits to the People's Republic of China by many Canadians, and many representatives from the People's Republic of China have visited Canada. The present visit of a distinguished delegation from the National Congress of the People's Republic of China to Canada—the first in our history—is the first part of an exchange visit by parliamentarians, with our guests from the People's Republic of China visiting Canada for approximately eight or nine days, and a proposed visit by a group of Canadian parliamentarians to follow later this year or next year.

The present visit by members of the National Congress of the People's Republic of China is a visit of friendship and not a trade mission as such, although a great many subjects have been discussed during the course of their visit to Canada.

I have had the honour and the pleasure of being able to accompany the delegation from Vancouver to Ottawa. I can report that they have met many people in several provinces and they have talked with Canadians on many, many subjects. As I have said, this visit is primarily a friendship and goodwill visit.

BUSINESS OF THE SENATE

CONFLICT BETWEEN MEETING OF COMMITTEE AND SITTING OF THE SENATE—QUESTION

Senator Smith (Colchester): Honourable senators, I should like to ask the Leader of the Government this question: In view of the fact that there seems to be some conflict in the duties of senators today in that the Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce is now about to meet, and in view of the fact that two resolutions of the most importance bearing upon the future of this body are to be considered in the chamber this afternoon, is some arrangement being made whereby senators can attend both the meeting of the committee and the sitting of the Senate?

Senator Flynn: At the same time.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, in the ordinary course of events as we approach the period of adjournment—and it is expected that Parliament will adjourn some time this week for the summer recess, perhaps even tomorrow evening—there are inevitably unavoidable situations wherein members could attend more than one committee meeting as well as sittings in this chamber. I quite agree with the honourable senator that the resolutions to be discussed are very important. However, it is expected that the debate on both these resolutions will not be prolonged for an inordinately extended period of time. I believe that most honourable senators feel that the important thing is to channel our energies and work into the committee activities when those committees meet. The honourable senator has raised a perfectly valid point. In view of the strictures of time it is difficult to see how the problem can be overcome.

Senator Smith (Colchester): Honourable senators, I thank the honourable leader for his answer. That, of course, leads me to a further question. Is he prepared to acquiesce in his own execution so readily?

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, I cannot believe that anyone would construe the participation of the Senate in a joint parliamentary committee as being any form of execution.

[Senator Perrault.]

Indeed, it is an opportunity for the Senate to demonstrate its creative capacity and its ability to help shape the destiny of this country.

Senator Smith (Colchester): I thank the honourable gentleman again for his answer. However, one would think that the subject of one's execution would be a matter which might ordinarily be considered appropriate to take some considerable time and even to take precedence over the importance of such a meeting as that of the Banking, Trade and Commerce committee. Consequently, I express some surprise that the honourable gentleman does not consider it appropriate to take some time to debate these two resolutions.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, the future of the Senate and the form of the Supreme Court of Canada and other institutions will not be decided in this chamber this afternoon. However, let it be said that no member will be restricted in any way from participating fully in these debates should he so desire.

Senator Smith (Colchester): I wonder how the honourable leader is going to arrange for a suitable opportunity to allow all honourable senators to express their views upon this subject within the time constraints he has mentioned?

Senator Asselin: No answer.

Senator Smith (Colchester): I know; there is not any.

Senator Perrault: If the honourable senator wishes to speak on either of these resolutions, he may exercise his full freedom to do so unless, of course, he is under some direction from his party whip or party leader, and I doubt very much that he is.

Senator Smith (Colchester): I thank the honourable gentleman, but he still has not allowed me to ascertain how I may be able to do that and express my views on the subject matter which is before the Banking, Trade and Commerce committee at the same time.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, that, perhaps, is a matter that the honourable senator should discuss with the chairman of that committee. Perhaps arrangements can be made for an appropriate intervention in both the chamber and the committee. I know that the chairman of the committee has a great capability to accommodate the needs of members of that committee, and I will certainly do what I can to expedite any solution.

● (1420)

Senator Smith (Colchester): I thank the honourable gentleman for his interest, but I really thought he was responsible for the conduct of the business of this house, and therefore it was to him I was addressing this question.

Senator Neiman: Honourable senators, perhaps if we get on with the resolutions themselves then we will be able to debate them in substance.

THE HONOURABLE LOUIS-J. ROBICHAUD, P.C.

FELICITATIONS ON RETURN TO CHAMBER

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, may I take this opportunity on behalf of all honourable senators to welcome back to our midst Honourable Senator Robichaud who has undergone a siege in hospital and happily appears to be restored to his usual good health and energy.

Hon. Senators: Hear, hear.

THE CONSTITUTION

SPECIAL SENATE COMMITTEE AUTHORIZED TO STUDY SUBJECT MATTER OF BILL C-60

Leave having been given to proceed to Motion No. 3:

Hon. John J. Connolly moved:

That a Special Committee of the Senate be appointed to consider and report upon the subject matter of the Bill C-60, intituled: "An Act to amend the Constitution of Canada with respect to matters coming within the legislative authority of the Parliament of Canada, and to approve and authorize the taking of measures necessary for the amendment of the Constitution with respect to certain other matters", in advance of the said bill coming before the Senate, or any matter relating thereto;

That the committee have power to engage the services of such counsel, staff and technical advisers and to incur such special expenses as may be necessary for the purpose of the inquiry; and

That the committee have power to send for persons, papers and records, to examine witnesses, to print such papers and evidence from day to day as may be ordered by the committee and to sit during adjournments of the Senate.

He said: Honourable senators, first of all, I should like to thank you for allowing me to move this motion at this time.

I feel that the Senate must be intensely interested in any proposals for the reform of federal institutions and for fairly sweeping reform of the Constitution of this country. When these proposals are not contained in white papers, or proposal or learned papers, but are set out in a bill such as the one now before Parliament, which touches on, among other things, the Canadian Bill of Rights, the Supreme Court of Canada, the Office of the Governor General and the Crown, the Office of the Privy Council, the Parliament of Canada—both the House of Commons and, particularly, the Senate—then I think it is clear that the Senate has a basic duty to consider such proposals in as great depth as possible. If ever a sober second thought is needed in the Parliament of this country, then this is probably the time.

It has been proposed by the Commons that the Senate nominate some of its members to a joint committee. To this I think the Senate must agree, and send of its best. In my own view, and I hope in the view of the majority of honourable senators, that will not be enough in these circumstances. The efforts of a joint committee composed of members of both houses can be, and should be, supplemented by input from this house. It is my opinion that this kind of assistance and input can be provided on a completely non-partisan basis, and on an objective basis with the objective purpose in view of having constitutional changes which are appropriate for the kind of democracy we have in a federation such as Canada.

This motion which is before the chamber now implies that the Senate consider the proposals in the bill; it implies that the committee examine the virtues and the shortcomings of those proposals; it implies that the committee take evidence from interested and influential citizens and groups; it implies that the committee provide itself with expert assistance, because amendments may be required to be drafted; and it implies that the committee report to this chamber when it has completed its deliberations.

I think the committee can do more. It can inform, and thus fortify, the members of the Senate on the joint committee so that they can perform impressively and effectively. I am convinced, honourable senators—and I think this view is widely shared—that the methods and procedures of committees of the Senate are vastly superior to those of the other place. That may be because of the peculiar structure of the two houses, but I consider it a fact, and I would hope that the expertise that is available in this chamber, through its committees, would be available to senators and other members who will be called upon to serve on that joint committee.

If the Senate approves this motion, it will be the duty of the Committee of Selection to meet and nominate senators to serve on the special committee. That has been a practice followed here now for some time with respect to special committees. That committee, upon reaching its conclusions as to the membership of the special committee, must report to the Senate, and that report must be approved by the house. Once that report is approved, then under rule 69 it is the duty of the Clerk of the Senate to call an organizational meeting of that special committee, and at that meeting a chairman is appointed.

It may not be necessary for me to say this here and now, but to achieve the purpose of the special committee and to allow it to begin to function in time, all of this must be accomplished before the summer adjournment either tomorrow or Friday. I am informed that the joint committee is likely to meet later in the summer, and if this opportunity is missed the members of the Senate on that committee, and perhaps the other members of the committee, will be without the kind of support and assistance they need when considering these very complex problems, and which I am confident a special committee of the Senate can provide.

● (1430)

Some honourable senators will want to discuss the matter in general. I am thinking particularly of Senator Manning, because he has expressed the hope that an opportunity would be provided for him, at least, and I am sure for others, to discuss in general the subject matter of Bill C-60, which it is proposed should be referred to the special committee for study.

This motion does provide an opportunity for that. Without wanting in any way to be restrictive, or to have it suggested that I am proposing a curtailment of the debate, I would suggest, because of the time restrictions involved in bringing this special committee into existence, senators who want to discuss the general subject matter of Bill C-60 will be able to do so if they seize the opportunity provided by Item No. 3 on today's order paper, which has to do with the establishment of the joint committee about which I have been speaking.

Honourable senators, if this motion is adopted, the Senate can be assured that the special committee will be established, and will be ready to meet any requirement for its services during the coming recess.

Hon. Jacques Flynn: Honourable senators, Senator Connolly has set forth all the valid reasons for striking this special committee of the Senate to study Bill C-60—either Bill C-60 or a white paper on the Constitution of Canada. For the reasons he has outlined I have no hesitation in supporting his motion.

There is only one possible problem, as I see it, and that is whether the work of this committee would constitute a duplication of the work done by the joint committee. But I think it could do certain types of work that the joint committee might not have time for. For this reason, I think it would be appropriate to approve the setting up of the committee.

It could meet for purposes of organization and planning during the summer, and start in on its real program of activities when we resume in the fall.

When we do resume in the fall—assuming there is no election, which is always possible, because we never know on which side of the bed the Prime Minister might wake up in the morning—the special committee could report on what it has done and what it plans to accomplish, and we might then be in a better position to assess whether it is worth carrying on with the work of this committee.

With that reservation in mind, I suggest we adopt this motion and thus enable some of the organization and planning work to be accomplished during the summer.

Senator Asselin: I have only one question to ask Senator Connolly. He has suggested that later on, when the work of this special committee will have been completed, it will present a special report to the Senate. What I would like to know is whether the conclusions contained in that special report will be given to the joint committee of the House of Commons and the Senate before being made public in this house.

Senator Connolly (Ottawa West): Honourable senators, I do not wish to foreclose anyone from speaking. I am simply answering questions. Perhaps I could touch both points—one by Senator Flynn and the other by Senator Asselin.

There is no doubt that in respect of the work of the committee there will be a certain amount of duplication. Anyone who thinks about the matter will surely expect that to be so. There may be witnesses from the academic community, the legal community, the business community, the mining community, the labour community, the agricultural community, the social services community, the science community, and so on. They may all have views about federal institutions and they may want to come and express those views here. They may have views not only about the Senate but also about the whole range of institutions affected by this bill.

Yes, there may be duplication, but I have found through my own experience here that witnesses who have gone before committees of the other house have had a different kind of format to deal with, a different kind of circumstance to handle, from that provided in the Senate. In my opinion, the evidence our committees receive from witnesses who appear before them is of a kind that goes much more deeply into the subject matter than is the case elsewhere. Certainly there will be repetition, but I think we can be selective in our choice of witnesses that this committee will hear, and thus avoid repetition as much as possible.

Senator Flynn has suggested that the committee need not sit until the fall. I hope he is right in that. The subject matter is certainly of much too serious a nature to be rushed through before, say, the first of October or the first of November. This is a fundamental modification of the status of the institutions of the country. I know we cannot take 100 years to come to grips with the problem, but we should avoid the other extreme also, namely, trying to rush through it too quickly.

But we will be in the hands of the chairmen of the joint committee, one of whom will be from this chamber, with respect to when they will be sitting and how they will proceed. If this special committee is necessary, then we want to have it available so that, whatever happens in the course of the recess, the Senate will be able to do what should be done by a chamber as important and responsible as this.

I come now to Senator Asselin's question with respect to whether the conclusions of the report of the special committee would be made public. If I may speculate for just a moment, it is possible that the special committee of the Senate will recommend certain amendments to Bill C-60 which would be beyond the power of the Senate to make because of financial implications. If, in the course of its discussions, and in dealing with witnesses, the committee formulated such amendments and drafted them, then amendments of that kind should be made by the Senate representatives, if not by the House of Commons representatives, on the joint committee. The proceedings of this committee should be published, and I hope they will be given ample coverage in the press and in the media generally, and also that the report of the committee, when it is finally published, will be impressive and will influence editorial opinion in the country.

● (1440)

Motion agreed to.

APPROPRIATION BILL NO. 2, 1978-79

THIRD READING

Senator Langlois moved the third reading of Bill C-61, for granting to Her Majesty certain sums of money for the Government of Canada for the financial year ending the 31st March, 1979.

Motion agreed to and bill read third time and passed.

CRIMINAL CODE

BILL TO AMEND—SECOND READING

Hon. George J. McIlraith moved the second reading of Bill C-42, to amend the Criminal Code.

He said: Honourable senators, the provisions of this bill are direct in their language and are remarkably brief. Its purposes are nonetheless most important in the structure of this country and are, I believe, most timely, because they concern the linguistic rights of persons accused of offences who come before our courts, and they are to be accomplished by way of amendment to the Criminal Code.

The right of an accused, whose language is one of the two official languages of Canada, to be tried before a justice of the peace, magistrate, judge or jury in this country is that he be tried before such a person who speaks his language.

That is the whole principle of the bill, and it is achieved simply and directly. The bill provides that an application for an order for trial in the minority language in any province must come before the court at the earliest possible time in the proceedings—that is, either at the point of election in that group of offences where there is the right to be tried by one court or another, or at the point in time when they are fixing the date for trial, if it is a case where there is no election.

There is provision whereby, in the case of a person whose language is not one of the official languages, the judge may by application make an order for that person to be tried before a judge, magistrate, justice of the peace or jury who speaks the official language in which the accused can best give testimony.

There is another provision—an interesting one—which says in effect that where an accused person comes before the court without counsel, there is an obligation on the presiding judge to advise the accused of his right as to the language of trial.

It appears to me quite clear, in reading the law relating to linguistic rights as set out in the Jones case in the Supreme Court of Canada in 1975, that the federal authority undoubtedly has the right to legislate on this subject. It is clearly within the federal jurisdiction. It is also clear to all practical people who deal with the courts that there is the requirement that the provinces be heavily involved in this matter, because they have the area of responsibility for the administration of justice and must, therefore, make the necessary arrangements.

It is rather interesting and refreshing that the provisions of the bill recognize the problem facing provincial authorities in the administration of justice. One amendment provides that a judge may order a change of venue where a court, with the capacity required under the bill, is not readily available in the area where the trial would normally take place. That is a source of problem for some provinces.

There is quite an elaborate procedure regarding proclamation of the bill. Again I believe the provisions recognize the problems that provinces will have, and will make their implementation of the bill much easier. It is provided that those parts of the bill dealing with indictable offences can be proclaimed or brought into force separately from those dealing with summary convictions.

There is a further provision to the effect that the bill can be brought into force in the provinces individually, one by one, as they have the machinery in operation to make it fully operative.

There is also a statutory requirement, put in by the House of Commons by way of amendment, that there must be consultation between the federal authorities, the federal Minister of Justice, and the provincial authorities.

Senator Asselin: There must be?

Senator McIlraith: There must be consultation on expectation of agreement as to the date of proclamation. If they do not agree, there is provision that the proclamation will take effect two years after it is made.

Honourable senators, my view, for what it is worth, is that this is a very good and important bill, and it deals with the subject matter effectively, simply and directly. At the same time, it takes account of what I believe we should properly recognize, and that is the degree of sensitivity on this subject in some areas where there is a very small minority.

I commend the bill to the house. I do not know whether honourable senators will ask that it be referred to committee, if and when it receives second reading, but it seems to me that is not required. In my view, it is a bill that can properly be dealt with without being referred to committee.

● (1450)

Senator Asselin: Are you willing to give us more information?

Senator McIlraith: In any event, I am in the hands of the Senate as to whether or not they wish the bill to go to committee.

Senator Greene: Could Senator McIlraith tell us whether there have been negotiations or arrangements with the provinces with respect to a financial contribution from the federal trough for the added expense in the administration of justice that the provinces will obviously incur if they take this bill to heart and implement it as we would have them do?

Senator McIlraith: I cannot tell the honourable senator whether financial arrangements have been made with the provinces. I can tell him that there have been very full consultations with the provinces on this subject, and that some provinces are quite far advanced along the way towards having arrangements in place for the full implementation of the change in the law. It is rather refreshing to be able to tell him that, according to my information, consultations with the provinces have been rather satisfactory.

I hope that answers the honourable senator's general question, although it does not answer the narrow point raised by him directly.

Senator Goldenberg: Will Senator McIlraith permit me to say something? I happen to have before me the statement made by the Minister of Justice before the Justice and Legal Affairs Committee of the other place, in which he says on that question:

I have stated at second reading that we are ready to look at further ways of helping the provinces meet the requirements of this legislation.

Senator Asselin: So the answer is yes.

Senator McIlraith: No. The question was: Have they made any arrangements? I believe they have not. The minister had indicated a willingness to deal with the subject.

[Translation]

Hon. Claude Wagner: Honourable senators, I am pleased to take part in this debate on a subject which has been of concern to me for a very long time. Of course, as a former judge and minister of justice, I have a special affection and even nostalgic feelings for everything connected with the judiciary and, as a politician, when I can discuss something which is so closely related to the crucial national unity issue, I am doubly happy. Indeed, the bill now before us in an integral part of the slow but necessary progress of Canada towards a fuller linguistic equality for its French-speaking citizens.

The bill referred to us is an important step towards a goal which is shared, at least I hope so, by the great majority of Canadians, that of having finally an amended Constitution which will contain, among other provisions, a charter of linguistic rights for Canadian citizens, about which I spoke at length in this assembly during the debate on Bill C-56.

No one can feel indifferent about the equality of both official languages within our judicial system, both in law and in fact. The British North America Act already provides the optional use of English or French before the courts under federal jurisdiction and the provincial jurisdiction of Quebec. This bill extends this optional right in criminal matters to the courts under the jurisdiction of other provinces in all cases where these provinces will deem it advisable to exercise that right.

It will therefore be with pleasure and satisfaction that we shall vote for this bill if and when it comes to a vote. Moreover, to show our unanimous support, we are quite agreeable to dispense with consideration in committee. However, one of the problems facing us with this bill as legislators is that, to a large extent, it will not be possible to implement across the board its main provisions immediately. Of course, it will be relatively easy to set up the required mechanisms in large areas of the country, like Ontario and New Brunswick and, to a certain extent, Manitoba. The large numbers of French-speaking people in many areas of these provinces and the possibility of finding judges and juries who speak French will make it easier there than in other areas of Canada. In those other areas, it is clear that the reform brought about by Bill C-42 will be implemented gradually and probably rather slowly.

[Senator McIlraith.]

To a certain extent, we are therefore legislating in the abstract. On the one hand, if we want to grant to the Canadian people the right to testify in their own language without an interpreter, we must start by passing legislation to this effect. On the other hand, this right may remain largely theoretical because of the lack of material administrative facilities provided by the provincial authorities as well as the lack of the legal staff required so that Bill C-42 will truly benefit all those for whom it was put on our statute books. The process may well be slow and illusory.

My only regret is that the bill was introduced at such a late date in the session. It will be difficult to obtain from the Minister of Justice specific and full information about the talks he may have entered into with the various provinces and to know their reaction, in order to foresee and determine how the new legislation will be implemented in practical terms so that francophones may be tried in their own language.

In order that this legislation becomes more than a practically inoperative statute, but rather a concrete reality, an everyday reality, so to speak, the frank and unequivocal cooperation of the provincial governments concerned will be required. The provinces should not see in the fact that their approval is required an excuse to unduly delay amending their own laws, particularly as regards juries. We know that amendment of that legislation is an essential condition to meet the objectives set by the federal legislators.

● (1500)

In that respect, I would like to congratulate the Government of Ontario whose Attorney General, Mr. Roy McMurtry, took steps sometime ago to provide for the operation of courts in French in the national capital and northern Ontario areas and for the extension of that system to other judicial districts in the province.

The attorneys general of the other provinces will undoubtedly want to outdo their Ontario colleague and equip their own provinces as soon as feasible with judicial facilities where it will be possible to carry out the proceedings, at least in part, in French. Indeed, it would be unfortunate if the passage of this bill were to be used as a screen for negligence or, even worse, bad faith, by officials reluctant to implement a reform which all enlightened Canadians are urgently demanding. In any event, an end must be put to that anomaly which has been pointed out repeatedly—trials in English where all interested parties, the judge, the jury, the accused, the attorneys and often the witnesses are all French-speaking.

Let us not kid ourselves, it probably will not be possible, at least not easy, particularly in those provinces where the French-speaking population is not particularly dense, to implement Bill C-42 in all localities where they would like to have it. The important thing is that those courts be set up without undue delay in those localities most accessible to minority members. Changes of venue will undoubtedly be necessary to meet the demand of French-speaking citizens against whom criminal charges have been laid. Simple equity calls for nothing less.

To prevent those steps to bilingualize the judicial system from creating regrettable backlashes within circles ill-informed or ill-prepared for such a reform, it would be appropriate for those who have a voice with the public to combine their efforts to cut off eventual explosions of racial prejudices.

In that respect, the Canadian Bar Association and provincial staff associations of the legal profession can play a leading role. It seems just as urgent to me for our lawyers to try to facilitate the implementation of the new system and train legal people fully cognizant of French as to spend long hours searching for new constitutional structures which may be given short shrift. In any event, that second initiative should not supersede the first one which now appears much more urgent to me.

One can expect that the implementation, even gradual, of the new legislation will occasionally give rise to difficult, complex, sometimes thorny, situations. In the case of charges laid against a group of individuals—I am thinking of conspiracy charges, for example—where only one or two of the accused would be French-speaking, will it be advisable to order separate trials in those cases? Will a change of venue be accepted at the risk of increasing considerably the court fees? Those are some of the many cases—and there will certainly be others—which will require dexterity, caution and fair play on the part of those responsible for the administration of justice.

It is a fact that the Canadian Bill of Rights already provides for an accused in Canada the right to the services of an interpreter when he cannot be judged in his mother tongue.

I have too much respect for our courts to think that they would tolerate the least infringement to the principle of equity toward accused persons who are unable to defend themselves in the official language of their choice.

Bill C-42 clearly states the right of an accused to give his or her testimony either in French or in English before a criminal court. As a matter of fact this right is already being exercised in Quebec by virtue of the Constitution. This bill therefore concerns mainly francophones in the other provinces who are brought before the bench in criminal cases.

Another fact is worth pointing out. As the Minister of Justice mentioned in his testimony before the Commons Committee on Justice and Legal Affairs, clause 1 of the bill states that in order to be heard in one's mother tongue and in order not to delay the proceedings, an application to that effect must be made by the accused himself at the beginning of the trial.

On the other hand, the bill puts the magistrate in the strict obligation of advising the accused of his right to be heard in his own language. It is a basic issue which should not be the subject of any troublesome restrictions.

Even at the risk of extending the hearing of a case, and when the accused is obviously of good faith, nothing should prevent him from invoking, even when it is late, the right which is extended to him by the law, because that way justice might be better served. To reject a late application, the magistrate should establish that the accused is invoking his right for dilatory purposes only and not in the best interest of justice.

Honourable senators, the debates which have taken place so far and the reports published in the press have not always provided an exact reflection of the content of the bill. In that respect, it has been claimed that the accused would have the right to be tried in their mother tongue. Such is not the case.

The Minister of Justice has been very candid about it in his testimony before the Commons committee. He specified that all that Bill C-42 does is to grant the accused the right to testify in his or her mother tongue—be it French or English—without the intervention of an interpreter.

Here is a short extract from his testimony, as reported in issue No. 31 dated May 24, 1978 of the Minutes of Proceedings and Evidence of the standing committee:

The main principle underlying Bill C-42 is to amend the Criminal Code of Canada to give accused persons in this country the right to be heard and understood by a judge or jury in a criminal court in their own official language, whether it be French or English. It does not mean, however, for example, that a trial would be completely held in French or English. What it means is that an accused person can tell his side of the story if he wishes in his own language, whether French or English, without having his story filtered, as it were, by an interpreter.

● (1510)

Clearly, Bill C-42 is quite limited in scope, and indeed nothing more than a minimum. This is still a far cry, if we ever reach that stage, from French being used throughout a trial held before a criminal court in the so-called English-speaking provinces.

The minister also is committed to consult each and every provincial government before the act is proclaimed into force, and to proclaim it into force only at such time as is agreed to by each province. I commend the minister for this. If we are to avoid the kind of quarrels and misunderstandings that arose too often in the past, it is essential that both levels of government enter into written agreement on when this important legislation should be proclaimed into force.

Even though, as stated by the minister, the language used in our criminal courts is purely a federal matter, the administration of justice in turn is a purely provincial matter until such time as I am proven wrong. In view of this, Ottawa should accept the principle of joint proclamation of Bill C-42 within each province's boundaries.

In such a delicate matter as the language rights of the accused, I see no benefit—quite the contrary—in Ottawa's acting unilaterally or sending ultimatums that would in no way serve the cause of justice.

Before I conclude these brief remarks, honourable senators, I would like to stress the importance of this legislation in terms of national unity. During my six years in the other place as a member for Saint-Hyacinthe, I stressed on various occasions the need to ensure genuine equality between both official languages across the land. This is, in my view, of prerequisite to the survival of our federal system. How can we rationalize references to a common fatherland if the language of one of our two founding peoples is to all practical purposes banned from a major part of the land? Practical equality of both languages is essential if our fellow Canadians of either linguistic group feel truly at home, wherever they choose to live.

There is now easy acceptance of the fact there is in Canada one province where the predominant language is French, and which will have in defending its interest the powers needed to better orient its policies. It would be wrong, however, to think that French Canada stops at Quebec's borders, to view as negligible the million francophones scattered throughout the nine English-speaking provinces of Canada.

The legislation now before us is aimed precisely at solving some of the problems by the latter communities. I would like, however, to take this opportunity to remind this house, as should be done constantly, that after 111 years of the federal system Canada should now consider enacting a "Charter of Minorities" in which language and school rights of each sector of both English Canada and French Canada would be enshrined.

Conscientious implementation of this legislation will be an important step toward developing conditions that will ultimately lead to the voting of such a charter, and this is a dream I share with so many of my fellow Canadians of both official languages. Such a charter could complement the charter of basic rights that is also envisaged for our Constitution.

At the very moment when a great many citizens are expressing doubt about our federal system, we must stop haggling over measures of justice towards our minority groups. If French Canadians do not feel welcome in other parts of the country, if they do not have this feeling of belonging which is the base of political societies, how can we convince French-speaking Quebecers that Canada belongs to them and that it is not in their best interest to limit their nation to the frontiers of Quebec?

Yet it would be illusory to think that broader application of a policy guaranteeing equal linguistic rights as proposed in the measure under scrutiny will by itself suffice to put an end to the independentist movement in Quebec. However praiseworthy and necessary a more generous bilingualism policy might be, it would never be more than a first step towards another measure more important still and very pressing indeed—a complete review of our Constitution. This will be the only measure likely to stop the disintegration of our country, likely to conciliate the will of French-speaking Quebec to assert itself as an autonomous political entity with a need for this province to take advantage of the support of the federal structures in order to extend its influence and intensify its action.

That is the only condition—and it bears repeating again in light of this bill—the only condition which will save Canada, and to that task we must apply ourselves without delay.

Hon. Duff Roblin: Honourable senators, I am pleased to support Bill C-42. This bill is aimed at allowing any individual to be tried in a criminal court of justice in Canada in the official language of his choice.

[Senator Wagner.]

The general support given to this bill in the other place eloquently demonstrates that attitudes are changing. I am convinced that this bill will get the same enthusiastic support in the Senate. The amendments proposed by the official opposition in the Commons and accepted by the government should ensure a certain degree of consultation with the provinces concerning the implementation of that program. Those amendments have substantially improved the initial proposal.

However, let us not delude ourselves. This bill does not represent spectacular progress towards the establishment of a modus vivendi between both official languages in Canada. Indeed, let us be frank, this bill will have no influence on separatists who have no sympathy at all for the concept of a united Canada. The thrust of this bill is rather modest, but it proves once more that Canadian anglophones do have a genuine desire to let their francophone fellow citizens know how much they appreciate and respect them.

Hon. Senators: Hear, hear.

Senator Roblin: I do not really believe that the doctrinaire bilingualism policy of the federal government is widely supported. In fact, in some areas of the country, due in part to the means used to make it effective, this policy has done more to create divisions and misunderstandings between the two founding groups than to promote harmony and agreement. But nevertheless I am convinced that the English-speaking provinces are starting to show a more fraternal and respectful attitude. It has developed slowly but surely. It encourages respect for the status, the language and the French culture in every part of the country. It is even true for some parts of English-speaking Canada where in the past the French culture has endured several reverses.

Take for instance my own province of Manitoba where 6 per cent of the people, 60,000 inhabitants, are French-speaking. In 1890, Catholic schools, that is French schools, were denied financial support from the public school system. In 1916, they even ceased to consider French as a language of instruction in that system.

However I believe it is encouraging to witness in recent years a gradual evolution of the public opinion in my province. It was reflected in various amendments to our legislation. In attempting to explain that change, I must first congratulate Senator Molgat who, as the opposition leader in the Manitoba legislative assembly, acted as a positive and constructive statesman.

Hon. Senators: Hear, hear.

Senator Roblin: Under certain conditions, the private schools of my province—and it includes denominational schools—are today entitled to substantial support from the public school system.

Within the public system, French can now be used and is used as the primary education language in sectors serving the majority of the 6 per cent of Manitobans whose mother tongue is French. We are talking about some 10,000 students. There is in the education department an Office of French Education headed by an assistant deputy minister. I should also point out that there are more and more French immersion courses for English-speaking youngsters. To quote the French-speaking director of this immersion program, "English-speaking people have a much more positive attitude toward French education".

The Manitoba judicial system has always had a representative number of French-speaking judges. As for our courts, it is possible, for example in St. Boniface, to be tried in French. I am convinced that with the consultation provided for in this bill and the period allocated for adjustment purposes, the province of Manitoba will succeed in providing the services that this bill seeks to guarantee, and to provide them wherever the need appears.

To come back to the fundamental point I am making, this bill does not represent a panacea for all current language problems in Canada. However, this bill does reflect in a practical and useful way the sincere wish of a majority of Canadians, from Quebec and other provinces, to give both the French and English languages the respect and recognition required by simple justice. This augurs well and we can concur enthusiastically.

● (1520)

[English]

Hon. Charles McElman: Honourable senators, I regret that Senator Robichaud could not be here for this debate, because I know he would want to intervene. As most of you are aware, he has recently undergone rather serious spinal surgery, which does not permit him to sit in one position for very long, even with the aid of the brace which he wears. In his regrettable absence I should like to make a few remarks on this bill.

First of all, I should like to voice my disappointment that the Honourable Senator Wagner, in his glowing tribute to the Attorney General of Ontario, completely ignored the one officially bilingual province in Canada, the Province of New Brunswick. The matters that are covered by this legislation have in recent years been practised to a large degree by the Province of New Brunswick acting on its own. I readily and quickly admit that the changes, the improvements, the provision of what I consider to be basic rights, were rather long and late in coming, and the provision of such rights, rather than privileges, is not totally secured yet. However, tremendous progress has been made.

It is not an overnight matter to provide services of the nature covered by this bill. It is a long process, it is a frustrating process, and it requires a tremendous amount of patience and goodwill. We in New Brunswick know that from experience. For example, in New Brunswick it was necessary to have the statutes of the province transposed to the French language. That has been accomplished.

We had a young and capable judge of the provincial court who took leave of absence to become the overseer of that work, and he did a tremendous job of it. Incidentally, he is now the Leader of the Opposition in the Legislature of New Brunswick.

Senator Asselin: Do you mean Joe Daigle?

Senator McElman: Yes, Joseph Daigle. That task completed, another project that was dear to the hearts of many of us is now in the way of being achieved. We have had for many years an outstanding law school at the University of New Brunswick. We are now establishing a unilingual law school at the University of Moncton which will start training in the French language very shortly.

The legislature now has before it an act which will raise county court judges to the Queen's Bench Division of the Supreme Court of New Brunswick, an amalgamation of the two courts. One of the very real purposes is to assist in providing languages rights to the citizens of the province before the courts, in order that they might receive a proper element of justice.

● (1530)

This whole program in New Brunswick was part of a program instituted under the Robichaud administration, and known as the Program of Equal Opportunity. The province assumed total responsibility, financial and otherwise, for education, health, welfare and justice. It has taken some time to provide for all of these services and to ensure equality of justice to all of our citizens.

The legislation which made our province the only official bilingual province in Canada was brought in under the Robichaud administration. Certain sections, including sections which have to do with justice, could not be proclaimed until provision was made for the delivery of those services. I am happy to say that as it was possible to make such provision, our present premier, the Honourable Richard Hatfield, moved as quickly and as expeditiously as possible to provide those services. I say that simply to point out that in this matter there has been nothing of a partisan nature or argument in New Brunswick.

There are further comments that I could make, and which I am sure Senator Robichaud would make if he were here. I did not want to let debate on this bill pass without drawing to the attention of honourable senators the fact that things that are being provided here have been provided, and are being provided, in the Province of New Brunswick, over a period of time, at its own instigation.

Senator Wagner: Honourable senators, on a small question of privilege, following the remarks of Senator McElman, may I point out he was right to chastise me for not having paid a glowing tribute to New Brunswick, although I did mention New Brunswick in my speech. If I did not pay a glowing tribute, it is because, first, I know what has been done in New Brunswick, and, secondly, I was presuming that in view of the fact that I am fluent in both French and English, everyone would recognize that that fluency was obtained when I was a young boy in Shediac, New Brunswick, and grew up in Moncton, New Brunswick. I am proud of my heritage.

Senator McElman: I thank Senator Wagner for his recognition.

Motion agreed to and bill read second time.

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this bill be read the third time?

Senator McIlraith moved that the bill be placed on the Orders of the Day for third reading at the next sitting.

Motion agreed to.

DISTINGUISHED VISITORS IN GALLERY

DELEGATION FROM THE NATIONAL CONGRESS OF THE PEOPLE'S REPUBLIC OF CHINA

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, I would like to extend a warm welcome to the distinguished delegation of the People's Republic of China led by the Vice-Chairman of the National People's Congress, Mr. Chi Peng-fei, and to offer a special greeting to his wife, Mrs. Hsu Han-ping, and to His Excellency and Mrs. Wang Tung.

Hon. Senators: Hear, hear.

THE CONSTITUTION

MOTION TO APPOINT SPECIAL JOINT COMMITTEE—DEBATE ADJOURNED

On the Order:

Consideration of the Message from the House of Commons requesting that a Special Joint Committee of the Senate and House of Commons be appointed to examine and report upon proposals that have been and in the future are from time to time made public by the Government of Canada, on subjects related to the Constitution of Canada.—(Honourable Senator Langlois).

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, it will be recalled that on June 26—

Senator Asselin: On a point of order.

[Translation]

Since this is a very important matter, at least in my opinion, might it not be possible for Senator Langlois to postpone his intervention until tomorrow, at which time perhaps more senators will be present to hear his message?

[English]

Senator Grosart: No, no.

Senator Asselin: The Honourable Senator Grosart says, "No, no." I did not consult the deputy leader. It is my own suggestion; it is not the suggestion of the party. However, if the deputy leader does not wish to accept it, I am ready to obey, as a good Conservative.

Senator Grosart: Honourable senators, I have no real objection. I was not objecting to the suggestion. I shook my head because I understood that a message had gone forward at that particular moment to the Leader of the Opposition to enable him to be here in order that he might hear the motion and respond. I will leave it at that. I understand that the Leader of the Opposition will be returning very shortly in case it is the feeling of the Senate that we should proceed at this time.

[Senator Wagner.]

On the other hand, I see a great deal of merit in the suggestion made by Senator Asselin that, this subject being as important as it is, it might better be discussed when a large number of senators are not attending an important committee meeting. There are two committees, I believe, meeting at this time. I was not objecting to Senator Asselin's suggestion. I was merely shaking my head to indicate my reaction at the moment, knowing that the Leader of the Opposition will be back shortly.

The Hon. the Speaker: The motion has not yet been put. May I ask the honourable Senator Langlois whether he is moving the motion?

Senator Langlois: Yes, I am going to move the motion.

The Hon. the Speaker: It is moved by the Honourable Senator Langlois, seconded by the Honourable Senator Perrault, P.C.—

Senator Langlois: I have not yet read the motion. I was about to do so.

[Translation]

First of all, I think that I should make a comment about the point of order raised by my honourable friend Senator Asselin. I congratulate him for being so tractable even when—

Senator Asselin: It is not always the case.

Senator Langlois:—even when the whip is not in the House.

I was going to say, when I was interrupted, that on June 26, an almost identical motion was introduced in the other place by the Prime Minister, which motion was agreed to the next day.

[English]

Honourable senators, I now move, seconded by the Honourable Senator Perrault:

That the Senate do unite with the House of Commons in the appointment of a Special Joint Committee of the Senate and House of Commons to examine and report upon proposals that have been and in the future are from time to time made public by the Government of Canada, on subjects related to the Constitution of Canada;

That the Committee have power to examine and enquire into all such matters as may be referred to it by the Senate, to report from time to time, to send for persons, papers and records, to sit during sittings and adjournments of the Senate, to print such papers and evidence from day to day as may be ordered by the Committee and to delegate to sub-committees all or any of its powers except the power to report directly to the Senate;

That the Committee have power to adjourn from place to place within Canada;

That some Members of the Senate, to be designated at a later date, act on behalf of the Senate as members of the said Special Joint Committee; and

That a Message be sent to the House of Commons to inform that House accordingly.

The Hon. the Speaker: It is moved by the Honourable Senator Langlois, seconded by the Honourable Senator Perrault, P.C., that the Senate—

Some Hon. Senators: Disperse.

The Hon. the Speaker: Is it your pleasure, honourable senators, to adopt the motion?

● (1540)

Hon. Raymond J. Perrault: Honourable senators, in speaking to this motion I do not intend to embark on a long discourse on the subject of the constitutional proposals. Suffice it to say that they will receive the closest possible scrutiny in the months ahead. The government has said, and I reiterate once again, that it is open to suggestions and counter-proposals. Its views are not cast in concrete. The subject of constitutional reform is a wide-ranging subject of great importance, and it is worthy of serious and meticulous consideration, both in Parliament and in all regions of the country. No doubt it will receive that serious and meticulous attention.

Since their tabling, several of the constitutional proposals, including the proposal to form a House of the Federation, have attracted a great deal of comment. This is a healthy process, and we should welcome it. Many senators have advocated constitutional changes down through the years. Indeed, a number of senators participated in the joint committee which brought down an excellent report on constitutional reform and change only a few short years ago. The proposed changes in the Senate will be discussed at great length by this committee, if it comes into existence. But changes in the Senate have been advocated by many, many senators. There is nothing new about this process.

It is unreasonable to expect that institutions formed over a century ago would not require reappraisal, review and reform from time to time. I know of no member of this house who has ever advocated that there be a status quo position for the Senate.

The Right Honourable the Prime Minister said in the other place yesterday:

We believe that whatever form the Constitution takes, there must always be a central government able to speak for all Canadians in all parts of Canada in areas which are important in the lives of those people.

He went on to say:

We think it would be a mistake to try to save the unity of Canada merely by saving its geographical entity. We think that unless the central government can indeed govern effectively over all citizens in the country, we might have saved the map of Canada but we would not have saved the reality of a nation, a people united in their purposes and seeking to fulfil their destiny together.

In discussing the proposed House of the Federation, the Prime Minister emphasized that the government is anxious to hear discussion on this and other proposals. He added:

—I ask those Canadians who want to debate constitutional problems and look for solutions, to consider this whole matter, going back to the first principles I have put before the House—how do we bring the regions to the centre and make sure that in some way we end the feeling of alienation which eventually, if left to develop, will destroy the legitimacy of the national parliament?

I know there is concern in some parts of the country about a number of these proposed changes, but, as I have said in this chamber in recent days, and as other spokesmen for the government have said, these proposals are not designed to be definitive; the government does not intend to proceed unilaterally and without discussion. Indeed, yesterday the Prime Minister said this:

Mr. Speaker, we know that there will be a meeting of premiers in August and that one of the issues on the agenda will be those constitutional proposals. So I repeat, it should be well understood that it is not a definitive or unilateral action that precludes any discussion. It is the result of the ideas developed by the government with the support of the Liberal caucus. It is the result of our thinking but, as I have said, we are prepared to continue the debate and improve the way in which we shall be able to study the bill.

He further said:

I would simply like to say once again that we do not believe that a constitutional bill can lead the country towards greater harmony or unity if the bill is not debated and eventually accepted by the great majority of Canadians. This is why we have proceeded in this way by moving a motion to establish a committee. I hope, Mr. Speaker, that this committee can report to us in the coming months. As for me, I am convinced that we owe it to ourselves and that we owe it to Canadians to give them finally a constitution written, passed, proclaimed in Canada, for Canadians, by Canadians.

I am confident that if the Senate approves participation in this committee, the Senate members appointed to the special joint committee will undertake their responsibilities in the light of the role they are playing, perhaps in determining Canada's future history. I am also confident that the special Senate committee proposed by Senator Connolly (Ottawa West) whom I congratulate on his twenty-five years of service to this chamber—

Hon. Senators: Hear, hear.

Senator Perrault: —will make invaluable contributions to the discussions on the subject of change in our Constitution.

The Senate has never been an advocate of the status quo. We have always recognized the need for constructive change. Equally, the Senate has a proud record of improving proposed legislation, and I am confident that we have the desire, the talent and the expertise to contribute substantially, perhaps even in a major way, to this most important dialogue on the future of our country.

That is why I am pleased to recommend that the Senate be a part of the special joint committee. That is why I believe that we should unite with our friends in the other place in the appointment of the special joint committee, which I believe will be one of the most important committees ever formed in the long and honourable tradition of our Parliament, and I have no doubt whatsoever that members of the Senate will make a memorable and constructive, indeed historic, contribution.

Hon. Jacques Flynn: Honourable senators, before I comment on the motion, would the Leader of the Government indicate how many members from this house will be appointed to this special joint committee? The motion does not say anything about that.

Senator Perrault: It is my view that we may well have no fewer than twelve members on the committee.

Senator Flynn: When will a decision be made on that important question?

Senator Perrault: It is expected that the matter will be discussed tomorrow, but I have had preliminary discussions with the house leader in the other place and I have reiterated the great importance to Parliament of a number of these changes. Indeed, the whole package has great import for the country.

Senator Flynn: In any event, I suppose the Senate will have to concur in the number that will be suggested to—I repeat “suggested to,” not imposed, on—the Leader of the Government in the Senate by the cabinet. I agree the government may have something to say, at least, that there has to be some concurrence of the other place in the number that we will add to this special joint committee.

Honourable senators, I do not intend to take much longer than the Leader of the Government has taken in dealing with this motion. I would say that Bill C-60, these proposals for constitutional reform, has fallen upon the House of Commons, the Senate and the people of Canada not as a surprise but certainly not when expected either. Two months ago, we could not have expected that these proposals would come now. If an election had been called for July 10, as was expected when the Leader of the Government was urging us to speed up the passage of the legislation before us at that time, I submit we would not have learned of these proposals. Is there any relationship between the fact that the Prime Minister hesitated, that he decided not to call an election, and the making public now of these proposals? I believe there is. And whether there is any connection between the introduction of these proposals and the date of the next election we will see. However, I suggest to honourable senators that the timing of these proposals was not very good.

● (1550)

Here is a government which is in its last year; it might even be in the last months of its term in office.

An Hon. Senator: On its last legs.

Senator Flynn: It has a very old and very stale mandate. So what does it do? It makes very definite and precise proposals in connection with a matter which the Leader of the Government indicated earlier has been the subject of discussion for many, many years. I remember that it was the subject of discussion in 1962, when I was a member of the administration. I also remember speeches on this subject made by the present Prime Minister not long after he became Prime Minister. I know that he has made efforts, and worthwhile efforts, to bring about a constitutional reform that, apparently, many wish. However, I am not sure that he has hit upon the proper method to achieve this objective.

[Senator Perrault.]

The method chosen in the present instance—that of tabling a bill outlining precisely what he and the government have in mind—is not, in my opinion, the proper method. I say this because, though the bill purports to deal, in its first phase, with federal institutions, these institutions are nevertheless the concern of the provinces also. The provinces also have an interest in what happens to the cabinet, the Senate, the House of Commons, the Supreme Court of Canada, et cetera. The Prime Minister has said we will deal with Phase I first, and our objective, timewise, is July 1, 1979. It is our objective to achieve the second phase by 1981. However, Phase II is of the essence of constitutional reform, because it will deal with the division of powers, the clarification of jurisdiction, between the two levels of government. This is of the essence.

I remember Senator Denis asking a question not so long ago as to what would happen if we passed Phase I and could not agree on Phase II. That was a very good question. There was no answer, of course. However, it seems to me that at the coming conference of first ministers thought might be given to reversing the process in order to have Phase II dealt with immediately, leaving Phase I to be completed later. After all, Phase II tackles the contents of the Constitution, whereas Phase I deals with the container of the Constitution. If agreement is not reached with respect to Phase II, how can anything meaningful be done with respect to Phase I? I am quite sure that as far as national unity is concerned, if understanding on the subject of Phase II is not reached, Phase I will not achieve a thing.

However, the Prime Minister realizes that he has a problem. He knows that it is useless to discuss Phase II with the present Government of Quebec. Division of powers is not discussed with a government that has declared its intention to separate from Canada. I agree with that, but I believe that all senators will remember that I thought this process of the premiers' conference, or a governments' conference, would not be sufficient. I remain convinced that there must be an assembly of all parties, federal and provincial. They should be brought together with the possible participation of representatives of labour, industry, finance and various areas of activity, in order to make known their views on these crucial constitutional issues. If the Prime Minister cannot discuss division of powers with Mr. Lévesque, he certainly can do it with Mr. Ryan and Mr. Biron. They have something to say and, according to the last provincial general election, they represent 60 per cent of the population of the province of Quebec. They would have something to say, and I'm sure would welcome the opportunity to say what they want and with what they are prepared to agree. This is important. Sometimes a government may take a position, but the next day it is out of office. Therefore, not only governments must be involved in such a discussion.

The criticism has been made, and rightly so, that the government's taking this initiative on its own at this time, as if it were its exclusive responsibility to bring about constitutional reform, was wrong. I agree that the Prime Minister and the government have maintained that everything is negotiable. But they have nonetheless written into the form of a bill now before Parliament exactly what they would want to see happen.

As far as the Senate is concerned, I believe the Prime Minister and the government have made it clear that they would like to dispense with us. What we should do about that is something difficult to assess at the moment. We have been put into a very difficult position. However, I suggest that though we have been dealt a death-blow by these proposals of the government there is one thing, at least, that we can do. From now until the burial, which may take years—it will take years before there is any unanimity in this respect—I think we can do quite a lot by way of making suggestions as to the reform of the Constitution as a whole. We can do much to improve the proposals that were made and that is the reason I think we must join with the House of Commons in this process. But this joint committee need not necessarily be thought to be the only body capable of looking into this matter.

● (1600)

Again I say that a more broadly based, a more representative, forum would be preferable. But if there is nothing else, then, at least, we should use this committee to voice our views on every aspect of constitutional reform, and we should, more particularly, as far as the Senate is concerned, see to it that if we must be replaced, that we be replaced by something better and not by something worse than is proposed in Bill C-60.

It is in this spirit, honourable senators, that we should attack the job which has been given to this joint committee. And I am quite sure that not only the senators who are members of the committee but all senators will want to participate in the work of this committee. All senators have a responsibility to express their views on matters so important. We should work as we always have for the benefit of the country, seek to improve the situation, and see to it that, if the Senate must disappear in the process, it be replaced by something better.

Senator Manning: Honourable senators, before participating formally in this debate I should like to direct a question to the Leader of the government on procedure.

This motion which is now before the house is of great importance to all honourable senators, because it will afford those of us—and I am referring to the majority of us—who will not be members of this joint committee, which will be carrying on the study during the summer, an opportunity to convey to those who will represent this house on the committee any viewpoints or deep convictions we hold on the subject. For that reason, in discussing this motion, I would like to take a little time to express such convictions on a number of the major points in the subject matter to be referred to the committee. Because of the lateness of the hour I hesitate to impose what may be a rather heavy talk on the house at this time. My own preference would be to adjourn the debate until tomorrow morning. On the other hand, I do not want to delay the business of the house as we come to the close of our work for this session.

The Leader of the Government and the Leader of the Opposition have now officially placed this matter before all of us, and I for one would like an opportunity to assess what I intended to say in the light of the remarks that they have made this afternoon. I am asking the Leader of the Government if there is any urgent need to proceed with this debate this afternoon; if not, I would prefer to adjourn it until tomorrow morning.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, if Senator Manning wishes to adjourn the debate, that is his right. This is an important subject and there is no view on the part of the government, and I am sure this is supported by the official opposition, that there should be inordinate haste in dealing with this resolution to establish a joint committee. We have certain time strictures that confront us if we are to adjourn at the time we hope to adjourn, and I am sure all honourable senators will wish to bear that in mind when they make their remarks.

There will be a full opportunity for all honourable senators, as Senator Flynn has pointed out, to participate in the special Senate committee. There will be full opportunity for all honourable senators to make their views known not only before the Senate committee but also, I would think, before the joint committee of the two houses of Parliament. It would seem to me that honourable senators may wish to appear before that committee, and that their request to do so would be given very favourable consideration by the joint chairmen.

That is by way of answering your earlier question, senator. But there is no determination on anyone's part to have this debate concluded within any particular period of time. So I suggest that the honourable senator may proceed in any way he wishes.

Senator Manning: I am sorry, senator, I did not hear your last remark.

Senator Perrault: If you are not prepared to speak now, I am sure all honourable senators will listen sympathetically to your explanation.

Senator McIlraith: Honourable senators, perhaps I could raise a point that might be helpful. It seems to me that the procedure in setting up special committees of the Senate is that after the committee is created the Committee of Selection chooses the members, and reports. In the normal program for completing our work tomorrow, I would suspect that that committee would meet either tonight or tomorrow morning, and come back here at 11 o'clock tomorrow with a report naming senators to the committee. That report is debatable, so the speech can be made at that time on that motion naming the personnel, or it can be made on the present motion that a committee be set up. If it is to be made on the report of the Committee of Selection it would enable that committee to sit later today and advance its work within the time frame we are all aiming at. I do not think it would affect in any way the validity or the propriety of the speech.

Senator Manning: Honourable senators, unless some other honourable senator wishes to speak now, I move the adjournment of the debate.

On motion of Senator Manning, debate adjourned.

ADJOURNMENT

Leave having been to revert to Notices of Motion:

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, with leave of the Senate and notwithstanding rule 45(1)(g), I move that when the Senate adjourns today it do stand adjourned until tomorrow at 11 a.m.

Motion agreed to.

The Senate adjourned until tomorrow at 11 a.m.

---

THE SENATE

Thursday, June 29, 1978

The Senate met at 11 a.m., the Speaker in the Chair.

Prayers.

[Translation]

THE LATE HONOURABLE HERVÉ J. MICHAUD

TRIBUTE

Senator Louis-J. Robichaud: Honourable senators, I would like to raise a brief question of privilege.

I happened to be away, confined to a hospital bed, when our colleague, Senator Hervé Michaud, died, but I would like to underline once again Senator Michaud's contribution to the social and economic life of New Brunswick, especially among the Acadians.

I take the opportunity which is given to me to extend once more my sincere sympathy to Mrs. Michaud and her family.

I would like to add that had it not been for Senator Michaud's endeavours, the population of New Brunswick would still be without an experimental farm which he felt had become essential for the county of Kent and the province of New Brunswick. This experimental farm will be called the "Hervé J. Michaud Experimental Farm." It is because of his seat in the Senate and thanks to Senator Argue's and Senator Michaud's efforts that the Acadians and the population of New Brunswick generally will have an experimental farm, an economic tool which will provide great services to the public.

In addition, if in some circles it is suggested that the Senate has become a virtually useless institution, well, that minority should refrain from saying such things to the people of Kent County or to the people of New Brunswick who will benefit from that experimental farm. I repeat that thanks to this institution, the Acadians will benefit from this new instrument of progress that is given to Kent County and the province of New Brunswick.

EXPORT DEVELOPMENT ACT

BILL TO AMEND—FIRST READING

The Hon. the Speaker informed the Senate that a message had been received from the House of Commons with Bill C-36, to amend the Export Development Act.

Bill read first time.

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this bill be read the second time?

Senator Langlois, with leave of the Senate, moved that the bill be placed on the Orders of the Day for second reading later this day.

Motion agreed to.

● (1110)

COMPETITION POLICY

REPORT OF BANKING, TRADE AND COMMERCE COMMITTEE ON SUBJECT MATTER OF BILL C-13—TABLED AND PRINTED AS APPENDIX

Senator Hayden: Honourable senators, I desire to table the report of the Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce on the subject matter of Bill C-13, to amend the Combines Investigation Act and to amend the Bank Act and other Acts in relation thereto or in consequence thereof, and ask that the report be printed as an appendix to the Debates of the Senate and to the Minutes of the Proceedings of the Senate of this day and form part of the permanent record of this house.

The Hon. the Speaker: Is it agreed, honourable senators?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

[For text of report see appendix, p. 1004.]

INCOME TAX ACT

BILL TO AMEND—REPORT OF COMMITTEE

Senator Hayden, Chairman of the Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce, reported that the committee had considered Bill C-56, to amend the statute law relating to income tax and to authorize payments related to provincial sales tax reductions.

THIRD READING

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this bill be read the third time?

Senator Hayden, with leave of the Senate, moved that the bill be read the third time now.

[Translation]

Hon. Jacques Flynn: Honourable senators, if I rise on third reading of this bill it is because it is very important in light of certain of its implications in the issue of federal-provincial relations and also in light of certain statements which the minister made before the Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce when the committee was considering the subject matter before the bill itself was referred to it after second reading. The bill is also important because of certain comments made by its sponsor when he closed the second reading debate.

Obviously, the sales tax issue was at the centre of the budget the Minister of Finance introduced last April 10. We know the circumstances. We know that eight provinces out of ten had agreed to accept the minister's proposal to reduce their provincial sales tax in exchange for compensation in the form of a federal income tax rebate and a comparable increase in the provincial income tax. Of course, we know that Alberta was excluded from this program or proposition because there is no sales tax in that province. We also know—and that is the main point—that the Quebec Minister of Finance had not given his consent when the budget was introduced, but that he decided afterwards to implement a selective sales tax cut in Quebec. As a consequence of this disagreement between the federal Minister of Finance and the Quebec Minister of Finance, there was the dispute we all know about and the solution offered by the federal minister which was unacceptable not only to the Quebec minister but also to the National Assembly of Quebec which expressed unanimously its feelings about this last proposal.

When he appeared before the committee, the Minister of Finance made a number of statements, which Senator Hayden quoted on page 938 of our debates last Tuesday, and I refer honourable senators to that statement. To summarize, he said that since last fall he had been considering the possibility of inviting provincial governments to reduce their sales tax to stimulate the economy and purchases. The reason he gave was that too many people were saving their money, that there is not enough consumption, if you like, and that we should help by encouraging purchases, industries and the whole Canadian economy. In itself, the idea is excellent. I do not question the merits of that idea. We will be in a better position to judge at the expiration of the six-month period during which that measure will be in effect whether it was the right step to take in the circumstances. I am not discussing that. However, I point out that in his statement the minister said that at the beginning, in October, for instance, the provinces were not at all enthusiastic about this, but that later on some of them indicated that they were interested. He also said the following: [English]

By the time I had decided to have a budget I had decided to move in that direction.

[Translation]

I should like to remind you that the budget speech was delivered on April 10. When had the minister decided to do so? Well, on April 6, which was only four days before. On Thursday, April 6, he announced that he would introduce a budget on April 10. I suggest that, within the context of this debate, it is quite clear that there had not been sufficient consultations and that the ministers of finance could not have known before April 6 that there would be a budget and that the minister would very likely propose to reduce the provincial sales tax with the compensation I have already mentioned. But it is clear also that at that time he had not received the agreement of Quebec. The minister, therefore, for the first time in our history, based his budgetary proposals on a reduction of strictly provincial taxes. I did not say, since there has been some confusion on this matter, that the federal government cannot levy a sales tax. However it can certainly not reduce unilaterally a sales tax imposed by the legislatures. So for the first time a federal minister of finance was basing the main item of his budget on a reduction of strictly provincial taxes. Under these circumstances, and especially with a government which is bent on the independence of Quebec, the least the Minister of Finance could have done, would have been to secure the unanimous agreement of the provinces before moving in that direction, for without such an agreement he was risking the confrontation which has occurred. I do not condone here the way the Quebec government has responded. I am sure it saw in this move, which I feel was somewhat naive on the part of the government, an extraordinary occasion to demonstrate once more that the government we have in Ottawa is centralist and patronizing. They have seen there a good opportunity. Could they miss it on the political level? I say no. On the moral level it is an altogether different matter. I will certainly not defend the excessive use the Quebec Minister of Finance has made of the proposal because it had been proposed in such circumstances. But I will say that the central government has always the tendency to believe that it can tell the provinces how to act in the areas of concern to them. That situation derives from the federal government's centralizing and paternalistic attitude.

[Senator Flynn.]

With regard to the provinces which gave their agreement, in spite of the statements made a few days later by the three prairie premiers who expressed their disappointment and regret at having been forced to act in this way, Senator Hayden said: If they did not agree to it, how is it then that as early as the day following the federal budget of April 10 the legislative assemblies concerned passed legislation stating that the proposal had the force of law? That is easy. They had no choice. The minister had indicated that he was going in that direction. If they did not accept his proposal, they would not have the advantage of reducing their taxes. They would not be entitled to compensation. Let no one tell me that is not forcing the provinces to go that way. The best proof of it is that the Quebec government, having refused to pass legislation on the proposal, is being penalized today. It is losing $186 million in income for having decided to choose selective cuts. That proves very well that if the others had not accepted the proposal they would have lost. Some provinces would certainly have accepted it and then received compensation.

It is all very well for you to shake your head, Senator Lamontagne; I can understand your attitude. I know your views on centralization. You have never been afraid of confrontation. Today we are discussing constitutional proposals. The important thing is to clarify the matter of the responsibilities of the two levels of government. This is no way to achieve a consensus, by trying to create a new Constitution and saying that the federal government is acting properly by interfering in fields with which it should not be concerned.

There is a limit to everything. I say there was no prior consultation and that, in that case, there should have been unanimous agreement before going ahead with the plan. It was not done, with the result that we know.

Now, the National Assembly has said that the matter of compensation payable to Quebec for its selective tax cuts should be settled between governments and not by Parliament, or the central government and the Quebec taxpayers. There was some discussion on this subject. Finally, there was no agreement. Mr. Chrétien took the following position: "I have no time to deal with that. It will remain as I said. We are going to pay compensation to Quebec taxpayers in the form of a tax rebate cheque which we shall send to them in July. I could not care less what the Government of Quebec does about it."

● (1120)

First of all, this is against the views of the National Assembly. Secondly, this is simply giving Quebec the opportunity to cry injustice. In fact it amounts to supporting precisely the objectives of the government we have in Quebec. This is the great mistake. I say that the minister, having seen the situation resulting from the Quebec decision, should have been more flexible. This is where he could really have asserted himself as someone who truly wanted to obtain a solution to avoid the confrontation we know. He said: "No, that is it. We shall send cheques directly to Quebec taxpayers. You, the provincial government, the National Assembly, do as you please to recover that amount."

Senator Lamontagne: Honourable senators, I rise on a point of order. I think we should put the facts straight on that subject and recall the statement Mr. Parizeau made on television, and I heard it myself, when he said:

Given those two formulas, I leave the option to the federal Minister of Finance.

Senator Flynn: I fully agree. Anyway, this is not a point of order but a comment. I am always happy when Senator Lamontagne rises to speak.

The finance minister tried to negotiate, but there was no agreement. He finally said: "Do what you want, and we will assume our responsibilities." But, as I said, by forcing him to make that statement, you were giving him another ace in the hole, another reason for complaining. That is why I say the federal government did not show flexibility.

Furthermore, that statement from the finance minister was followed by the one from the Quebec premier who suggested that it was not acceptable. These were his last words. That was some time ago. Still, the finance minister could have changed his mind at that time. He certainly could have adopted a more flexible attitude. It would have been easy to amend the law. It would still have been easy to do so.

In committee I asked the finance minister: Why not provide in the law the possibility of concluding an agreement with the Government of Quebec so as to give directly to them the amount of $85 or less which you intend to send to Quebec taxpayers, depending on the amount of taxes they paid? Why didn't you provide the possibility of reaching an agreement? You have the refunding proposal, and you have the possibility of an agreement with Quebec. Should Quebec refuse, then you would be fully justified in sending the cheques. Should Quebec accept, then you have settled the problem and they would have no more reasons for complaining.

That is the formula I proposed to the committee yesterday and which was rejected, as could have been expected. Obviously, I could at this stage move a motion to refer the bill to committee with a view to introducing such an amendment to clause 30 of the bill. However, I can see it would be useless. Secondly, there is another reason. The principle is quite important. I would certainly have forced the Senate to take a vote as the case may be. Such votes are common. This way I would have forced the Senate to take a decision. However, it is only a six-month period and almost three months have already gone by since the budget. So this experience has only three months left to run. At the economic level, it may prove to be a success. But certainly, at the level of federal-provincial relations, it will have been a disaster, particularly for Quebec-Ottawa relations. It can certainly not be considered a success either as far as Alberta is concerned or with regard to the three other prairie provinces. In any case, that is why I am not introducing this amendment or this motion to refer the bill to committee for amendment.

But I ask this: After this experience, will the government finally get rid of this obsession of always wanting to force the provinces, directly or indirectly, subtly or not, to accept its decisions in areas that come under their jurisdiction? If we want the federal system to work, the federal government, or I should say the federal Parliament, which includes the Senate, should adopt an attitude of respect toward the priorities and responsibilities of the provinces. This is nothing new. Of course, under the circumstances there should have been consultations to obtain unanimity.

Let's suppose for one moment that this measure gives such good results that it would be desirable to extend it. I cannot believe that this government would pursue this experience without getting unanimous consent this time. I hope we will learn a lesson from this experience. I repeat once again that I do not blame the minister. I simply consider that he was very naive when he discovered that Mr. Parizeau remained unresponsive or that he was looking for a confrontation. He did not choose the right course in this case.

I regret very much what happened when the bill was introduced. I regret there was not enough flexibility to agree on a method which could have resulted in an agreement with Quebec, and I will certainly vote against the bill to assert my convictions in this regard.

[English]

Hon. Salter A. Hayden: Honourable senators, I do not intend to repeat what I said on the previous occasions I have spoken on this bill, both when I was introducing the bill on second reading and when replying in the course of debate.

Before getting into the remarks I do intend to make today, let me relate to the Senate an incident which took place in committee yesterday during consideration of this bill. Senator Flynn was leading into a motion which he proposed to make, and his comment to me at the time was, "Salter, for a long time I have never seen you as aggressive as you were last night."

Senator Flynn: That's right.

Senator Hayden: My answer to him at the time was, "Jacques, there has never been an occasion when you have been less than aggressive."

My statement is borne out up to this very instant, because my friend was aggressive today. I do not complain about that aggressiveness. It shows the tension, the thinking, and it is all to the good. If I do not measure up to that aggressiveness, and if I do not measure up to the aggressiveness I showed the other night—

Senator Flynn: Your getting there again.

Senator Hayden: —it is simply because I am not prepared to be aggressive today. I do not think it is necessary, and I would not want to crowd Senator Flynn's aggressiveness too far or detract from it in any way. Far be it from me to do that.

But at one point he made some comment about what I had said in reply respecting what interpretation should be put upon the actions of the provincial legislatures in amending provincial income tax statutes so as to accommodate the sales tax reduction proposed by the federal authority. What I said—and I think, objectively, it must be accepted—is that I could see no way in which the provincial legislatures could introduce and enact amending legislation relating to provincial income tax statutes without the approval of the purpose lying behind the enacting of such amending legislation. It does not appear that Senator Flynn accepts that, and perhaps there are others. Whatever may have been the motivation that inspired them, whatever was the motivation that may even have forced the provinces to feel that they had to accommodate themselves to the situation, even my friend admits that the purpose and the aim was good; that there was such a slackening of demand in the marketplace that this appeared to be a way by which that demand could be stimulated; that is, by going directly to the marketplace where that slackening had taken place. This was the experience in the United States in the previous year. The market demand increased substantially and accounted for the major part of the improvement in operations in the United States.

● (1130)

Now, this is a viewpoint. My friend has his viewpoint. Even lawyers differ. Senator Flynn might be asked to give a legal opinion on a question and I might be asked to give a legal opinion on the same question. We might concur but, then again, we might not. But which one is wrong and which one is right? As far as my friend Senator Flynn is concerned, he is right.

Senator Flynn: Well, you are on the right side of the chamber, anyway.

Senator Hayden: The only thing is, don't ask me to accept his opinion. I understand fully what he has said and I understand his viewpoint. But I still have a viewpoint. I have expressed it and I think it is right. I think it is rational, and I think it is reasonable.

[Senator Hayden.]

Senator Flynn: Too rational.

Senator Hayden: Too rational?

Senator Flynn: We are dealing with political matters.

Senator Hayden: Well, I should tell my friend that I actually thrive on interruptions.

Senator Flynn: So do I.

Senator Hayden: And I don't get excited, and I don't get emotional. I can be entirely objective, I feel.

Senator Flynn: Cold!

Senator Hayden: Yes. Now, when my friend was referring to the statement of the Minister of Finance before our committee, there were some significant words that he did not deal with. I quote from what the minister said in committee, as reported at page 938 of Hansard. He said:

I am told that for the first time in the history of Canada the Minister of Finance went to visit and talk to all the ministers of finance of the land to try to incorporate them in an economic package. I offered to compensate them for a reduction of sales tax and for three weeks we discussed the matter and came to an agreement with eight out of nine provinces. Following the signing of an agreement of all other ministers of finance, the ninth province, after 48 hours, wanted something else, and, unfortunately, I had to tell them no. I had no choice. I had offered a deal and they did not want the same deal.

He had given his word to the other eight ministers of finance, so he had to live with it. All I am saying is that my friend seeks to put a broad interpretation on all of this, that the provincial ministers of finance went ahead because they had no alternative. Maybe they had no political alternative, but they certainly had an alternative. It might have been embarrassing to them to act on it, but they did not have to pass provincial legislation amending their income tax acts in order to make effective the proposals by the federal authority. I agree it would have been embarrassing, and I agree that politically it might have been very unwise, and it may well be that the repentance which came three days after the budget, and after they had made these amendments to the provincial tax bills, was a repentance that was actuated by a number of considerations, pro and con. But the value of speaking after the event was that the situation had already been accomplished by the amendments in the provincial legislatures and, therefore, the deal was fait accompli and the ministers could have their cake and eat it.

Even if you accept the principle that the deal should be undone, there is no way in which you can undo it. The public is enjoying the benefit of sales tax reductions at the present time. You would have to make amendments and restore retroactively the provisions of the taxing statutes of the provincial legislatures. So putting it at its best—or perhaps at its worst—the situation is that whatever the deal is now, looking at it from this point of view, it must be accepted.

The Minister of Finance of Manitoba said something that showed he had some political considerations. He said, "This course of action is not to be taken as a precedent." That is a sensible approach. But to undo the deal that was made would, in my opinion, be impractical and foolish. It would be a reckless assertion of, or giving prominence to, political considerations. There is no way in which you can look at this in that light.

There may be a good deal of merit in what my friend said about confrontations and negotiations between different federal governments and the provinces over the years. Admittedly, this attitude of confrontation can cause resentment when taken from a position of dominance or domination, because weight is thrown into the situation and when it relates to provincial jurisdictions there is resentment. I can understand that. But I am not talking about that, and I do not think any direct consideration of the bill embraces that at the present moment.

If there was lack of consultation, if there was a confrontation and the throwing in of weight or pressure, the provincial ministers were free, white and over 21, and they could bring some intelligence and, I would say, even political knowledge to bear on the scene. They might even have resented the manner in which it was done. Nevertheless, they went ahead and took the necessary action to make the transaction possible.

That is all I have to say on it. In those circumstances I think the minister was sincere and intended to do something that would stimulate the economy. He may not have had as much insight into the actions and possible reactions, political and otherwise, of those in authority in Quebec. Their reaction might very well have been, "Well, this is too good an opportunity to miss in order to create further irritation and differences between the federal and provincial authorities."

• (1140)

I have spoken in reply to my friend because he brought me into his argument. I do not resent that.

Senator Flynn: I hope not.

Senator Hayden: That is the free play of debating forces, and I enjoy the contest.

Hon. Duff Roblin: Honourable senators, I shall start with the classic statement that I really did not intend to get into this debate again; but when I heard such an eloquent exposition of the classical centralist position, as has just been given to this house by the honourable senator who has just preceded me, I felt that I really could not refrain from making a comment upon it.

We did not get any lengthy discussion here as to whether or not there had been a trespass by the federal authorities in a field which was, by tradition, and in many other respects, considered to be a provincial area. That really is the nub of the matter, but we did not really get much discussion on that point.

What we did get was justification for what was done; and if I can put the matter in very simple language, as it appeared to me the position being taken was, "What have these fellows got to complain about? After all, they agreed to it, didn't they?"

That, of course, is the typical federal position. From the other point of view it would be: "Yes, they agreed to it, but they knuckled under, because of circumstances with which we are all familiar. They agreed to it, but they knuckled under. But you cannot expect, by that act, that they like it, or approve of it, or agree with it."

That is the main issue we have here, and until those who speak for the federal authority can take some more constructive view of the matter, they will get the same kind of reaction from the provinces. We cannot expect them to accept a trespass in their territory without complaining about it; and I do not think one can justify the trespass by saying, "Well, they went along, didn't they?" The answer is that they did not have much alternative, but that does not mean they are going to like it.

I do not intend to make any further comment on the subject, but that is the way the matter looks to people who are a little farther from Ottawa than we are.

Hon. George I. Smith (Colchester): Honourable senators, there are one or two points that should be emphasized here. I concur with what has been said by my leader, by my colleague Senator Roblin, and by others who have spoken on second reading and who objected and stated the objection of the provinces to the process of confrontation and compulsion by which this particular proposition was carried out between the federal government and the provinces.

I have listened for many years to the exposition of the federal position that, "We will do what we like, whether you like it or not," couched in courteous words, as Senator Hayden exposed that position this morning. And it sounded no better now, coming from him, and no more persuasive, than it did when I first heard it something like 15 years ago from the lips of a distinguished Canadian who is now no longer with us.

The federal government is very much like the ancient Bourbon dynasty: it never forgets anything, it never learns anything. It has been told this time and again by premiers and ministers of finance and other ministers of the provinces—of every province, not just one, and, so far as I can recall, of every political persuasion. Over the years there has been, in the variety of governments in office in the provinces, a complete spectrum of our political life, insofar as it has been represented by organized and accepted political parties—and still there has not usually been a real effort to reach a consensus, an agreement. Instead, the federal government presents something in terms of, "This is what we are going to do. What have you got to say about it?"

As a rule, it does not matter very much what the provinces have to say about it, because it gets done anyway. Honourable senators do not have to look very far for the most recent example, one more recent than this one. Just a few days ago the federal government presented to the public and to Parliament a statement that it intended to do away with this chamber—and it did so, I venture to say, without the slightest consultation with the members of this chamber, no matter how friendly they were to the government of the day.

Senator Marshall: Right.

Senator Smith (Colchester): How do my honourable friends like that? Do they think they would have been able to contribute something useful? Do they think they would have felt more like supporting that change in the Constitution if they had been given an opportunity to consult beforehand, in order to give their views and put their knowledge and experience to work with that of the government in an endeavour to reach by consensus a process of amendment which would be designed to improve the things that now exist?

Honourable senators will recall the feelings which arose in their hearts and minds when faced with that document a few days ago. That is precisely the kind of feeling that arises in the hearts and minds of provincial premiers and ministers when they are faced in the same way with these propositions; and it has been ever thus.

The present administration perhaps has been guilty more frequently than its immediate predecessors of this kind of dealing with the provinces. How can one expect provincial leaders of stature, ability and pride to accept this kind of thing?

An Hon. Senator: Who are they?

Senator Smith (Colchester): I am not sure whether the remark "Who are they?" from the other side was intended to refer to the provincial leaders, but I am sure that honourable gentlemen will know that very well, and, if they do not know it, will doubtless find out.

I referred to the eloquent argument put forward by Senator Hayden in support of the bill and the action taken. I must say that I cannot bring myself to agree that he has any real justification for saying that because a provincial legislature did what it saw it had to do, no matter how much against its will, it showed that it reached agreement willingly, voluntarily and freely.

Senator Hayden, as well as other honourable senators, are well aware of a principle of law that those things that are done under duress or by coercion are not done freely and voluntarily, and do not show that meeting of the minds that is necessary to produce a freely agreed contract between persons who may be "free, white and 21," to use Senator Hayden's phrase, or may be none of those things. He knows that principle. He knows it is not uncommon for this kind of action, as between individuals, to be brought about simply because they are overpowered or the circumstances are such that, against their will, they must yield to someone else's wishes.

● (1150)

I remind honourable senators that if we, as Canadians, want the two levels of government which are most concerned with these matters—and I am not forgetting the municipal level—to reach agreement, then, surely, we have to seek a means of getting together and a means of saying to one another, "Now, this is what we think would be a good solution. What do you think about it? Here is our problem. Let's sit down together and work it out."

[Senator Smith (Colchester).]

However much good this may have done to the economy and to our citizens, it has made the road to agreement on other matters longer and more troublesome for all of us. I say this, not because it was done but because of the way in which it was done.

Hon. Charles McElman: Would you rather I not speak, Senator Goldenberg? If so, you should rise in your place and say so. I feel I can make a contribution here whether that is your appreciation or not.

Honourable senators, at one point Senator Flynn said that this was a political matter. I am not a former premier, as Senator Roblin and Senator Smith are, and I am not a constitutional lawyer, but I do know a little bit about politics, and this is, indeed, a political matter.

As I listened to Senator Roblin and Senator Smith, I could not help but recall those days when I too was very much involved with provincial administration. I thought to myself that perhaps those two honourable senators must have had the same experience that I have had when dealing with provincial-municipal matters; that after many long, tiring and difficult months of discussion with the representatives of municipalities they reached the point when they finally said, "We just have to do something. We cannot go on debating and discussing forever," and they did something, as it was their responsibility to the people of their provinces and their legislatures to do. I wonder also if they would not recall, as I do, how often the immediate outburst came from the representatives of the municipalities that the provincial government was unco-operative, that it did not consult sufficiently, that it was taking unilateral action, and so on.

As Senator Flynn said, we are indeed dealing with political matters. On occasion, politicians are inclined to forget some of their own experiences.

There have been many terms bandied about here this morning, such as "confrontation," "compulsion," "paternalistic government" and "centralizing". In order to reach the conclusion that these terms are descriptive of the situation, I think there is one important factor that has been left out of the debate by the honourable senators who have spoken in opposition to this bill. I would recall to your minds that this year there was a first ministers' meeting. It was very significant because it made tremendous progress along the road towards what we all desire—co-operative federalism in Canada. That is not just terminology. I feel it says what all of us wish to see in this country—co-operative federalism. The course towards reaching that end is going to be long, trying and difficult, and many things will have to be done to reach it.

The first ministers' conference did agree, in principle at least, on one thing—that in economic and fiscal matters there has to be a much higher degree of co-ordination and consultation than there has been up to this time in Canada.

Having accepted that principle, the Minister of Finance and his officials—according to the testimony they gave to the Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce—ever since October of last year, have been consulting and discussing with the provinces the very proposal that we have embodied in the legislation before us today. Therefore, it was not something that happened between April 6 and April 10. Those discussions were taking place over a long period of time.

Senator Flynn: There was a warning, but no decision was made.

Senator McElman: We were also told in committee by the Minister of Finance that because of the strictures placed upon the minister—and all of us agree that those strictures should be changed and reduced from what they are now—he was in a very difficult position, because of the confidentiality in handling budgets. Despite that constricting factor, he told us that he and his officials had consulted with the provinces for a period of three weeks, and that out of those discussions there came an understanding—I will not say an agreement—that the provinces, through their respective ministers, would advise the Minister of Finance “yes” or “no” to this agreement within a given period of time. All but one of the provinces did. After weeks of consideration, not three or four days, they all said, “Yes”, except for one, and that one, as I understand it, said something like “Maybe”—he did not say, “No”, and he did not say “Yes”. Therefore, the Minister of Finance was in something of a box.

As Senator Flynn has said, we are discussing political matters. I ask you to remember another factor in this whole equation with which we are dealing. That other factor is that the entire country, at that point in time, believed we were about to go into a federal election. Most of us understand politicians, and I do not say that in any way to demean those who made protests immediately after the budget was brought down. I simply say that with my great admiration for politicians I can understand the approach that some of them may have taken very shortly after, in face of what they thought to be an imminent election.

I repeat that all of us should remember that First Ministers' Conference where there was an understanding reached that, because of the tremendous expenditures that are now made and because of the fiscal responsibility which has now gone proportionately to the provincial governments, rather than the federal government, in the extent of their budget-making, there has to be co-ordination and co-operation. This was the first staggering attempt, if you will, to follow through upon what the first ministers agreed should be the case in Canada if we are to have co-operative federalism.

● (1200)

It did not work as well as it should have, because there is another factor. It is going to be difficult to make anything work as long as there is a P.Q. government in the province of Quebec, where understandings can be thrown out overnight, where they can be changed from what everybody understood them to be. It is a disturbing factor; it is a spoiling factor. So I think we should remember that.

There is one other comment I want to make, and I go back to my Newfoundland friends for it. If hindsight were foresight we would all be better off by a damn sight.

Senator Flynn: May I put two questions to Senator McElman? First, does he seriously consider that the problems of federal-provincial relations can be compared to the problems that arise in the relations between the provincial governments and municipalities?

Senator Benidickson: Why not?

Senator Flynn: Should I give an explanation to my friend? Perhaps he should read the Constitution. The legislatures have exclusive competence in certain areas, as the federal government has. The municipalities are creatures of the provinces, so if they cannot reach agreement the provincial legislature has the powers to impose one. Anyway, that is the answer I was hoping Senator McElman would give me.

A more important question is this. What does Senator McElman say about my proposal to try to have the Minister of Finance in Ottawa reach an agreement with the Minister of Finance in Quebec? I say that the mess is there now; let's try to find a solution that will at least deprive the separatist Government of Quebec of the opportunity to complain.

Senator McElman: In answer to the honourable senator's first question, I would say that I was simply using the reference to the provincial and municipal situation by way of analogy to this debate here today. I realize as well as Senator Flynn that the municipalities are the creatures of the provinces, although I suggest that this seems to be forgotten these days—

Senator Flynn: I agree.

Senator McElman: —and they are coming on very strong. I was using the reference as an analogy to the debate that has gone on here today.

Secondly, Senator Flynn says that the Minister of Finance should be able to make an agreement with Mr. Parizeau. Well, that is all very fine, if we forget Senator Flynn's own assertion that we are dealing with political matters. He shakes his head. Just let me finish. Agreements apparently were reached with Mr. Parizeau; understandings were reached, but then the whole thing blew up after the budget was brought down. Apparently agreements were reached, and then the Premier of the Province of Quebec said, “I don't like this at all”. Then Mr. Parizeau said, “Well, that was not really an agreement. That was an understanding. I am going off in another direction.” How do you reach an agreement that is in the interests of not only Quebec but of the nation, including all the other provinces, with people who will make agreements and then not stand by them? I suggest that in political terms, Senator Flynn's own terms, his suggestion is not workable in this situation.

Motion agreed to and bill read third time and passed, on division.

THE CONSTITUTION

SPECIAL SENATE COMMITTEE—SIXTH REPORT OF COMMITTEE OF SELECTION PRESENTED AND ADOPTED

Senator Petten, Chairman of the Committee of Selection, presented the following report:

Thursday, June 29, 1978.

The Committee of Selection appointed to nominate Senators to serve on the several Select Committees during the present Session makes its Sixth Report as follows:

Your Committee has the honour to submit herewith the list of Senators nominated by it to serve on the Special Committee of the Senate appointed to consider and report upon the subject matter of the Bill C-60, Constitutional Amendment Act, 1978, namely, the Honourable Senators Austin, Barrow, Bonnell, Bourget, Connolly (Ottawa West), Cook, Flynn, Grosart, Haidasz, Hayden, Lafond, Lang, Lucier, Marchand, Marshall, McElman, Olson, Petten, Phillips, Smith (Colchester), Steuart, Robichaud, Wagner, Williams, and Yuzyk.

Respectfully submitted,

William J. Petten,
Chairman

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this report be taken into consideration?

Senator Petten: With leave of the Senate, and notwithstanding rule 45(1)(f), I move that the report be adopted now.

Senator Bell: Honourable senators, before we agree to adopt this report I should like to make some comments.

I think the Committee of Selection has made some excellent choices, and that we will see some very good results when we receive the report of the special committee. My comments concern some exclusions from the committee membership. This committee will comprise 25 senators, and I hope an effort will be made by the committee chairman to invite some of the former senators who have contributed so much to this chamber over the years, from whose advice we would benefit very much. I do not mean the committee should call them as witnesses, but they should be invited to sit in during the committee meetings. I am from British Columbia, and am thinking of the former senators, Norman MacKenzie and John Nicol. I am sure that in other parts of the country there are many excellent people who could be included in this category.

I should also point out that there are no independents on the committee. I do hope honourable senators who are independent of party will be afforded the opportunity of being kept closely informed of the activities of the committee, and that they too will take the opportunity to present their views and give the benefit of their advice to the committee. If the clauses of Bill C-60 dealing with the Senate are adopted, the members of the new house will not only be more partisan than members of the Senate are now, but they will be wildly partisan, so the committee will need all the advice it can get from the independent senators.

[Senator McElman.]

The third gap, if you like, in this report—and one that I regret—is that there are no lady senators nominated. To the extent that we have a different point of view, I think it is perhaps regrettable that we are not to be included as members of the committee. I would therefore urge very strongly, with all sincerity, that those of us of the other sex who have expressed an interest be kept closely informed of the work of the committee, and I suggest that we too will be able to make our contribution to it.

Motion agreed to and report adopted.

● (1210)

INTERNAL ECONOMY, BUDGETS AND ADMINISTRATION

COMMITTEE AUTHORIZED TO PUBLISH AND DISTRIBUTE REPORT OF NATIONAL FINANCE COMMITTEE ON THE ACCOMMODATION PROGRAM OF THE DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC WORKS

Senator Langlois, with leave of the Senate and notwithstanding rule 45(1)(h), moved:

That the honourable senators authorized to act for and on behalf of the Senate in all matters relating to the internal economy of the Senate during any period between sessions of Parliament or between Parliaments be authorized to publish and distribute the Report of the Standing Senate Committee on National Finance on the Accommodation Program of the Department of Public Works.

Motion agreed to.

COMMITTEE AUTHORIZED TO PUBLISH AND DISTRIBUTE REPORT OF FOREIGN AFFAIRS COMMITTEE ON CANADA-UNITED STATES RELATIONS

Senator Langlois, with leave of the Senate and notwithstanding rule 45(1)(h), moved:

That the honourable senators authorized to act for and on behalf of the Senate in all matters relating to the internal economy of the Senate during any period between sessions of Parliament or between Parliaments be authorized to publish and distribute Volume II of the Report of the Standing Senate Committee on Foreign Affairs on Canadian relations with the United States.

Motion agreed to.

The Senate adjourned during pleasure.

At 2.10 p.m. the sitting was resumed.

DOCUMENTS TABLED

Leave having been given to revert to Presentation of Petitions:

Senator Langlois tabled:

Report of the Farm Credit Corporation, including its accounts and financial statements certified by the Auditor General, for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1978, pursuant to sections 75(3) and 77(3) of the Financial Administration Act, Chapter F-10, R.S.C., 1970.

Report of the Army Benevolent Fund Board, including its accounts and financial statements certified by the Auditor General, for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1978, pursuant to section 13 of the Army Benevolent Fund Act, Chapter A-16, R.S.C., 1970.

Copies of Statement on operations under The Returned Soldiers' Insurance Act for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1978, pursuant to section 17(2) of the said Act, Chapter 59, Statutes of Canada, 1951.

Copies of Statement on operations under the Veterans Insurance Act for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1978, pursuant to section 18(2) of the said Act, Chapter V-3, R.S.C., 1970.

Report of the President of the Federal Business Development Bank, including accounts and financial statements and the auditor's report thereon, for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1978, pursuant to sections 75(3) and 77(3) of the Financial Administration Act, Chapter 10, R.S.C., 1970.

Copies of Reports of the Anti-Inflation Board to the Governor in Council, pursuant to section 17(2) of the Anti-Inflation Act, Chapter 75, Statutes of Canada, 1974-75-76, reporting its reference to the Administrator of the said Act of certain proposed changes in compensation plans, as follows:

1. The Town of Port Hope and its employees represented by the Port Hope Police Association, dated June 14, 1978.

2. The Hamilton Hydro Electric System and its employees represented by the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers Local 138, dated June 13, 1978.

3. Bell Canada and its clerical and associated employees, represented by the Canadian Telephone Employer's Association, dated June 13, 1978.

4. Oxford County Board of Health and its employees represented by the Nurses Association, Local 40, dated June 13, 1978.

5. Renfrew County and District Health Unit and its public health nurses, represented by the Ontario Nurses Association, dated June 13, 1978.

6. United Counties of Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry and its registered and graduate nurses, represented by the Ontario Nurses Association, dated Jun 13, 1978.

Report of the Department of the Solicitor General for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1977, pursuant to section 5 of the Department of the Solicitor General Act, Chapter S-12, R.S.C., 1970.

Report of Teleglob Canada, including its accounts and financial statements certified by the Auditor General, for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1978, pursuant to section 16 of the Teleglob Canada Act, Chapter 77, Statutes of Canada, 1974-75-76, and sections 75(3) and 77(3) of the Financial Administration Act, Chapter F-10, R.S.C., 1970.

Copies of Reports of the Administrator under the Anti-Inflation Act, pursuant to section 17(3) of the said Act, Chapter 75, Statutes of Canada, 1974-75-76, respecting certain compensation plans, as follows:

1. Brewer's Warehousing Company Limited, Toronto, Ontario and the group of its permanent employees represented by the United Brewers' Warehousing Workers Provincial Board, representing Local and Branch Unions, and the Canadian Union of United Brewery, Flour, Cereal, Soft Drink and Distillery Workers. Order dated June 23, 1978.

2. Carling O'Keefe Breweries of Canada Limited, Toronto, Ontario and Carling O'Keefe Transport Limited, Toronto, Ontario and the group of their Toronto and Waterloo employees represented by Locals 325, 304 and 173 of the Brewery and Soft Drink Workers Union of the Canadian Union of United Brewery, Flour, Cereal, Soft Drink and Distillery Workers. Order dated June 23, 1978.

3. Molson's Brewery (Ontario) Limited, Toronto, Ontario and the group of its employees represented by the Canadian Union of United Brewery, Flour, Cereal, Soft Drink and Distillery Workers, Local 304 (Toronto plant and Hyatt Transport) and Local 306 (Barrie plant). Order dated June 23, 1978.

Report of expenditures and administration in connection with the Family Allowances Act for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1977, pursuant to section 14 of the said Act, Chapter F-1, R.S.C., 1970.

Report of expenditures and administration in connection with the Old Age Security Act for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1977, pursuant to section 26 of the said Act, Chapter O-6, R.S.C., 1970.

BUSINESS OF THE SENATE

Senator Flynn: Honourable senators, I should like to ask the Deputy Leader of the Government in the Senate for a general outline of what is expected of us in view of the fact that the plan is to adjourn the Senate tomorrow for the summer recess.

Senator Langlois: I can still say that the plan is to adjourn tomorrow. During the luncheon adjournment I endeavoured to reach the right person in the other place to ascertain the program. Unfortunately, I was unable to do so. Someone is now trying to do just that. As soon as I have definite information, I will pass it on to the house.

FOREIGN AFFAIRS

USE BY U.S.S.R. OF GANDER INTERNATIONAL AIRPORT—
QUESTION

Senator Marshall: I should like to ask the Deputy Leader of the Government a question on a very important issue, and in asking it I am taking into account the fact that the house may adjourn tomorrow. Rumours from a reliable source indicate that the Minister of National Defence will ask Russia to stop using the air base in Gander, Newfoundland. I understand it is the intention of the government to use Gander as a base for a squadron of interceptors whose responsibilities will be to undertake surveillance of the 200-mile limit.

While I do not quarrel with the decision, I wonder whether we could be given that information because of the impact this decision has on the economy of Newfoundland, and I wonder if that information will be forthcoming before we adjourn.

Senator Langlois: I shall do my best to get this information before the Senate adjourns.

DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE

STATEMENT BY MINISTER WITH RESPECT TO LIBEL ACTION—
PAYMENT OF LEGAL FEES—QUESTIONS ANSWERED

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, I should like to answer three questions put jointly by Senator Roblin and Senator Forsey on May 2 and May 3. These are lengthy questions which necessitate a lengthy answer. The questions cover two or three pages in the Debates of the Senate for those dates, and I will endeavour to summarize them. My honourable colleagues can then tell me if my summary is complete.

The following would appear to be the questions asked by Senator Roblin and Senator Forsey on May 2 and May 3:

1. Would the government be prepared to produce the precedents for legal rulings referred to by the Minister of Justice when he advised the other chamber that the government would pay to Mr. Stopforth any damages which a court might award him in the action that he brought against the Honourable Jean-Pierre Goyer, together with the costs of the action as taxed by the court?

2. What is the legal basis for the action which it is proposed to take in this matter?

3. By what authority, either statutory or prerogative, is such an action being taken?

The answers to these questions are lengthy. I shall deal first with the precedents.

From time to time the Attorney General and the Deputy Attorney General of Canada have provided various ministries and agencies of the government with opinions in respect of the liability of the government or Crown as master in respect of wrongful acts or torts which have been committed by servants of the Crown in the course of carrying out their employment or duties. These opinions are based upon the general rule that, at law, a master is vicariously liable for the damages which his servant, in the course of his employment, has committed.

[Senator Langlois.]

As a matter of policy, the government, in lieu of providing legal liability insurance for its servants, provides counsel and undertakes the payment of any judgment or costs awarded against the servant as the result of a tort or wrongful act committed by him in the course of his employment.

It would be contrary to government policy to disclose or table the various opinions which the Deputy Ministers of Justice have, from time to time, expressed in matters of this nature.

I shall deal now with the legal basis.

The legal basis for the views expressed by the law officers of the Crown is, of course, the rule that the Crown, as a master, is liable for the torts or wrongful acts of its servants. This rule is set forth in section 3 of the Crown Liability Act, R.S.C. 1970, chapter C-38, which states:

3(1) The Crown is liable in tort for the damages for which, if it were a private person of full age and capacity, it would be liable

(a) in respect of a tort committed by a servant of the Crown—

The general rule in regard to a libel or slander committed by a servant is expressed in Gatley on Libel and Slander, 7th edition, paragraph 872, as follows:

The agent or servant will be deemed to have acted within the scope of his employment when the publication, although itself unauthorized, is so directly incidental to some act which he was authorized to do that it may be said to be a mode, though no doubt an improper mode, of performing such authorized act. "Although the particular act which gives the cause of action may not be authorized, still if the act is done in the course of employment which is authorized, then the master is liable for the act of his servant." On the other hand, if the publication was wholly unconnected with the act which the agent or servant was authorized to do, the principal or master will not be liable.

It should be noted that, in general, it is difficult for a master to avoid liability on the ground that the servant was acting outside the scope of his employment, and in that respect I need only cite the case of Jacques Anctil v. Queen, (1959) Exchequer Court Reports, page 229.

Dealing next with the aspect of authority for action, as of today no costs or damages have been paid. If it should finally be found by a court that Mr. Stopforth is entitled to recover from Mr. Goyer damages and costs in respect of the statement made, then the normal practice is that a submission will be made to Treasury Board for the approval of payment of the damages and costs awarded out of the appropriate vote.

Finally, I wish to note that this answer does not deal with the payment of Mr. Scott's bill. It is not clear whether by reference to costs Senator Forsey is referring to a solicitor's bill for services rendered. However, the normal practice is that when a servant is sued and he asks the Crown to undertake his defence, the solicitor will be paid out of the appropriate vote.

● (1420)

Senator Roblin: I thank my honourable friend for that reply. I think I may say on behalf of Senator Forsey and myself that we will give it some study and see if we have any further inquiries on the matter.

ENERGY

POSSIBLE CHANGE IN CONTROL OF ASSETS OF HUSKY OIL COMPANY—QUESTION ANSWERED

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, I have the answer to another question which was asked by Senator Austin on June 28, when he said:

Honourable senators, I wonder if the deputy leader could either answer or take as notice this question with respect to Husky Oil. Does the government have information as to whether the funds being used by Alberta Gas Trunk Limited are sourced in the heritage funds of the Government of Alberta? That is to say, that the equity owner of Husky may in fact be the Government of Alberta.

In answer to this let me say that Senator Austin will by now have noticed reports that the Alberta Provincial Treasurer, who is responsible for the Heritage Fund, has denied rumours that the Alberta government is aiding in the financing of Alberta Gas Trunk Line's purchases of Husky Oil stock. The Provincial Treasurer has also said that the Alberta government has not been asked to help finance the possible development of Husky's Lloydminster heavy oil reserves if Alberta Gas Trunk Line eventually gains control of Husky.

ALBERTA GAS TRUNK LINE COMPANY LTD.—QUESTION

Senator Austin: Honourable senators, I should like to direct a supplementary question to the deputy leader regarding the Husky Oil matter. I am delighted to have him provide the information with respect to the statement of a minister of the Government of Alberta that that province is not involved in terms of its own finances. I did read that in the press this morning. I am wondering whether the deputy leader can give us assurance that in no way has the Alberta Gas Trunk Line acquisition of shares of Husky impaired its ability to carry on with the entire financing of the northern pipeline. I have seen assurances in the press from Mr. Blair, the president of Alberta Gas Trunk Line, that this does not impair its financing ability, but I believe that questions can legitimately be raised, and they ought to be answered, in that respect.

Senator Langlois: It seems to me that the answer should not come from the federal government, but I shall inquire and see what information I can get.

Senator Austin: We have the Northern Pipeline Agency which is responsible to the Deputy Prime Minister. Perhaps Mr. Sharp can supply some information in this regard.

Senator Langlois: I shall endeavour to obtain whatever information I can.

AIR CANADA

THREATENED STRIKE BY PILOTS—QUESTION ANSWERED

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, on June 22, Senator Olson asked the following question:

Honourable senators, I should like to direct a question to the Leader of the Government respecting the question I asked yesterday about what was then a threatened Air Canada pilots' strike. I understand that the leader did not reply to that question because of some news reports that have come through since then. Could the leader tell us whether all of the outstanding issues in principle as well as in specific detail have been resolved to the completion of the present contract so that we will not be faced with a similar situation during the course of the contract the pilots are operating under now?

The answer to that is the pilots are currently operating without a contract; their contract expired in January. The talks never got beyond the basic issue of pilots deadheading first-class, and this issue has still not been finally resolved. It was the pilots' insistence that this basic issue be resolved before any meaningful talks begin. On July 5, the negotiations will begin again, and at that time all contract items will be brought forth.

CRIMINAL CODE

BILL TO AMEND—THIRD READING

Senator McIlraith moved the third reading of Bill C-42, to amend the Criminal Code.

Motion agreed to, and bill read third time and passed.

THE CONSTITUTION

APPOINTMENT OF SPECIAL JOINT COMMITTEE

The Senate resumed from yesterday the debate on the motion of Senator Langlois:

That the Senate do unite with the House of Commons in the appointment of a Special Joint Committee of the Senate and House of Commons to examine and report upon proposals that have been and in the future are from time to time made public by the Government of Canada, on subjects related to the Constitution of Canada;

That the Committee have power to examine and enquire into all such matters as may be referred to it by the Senate, to report from time to time, to send for persons, papers and records, to sit during sittings and adjournments of the Senate, to print such papers and evidence from day to day as may be ordered by the Committee and to delegate to sub-committees all or any of its powers except the power to report directly to the Senate;

That the Committee have power to adjourn from place to place within Canada;

That some Members of the Senate, to be designated at a later date, act on behalf of the Senate as members of the said Special Joint Committee; and

That a Message be sent to the House of Commons to inform that House accordingly.

Hon. Ernest C. Manning: Honourable senators, I rise to support the motion of Senator Langlois. There is only one clause in the terms of reference on which I have any reservation, and that is the provision that the committee have power to adjourn from place to place within Canada.

During the past five years there has been a whole succession of committees and task forces travelling back and forth across this country hearing representations on many matters which closely relate to the subject now before us. They have undoubtedly done much good, but it reaches the point where many of the submissions are little more than rethreshing straw that has been threshed many times before.

Personally, I think it would be a mistake for this committee to spend a lot of time travelling to and fro across the country. The nature of the subject matter referred to the committee is such that the committee should concentrate on bringing before it, here in the capital and perhaps in one session in the maritimes and one session in the west, evidence from constitutional experts and certainly the detailed position papers of the various provincial governments. It would be advantageous to hear from such people as retired judges and former members of regulatory bodies. Evidence should be invited from the business community, from labour and from responsible groups representing the public as a whole.

The importance of the subject matter referred to the committee certainly is fully appreciated by every honourable member of this house. There are those who would say our interest is self-interest. Someone has said that there is nothing that does more to focus a man's attention on the problem at hand than the imminent prospect of being hanged. That may be a little strong in its application to our situation, but certainly the proposals to be referred to the committee are designed, among other things, to effect the demise of this house.

However, that is not, I am certain, the reason for the concern honourable senators have in this matter. We are all keenly aware that the future form of Confederation, if not Confederation itself, may well depend upon the ultimate decisions and actions which will stem from these proposals. It seems to me the committee's first task should be to try to arrive at some consensus as to what kind of Confederation we want Canada to be and what roles and responsibilities we want each of the two levels of government to assume.

If one is restructuring one's home, it is wise for the family to agree on the kind of home it wants when the restructuring is completed, before calling in the carpenters. With regard to this legislation, I am afraid the carpenters—in this case, the draftsmen—got there first.

What we have is a considerable number of uncoordinated structural changes in the parliamentary institutions of this country. Some of those changes are merely cosmetic, nothing more than painting a new name over the door of the Privy Council or over the door of the upper chamber. But other structural changes, if implemented, would alter the form of Confederation and the kind of Confederation house in which the Canadian people will be living in the future.

[Senator McIlraith.]

Having said that, may I commend the Prime Minister and his government for two things: first, for the time and effort they have put into the preparation of both the white paper and the draft bill. I concur with the government's position that there is value in having some definite proposals as a base from which to initiate discussions on an issue as important as this.

I should also like to commend the government on its stated intention and desire that its proposals be subjected to thorough and frank analysis and discussions, and its stated willingness—which was emphasized by the leader in speaking to this motion yesterday—to revise its proposals in the light of consultations with the provinces and in response to public reaction.

I have some regret that this commendable position is somewhat marred by the stated intention to proceed unilaterally in fields of federal jurisdiction if no consensus or agreement can be reached. That threat may be capable of fulfilment from a purely legal standpoint, but it would certainly do violence to the spirit and the essence of cooperative federalism which the government purports to support.

I can understand the government's position in this matter. There has been a long period of time in which efforts have been made to reach agreement and consensus on these important matters, and those efforts have largely failed. It would be unfair to say that the total blame for that failure rests on the federal government. At times there has been unreasonableness on the part of provincial governments, just as there has been unreasonableness on the part of the national government. But if the government attempts to proceed on its own if it cannot get consensus, it will do serious and perhaps irreparable damage to the already frayed fabric of Confederation.

I should like to focus my remarks on three major areas of the bill that is being referred to this committee: first, the proposed Canadian charter of rights and freedoms; secondly, the proposed House of the Federation; and lastly, the procedure for appointment to the Supreme Court and to major federal regulatory bodies.

I should like to discuss these from the standpoint of their bearing on the two objectives of the government's proposals, which, as I understand, are, firstly, to provide Canada with a modernized, all-Canadian Constitution and a more functional and acceptable governmental structure; and, secondly, to resolve, if possible, the festering problems which for far too long have impaired the national unity of this country and severely strained the ties of Confederation.

I submit, first of all, that to appreciate the nature of the government's proposals it is necessary to take note of the model or concept of Confederation on which they appear to be based. In my region of Canada it is referred to as the "Trudeau model of Confederation", which seems to be based on the concept that Confederation is primarily a union of two founding races and cultures, and that the accommodation of the cultural and linguistic interests of francophone Canadians is the key to national unity and the preservation of Confederation. This concept is clearly reflected in the proposed constitutional amendment bill.

It is not my purpose to argue the pros and cons of that concept. However, I would draw your attention to two facts which are basic to an assessment of the practicability and the acceptability of the government's proposals. The first is that this concept, to which I have referred, is not supported by the facts of history. Secondly, it is a concept rejected by many of the provinces and, I believe, a majority of the Canadian people.

When Confederation took place in 1867 it did not purport to be a union of races and cultures. It was a union of British North American colonies, namely, Upper and Lower Canada which became Ontario and Quebec, and the provinces of New Brunswick and Nova Scotia. The preamble of the British North America Act makes that quite clear:

Whereas the Provinces of Canada, Nova Scotia and New Brunswick have expressed their desire to be federally united into One Dominion under the Crown of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, with a Constitution similar in Principle to that of the United Kingdom:—

There is nothing there about a union of races or cultures.

The parties to the prolonged negotiations which led to the union were the four provinces that first joined together and Prince Edward Island which took part in the negotiations and discussions but deferred its entry until 1873. The other party was the government of Great Britain. That union produced a new entity, namely, the federal government of Canada which henceforth would figure prominently in additions and alterations to Confederation.

I remark in passing that it is ironic that it is this new entity, which came into being in that way, which now seeks to alter the structure of Confederation with or without the concurrence of the provinces which gave it its birth. There is nothing in the historic background of Confederation which would suggest that the provinces ever conceded to the federal government powers incompatible with its intended role as an equal partner with them in Confederation, just as there is no historic background to support the relatively recent concept of Confederation as a union between two founding races, cultures and linguistic groups.

● (1430)

That is why that concept has not been and, I predict, will not be accepted, especially by those provinces which came into Confederation after the original union was consummated. This fundamental difference in position as to the intended nature of Confederation is beneath and behind many of the disagreements which are impairing national unity and preventing a consensus as to why and how Confederation should be restructured.

When Manitoba came into the union in 1870, the key issue certainly was not the extension of a union between two founding races and cultures. The key issue was, in fact, a major real estate deal between the Hudson's Bay Company and the British government and the Government of Canada. The Hudson's Bay Company surrendered vast territories in Rupert's Land in the Northwest Territory to the British Crown, including governmental responsibilities which had been assigned to the Hudson's Bay Company. The British government in turn agreed to transfer the land to Canada in return for a land grant and a cash payment of £300,000. Honourable senators will recall that this part of the deal was what caused the Red River Settlement, under Louis Riel, to rebel against what they termed the arbitrary transfer of their region to a foreign government, namely Canada, whose interests, they felt, were very different from their own.

Again, when British Columbia came into Confederation in 1871 its entry had nothing to do with a union of founding races and cultures. British Columbia had already established institutions of its own and was not enthusiastic about union with Canada. An address by Dr. Helmcken in the British Columbia Legislative Council debates in 1870 indicates the sentiments of the colony in these words:

It is absurd to attempt to ally ourselves with a people 3000 miles away . . . Anything that deprives this Colony of the power of protecting local industries and interests of the Colony and of regulating and fostering its commerce and trade cannot be otherwise than dangerous and injurious to the country . . . We know what is best for ourselves and are able to legislate to effect that. We have no wish to pay Canada to do our legislating . . . No union between this Colony and Canada can permanently exist unless it be to the material and pecuniary advantage of this Colony to remain in the Union.

What I am pointing out is that our history teaches that the development and evolution of Confederation was based on much more earthy things than abstract ideals and racial issues, or cultural and linguistic rights.

When I say that, I am not dismissing or discounting for one moment the importance of those matters, which are of deep concern to many Canadians. What I am saying is that if we would succeed in restructuring Confederation in a way meaningful and acceptable to the majority of the Canadian people, we must approach the problem from the standpoint of the issues and realities with which the majority of the Canadian people is concerned. The federal constitutional amendment bill is not based on that premise and does not take that approach.

I have tried to analyse the government's proposals objectively from the standpoint of their practicability and whether they will alleviate regional alienations, produce national unity and provide Canadians with a more functional and desirable governmental structure. I say with regret that I am forced to the conclusion that they will not accomplish those objectives in their present form, and in some important respects I am afraid they will aggravate the very problems they seek to solve.

This is why I attach tremendous importance to the committee we are discussing, for hopefully the committee, in the light of the information it gathers, will be able to recommend fundamental changes that will make these proposals both practicable and acceptable to the Canadian people.

Let me turn now to the proposals regarding a Canadian charter of rights and freedoms. The theme of declared and entrenched rights, particularly linguistic rights, runs prominently throughout both the white paper and the draft bill. It bears witness to the Prime Minister's preoccupation with this aspect of Canadian life. In my part of Canada constitutional changes to enshrine linguistic or abstract rights would not even be on the list if people were asked to name the issues about which they are most deeply concerned.

Some Hon. Senators: Hear, hear.

Senator Manning: It was interesting to note in a survey published within the last ten days conducted in the province of Quebec, where we have been led to believe constitutional issues are of particular importance, seven out of ten people interviewed listed economic concerns, particularly unemployment and inflation, ahead of constitutional reform.

However, there are other, more fundamental reasons why, like many Canadians, I am not an advocate of bills of rights, particularly entrenched bills of rights. It is not because I do not subscribe to the ideals and objectives of such bills, but because their practical value is so debatable. The cold, hard fact is that no Parliament can legislate human attitudes or eliminate discriminatory practices by legalistic means. For this reason, I submit that bills of rights primarily are little more than political window-dressing. Canada's Official Languages Act is an attempt to establish linguistic rights by a legalistic approach, and most would agree that it has been largely a failure. Canada remains bilingual in name only. The legalistic approach to this highly emotional issue has been divisive, rather than unifying. In my judgment, if the hundreds of millions of dollars spent on bilingualism by legislation had been used to provide instruction in French in the junior grades of the schools of our nation, by now Canada would be largely a bilingual nation in actual fact and without the divisive controversy statutory or constitutional linguistic rights have fostered. But there are other dangers in the entrenchment of what today are affirmed to be rights. Here, again, history teaches that public attitudes change with time and circumstances and what are regarded as rights today may not be so regarded tomorrow. Let me use a simple illustration: one of the rights of association that labour unions hold dear is the right to force all employees in a plant that has a closed shop agreement to be members of their union.

● (1440)

This is a right guaranteed by law to a majority, but at the expense of the right of a minority of individuals not to join a union, if such is their preference. The time may well come when society's attitude to this violation of minority rights may change. In the United States, already there are 17 states which now have right-to-work laws which prohibit majorities from forcing minorities to belong to unions in order that they may hold a job.

[Senator Manning.]

But what if these rights as now accepted are entrenched in a Constitution? What if society some day decides that owners of properties have the right to say who is acceptable as a tenant, or that the owner of a business has the right to say who he is prepared to employ? If presently accepted rights and anti-discrimination provisions are entrenched in a Constitution, changes could not be made without the unlikely concurrence of the federal government and all of the provincial governments.

The proposed procedures for entrenchment also may well further impair federal-provincial relations. Certain provisions in the proposed bill become binding on the provinces if they choose to, what is called, "opt in". In this respect, I refer to clause 14(2). It states:

Any individual has the right to use English or French, as he or she may choose, in any of the debates or other proceedings of the legislative assembly of any province.

Clause 16(2) states:

Either English or French may be used by any person in, or in any pleading or process in or issuing from, any court of Ontario, Quebec or New Brunswick.

Clause 19(2) states:

Any member of the public in any province has the right to use English or French, as he or she may choose, in communicating with any principal office of a department or agency of the executive government of that province—

And so forth.

Whatever the merits of those proposals—and I am not arguing against their merits—such clauses have no place in a federal statute in advance of those positions first being adopted by the provinces. To include them gives rise to the valid contention that the federal government, here again, is interjecting itself into areas which it acknowledges in the bill are within provincial jurisdiction. It acknowledges this by providing that these clauses do not become operative as far as the provinces are concerned until they pass legislation opting into the provision.

Provinces which might move in these directions on their own initiative, if they could retain the right to reverse their position if experience so dictated, will not move to lock themselves into such a provision of a federal enactment. For that reason, it seems to me that these provisions are not only unwise but are counterproductive.

May I make one further observation regarding this charter of rights? I refer to an omission rather than an inclusion in the bill. If detailed attention to linguistic and abstract rights is desirable and warranted, why is there no comparable attention to such matters as economic rights? Such rights are of vital concern to provincial governments in the management of their resources, and they are also vital to a great many individuals.

On page 5 of the bill there appears a listing of powers and rights with respect to individuals. Included in this provision is:

—the right of the individual to the use and enjoyment of property, and the right not to be deprived thereof except in accordance with law—

Honourable senators will agree that is a pretty weak provision. When you say that a person can be deprived of the ownership of property in accordance with law, it is left wide open for any government, by law, to take his property away from him.

In the United States they have gone much further than we have in Canada in ensuring that these economic rights receive equal protection to other more abstract rights. The Fifth Amendment to their Constitution states:

No person shall... be deprived of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law; nor shall private property be taken for public use, without just compensation.

Honourable senators would agree that that goes a lot further than what our Constitution provides. I know we have expropriation acts that provide for compensation, but these are statutes that can be changed at the whim of a government, which is the argument for entrenching these rights in a Constitution.

If we are going to give detailed attention to cultural and linguistic rights, there are millions of people in this country far more concerned to see greater attention paid to their economic rights, which directly affect their livelihood.

I turn now to the subject of the House of the Federation. We can all appreciate the political problem the Prime Minister faced in advancing this proposal. What he is proposing to do is give up the government majority in this upper house. Today the Liberal Party has 74 members in this house. Under the new proposals, that number would be reduced to less than 45 seats out of a house of 118. That is a substantial concession. I submit that it is the kind of concession that simply would not be politically saleable to a Liberal caucus or the Liberal Party if the giving up of that majority would have any meaningful effect. I assume that this is the reason why the House of the Federation, as proposed will not have any meaningful powers. It will, in fact, have less power than this house presently enjoys. It will have no power of veto; its role with respect to legislation is obstructive; it can delay a bill for 60 days, and not even that if the government moves to have the bill declared one which requires speedy passage. In other words, the new House of the Federation is assigned, as far as legislation is concerned, the role of an obstructionist only. Exercising that role, I submit, will not endear it either to the other place or to the general public.

● (1450)

The closest thing to effective powers given to the upper house is in the matter of protecting linguistic rights. This is done by introducing the principle of double majority. In this case, it means dividing the upper house along linguistic lines. Whenever there is a vote on a matter involving linguistic rights, in order to pass it has to be approved by a majority of both groups. I submit that is not very democratic or a very sound principle. It is inevitably divisive. The last basis upon which we should divide people anywhere in this country is on linguistic and cultural lines. This, therefore, is a very undesirable proposal. And even this dubious veto power can be overridden by a two-thirds vote in the other place.

What about the House of the Federation as a mouthpiece for the various regions of Canada? Certainly, what is proposed would bring about more representation for some regions than exists today. But I doubt that there is a single provincial government that would accept such representation as a satisfactory mouthpiece for their province. Those who have had the responsibility of the leadership of a provincial government know that no provincial premier is going to let someone other than himself speak for his government in dealing with the federal government on important issues.

Some Hon. Senators: Hear, hear.

Senator Manning: You could have the House of the Federation go through all the motions, but when the chips are down no provincial government is going to take the position that the House of the Federation should resolve conflicts between the provincial and federal governments. The provincial governments must insist that they confer directly with the federal government as equal partners in Confederation. They cannot reasonably be expected to accept as their mouthpiece representatives of an appointed house not responsible to them once appointed. The same applies to the proposal for the new house to approve appointments to the Supreme Court of Canada and to major federal regulatory bodies. The provincial governments will not accept this arrangement as an alternative to direct consultation and involvement.

The powers which it is proposed to give to the House of the Federation turn out to be little more than window dressing, to give the impression that a chamber with no meaningful powers is performing an important and necessary role.

If I may, I should like at this point to state clearly my position on this matter. Since coming to this chamber I have been deeply impressed by the calibre and dedication of the members of this house. I have been impressed by the great wealth of experience and expertise in this house. My deep regret is that these resources are not being used to anything approaching their maximum potential. My own conclusion is that the proposed new House of the Federation will have no more powers or no more effective role than has this house—

Senator Flynn: Less.

Senator Manning:—and I therefore say that surely we have reached the juncture in Canada where we should either give the upper house, whether this one or a new one, a more meaningful role and more meaningful powers or else abolish it altogether.

The expenditure of over $12 million of taxpayers' money each year for the proposed House of the Federation cannot be justified if its role and powers are to be restricted to what is proposed in the constitutional amendment bill as currently drafted.

I should now like to make a few observations on the proposals respecting the Supreme Court of Canada and federal regulatory bodies. As you know, the membership of the Supreme Court is to be increased from nine to 11. The province of Quebec is to be guaranteed four appointments. There has to be one from the Atlantic provinces, one from Ontario—Ontario by tradition, not by constitutional guarantee, has had three appointments—one from the prairie provinces, and one from British Columbia. The appointments, it is proposed, should be approved or rejected by the House of the Federation. There is a provision that if the house is in adjournment when an appointment is proposed, the appointment is deemed ratified unless 10 members of the upper house request a debate. The ratification procedure does not apply to the appointment of the Chief Justice if he is selected from those who are already members of the Supreme Court.

Another interesting provision is that cases relating to the civil law of Quebec are to be heard only by the four justices from Quebec, whereas cases arising from the civil law of common law provinces are to be heard by the entire court. Such a provision is bound to invite criticism. It will be interpreted across the country as another concession to Quebec, and we will have yet another divisive element introduced at a time when we should avoid such things if at all possible.

The members of this house must also feel some concern over the acceptance of the premise that the quality of justice depends upon the region from which a judge comes and on who does the appointing. Surely, that is not the basis of justice in this country.

Hon. Senators: Hear, hear.

Senator Manning: An individual is appointed to the bench to examine the facts of law with respect to the case before him, and whether he comes from Vancouver Island or Newfoundland, what difference if the man has the capacity and the ability and dedication to fairly and justly adjudicate on the matter before him?

I am troubled by the introduction of the premise that the quality of justice is influenced by the region from which a man comes and by who does the appointing. I suggest that is something to which the proposed joint committee should give very serious attention.

With respect to regulatory tribunals, there is perhaps some justification for having appointments made on a regional basis. The decisions of regulatory tribunals affect the various regions of the country differently. The appointment of people from different regions of the country with a knowledge of the local circumstances could well be beneficial and helpful.

But, there again, I do not think the provincial governments are going to be happy with having the House of the Federation being the body to approve of appointments to these regulatory bodies. That is a matter on which the provinces will insist on dealing directly with the federal government.

Before leaving the matter of appointments to regulatory bodies, it should be noted that there is an inherent danger in the concept of regional appointments. Somewhere down the road, if we start on this course, we will have to decide how many regional and special interest groups should be represented on such tribunals. In a sense, the regional representative from one part of the country represents the special interests of that region. That is why they want him on the board. Environmentalists and consumer groups then want a representative on the board on the basis that they have special interests and so on. Where do you stop once you accept the premise that special interest groups, whether they be representatives of regions of the country or certain groups in society, are entitled to representation on regulatory boards?

[Senator Manning.]

● (1500)

I hope that what I have said does not sound wholly negative; such was not my intention. I have tried to analyze these proposals in relation to their practicability and to their acceptability to the Canadian people. I would like to close on a more positive note by making a few alternative suggestions with respect to an upper house.

I have said that if no more meaningful powers and roles are to be assigned to the upper house I would favour its abolition. That would not be my choice. I believe there is need in our Canadian parliamentary system for an upper house. Our attention and, it is to be hoped, the attention of the committee, should be directed to developing a role for the upper house that will be meaningful and worthwhile to the Canadian people. One area of responsibility that might well be assigned to either this or a restructured upper house relates to this whole question of the evolving confederation that we have in this country. Basically, Confederation was and will remain the end product of an ongoing process of negotiation between the regions and the two levels of government of the country. Meaningful and acceptable restructuring can only come about in the same way. Surely, a constructive role for this or for a new upper chamber would be the task of facilitating and overseeing that ongoing process of negotiation and renegotiation. To this end there is need to compile and constantly update a catalogue of the aspirations and concerns and valid grievances of the various regions of the country, together with their proposals for coming to grips with their problems. Certainly, there is need for the comparable information to be compiled from the standpoint of the federal government for the nation as a whole. Surely, the upper house is an appropriate chamber in which to do the detailed research necessary to work out compromises and trade-offs between regions and positions that would lead to practical recommendations for the consideration of both the federal and provincial governments for future changes in the Constitution.

I should like to see the upper house given a more meaningful legislative role. I should like to see a system under which a bill, when it has received approval in principle in the other place, is immediately introduced into the upper chamber to receive at that stage the attention of the committees of this house in order that they can place in the hands of the committee of the other place the considered judgment and recommendations of this chamber at the stage in the parliamentary process where the members of the other place are most amenable to making changes. This is not the case after the bill has gone through third reading because if changes are made here then it has to go back and go through the whole process again.

I should like to see the upper house given veto powers in certain restricted fields, such as amendments to certain sections of the Constitution, in the case of legislation which is demonstrably contrary to the public will and legislation which invades provincial jurisdiction. This house could be made the guardian of both federal and provincial jurisdictional rights and powers, if you like, a sort of collective ombudsman to safeguard the constitutional rights of both levels of government. It could properly conduct continuous examinations into which level of government, in the light of changing circumstances, could best serve the public need in various areas and recommend changes in jurisdiction by constitutional amendments or by the delegation of powers where such is deemed desirable.

The upper house could properly be assigned a meaningful investigative role. It could carry on investigative studies on important issues for both the federal Parliament and the legislature of every province in this country. Why should we not bring them together by actions of that kind? If that type of work were done by the members of the upper chamber, we would avoid one of the great weaknesses of royal commissions. I have nothing against royal commissions. Too often the people who serve on royal commissions have no political expertise and so they produce a beautiful report, very sound from the standpoint of argument, but a report that is not politically saleable to the Canadian people. That is why such reports too often are put on the shelf and governments do nothing about them. Surely, members of this house could contribute their political expertise in investigative work to the benefit of the country as a whole.

These are but a few of the important areas in which the experience and expertise of the upper house could be utilized for the good of all Canadians.

I must not detain you longer. There will be some, perhaps many, who will disagree with my analysis of the government's proposals and with the alternative courses of action which I have proposed. My attitude to those who disagree is that of John Wesley, whose expressed convictions, perhaps, did more to change the course of British history following the French Revolution than most of the politicians of his day. He said this to his dissenters:

Are you persuaded that you see more clearly than me? It is not unlikely that you may. Then treat me as you would desire to be treated yourself upon a change of circumstances. Point me to a better way than I have known.

Hon. Florence Bayard Bird: Honourable senators, as a new and inexperienced backbencher it had not occurred to me to speak in this debate. I agree with much that the Honourable Senator Manning has said this afternoon, although it occurred to me as I listened that perhaps what he said would be better presented to the two committees that are being set up on the Constitution, since these are matters to be studied in detail.

But there were some things that he said which I feel I must go on record as disagreeing with very strongly. Those of us who in 1968 read the admirable background papers to the Victoria Conference must surely be aware that we need an entrenched bill of rights in this nation. It is certainly obvious that if we are to be a united country we must respect the rights of the French minority, which was one of the great founding races of this country. If we do not entrench those rights, we are not going to have a country, and we must face this fact.

There is another thing that he said that seemed odd, coming from a gentleman primarily engaged in legislation. I think we must have legislation, because in the discussion leading up to it you get some agreement among the people of the nation generally and of the lawmakers. It is not window-dressing to bring in strong legislation; it is something that we are here to consider during the brief period, indeed, that we may be here. Unless you have legislation, you have nothing to turn to in order to have a standard. Therefore, I want to say strongly, "Let us not turn down any idea of an entrenched bill of rights for this country."

• (1510)

There is one rather minor point which, I guess, weakens my argument. I quite agree that Senate committees do a very good job, but I have had some small experience with royal commissions and should like to say here and now that the strength of a royal commission is that it is apolitical, that it is not political, that it is not influenced by cabinet ministers or the need to be elected, or the need to get somebody elected. A royal commission makes its recommendations, and they are accepted by an enlightened government such as we have today. If two-thirds of 122 recommendations of a royal commission have been implemented in the period since it reported, I think you must see that there is some value in its being non-political.

Hon. Royce Frith: Honourable senators, I should like also to congratulate Senator Manning on an exhaustive, persuasive and eloquent analysis of this bill. I do not propose to speak to the bill, but as a fellow Canadian I do wish to comment on one theme that ran through his intervention.

His speech is important because, in my respectful view, it represents a traditional approach that has been abroad for some time, and is still abroad in this country. I think it will continue to be important with reference to the future of this country.

What I am referring to is the fact that when he developed his analysis and exposé of this bill, the cornerstone of his analysis was that Confederation was not based on an agreement between two founding races. He said "races." That was the word that originally appeared in the terms of reference of the B & B Commission, of which I had the honour to be a member. We, as you will remember, decided to interpret that as "peoples," and not "races," since it is not a matter of ethnicity.

Senator Lamontagne: The French version says, "les peuples."

Senator Frith: The French version, as Senator Lamontagne points out, does say, "les peuples."

But the point is that, in effect, Senator Manning was building a strong case against the compact theory of Confederation. He has a good deal of support in the academic world where it is considered not to be a compact in terms of a compact between founding peoples. There is also a good deal of opposition to that analysis, but the point I wish to make is that, apart from whether Confederation was a compact between two linguistic groups or not, Confederation today is a relationship between two major linguistic groups. Surely, the importance of this bill is how it addresses itself to present realities rather than to academic casuistry and theories, either of a compact of Confederation or otherwise.

This thread ran through the senator's exposé, for example, with reference to the entrenchment of linguistic rights. That, of course, could not receive his support because it did not follow logically, as a corollary, from his original principle, which was that the provinces got together for reasons which had nothing to do with linguistic rights or linguistic communities.

From there on his whole house was built on this traditional view that, if we accept the fact that there are in existence two linguistic groups, if we fail to ignore that fact, on, in other words, if we do not take what I call the traditional or ostrich approach to it—and we went through this in the B & B Commission time after time—then we are being divisive. In other words, ignore the fact that there are these two communities, because if you mention it you are being divisive.

Everywhere the B & B Commission went people would stand up and say, "We do not know what you are doing here. Everything is fine here. We have a francophone community. We get along fine with them. They do not have any linguistic rights, of course, but everything is fine. Now you just go off to some other place where there are problems. Go back to Quebec. That is where the problems are. Don't come out and see us here in Alberta or any place else. Everything is fine here. We have this well-settled, traditional view, which you might call the ostrich view, that if you keep your head buried in the sand, and don't worry, everything will be fine." Of course, the trouble was that there were a few people who were members of the linguistic minority who stood up and told us frankly that things were not quite that fine, that they did have some linguistic rights they would like to have protected.

I want to repeat that I found Senator Manning's analysis elucidating, edifying and interesting, and, knowing the respect he knows I have for him as a Canadian statesman, it is against that background that I feel it is important to say this: If the anglophone people, if the non-French-speaking people of this country, approach this constitutional bill on the basis of saying, in effect, to our francophone brothers and sisters, "What is important to you is not important to us;" if that is the outcome; if these little symbolic things, the change of "Privy Council" to "Council of State," cause us to say, "You have gone too far, you are pushing our British institutions too far;" if we argue against changing any of these other things, like the double majority; or if we argue against the entrenchment of linguistic rights, the result may well be that our francophone brothers and sisters will say, "They say we are pushing them too far. It is quite clear that the things that are important to us are not important to them, just as Mr. Lévesque has been telling us for years."

And, honourable senators, that could happen. That opinion or statement or position could be expressed within the next year as a result of a federal election, and I suggest, with respect, that if we ignore that reality, if we ignore the fact that that might be the way our reaction is interpreted, then, to use the phrase that is popular in constitutional terms in Canada now, or at least a version of it, I suggest that our francophone brothers and sisters will "opt out".

● (1520)

Hon. George I. Smith: Honourable senators, it is not my purpose, you will be pleased to know, to speak at any great length on this subject. There are one or two points that I should like to make, and it is quite likely that I shall be voicing the view of a great many, if not all, honourable senators when I compliment Senator Manning on his careful analysis of the proposed legislation—or whatever one might want to call it—and his eloquent method of bringing to our attention some of those matters which he considers to be of fundamental importance.

Hon. Senators: Hear, hear.

Senator Smith (Colchester): I do not intend to deal with the linguistic rights problem and related matters, except to say that while some honourable senators might disagree with Senator Manning's view as to the importance thereof, it will be vitally necessary to keep in mind that what he states as a fact in regard to beliefs held by Canadians is pretty accurate, and it would be very unwise, in any effort to develop a better Constitution, to forget that.

That is not an argument either for or against what is contained in the bill in this respect. I merely say that all of us, no matter what our views might be, have first to recognize what are the facts of life in Canada, and that is really what both Senator Manning and, I believe, Senator Frith, were trying to emphasize. I do not intend either to agree or disagree with either of them, except to recognize that what they said is fundamentally important. I wish to direct my remarks only to the proposition with regard to the change, abolition, or substitution of this house.

As honourable senators know, I have not been here for very long. The facts of life are such that even if this legislation had never come forward, or is never passed, it is unlikely that I shall be here for very long; so it is highly probable that, insofar as someone can have a substantial amount of disinterest, in the sense of thinking of one's own future, I probably have it.

I should like to say that I concur completely with Senator Manning in his assessment of the potential of this house and in his comments on its membership. I have not been in public life, or in positions of responsibility, for as long as Senator Manning, but I have no hesitation in saying that I have not before encountered a group of legislators who, on the average—if I might use the term “average” in relation to the membership of this house—show such a wealth of experience, accompanied by the willingness and energy to use that experience in improving those matters which come before us, and in applying that energy, knowledge and experience to the problems of the day.

I believe there has been, and continues to be, an imbalance in the membership, with regard to representing the various political faiths, which should be remedied and which I notice in the proposal contained in the bill would be remedied by the method of appointment suggested for the new House of the Federation.

I wish to say, however, that I believe, and am quite prepared to argue, that anything that is an improvement, or is intended to be an improvement, of this body or its replacement can be accomplished without any substantial change in the legal jurisdiction or composition of the Senate as it now exists. I am not speaking about membership in particular, but I am saying that every power which the bill proposes to give to the Senate can be given without legislation which affects in any way the composition of the house.

I should like to make one or two suggestions, in addition to those made by Senator Manning, on how I believe the function of the house might be improved, aside from better representation of the political beliefs of our country. It is essential that that difficulty be dealt with; but, again, it does not have to be dealt with by legislation.

Certainly, as Senator Manning has said, if more legislation were introduced here, or—I believe I am paraphrasing what he said—the influence of this house upon the affairs of the day was substantially increased—and, of course, the fact that more legislation is not introduced here may be due to the disposition of the other place or of the government not to take too much account of the knowledge, abilities and beliefs of the membership of this chamber—there would be a great upswing in the usefulness of the work of this house, which is already useful.

I believe that if ministries were better represented in this house, in order that we might have placed before us an early explanation of what the minister is trying to achieve, the policies and activities of the government could be more conveniently investigated during the question period. I am not in any way criticizing the responses of the Leader of the Government or the deputy leader, but the fact is that they are trying to answer for a whole group of widely conflicting responsibilities of government, and it is beyond the capability of any two people to respond in a complete manner for all of the activities of government, and I think the designation of members on the government side to respond to and explain matters relating to a particular ministry would be very helpful indeed.

Senator Manning's views on early reference to this house of legislation introduced in the other place also has much merit. It is clear to me—I do not know if it is clear to others—that some of the excellent views formed by committees, after very careful study, come to nothing in terms of being represented in legislation, simply because of the difficulty in dealing with a bill after it has received full approval in the other house, and the difficulties which arise from trying to persuade a house, which has already legislated a matter to its satisfaction, to go back and change the whole thing. We have more than one recent instance of this which, I am sure, will spring quickly to the minds of senators. I think that is another point which ought to be emphasized by our members on the joint committee.

● (1530)

My last comment—at least, my last comment for the day—is that anyone who has seen the committees of this house work, especially on complicated and difficult questions, could not help but be impressed by the care and ability which is exhibited, and also by the fairness which is exhibited in terms of hearing all kinds of interested groups, no matter what their beliefs may be. I submit that this is unequalled and that more use should be made of the ability, powers and able composition of those committees, perhaps in the way that Senator Manning mentioned, but certainly in a way which would assure that the thoughtful and able product of their potential is fully used in a country which, like every other country, needs the best brains brought to bear upon its increasingly difficult problems.

Hon. Edward M. Lawson: Honourable senators, I would like to make a few brief observations. First, I endorse the substance of the outstanding presentation that Senator Manning made this afternoon. I think it is unfortunate that his remarks do not receive the widest possible dissemination. If they did, and the people of the country could hear the fair and enlightened way in which they were presented, they might have a significant impact on attitudes towards this chamber.

One observation I want to make concerns the reference Senator Manning made about the provinces, and whether provincial governments would surrender their right to make representation to the federal government. I agree with his proposition that they would not do so. I heard the Premier of British Columbia, some months ago at the first minister's conference, talk in terms of making a recommendation concerning the need for the provinces to be represented. However, at no time during the term of his government, and certainly in the eight years I have served in this chamber, has he ever called the senators from British Columbia together in Victoria to hear the concerns of British Columbia and to ask them, regardless of party, to support them in the best interests of the province. At no time has he made such a request. On only one occasion did the previous government call me—I don't know whether they called anybody else—to serve on a committee at a premiers' conference. I am satisfied that had the premier of our province called the British Columbia members of this chamber together to hear matters he was urging support for in the best interests of the citizens of British Columbia, we would have supported them regardless of party.

It seems to me that those premiers and provincial governments who are quick to criticize the effectiveness of this chamber, but who have not utilized the senators who are here and available to them, have forfeited their right to complain. I certainly share Senator Manning's view on that issue.

The other passing comment I would like to make is that there is a feeling across the country—while I have not been here much lately, I have certainly been speaking to many groups in many parts of the country—that the Senate has already been abolished. It comes as a great surprise to many of the groups I have spoken to, whether they are chambers of commerce or whatever, to hear that the Senate is still here and still active, and that no changes have taken place.

It seems to me that there is a reluctance on the part of members of this chamber to defend its role, or to make recommendations as to its future usefulness such as have been made here today, because we, apparently, have a vested interest. Certainly we have a vested interest, but we also have a vested responsibility as the people best qualified and best informed on our past accomplishments, and best able to make recommendations as to the future.

I think we, especially the senior members of this house, have a responsibility to go throughout the country and acquaint the people not only with what has been done in the past but also with what we will be able to achieve in the future. We should have no hesitation in discharging this responsibility.

I think the people of Canada are expecting us to discharge our responsibility, and to counsel and guide them on the good points contained in the proposed constitutional amendments, and certainly to counsel and advise them about many things that are impractical and ineffective.

As one member of this chamber, I am in favour of and am willing to support any constructive proposal to make it a more efficient and more effective body. I am certainly going to oppose these simply cosmetic proposals which give the appearance of a lot of change and a lot of activity. In my view, that would be a very ineffective body. We would have to arrange for revolving doors to be installed in the chamber to cope with the constant change of people going in and out. Governments of British Columbia, on the average, have been in office for three years. It would be like a construction crew. You would have one group coming, one group here, and one group leaving. It does not seem to me that that would be in the best interests of what we are trying to achieve for the Canadian people.

I feel we have a responsibility to speak out loudly and clearly, and to discharge our vested responsibility in the best interests of the future of all Canadians.

Hon. Léopold Langlois: Honourable senators—

The Hon. the Speaker: I wish to remind honourable senators that if the Honourable Senator Langlois speaks now, his speech will have the effect of closing the debate.

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, I am sure I am interpreting the feelings and opinions of each and every one of us when I express sincere thanks to all those who have contributed to this debate so far. In particular, I would like to underline the speeches by the Leader of the Opposition and the Honourable Senator Manning.

Some Hon. Senators: Hear, hear.

Senator Langlois: I will endeavour to be very brief in dealing with some minor aspects of the speeches made by these two gentlemen.

At the outset of his remarks, Senator Flynn criticized the timing of these constitutional proposals, and he even went so far as to suggest that the nation was almost taken by surprise. I need not remind this chamber that at the outset of this session the Speech from the Throne contained an announcement that the government intended to put forward some constitutional proposals during the present session. It was also mentioned in speeches made by ministers of the Crown. Thereafter, several references were made to the necessity of considering constitutional proposals, and there was the formation or the creation of this Pépin-Robarts group which is due to report sometime in September. This group studied and made soundings of opinion across the country of these constitutional proposals in an endeavour to find if there existed a general consensus on our future Constitution.

Also, since the events of 1976 in Quebec when, for the first time, a separatist government was elected, there has been much discussion in that province, and throughout the country, about the alternative to the proposals put forward by this new government of Quebec. I think I am safe in saying that there seems to exist across our land a general consensus that the alternative is not the status quo. I think I am right in saying that the Canadian people want an alternative of change to the present Constitution.

● (1540)

These events convinced the government that the announcement made earlier, at the beginning of the present session, should be fulfilled, and that is why we have the present constitutional proposals. I do not see any element of surprise in that. I believe we have been pretty well warned in advance that these proposals were coming.

I think the time is appropriate, because there will be an election very soon. The target date for Phase I of these constitutional proposals is July 1, 1979, and the target date for Phase II is somewhere in 1981. Whatever happens, the life of the present Parliament will come to an end on July 31, 1979. I am not trying to forecast political events, but I say it is very likely that the people of Canada will, in the midst of the coming general election, have an opportunity to discuss fully these constitutional proposals, because it is unlikely that they will be debated and/or adopted, even those in Phase I, before the time of the next general election. I think that would be an appropriate time at which to debate this important question and try to obtain a consensus from the Canadian nation as a whole.

I turn now to the remarks of Senator Manning, who criticized the item in the order of reference of the joint committee that the committee have authority to sit outside of Ottawa. I am inclined to agree with this criticism of the motion, although I sponsored it. I need not remind the house that the proposal is to unite with the other place in forming the joint committee, and that the motion made in the other place was in almost identical terms to the one now before us. If we are going to unite, surely we should not try to impose a veto and say, "We won't follow you if you go outside Ottawa." We have to go along with the suggestion that we may be called upon to sit outside the capital. We do not have to do that. If the committee comes to the conclusion that it is necessary for members to travel around the country, to go and meet witnesses and question them outside of Ottawa, we have the proper authority to do so, and it would be up to the committee to decide. I hope the committee will not find it necessary to go outside the capital in order to carry on with its study and prepare its eventual report on these very important matters.

That is all I wish to say on the subject. I commend this motion to the favourable consideration of my honourable colleagues.

Motion agreed to.

REGULATIONS AND OTHER STATUTORY INSTRUMENTS

SIXTH REPORT OF STANDING JOINT COMMITTEE ADOPTED

Leave having been given to revert to Reports of Committees:

Senator Riley, Acting Joint Chairman of the Standing Joint Committee of the Senate and the House of Commons on Regulations and other Statutory Instruments, presented the following report:

Thursday, June 29, 1978

The Standing Joint Committee on Regulations and other Statutory Instruments has the honour to present its Sixth Report as follows:

In relation to its permanent reference, section 26, The Statutory Instruments Act, 1970-1971-1972, c. 38, your Committee proposes to continue its review and scrutiny of statutory instruments during the adjournment of Parliament in the summer of 1978.

Your Committee therefore recommends that for this purpose, and notwithstanding an Order of the Senate of Thursday, November 17, 1977, and an Order of the House of Commons of Tuesday, November 22, 1977, respecting the quorum of the Committee, the Joint Chairmen be authorized to hold meetings during the forthcoming summer recess to receive and authorize the printing of evidence when three members of the Committee are present, provided both Houses are represented.

Respectfully submitted,

Daniel Riley
Acting Joint Chairman

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this report be taken into consideration?

Senator Riley: Honourable senators, with leave of the Senate, I move that the report be taken into consideration now.

The Hon. the Speaker: Is leave granted, honourable senators?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

Senator Grosart: I wonder if we might have an explanation. The purpose of giving this authority to three members is not entirely clear. What are the limitations to the authority that would be given to three members?

Senator Riley: Honourable senators, I would point out that the matters that will be considered will be in the nature of corrections that have been made. They may be translation corrections, or they may be explanations coming from different departments regarding certain regulations and other statutory instruments. Normally we do not have a large attendance at the meetings, because we have legal counsel for both official languages who do all the research and handle all the correspondence. It is mainly a matter of approving corrections that have been made, or suggesting others. Is that satisfactory?

Senator Grosart: I take it that the authority sought is merely to expedite the publication of the report?

Senator Riley: That is correct. It is mostly routine work. There are so many of them that it is necessary for us to get approval of these corrections, and so on, or to instruct legal counsel and our assistants to proceed to contact the appropriate departments with respect to translation and other corrections.

● (1550)

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this report be taken into consideration?

Senator Riley: With leave of the Senate and notwithstanding rule 45(1)(f), I move that the report be adopted now.

The Hon. the Speaker: Is leave granted, honourable senators?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

Motion agreed to and report adopted.

EXPORT DEVELOPMENT ACT

BILL TO AMEND—SECOND READING

Hon. Richard J. Stanbury moved the second reading of Bill C-36, to amend the Export Development Act.

He said: Honourable senators—

Hon. Senators: Hear, hear.

Senator Stanbury: Honourable senators, I can understand the applause. This is what is called the $26 billion bill. It is the bill to amend the Export Development Act.

The Export Development Corporation was created by statute, the Export Development Act, in 1969 as the successor to the Export Credits Insurance Corporation. This crown corporation began doing business on October 1, 1969. It has 12 directors appointed, seven of whom are from the public sector and five of whom are from outside the Public Service of Canada. The powers of the Export Development Corporation are to facilitate and develop export trade by providing insurance, guarantees, loans and other financial facilities. EDC is the only institution providing these services in Canada. It has assets today of $2 billion, a present operating capacity of nearly $9 billion, and has consistently operated at a profit over its 33-year history. Its mandate is to help Canadian exporters meet international credit competition and, in doing so, contribute substantially to generating and maintaining jobs for Canadians. In other words, the corporation is a facility to assist Canadian exporters and investors abroad and to protect them against the uncertainties in foreign markets. The facilities of the corporation are not a subsidy, either on exports or to exporters. The flexibility of EDC's programs provides a competitive edge by meeting foreign competition on financial terms so that the Canadian exporter can win business on the basis of price, delivery and quality.

The export support programs provided by the corporation consist of the following:

1. Export credits insurance to protect Canadian firms against non-payment when Canadian goods and services are sold abroad.
2. Surety insurance to protect exporters who must issue performance bonds and the financial institutions supplying the guarantee. Members of an export consortium are also able to protect their performance guarantees against non-performance by the other members of the consortium.
3. Long-term loans to foreign buyers of Canadian capital equipment and technical services and guarantees to financial institutions against losses incurred in financing either the Canadian supplier or the foreign buyer in an export transaction.
4. Foreign investment guarantees to insure Canadians against loss of their investments abroad by reason of political action.

The Export Development Act specifies ceilings of maximum liabilities that are provided for these programs. The corporation under the authority of its board of directors, that is, the corporate account, is empowered to enter into loans and financial guarantees, which are called direct liabilities, to a maximum of $4.25 billion. This account provides for tied export financing. These loans have terms generally extending from 5 to 12 years and in many cases involve chartered bank participation.

The corporation has an interesting provision, a government account for loans and financial guarantees under which the corporation may transact business with the approval of the government by order in council. This account exists to transact business that fails to meet the commercial criteria of the corporation but which nevertheless merits consideration by the government on the basis of national interest. Presently, loans and guarantees may be undertaken to a maximum liability, committed and outstanding, at any one time of $850 million.

[Senator Stanbury.]

Similarly, the Export Development Corporation has a corporate account and a government account for insurance, surety, and other contingent liabilities. The ceiling under the corporate account is $2.5 billion and $1 billion for the government account.

You may recall that the Senate considered a bill last year, Bill C-47, that amended the Export Development Act to establish these ceiling amounts for insurance. It was estimated at that time that these ceilings would accommodate business until about the end of 1978. A ceiling is provided in the statute under government account for foreign investment guarantees. The ceiling is $250 million. Currently, the position against this ceiling is reaching the limit established for this program by Parliament in 1974. The bill now before the Senate contains provisions to regroup these existing ceilings and to increase them substantially.

Clause 1 of Bill C-36 seeks to amend the Export Development Act by increasing the authorized capital of the corporation from $400 million to $1 billion. The capital surplus of $25 million which is fully paid-up will remain unchanged. The corporation has forecast that a maximum liability of $10 billion will be needed to accommodate long-term loans under corporate account. This amount was seen to be required to serve the needs of Canadian exporters until the early 1980's. The present statute provides for a ratio of 10 to 1 for authorized capital to authorized borrowings. The corporation also wishes to retain this relationship between debt and equity for the corporation. This ratio is seen as being a prudent relationship by credit rating agencies such as Moody's and Standard and Poors, and by lenders in international capital markets. Hence, clause 1 of the bill provides for an authorized capital increase to $1 billion. This will retain the existing organic relationship between authorized capital, authorized borrowings and the maximum liability for loans under the account of the corporation and the maximum contingent liability under corporate account.

Clause 2 of the bill pertains to the authority of the Export Development Corporation to insure or issue bid bonds when a Canadian exporter is bidding on a foreign contract, and to insure or issue performance guarantees. At present the corporation may guarantee the performance bond provided by a surety company, exporter or other institution. EDC cannot directly provide cover for bid bonds, because the powers under the statute pertain to export transactions only. Bid bonds are instruments that are used prior to there actually being a commercial contract or an export transaction per se.

● (1600)

Just recently, EDC provided the largest amount of insurance coverage ever issued in the corporation's history in support of an export transaction to cover a Bell Canada contract, part of a multi-billion-dollar project to expand and modernize the Saudi Arabian telephone system. A surety insurance policy of $250 million covers a portion of the guarantees that Bell Canada provided to the buyers. Export credits insurance coverage of a maximum of $180 million was also provided on the sale.

Clause 3 of the bill provides a maximum limit of liability for all the contingent liability programs of the corporation. The financial guarantees formerly were included under the ceiling for loans. The traditional export credits insurance programs are to be accounted for under this ceiling and any new insurance program liabilities are to come under this account ceiling as well.

The corporation estimates that $10 billion will be sufficient to accommodate corporate business in this area until the early 1980s.

With respect to contingent liabilities under government account, a ceiling has been fixed at $3.5 billion. This ceiling will also include the liabilities for the investment guarantee program.

Clause 4 establishes the maximum limit of liability of the corporation for loans at ten times the authorized capital of $10 billion.

Similarly, the direct and contingent liabilities are to be regrouped for risks entered into under the account of the government. The growth of liabilities under government account is more difficult to estimate because the transactions are large and sporadic in nature. The corporation estimates that a ceiling for loans of $2.5 billion for the account of the government will suffice.

Clause 6 is consequential on the provisions of clause 5—namely, the deletion of the account for foreign investment guarantees.

I should add that the volume of business before the corporation is reflecting the successes which Canadian exporters are achieving this year. The liability position is pressing against the corporate loans and the foreign investment guarantee ceilings. These ceilings will be exhausted within the next short while. Should this happen, then the corporation will have to curtail its lending and foreign investment guarantee programs this summer. The result of this would mean a loss of potential new jobs and possibly could result in layoffs. It would seriously undermine the confidence of Canadian exporters in the Government of Canada and would jeopardize Canada's reputation as a dependable country around the world. I, therefore, urge that this legislation be given speedy passage.

Senator Smith (Colchester): I wonder whether the honourable senator would permit a question. I notice, or at least I thought I noticed, reference to a contract between Bell Canada and some interest in Saudi Arabia, perhaps the country itself. I wonder whether this is the contract which was recently the subject of an inquiry before the Canadian Transport Commission, in respect of which publication, or the making public thereof, was declined.

Senator Stanbury: I suspect that it is the same contract. However, I am uncertain of that, but I suspect it is because, as far as I know, Bell Canada has only this one large contract with the authorities in Saudi Arabia.

Senator Smith (Colchester): Will the particulars of the contract sponsored or otherwise dealt with by the Export Development Corporation be available to this chamber or a committee thereof?

Senator Stanbury: I have no basis for undertaking to you that it would be made available to members of the Senate or to a committee thereof. I assume that if it was not made available to the Canadian Transport Commission, as you have stated, then it may be that it will be difficult to have it made available here. However, I will look into that matter, if you wish.

Senator Smith (Colchester): I believe it was made available to the commission itself, but the publication to any persons involved in the inquiry was refused, as I understand it.

Hon. Jack Marshall: Honourable senators, I am pleased to respond to the introduction of Bill C-36 in this chamber. It is a bill which tends to have far-reaching implications for Canada's economy. After reading the committee proceedings of the House of Commons and Hansard of that house, it would seem, as Senator Smith (Colchester) and Senator Manning stated earlier, that this is a perfect example of a bill that could have been aired before in the Senate in less time than it took in the other place and with, perhaps, better results.

My previous interest in the Export Development Corporation has been narrow in scope. Any contact I had with the corporation was in an attempt to seek their assistance on behalf of Newfoundland's industries, which are hard pressed because they cannot beat their way into the market or because they are so far from offshore markets that they need help from government.

Obviously, since I have been given the responsibility to speak on this bill today, I have to be more national in scope. I say again that I have read extensively the committee proceedings and the debates in the House of Commons. Obviously, it is a very confusing bill and one which has far-reaching implications.

The bill, if I may be permitted to reiterate its objectives, increases, as Senator Stanbury said, the operating limits of the corporation to $26 billion from $8.85 billion. This will enable the corporation to increase support for job-creating Canadian exports under the act. The act now provides ceilings for insurance up to $3.5 billion, loans to a maximum of $5.1 billion, and investment guarantees of $250 million. This bill would revise the act in three key areas: by increasing the authorized capital to $1 billion; by increasing the ceilings for loans to $12.5 billion and insurance guarantees to $13.5 billion; and by enabling—and this is most important—the corporation to provide further support for bid bonds on performance guarantees issued for export contracts.

When I mention these figures, I wonder if we should not stop for a moment to comprehend the amounts of money we are talking about. We are talking about increasing ceilings for loans to an amount of $12.5 billion, an amount which almost equals Canada's deficit. When taking into account the insurance ceilings of another $13.5 billion, we are talking about an amount of $26 billion, some 54 per cent of Canada's total budget.

While some senators might not think of these amounts as being particularly significant, in my limited experience I find them to be not only staggering but unbelievable, particularly when parliamentarians, responsible for the welfare of 23 million Canadians, are prepared, through a simple amendment, to give authority to a corporation, appointed for whatever reason, to commit the equivalent of 54 per cent of Canada's total budget, presumably with limited accountability before the fact. I make this comment on the assumption that what I take from my readings of the debates of the other place is accurate. Furthermore, it goes beyond this authority in that it enables the corporation to provide further support for bid bonds—and I am glad Senator Stanbury clarified what a bid bond is—and performance guarantees issued for export contract. In my limited financial experience, this in essence means that the corporation is given what amounts to almost carte blanche authority to exceed Canada's financial limits, even beyond its total budget.

● (1610)

In this regard, I am wondering if I am correct in my assumption that the Government of Canada is fulfilling its responsibility to the people of Canada in allowing, with little conscience, and without question, it appears, a crown corporation, the Export Development Corporation, to commit the Government of Canada to the expenditure of such large amounts of money. The Export Development Corporation is really being given unlimited authority to spend increasingly large amounts of money.

I think, too, we must ask ourselves how this mere fact of unbelievable proportions can be condoned by a majority vote in the House of Commons when we in the Senate are expected to give sober second thought to bills coming to us from the other place. We are expected to protect the rights of Canadians. This being so, how can we be expected, with conscience, to give passage to a bill of this kind within the short space of one or two hours? We are asked to do so to accommodate the government's schedule of events, which is to recess Parliament by the end of this week. We are asked to pass this bill, regardless of the effect it might have on the Canadian economy, and regardless of the fact that it gives carte blanche authority to a crown corporation.

Perhaps the sponsor of the bill on the other side can prove me wrong. I hope he can.

Honourable senators, because the bill does have some merit, we on this side of the house have agreed to forego committee consideration. It is obvious that it was the subject of close scrutiny and considerable debate in the committee of the other place. Notwithstanding that the government did not accept the many reasonable amendments put forth, I see no reason for us to hold up passage of the bill. I say that knowing that the bill does help in certain areas.

I mentioned earlier the work of the Senate in relation to bills of this type. Bill C-36 is a perfect example of the type of legislation that should be introduced in the Senate in the first instance. Given the business expertise and knowledge that exists here, such a procedure would have resulted in a much better bill than we now have.

[Senator Marshall.]

I have read with reasonable reflection all of the material published by the Government of Canada on constitutional reform. When I read the comment in the publication "A Time for Action" on the interdependence of the two orders of government, I can only repeat what has already been said by other honourable senators, that being that, indeed, if there is anything wrong with the Constitution, if there is anything wrong with our system of government, why in the hell do they blame us here in the Senate?

An Hon. Senator: A good question.

Senator Marshall: We get bills at the last minute and are expected to pass them without reasonable debate.

The one other aspect of the corporation that I wonder about concerns its objectives, one of which is to lend or guarantee loans to other countries in order to sell Canadian products. Given the spending authority that the Export Development Corporation has, some good has to be derived—even if it is by accident. But in most of the cases I have looked at, the efforts of the corporation are not having the desired results. The purpose of the corporation is to generate jobs for Canadians. In my opinion, it is generating jobs for other countries at the expense of Canada. While members of the other place quoted many examples in this respect, the one example I want to refer to today concerns the pulp and paper industry. Even though that industry is one which is insular in nature, even though it is parochial, it is national in scope and concern.

I will list some of the loans that were made to foreign countries. To Iran, $82.5 million for engineering services and forest industry equipment; to Mexico, $15 million for railway and papermaking equipment; to Poland, over $5 million for log skidders, and $50 million for engineering and design services for a pulp and paper complex; to the Cameroon, $.8 million for a sawmill; Poland again, $108.7 million for equipment and services for a pulp and paper complex; to Peru, $1.6 million for management service for a newsprint mill, and on and on. There are further amounts to Poland of $15 million, $14 million, and $17 million, and others. I cannot reconcile these amounts with the answers given by the Export Development Corporation. What the corporation is doing is selling these countries equipment, or guaranteeing their loans to buy equipment in Canada, the purpose of which is to establish competing mills, and the position taken by the corporation is that if they do not do it some other country will. To my mind, that would be the same as Eaton's sending its customers to Simpsons.

At the annual meeting of the Canadian Pulp and Paper Association, its chairman said, and I quote:

We face the fact that world demand for pulp and paper will grow more slowly in the years ahead, and that many developing nations expect to produce more of their own pulp and paper needs. A few, such as Brazil, will also become exporters, especially of wood pulp.

But these are not the factors that could sidetrack prospects for further development of the Canadian industry.

This is where we need the help in allowing the Canadian industry to compete. The chairman continued:

For within the economies of North America and Western Europe there are still impressive opportunities to put our forest resource to good use. Indeed, of the 20 million tons of added world demand for paper and paperboard foreseen by the end of this decade, 80 per cent of it will be in those two areas, traditionally our largest markets.

What must concern us is our ability to locate in Canada a reasonable share of the new production facilities required to serve that demand, rather than see them go overwhelmingly elsewhere. Whether we have that ability will depend, quite simply, on whether we are high-cost or low-cost producers in world terms.

This is a theme being rendered with increasing urgency by much of Canadian manufacturing. And there has emerged the beginnings of a public debate that will be extremely important in determining the economic health of Canada during the next decade, and the ability of our society to tend to its needs.

I say that these are the pertinent points that we should be discussing.

I should like now to get into some of the remarks made by members of the other place on this bill. I think an important point was made by the member for York-Sunbury. He referred to what we were doing in helping paper mills in the United States, and in that respect he said:

Canada currently exports 65 per cent of its newsprint to the United States. The capacity of the new mill in Virginia will be 175,000 tons—

And that is with the help of the Export Development Corporation. That capacity is about the same as that of the mills in New Brunswick.

The member for York-Sunbury went on:

The EDC has lent something like $350 million to finance competing pulp and paper mills in Poland, Peru, Romania, Argentina and Iran.

The member for York-Simcoe also had some lengthy and interesting remarks, but there is no need to repeat what has already been said. I am sure most senators have read about the drastic effects—effects which could hinder the Canadian pulp and paper industry, which is probably one of the top three employers in the country. Here we are providing loans to other countries to set up competing operations, the rationale being that if we do not do so other countries will. Well, how ridiculous!

● (1620)

This is all right from the point of view of research and development and what we are trying to produce to sell. But when we are allowing our natural resources to be exported, the ones that we can develop, that is another matter. All we are doing is restricting pulp and paper industries and manufacturers by inflicting on them regulations and laws. How then can we expect to compete with other countries and take advantage of the rich resources that everyone says we have? We don't seem to realize the consequences.

I should like to give an example of what happened in my own constituency. This concerns the establishment of a $200 million Labrador liner board mill. We spent $200 million on a brand new mill, and in four years it went bankrupt. It went bankrupt because, among other problems, it could not compete in foreign and offshore markets, in spite of the fact that there are such markets, and despite the fact that we have experts from the Export Development Corporation and from the Department of Industry, Trade and Commerce saying that in addition to producing what we need for our domestic market in Canada we can produce enough to export.

So here was a firm established in a region where unemployment is probably the highest in Canada, and they had to close it down. All the government money that went into the infrastructure, schools, harbours and everything else necessary to support that mill went down the drain. This is quite apart from such things as the unemployment insurance payments, the relocation of people and the fact that the Department of Employment and Immigration had to pay people to go elsewhere. They have even gone to Iran. Two hundred Canadians have gone there to find jobs, the same Iran that we are lending millions and millions of dollars to compete with us. Sixteen families went to Iran from Stephenville, Newfoundland.

There are many other problems which I can understand, and I should like to repeat that the Export Development Corporation is doing some good. But we should be more flexible, and they have to take an interest in Canada rather than build pyramids. I don't think they should be competing with the Canadian Commercial Corporation, which I also went to for help on behalf of the liner board industry in Newfoundland. But they said no, that this was not within their terms of reference.

The same thing applies to the Export Development Corporation. They can still interfere with small business, and they are now going to interfere with another corporation, the Federal Business Development Bank, which exists for the purpose of helping small businesses. This will lead to duplication and even triplication, and will ultimately be to the detriment of the people who are trying to get ahead and trying to produce for Canada.

Let me give an example, using the words of the chairman of the board and the chief executive officer of the Canadian General Electric Company. He makes some pretty pertinent points. Probably the government listens more to him and to people like him than it does to us. Speaking on "Investment for the Means of Production," he said:

Now let me turn to the second key ingredient essential for recovery—the matter of adequate investment for the means of production. This is an issue of critical importance. There may not yet be sufficient awareness of the serious extent to which Canada lags its competitors or of the difficulty we face in financing the large expenditures required.

I wonder if the Export Development Corporation, when they put out all their fancy pamphlets, ever read some of these plain, ordinary pamphlets.

This gentleman goes on to say:

On a per capita basis the investment dollars needed by Canada for the means of production are probably the highest of any industrialized nation. Large sums are needed for the discovery, recovery and processing of natural resources. Hydro-electric power generation in remote areas and nuclear power will also consume vast amounts of capital.

And this brings me to another point, the potential of energy resources in Newfoundland. There we have potential resources, renewable resources, and all that is lacking is the money needed to develop them and get them off the ground. When we seek the means of doing this, all we get is excuses. We are told that the money is just not available. We are dealing with a corporation that should look at this. Perhaps they could consider Newfoundland as a foreign country and look at the situation from that point of view, because we can produce enough hydro-electric power to help all of Atlantic Canada and have enough left over to help many other parts of Canada.

Another thing I should like to point out, honourable senators, is the potential of our fisheries. To my mind our fishery potential in 10 years will make us a "little Alberta". That sounds like a pretty wild statement, but I think we have that potential. But again there is a need for infrastructure support; there is a need for money, which Newfoundland does not have in abundance, for developing and increasing our capacity. Here we are in Canada importing $183 million worth of fish, and I am sure that most of that fish came from Canada originally. It is fish which we exported raw and which we are buying back at about 15 times the original cost. This is where the Export Development Corporation could be a little flexible and not simply say, "We cannot do that because it is not within our terms of reference." The corporation should be flexible in its operations and help Canadians wherever they may be.

Honourable senators, I have probably gone on too long. There are many other things I should like to say, but I should just like to repeat that I agree that the Export Development Corporation is trying to help, but I wish that instead of their far offshore visions they would take a close look at the country they are supposed to represent, and take advantage of our rich potential. We holler about this at every election, and then do nothing about it.

Honourable senators, I have no hesitation in supporting this bill, from that point of view, and I hope it will get second reading today.

Senator Frith: Honourable senators, if, as Senator Marshall predicts, Newfoundland turns out to be a "little Alberta," I wonder if we shouldn't recommend to the sponsor of this bill that we arrange a loan to tow them back to the mainland.

[Senator Marshall.]

Some Hon. Senators: Oh, oh.

Hon. Richard J. Stanbury: Honourable senators—

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, I must inform the Senate that if the Honourable Senator Stanbury speaks now his speech will have the effect of closing the debate on second reading of this bill.

Senator Stanbury: Honourable senators, I think I should take a moment or two to respond to some of the comments made by Senator Marshall.

First, I feel that I should take seriously two or three of the remarks that the honourable senator has made. Regarding the amount involved, I would point out that I commented on it at the beginning, as he has commented on it, and I agree it is a very large amount. I believe he called it a staggering amount, but I am not sure that I would so define it.

Senator Marshall: It is a staggering amount, if you come from Newfoundland.

Senator Stanbury: We must remember that while he compared it to an annual budget, it is not in fact an annual amount; it is expected to take us into the eighties, and the last time there was a major improvement in those figures was in 1974. That applies to some of the figures, in any event.

The other thing which must be taken into account is that the corporation does not operate on the basis of carte blanche; it has indeed to operate under the act, and all the regulations under the act, and in accordance with the policies of government. It is carefully monitored and is run by a capable board of directors who have the welfare of the Canadian people at heart at all times.

● (1630)

When I said that I wanted to take seriously "those remarks," perhaps it seemed like an indication that I would take less seriously some of the other remarks the honourable senator made, and, indeed, it did seem as though he considered that all of the troubles of the world, and particularly of Newfoundland, should be loaded on to the back of the EDC.

My personal criticism of the EDC—and perhaps not so much of the EDC as of all agencies of Canadian government and of Canadian businessmen—is that over the years we have not seen nearly far enough or thought nearly big enough in terms of the things we must do in the world. Since 1973 we have allowed the whole world to break out into a great commercial development and yet we are still sending 80 per cent of our production to the United States and most of the rest of it to Europe. In fact, it is only because of the programs of the EDC that we are able to branch out into these new areas such as Saudi Arabia, Nigeria, Venezuela and so on, and thus take advantage of the opportunities available there to businessmen today.

I should also indicate that most of the leadership into these "funny" projects that my friend has mentioned was not given by EDC. Most of that leadership came from Canadian businessmen. It was they who wanted to sell; it was EDC who, in the light of their purposes, was simply facilitating those deals.

That is their job: to facilitate the work of Canadian businessmen.

I am not sure whether or not I should mention this, but I am a little concerned by, and take with a grain of salt, the remarks of the president of the Pulp and Paper Association of Canada, because I remember well an experience I had a year ago when I returned from Portugal. I came back with an order in my hands, a request by letter from three Portuguese newspapers saying that they would like to buy Canadian newsprint. First, I went to two specific companies, because I knew the people personally, and asked them if they would like to supply these Portuguese newspapers with the newsprint. They said, "Oh, we are sorry. We are completely filled up. Our capacity is gone. We haven't anything to sell." And I asked, "Well, then, whom should I call?" They said, "Well, call the president of the Pulp and Paper Association." So I called the president of the Pulp and Paper Association at that time, and it took me about three weeks to get him. I finally got him out of a hotel room in which he was at a meeting. I explained the situation to him. His response was, "I am sorry, but our organization has nothing to do with marketing." I said, "Then would you please send me a list of the companies in your association who might be interested in this kind of transaction?" Today I am still waiting for that list.

All I want to point out to you now is that not all of the problems of the world are the fault of government agencies. We have a business community which has never yet learned to move out of Canada into the rest of the world and go head to head with the big people in the rest of the world in order to gain the major contracts which are just sitting out there waiting for us, if we only had the energy and the resourcefulness to go and get them.

So, thank goodness for the EDC, because at least it facilitates the activities of those who are prepared to go out and look for that kind of business.

The Hon. the Speaker: It is moved by the Honourable Senator Stanbury, seconded by the Honourable Senator Frith, that this bill be now read the second time. Is it your pleasure, honourable senators, to adopt the motion?

Senator Benidickson: On division. It has come too late.

Motion agreed to and bill read second time, on division.

THIRD READING

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this bill be read the third time?

Senator Stanbury: With leave, now.

The Hon. the Speaker: Is leave granted, honourable senators?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

Senator Benidickson: It is not the appropriate time.

The Hon. the Speaker: It is moved by the Honourable Senator Stanbury, seconded by the Honourable Senator Frith, that this bill be now read the third time. Is it your pleasure, honourable senators, to adopt the motion?

Senator Benidickson: On division. It is not the appropriate time.

Motion agreed to and bill read third time and passed, on division.

BUSINESS OF THE SENATE

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, I move that the Senate do now adjourn during pleasure to reassemble at the call of the bell at approximately 8 o'clock this evening.

Senator Grosart: On that motion, I wonder if the Leader of the Government could give us an indication of what legislation is likely to come before us. I appreciate the fact that we have had a corridor, and perhaps a confidential discussion, and for that reason I will not refer to it, but perhaps the leader could give us an indication now as to what we may be expected to pass either this evening or tomorrow, or, in any event, before Parliament adjourns.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, yesterday there was the expectation that we would be able to have royal assent this evening and then adjourn for the summer break. However, matters have not worked out that way because of events in the other place.

I understand that third reading has just been given to the Petroleum Corporations Monitoring bill. This proposed measure, I am informed, is on its way to us at this moment. It was thought that there would be a possibility of commencing debate on the bill before adjourning this afternoon, but that bill has not arrived.

A debate is taking place in the House of Commons regarding the Maritime Code bill, suitably reshaped as a result of Senate recommendations. As I have said, it is under debate at the present time in the other place, and it is expected that it may come to us later this evening.

I can report that there is not a great deal left for Parliament to deal with before the adjournment, although it is possible that one or two relatively non-controversial measures will come to us.

Senator Grosart: May I ask the leader if he can be a little more specific, if he has the information, because we were told earlier that certain other bills might come before us, and that it might be the wish of the government to have those bills disposed of before the adjournment. I refer specifically to the bill dealing with election expenses and to the bill dealing with changes to the Customs Tariff and schedule, and to the bill dealing with small businesses under the Excise Tax Act. Are we likely to receive those bills?

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, I will be prepared to give a full report when the Senate meets this evening.

Senator Grosart: Has the Leader of the Government given consideration to delaying the adjournment for a short time so that we might await receipt of advice from the House of Commons respecting the Petroleum Corporations Monitoring bill, in the hope that we might begin dealing with it before we adjourn?

I make that point for the particular reason that one senator on this side, who is fully prepared to deal with that matter, would like to leave this evening in order to attend a meeting of a Senate committee in Winnipeg tomorrow. This points up the problems that this type of last-minute legislation creates for us on this side, and, indeed, for senators generally.

● (1640)

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, the government would certainly consider the suggestion for a temporary recess. What is the time frame suggested by the opposition?

Senator Macdonald: The plane leaves at 7 o'clock!

Senator Grosart: I could say it is a double problem, because in the case of the Maritime Code bill we have exactly the same problem. We have an expert on that matter—

Senator Perrault: Shall we say 30 minutes?

Senator Grosart: The Leader of the Government would perhaps be more aware of the time we might need, because I understand an amendment has been made in the other place to the bill we are discussing. I would say we should adjourn until 5 o'clock.

Senator Perrault: That is satisfactory. We shall know if there is any further delay at that time, and we may well have to adjourn until 7 or 8 o'clock.

Senator Smith (Colchester): Honourable senators, with reference to the Maritime Code, I have the very strong feeling that we are being taken advantage of in our being asked to deal with this matter now.

It was not intimated, as I followed the program of legislation—and I thought I followed it with some care—that this bill was to come before us before June 30. We now find an apparent intention to throw it at us.

It will be remembered that this bill, as it previously existed, occupied the time of the Senate committee for many long hours. I believe it is the bill in connection with which the Senate eventually accepted some 80 amendments put forward as the result of extended hearings by the Standing Senate Committee on Transport and Communications. This bill was introduced in the other house a long time ago—I have forgotten when. I had prepared myself to deal with it because, as the Leader of the Government may know, I was assigned that duty previously and, in any event, I am the chairman of the committee to which it was previously referred.

I find it extraordinarily difficult to understand why it is being thrown at us here, when many honourable senators have left the chamber; when I myself have made travel arrangements, which I have tried unsuccessfully to rearrange; and when arrangements have been made to take care of all the bills which we were warned would be presented. Now we have this one. I know that the Leader of the Government wishes to say something, and I will be glad to hear him.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, there is no guarantee that the bill will be given third reading in the other place before the adjournment. If it is passed tonight and comes to us, I wish to assure you that the government will not exert special pressure to achieve acceptance if there are outstanding questions remaining. However, I have been given to understand that virtually all of the amendments proposed by the distinguished committee now chaired by the Honourable Senator Smith (Colchester) have been incorporated in the new draft of the bill, which must represent a substantial improvement.

I want to provide the assurance that there will not be inordinate pressure by the government to hasten passage. The government, of course, would like to see the bill given royal assent this week, but I want to give the assurance that there will be no effort on the part of the government to obtain hasty and ill-considered approval.

We do know now, however, that the Petroleum Corporations Monitoring bill, which has almost acquired the status of a hardy perennial, because it has been here before—indeed, I recall a speech on the subject by the Deputy Leader of the Opposition—has been passed in the other place and will be available for debate very shortly.

That is the situation. So far as the other possible measures are concerned, I will have a full report later this day with respect to the bills which have been mentioned by the the deputy leader.

Senator Smith (Colchester): I appreciate the frankness of the Leader of the Government. However, it still leaves us in somewhat of a dilemma. Many senators who took a great interest in the bill—that is, in addition to myself—are unlikely to be able to deal with it tomorrow. Had we been warned that the bill was likely to be here in the dying moments, I am sure we would have made adequate provision to deal with it. It did not appear in the list of those which the government expected to be dealt with, and consequently arrangements have not been made to deal with it.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, I have just been advised that the Maritime Code bill has indeed been passed by the other house, with substantial support from the opposition. It may be available for debate in this chamber before we adjourn. That is the only thing that I can say. The honourable senator may wish to adjourn debate on the bill this evening and speak on it tomorrow, or he may suggest that we meet next week to discuss it.

Senator Smith (Colchester): I do not suggest that at all. I merely protest with all the vehemence I can command. It seems to me to be a highly improper method of dealing with legislation—and I am not blaming the Leader of the Government in the Senate. The bill could have been brought forward at a much earlier date if its passage was as easy as all that, because it was introduced in the other place some time ago. It could at least have been put on the list of legislation that it was hoped would be dealt with before the summer adjournment. It seems to me—it is pretty hard to think of it in any other way—that someone decided to throw it into the hopper at the last minute just to catch us in this way, and I take the very strongest objection to that kind of action.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, I reiterate that most of the principal amendments made by the committee, chaired currently by the Honourable Senator Smith (Colchester), are incorporated in the bill. It is not a new measure which is somehow being sprung on Parliament in the pre-recess period. I have served in the other place and in a provincial legislature, and I know of no session in the dying days of which a number of unexpected legislative events have not taken place—unanticipated and unscheduled.

I should like to remind the honourable senator that the opposition in the other place, fully exercising its prerogative to debate strenuously all and every measure proposed by the government, spent many days in protracted debate on a wide range of measures. One need only review the debates in the other place to learn that an enormous amount of time was consumed by the opposition in debating certain measures. They had a perfect right to do so. In the process, many measures which it was hoped could be passed in the interests of the Canadian people were delayed. If there has been delay in bringing forward the Maritime Code, perhaps the opposition should share much of the blame.

Senator Smith (Colchester): I suppose the Leader of the Government and I could carry on this discussion for some time, without much advantage to either of us, except in keeping the house together until the bill arrives. But I do point out that at the very least this bill could have been included in the list of proposed legislation, in which case we could have prepared ourselves to deal with it.

● (1650)

Incidentally, some time ago I went to the trouble of preparing a comparison of the recommendations of the Senate committee with the changes which are apparent in this draft of the bill. I agree that a great many of the Senate recommendations have been accepted and incorporated. I know, however, that whatever is in it is of great interest to many—I will desist for a moment because I am sure that what is being discussed is relevant to what I am saying.

Senator Perrault: It is.

Senator Smith (Colchester): Perhaps I should just sit down and find out.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, I can well understand the honourable senator's viewpoint. I expressed the same viewpoint on many occasions when I served in opposition. I can only say that information was received in the Senate itself at a very late hour by the Leader of the Government. I can only say, as I have said earlier, that I regret the fact that we did not have prior information. However, in this case, it is not an entirely new proposal.

The honourable senator stated that he has had an opportunity to study some of these provisions. Presumably he takes great satisfaction from the fact that many of those provisions are those which he proposed himself as chairman of that committee.

Senator Smith (Colchester): That is true. I appreciate the Leader of the Government's repeated reference to that fact, but the point that worries me more than anything else is—it should be, and I am sure it is, a concern of the Leader of the Government—that people all over this country are interested in this bill. We had most vigorous representations from some organizations which deal with shipping in Canada.

As does the Leader of the Government, I come from a region of the country where shipping and the Maritime Code are of vital interest. How am I to say that the provisions that are now in it are good for the development of the shipping interests in every part of Canada, particularly in the Leader of the Government's province and in mine in the Atlantic region? It is really on behalf of the people who are going to be vitally affected by this bill that I make this objection. I feel they should have an opportunity to appear before the committee of this house. That is impossible if we are to deal with the bill now.

I want to make it clear that I am not primarily objecting on behalf of the committee which I have the honour to chair, or even on behalf of the Senate itself; I am objecting primarily on behalf of the people who nearly did not have a chance to say anything when the other version of the bill was introduced, and who may very well not have a chance this time.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senator, I will certainly give a commitment that, during the time between our adjournment and our reassembly at the call of the bell, I will contact the minister responsible for this bill and discuss your concerns with him. Perhaps arrangements can be made to debate this in the fall. I cannot give that assurance. However, I know the concerns the honourable senator feels, and I know the special concerns felt by those who live in the maritime regions of this country.

Senator Smith (Colchester): I thank the Leader of the Government for his assistance and understanding in this matter. I am not sure if I completely stated my own problem. Like many other senators, I have made firm travel arrangements which I find I cannot change without remaining here until the weekend is over, and that would hardly find acceptance in regard to some appointments I have made in another part of the country.

Senator Grosart: Honourable senators, I would not like to let Senator Smith's protest go without comment. We, on this side, fully support him. I personally regard the sudden production of bills that have been lying dormant for a long time as an absolutely intolerable situation. It is insulting not only to this chamber, but to Parliament. I shall have further comments to make on this matter later; I do not think this is the time. However, I am required, as Acting Leader of the Opposition, to make it clear that this last-minute attempt to get legislation through without proper consideration is intolerable. I am not in any way blaming the Leader of the Government because I believe he shares my concern, and I know the problems he has in this connection. However, I will make a statement later concerning this matter.

I am particularly concerned about the Maritime Code for the reasons that have been indicated by Senator Smith. It is absolutely intolerable that a bill of this importance should be presented to us at this time when we do not even have the opportunity of finding out what was said in the other place. I would ask the Leader of the Government to do what he can to obtain the blues of the debates in the House of Commons on bills that are going to come to us at the last minute. If he will let me have then, I will do whatever I can to get them to those who may wish to speak.

I now ask the Leader of the Government what the situation is on the Petroleum Corporations Monitoring bill.

Senator Perrault: First, I have listened with interest to the criticisms directed towards the government with respect to this important measure, which has been considered very carefully and extensively by the Senate prior to this time. As I said, it is not an entirely new bill. However, I understand the concern. I have been in that position myself on other occasions. I will discuss the matter with the minister who is sponsoring this bill, and state your concern.

I shall also obtain material from the other place which will indicate the nature of the debate which took place this afternoon. Perhaps there are circumstances which led to the speedy passage of this measure in the other place which we are not aware of at this time. That research will be carried out.

Secondly, I have been advised that the necessary body of material in connection with the Petroleum Corporations Monitoring Act cannot be made available for approximately an hour and a half. For that reason, honourable senators, may I suggest that we adjourn during pleasure to the call of the bell at approximately 8 o'clock?

The Senate adjourned during pleasure.

At 8.15 p.m. the sitting was resumed.

THE CONSTITUTION

SPECIAL JOINT COMMITTEE—SEVENTH REPORT OF COMMITTEE OF SELECTION PRESENTED AND ADOPTED

Leave having been given to revert to Reports of Committees:

Senator Petten, Chairman of the Committee of Selection, presented the following report:

Thursday, June 29, 1978

The Committee of Selection appointed to nominate Senators to serve on the several Select Committees during the present Session makes its Seventh Report as follows:

[Senator Grosart.]

Your Committee has the honour to submit herewith the list of Senators nominated by it to serve on the Special Joint Committee of the Senate and House of Commons on the Constitution of Canada, namely, the Honourable Senators Asselin, Buckwold, Flynn, Forsey, Grosart, Hicks, Lafond, Lamontagne, Langlois, McIlraith, Molgat, Neiman, Roblin, Smith (Colchester) and van Roggen.

Respectfully submitted,

William J. Petten
Chairman

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this report be taken into consideration?

Senator Petten: With leave of the Senate and notwithstanding rule 45(1)(f), I move that the report be adopted now.

Senator Grosart: Could the Leader of the Government inform the Senate of the possible date on which the first meeting of this joint committee might be held?

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, I have not yet been advised of the views of the other place. I am sure this will be a collegial decision arrived at by members from both chambers.

Motion agreed to and report adopted.

SPECIAL JOINT COMMITTEE—COMMONS MEMBERS

The Hon. the Speaker informed the Senate that the following message had been received from the House of Commons:

Ordered: That a message be sent to the Senate to acquaint Their Honours that the following Members have been appointed to serve on the part of this House on the Special Joint Committee on the Constitution of Canada, namely: Messrs. Beatty, Breau, Broadbent, Bussi res, Caccia, Collenette, Dawson, Gauthier (Ottawa-Vanier), Gauthier (Roberval), Goodale, Guay, Hnatyshyn, Lachance, La Salle, Lawrence, Lee, MacGuigan and Miss MacDonald (Kingston and the Islands) and Messrs. Stanfield and Whittaker.

Attest

Alistair Fraser
The Clerk of the House of Commons

PETROLEUM CORPORATIONS MONITORING BILL

FIRST READING

The Hon. the Speaker informed the Senate that a message had been received from the House of Commons with Bill C-12, to require the reporting of certain financial and other statistics relating to the affairs of certain petroleum companies carrying on business in Canada.

Bill read first time.

SECOND READING

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this bill be read the second time?

Hon. Daniel A. Lang moved, with leave of the Senate and notwithstanding rule 44(1)(f), that the bill be read the second time now.

He said: Honourable senators, this is not exactly a bill to stir the hearts and fire the imagination of senators. I do deprecate the fact that it is coming to us at the last minute. However, that judgment is modified to a great extent by the additional fact that in substance we have had this bill before us previously. In substance, it has been through this chamber and has received full consideration in the Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce. In my opinion, it returns to us this evening incorporating the amendments that were stipulated when it went through this chamber on that earlier occasion, and it is very considerably improved. Having said that, I shall take just a few moments to enlarge on that evolution.

Basically, the purpose of this bill is to give the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources access to information with respect to companies engaged in exploration, development, production or refining and marketing of petroleum products. It is the opinion of the minister that the information he requires in this regard, in the present economic and energy situation in Canada, he cannot adequately obtain by normal methods, through statistical information provided through Statistics Canada. I am in no position to judge whether that is a valid argument, but I can only say that I would assume it to be so because of the importance of the petroleum industry to our economy and the necessity for our government to be able to ascertain production by petroleum-producing companies and the utilization of the moneys received from that production.

Honourable senators may recall that this legislation originally came before us as an "S" bill, one originating in the Senate, on June 28, 1977, which is just one year ago. It was then referred to the Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce, and within that committee five amendments to the bill were proposed. Those five amendments are now incorporated in this new bill.

To my mind and the minds of many other senators, the main defect in Bill S-4, as it then was, was that it required certain companies to report, which companies were named in an appendix to the bill. In other words, it was not a piece of legislation of general application, but it applied to certain named oil companies, and the list of names could be changed by addition or deletion through order in council. I believe that was the aspect that offended members of the Senate committee more than anything else and, really, in retrospect I am rather surprised that we ever allowed it to receive passage through this chamber in that form. Fortunately, the bill died on the order paper in the other place.

● (2020)

Bill C-12 is a bill which originated in the House of Commons on November 2 last. I suggest that it would be interesting to note the dates on which this bill went through the parliamentary process. It received second reading on January 27 of this year. It was referred to a committee of the other place on January 30, and was reported on June 27. It received third reading on June 28, which was yesterday. If our committees operated on that schedule, the business of this country would be in pretty bad shape. I mention those dates to illustrate the manner in which we conduct the business of the Senate, as contrasted with the manner in which the House of Commons conducts its business.

Notwithstanding that history, I should like briefly to outline the contents of the bill so that senators unfamiliar with the provisions of Bill S-4, as it then was, may become familiar with the similar provisions contained in Bill C-12, and so that others may refresh their memories.

As I said, the purpose of the original bill was to provide information to the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources. That bill listed companies. Basically, the improvement in this bill is that no companies are listed as an appendix to the bill. It states that all companies within the definition must report, and goes on to state that companies with less than a certain gross income or assets in Canada are exempt. Obviously, it is directed to larger companies and is not concerned with companies operating in an area that is not going to affect the national economy to any great extent.

As far as I am concerned, the introduction of that principle in this bill is to be greatly commended, and I am pleased to see that the Department of Justice and the Department of Energy, Mines and Resources have recognized what we did decry, in principle, in the Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce. These corporations will now have to report in a prescribed form, and that prescribed form will be determined by order in council.

I think honourable senators will be interested in the information I received from the department on this bill. An explanation reads, referring to clause 5(1), "It will catch every corporation above the size threshold." Even the word "catch" staggers me. I cannot believe that this is the type of mentality we have in our bureaucracy. Of course, that is only an aside of my own and does not detract from the validity of the provisions contained in the legislation.

The bill goes on to require corporations to keep specific records on their operation in the petroleum and natural gas field, and so forth. Supplementary information, as may be required from time to time by the minister, must also be produced.

There is no doubt that this measure will result in a lot of paperwork for those involved in the business. In the circumstances, however, I do not think they are unduly onerous requirements.

It was during the time our colleague Senator Greene was Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources that it dawned on the government that it had very little knowledge of the resource potential of Canada in this area, or knowledge as to the effectiveness of our exploitation of those resources. Looking back to those years, I can see that the requirements of this bill are directed to the same ends that brought about the incorporation of Petro-Canada.

The bill goes on to provide the usual penalties in the event that a corporation does not comply, and so on and so forth. There is one rather annoying feature of the bill which I hesitate in bringing up this evening. During committee consideration of the bill on the other side, some members of the committee insisted that it have a sunset clause in it—that is, a clause saying it will expire in five years unless re-passed. The minister did not accept that. As a result of the ensuing standoff, the bill was amended by the addition of clause 14, which reads:

This Act shall be deemed to be referred for review and report to the first sitting of the Committee of the House of Commons that normally considers oil and gas matters, following the fifth anniversary of the coming into force of this Act.

I have never seen a clause such as this before. It offends me, because it refers only to the House of Commons. It does not refer to Parliament. However, I am quite prepared in this case to overlook it, because I do not think it has any legal validity. It is a cosmetic which I presume was applied in order to have the bill accepted by the committee of the other place.

If I were on the other side I would, of course, take the position that this bill creates more paperwork for the industry. It creates more bureaucratic extrapolations. Honourable senators know me well enough to appreciate that that would be the last thing I would encourage. However, I do feel, in view of the experience of the federal government over the last six to eight years, that everything that can be devised to increase its knowledge and expertise in this area must be supported. Energy production in Canada can no longer be a matter of the absolutely free exercise of the private marketplace. The national interests are very deeply involved.

If I recall correctly, when this bill, in the form of Bill S-4, was before the Banking, Trade and Commerce Committee, the representatives of the oil companies that appeared before the committee did not object to reporting as will be required. In fact, they were rather relieved that by this legislation they would all be placed on the same footing. What they did mention, of course, was the fact that there is a clause in this legislation whereby the information furnished to the minister can be released to the public, and they were concerned about it. This was obviously inserted to enable the minister to bring public opinion to bear on some corporate actions that he felt were not in the national interest. The Senate committee, when it was considering the measure, amended it to preclude the minister from taking such action without prior consultation with the company concerned. That restriction, for what it may be worth, is retained in the bill now before us.

● (2030)

Honourable senators, in view of the fact that we considered this legislation a year ago, that it has been studied by our committee, and that it comes to us now in a form which I consider is improved as compared with its previous form, I hope that we are able to pass it without once again referring it to committee.

[Senator Lang.]

I shall be quite candid and say that I was not prepared to speak to this bill tonight, as I assumed that it would be coming back to us in the form that it left us, namely, with an appendix attached designating the companies to which it applies, and a provision that names can be added or deleted by order in council. That, to my way of thinking, trespasses on some of the very fundamental principles of legislation. However, that is gone. We now have a bill of general applicability incorporating the amendments of the Senate committee, and improved in terms of legislative precedent.

Honourable senators, I hope that we may be able to debate this bill tonight and let it proceed to third reading without the necessity of referring it to committee. However, that is for the Senate to decide.

Hon. Allister Grosart: Honourable senators, we have had an excellent explanation of this bill, which has come to us suddenly and unexpectedly tonight. I said earlier that I felt it my duty to formally protest the procedures of the last few days, and I proceed to do that now.

I repeat what I said earlier, that I think this situation is utterly and absolutely intolerable, when at the last minute important bills are rushed through Parliament and presented to us with what, in effect, is an ultimatum that we must dispose of them hurriedly under a guillotine—the guillotine of recess or adjournment—the alternative being that if we do not rush them through, if we do not send a bill such as this to committee, as Senator Lang has suggested, then we will have to come back next week and deal with the bills in the normal way under our rules, and that the House of Commons will have to come back, because it would be necessary for them to return, and this would raise certain doubts about the role of the Senate.

Personally, I should like to see those doubts raised. I should like to see them raised tonight. I should like to see us refuse to pass certain bills—not this bill but another one which will be before us this evening. I should like to see us say, “No. We will not pass all these bills under these circumstances.”

That has been said in this chamber before. I can remember a most distinguished colleague of mine, when I sat as his seatmate, the late Senator O’Leary, saying that never again would he agree to give leave to pass legislation brought to us at the last minute. And other honourable senators have said the same thing. But we have always caved in. I presume we will cave in again tonight.

This may be one of the reasons, it may be the main reason, why suggestions are now being made that this second chamber, this upper house, needs certain kinds of reformation. It is my own belief that, if we had had the courage to make a stand in situations such as we have tonight, we would not be faced with some of the criticism that has been made of this place. It is my belief that, if we had sent back to the other place legislation such as this, which appears to need amendment, and had done so regularly over the years, the House of Commons and the public would have come to understand that it is the function of this house to amend legislation and to send it back to the House of Commons for amendment, and that it was not necessarily a cause for a national crisis because the Senate had decided to perform what surely is its function: to give sober, second thought to legislation and, if we find it needs amendment, to send it back to the House of Commons.

Some of us have said that a good many times over the years. It has not been done. We have found formulas; we have found ways to get round it, ways not to embarrass the government. We have found reluctance on the part of senators to put themselves in the position of voting against government measures.

I will not criticize any individual senator for his decision in any such matter. I can only say that whatever has happened to us we have brought it on ourselves, we have brought it on our own heads by submitting to the kind of insult to Parliament that we are presented with tonight.

I was much more annoyed about this matter before the supper hour than I am now. That is so because, when I checked into the background of these bills that are coming to us, I discovered that the House of Commons had, itself, caved in. The caving in of the House of Commons on these very bills suggests to me that if reform of Parliament is needed, it might well have started with the House of Commons rather than with the Senate.

● (2040)

I shall indicate—I hope that honourable senators will bear with me—the utter absurdity, the ridicule of all the concepts of parliamentary discussion concerned with legislation that has taken place in the House of Commons this very day. It is incredible. It is unbelievable when one reads, as I have done, through the courtesy of the Leader of the Government and our staff, the press copy of Commons Hansard, indicating what did go on in the House of Commons in connection with these bills.

I have not had a great deal of time to look into the background of the bill which Senator Lang has introduced and discussed so well, and I compliment him on the information he has given us. I am glad that his memory is better than my own, because when I protested the fact that for various reasons I would have to speak to this bill tonight, someone reminded me that the last time the bill was before us I had made a speech on it. I had completely forgotten what I had said at that time. Senator Lang has reminded me of some of those things, and I thank him for that.

If I were permitted under our rules to quote exactly what was the impression of the official opposition on this bill, I am sure that honourable senators would be interested. I know that our rules say that I can quote, from the proceedings of the other place, only the statement made by the minister introducing a bill. But I might be permitted to suggest that honourable senators would be interested in what was said, to use the British tradition, “in another place” rather than “in the other place,” to say that somewhere someone, speaking of this bill today, described it in the following fashion. Perhaps I should say first that there was an amendment to the bill, which was referred to by Senator Lang, and the Speaker there took the amendment under consideration and, if I may paraphrase Mr. Speaker Jerome's comment on the bill, he said that it was about the silliest thing he had ever heard, but that procedurally he could not interfere, that procedurally this amendment was in order, silly though it may be. That was the general impression of the Speaker, and I will refer to that a little later.

So someone said somewhere:

Perhaps I could open my brief remarks by notifying the Chair that concerns about procedural matters might be academic, because as soon as we form a government we will change the legislation or get rid of it. The kindest thing to say about this legislation is that it is lousy.

Senator Perrault: Who said that?

Senator Grosart: It was said somewhere. I prefaced my remarks by saying it was said somewhere “in another place,” not “the other place.” To continue:

At no time has the minister or any of his colleagues offered a sensible argument for the necessity of this legislation. No evidence or data has been presented which would in any way, shape or form indicate any necessity for passing this legislation, the effect of which would be to impose upon 85 or 90 oil companies in Canada the necessity of supplying detailed, extensive financial information at a frequency to be determined by the minister.

I thank honourable senators for allowing me to transgress the rules to that extent, because I have not had the time, under the circumstances, to make as thorough an investigation of this piece of legislation as was done by this person who came up with a conclusion that was certainly much more positive than anything I might indicate. He says it is lousy legislation. Perhaps that is so. The reasons for that, I think, are understandable.

Senator Lang referred to some part of the background of this legislation. The background, of course, was the unbelievable series of errors and miscalculations made by the government about the state of our energy resources in Canada. So as not to embarrass any particular person, I merely say we were told that we had energy resources for thousands of years. This was an official statement by the government.

Senator Benidickson: The industry said the same thing.

Senator Grosart: No doubt the information came from the industry. That is a very interesting comment by Senator Benidickson, who has a great deal of knowledge in this field. He now says that the industry said the same thing, and the whole purpose of this bill is to get the industry to say the same thing, or some similar thing again. If that is correct, and the fault was with industry, then this bill is really nonsense, because the whole purpose of this bill is to force industry to disclose this information.

We all remember that this was one of the reasons given for establishing the crown corporation in this field. They said then, “Well, of course, we made mistakes. We didn't know what was going on. We had no energy policy. If we had one, it made no sense.” This caused all sorts of problems in Canada. Therefore, we set up our own corporation so we would be in the club and get all the information we needed. Well, this did not happen in the normal course of events, so the predecessor of this bill was introduced in this chamber. Now it is back again.

Senator Lang, with some feeling of criticism, I think, gave us some background dates on this bill. I believe he said it was introduced on first reading on November 2 of last year, that it received second reading on January 27, and that it went to committee on January 30. Those are the dates when this bill was dealt with by Parliament. January of this year.

Now, for some reason it comes to us tonight with the usual excuse by the government that it takes a long time to get a bill through Parliament. This bill was rammed through in an hour today. Why could this bill not have been dealt with two or three months ago?

We all recall, and I am in no way critical of the Leader of the Government, the many times that he told us, when there was an expectation of dissolution, that we must get through certain bills. These were the only bills that the government insisted we must get through before a possible dissolution which, he said at that time, he believed would come soon. I am in no way criticizing him. I sympathize with him. I would not want to be in his shoes at that time or at this time. However, he bears up well and we all sympathize with him and wish him the very best with the difficult problems he has in his dual capacity as a member of the cabinet and the Leader of the Government in the Senate. I say "Leader of the Senate," because we all believe his heart is with the Senate. I will not say it is not with the cabinet, but I think we all know his heart is with the Senate, and he has given evidence of that. Therefore, I am not being critical of him, but this is the situation we are faced with.

Senator Lang described what he called the "sunset clause," and he read it. I believe he said it would have no legal effect. I am not quite sure of that. It is an extraordinary clause that says five years from now, following the fifth anniversary of the coming into force of the bill, certain things shall be done. I think we know that we will not have the present Parliament in being at that time.

● (2050)

The honourable senator is an eminent lawyer, and it may be that it has no legal effect. One wonders, then, what effect it might have. It might be that if we were inclined to send back a bill we would have every justification for sending this one back, because it refers only to reporting to the first sitting of the committee of the House of Commons that normally considers oil and gas matters. I think we would be inclined to say that at least it should also be sent back to the House of the Federation, or the House of the Provinces, or whatever it may be called at that time. It may still be the Senate. Who knows?

As far as we know, this bill, if it becomes an act of Parliament, will require 80 per cent to 90 per cent of the corporations in this general field of oil exploration, exploitation, marketing and so on, to make these reports to the government. It seems at the present time to involve perhaps 35 companies. The question has been asked whether this information is not already available through Statistics Canada, the provincial boards and the National Energy Board. If the information that this bill or the minister seem to require is not available, one wonders what Statistics Canada is doing, and particularly what the National Energy Board is doing. If the National Energy Board does not know what is going on in this area one wonders if it is in any way effective.

[Senator Grosart.]

Of course, the bill goes beyond the powers that some of these other organizations may have. It gives the minister or his officials the right to seize books and to hold them for, I think, 120 days. In this area it gives them the full police powers that exist under the Income Tax Act. Whether or not that is too drastic I do not know. One has to wonder whether this kind of compulsion of disclosure of information makes sense with this particular group of companies. Will the government, or perhaps the bureaucrats, not be inclined to say, "Why not get this information from any company? Should anyone be exempt? Should people in the transportation business, the communications business or ordinary retailers be exempt? Is there anyone who should not be forced, under an act of Parliament, to disclose any information about the way his business is run?"

I do not think a very good case has been made for saying that these petroleum companies, to give them the general designation that has been used, are in a very different position from any other type of company. We are told that one of the reasons is that five of these companies appear to have refused to comply with, I suppose, requests. I see no evidence as to who those five companies may be, or what their reasons were for objecting to what they would regard as a mandatory report. It is true that companies in this field have shown very high profits in the last few years, both before and after taxes, and that prices are going up. I think next month crude oil prices will be up $1 a barrel, and they will have substantial profits.

The purpose here seems to be to make sure that they are reinvesting an appropriate portion of their profits in continuing exploration in Canada. I admit that my examination of the background of the bill has been cursory, but I do not see anything to indicate what is regarded as an appropriate proportion of profits that the government would appear to require to be reinvested in exploration, in the search for new energy supplies in Canada.

These matters have been raised. Some have said that the companies are making exorbitant profits. I see no evidence of that. I am inclined to agree with the anonymous gentlemen I quoted earlier, that on balance this bill seems to be completely unnecessary. It would seem to me that there are easier and more effective ways for the government to obtain information and secure private sector co-operation in an area such as this other than by resorting to mandatory and compulsory requirements in an act of Parliament for one particular group of companies.

On behalf of this group, I would say that under the circumstances we would agree with the suggestion of Senator Lang that it is not necessary for this bill to go to a committee. As he said, it has been thoroughly examined by a committee of this house. This bill is not very much different, as Senator Lang explained, from the bill that we discussed before. I agree with him that it is a better bill than the one we passed before. I share his wonder that we allowed that bill to go through with that unbelievable schedule. I have forgotten why we did so, but we did, and I am glad that the protest we made at that time has had the effect of eliminating that schedule from the bill.

Hon. Daniel A. Lang: Honourable senators—

The Hon. the Speaker: I must remind honourable senators that if Senator Lang speaks now his speech will have the effect of closing the debate.

Senator Lang: In reply to the honourable senator, I would merely like to say that I would certainly not be one to bring forward a bill at this time, and under these circumstances, if I considered it of any national significance. This bill is not one that I would put in that category. Nor would I be doing so if it was not a bill that we had already dealt with in this chamber, and dealt with extensively in committee. Nor would I do so if I did not think it was much improved over the bill we originally had.

● (2100)

I should like to remind Senator Grosart that those provisions for seizure of books, documents and records to which he refers were actually the provisions that were inserted in this bill when we considered it last time, and in lieu of very harsh, restrictive provisions that were in the bill when we first received it. We transposed into this bill, almost verbatim, sections of the Income Tax Act regarding seizure of books, records and documents, so I think in that sense it is not an unduly onerous provision.

Honourable senators, Senator Grosart has said that it is a much, much better bill than we passed here, and I am shocked in retrospect that we passed it in the form in which it was previously, so I have no hesitation in recommending it to you at this time.

Motion agreed to and bill read second time.

THIRD READING

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this bill be read the third time?

Senator Lang: With leave, I move third reading now.

The Hon. the Speaker: Is leave granted, honourable senators?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

Motion agreed to and bill read third time and passed.

THE CONSTITUTION

REPRESENTATION ON SPECIAL JOINT COMMITTEE—QUESTION OF PRIVILEGE

[Translation]

Hon. Pietro Rizzuto: Honourable senators, on a question of privilege, may I say a few words concerning the selection of the senators who will be members of the committee to study Bill C-60.

Having checked the names of the senators chosen, I think it is my duty to point out to honourable senators that, through an oversight in the way the committee members were selected or otherwise, regional representation was not taken into account. Personally, I noticed that there is no senator from the greater Montreal area. It is not because I am from the Montreal area, but I think we all agree that, when it comes to constitutional or linguistic problems or any other problem, Montreal is one of the most affected regions. I think it would have been highly desirable to have at least one representative from the Montreal area among the senators chosen to sit on the joint committee.

The same oversight has been made concerning the special committee. Honourable senators, I checked the list. Only one of the 25 members is from the Montreal area, Senator Wagner, who sits on the other side of the house. With respect, I think that the Montreal area should have at least one representative from this side of the house in view of the problems we had in the past and those we have today and might have in the future. I hope that the situation will be corrected as soon as possible.

In the Montreal area, honourable senators, one third of the people are from a culture other than French or English. The problem is that they want to tear those people apart. On one side the Anglophones say that they should be integrated into the large majority of Canadian Anglophones. On the other side, honourable senators, the Francophones want them to go to French schools and to be integrated into the French-speaking community as it is the majority in Quebec. Those people are expecting much from Parliament, from senators or members of the joint committee.

I for one think that the senators who sit on those two committees should be aware of that—I do not intend to blame anyone—and should pay particular attention to the Montreal area because that is where the problem really is. That is where it is today more than in any other part of the country.

I thank honourable senators for having given me the opportunity to express my views on that problem. I think it is a real mistake to have neglected the Montreal area.

[English]

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, I appreciate Senator Rizzuto's concern with respect to the composition of committees. It was not an easy task for those who were called upon to make the selection of members to be appointed to the special committees to determine who would be selected and those who could not be selected at the present time. However, I would point out that there will be many opportunities for every senator to participate in the deliberations of the committees. Indeed, the suggestion has come forward from more than one senator that all notices of these committee meetings should be sent as a matter of course to all senators so that they may be able to be present for committee deliberations.

I should like to point out, furthermore, that the membership of the select committee chosen today involves senators from every province and from one territory. The two provinces with the greatest representation are Quebec with five, and Ontario with five. There has been an earnest effort made by all parties represented in this chamber to make sure that the representation on these committees is as broad as possible under the circumstances. I would like to say, furthermore, that an invitation went forward in recent days asking honourable senators who wish to participate in either or both committees to make their views known to their respective party leaders and a great many senators wrote in and volunteered to serve. Indeed, more volunteered to serve than there were places to fill. I feel that these facts should be put on the record.

● (2110)

MARITIME CODE BILL

FIRST READING

The Hon. the Speaker informed the Senate that a message had been received from the House of Commons with Bill C-54, to provide a maritime code for Canada and to amend the Canada Shipping Act and other acts in consequence thereof.

Bill read first time.

SECOND READING

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this bill be read the second time?

Hon. George J. McIlraith, with leave of the Senate and notwithstanding rule 44(1) (f), moved that the bill be now read the second time.

He said: Honourable senators, this bill is to provide a maritime code for Canada and to amend the Canada Shipping Act and other acts in consequence thereof. It is a voluminous bill, but it is one that has been thoroughly examined by this chamber at an earlier stage.

The general objective of the maritime code is to revise and update Canadian law relating to navigation and shipping through a series of legislative stages, of which this bill is the first. When the maritime code is complete, it will consist of five books covering all aspects of ship operation in Canada. This bill contains the major elements of the first two books, and they deal with the establishment of the code and its general principles and with the ownership and registration of vessels in Canada.

It will be recalled that in the last session of Parliament, Bill C-41 was before this chamber and was studied in great detail by the Standing Senate Committee on Transport and Communications. All senators can take pride in the work of the committee, which resulted in 80-odd amendments to the bill. The amended bill was then passed by the Senate and returned to the other house just before the conclusion of the last session of Parliament. At that time the House of Commons took no action on the bill and it died on the order paper. In this session of Parliament a new bill, Bill C-54, which is currently before us, was introduced in the other place. It contains the amendments made by the Senate in the last session of Parliament plus two other amendments to which I shall make reference.

The two additional amendments were not made by the Senate, although the points involved were discussed in committee. The first one deals with the time of transferring the registration system from the Customs Branch of the Department of National Revenue to the Department of Transport. It was formerly stated to be one year, but now there is no limit on it. The effect of that should be to enable a much more orderly system of transfer of the registration, and should also result in a considerable saving of money which would have been spent had the one-year deadline been left in the legislation.

The other amendment concerns the compulsory registration of small craft. That has been removed from the legislation. The registration of small craft—that is, craft under ten meters—will be on a voluntary basis. The registration of ships has been moved to the Department of Transport, as I indicated, but the system of identification, which I could, perhaps, liken to the system of licensing small craft, is, at least for the time being, remaining with the customs branch of the Department of National Revenue.

There is not a great deal more that I can usefully add. This measure has been exhaustively studied by the Senate. I say that is a matter of personal satisfaction to see before us in legislative form recognition of the work done by a committee of the Senate on a subject as important as shipping is in Canada. That gives me, after so many years in both houses, great satisfaction, and those who have followed the parliamentary system in recent years will, I believe, share that satisfaction with me. The other house, and those responsible for bringing this about, deserve our commendation.

I should like to acknowledge the work done by the Standing Senate Committee on Transport and Communications, particularly by the former chairman, the present chairman and the deputy chairman. I refer to our former colleague, Senator Haig, and to Senator Smith (Colchester) and Senator Bourget.

I commend this bill to the favourable consideration of the Senate.

Senator Grosart: Honourable senators, I need hardly remind you of the strong protest made by the distinguished senator to whom reference has just been made, Senator G. I. Smith, the chairman of the committee. He protested against the Senate's proceeding to deal with this bill, and any possible suggestion that it might be passed by the Senate today or tomorrow. The Leader of the Government was good enough to say that he would determine whether it is urgent that this bill be given royal assent before the adjournment. Perhaps he would care to indicate what the situation is before I proceed.

Senator Perrault: The government would like royal assent given to this measure, if possible, tomorrow afternoon. However, in no way do we wish to restrict the debate on it.

Senator Grosart: Without in any way suggesting any attempt at obstruction on this side of the house, I move the adjournment of the debate. Perhaps I should say it is my intention to merely adjourn the debate so that we on this side of the chamber may have an opportunity to examine the implications of proceeding at this particular time.

[Senator Perrault.]

On motion of Senator Grosart, debate adjourned.

● (2120)

BUSINESS OF THE SENATE

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, I am now in a position to report to the Senate regarding the matters which are to come before us.

The House of Commons is now debating Bill C-59, to amend the Income Tax Act and the Excise Tax Act in matters relating to the ownership and operation of small businesses. Once that is completed, the government intends to proceed with Bill S-2, to amend the Canada Business Corporations Act; Bill S-3, respecting Canadian non-profit corporations, and Bill S-4, to implement the International Convention for Safe Containers. In addition, there is the possibility that the election expenses bill, which is a short bill and one which has not caused an undue amount of controversy in the other place, may also be dealt with before the summer recess.

That is all of the information I have at this point.

Senator Riley: I wonder if I might put a question to the Leader of the Government in respect of the proceedings in the other place at the present time. Is it expected that the other place will conclude their deliberations on these bills this evening?

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, there is that possibility, although the opposition is in no way being pressured to pass them tonight. I understand that all of the measures under consideration in the other place are regarded as non-controversial. However, those of us who have been connected with the parliamentary system for any period of time know full well that that is often not the case when matters come under scrutiny.

I understand that Bill C-48 has been passed by the other place, and will be here momentarily.

CUSTOMS TARIFF

BILL TO AMEND—FIRST READING

The Hon. the Speaker informed the Senate that a message had been received from the House of Commons with Bill C-48, to amend the Customs Tariff and to amend an act to amend the Customs Tariff.

Bill read first time.

SECOND READING

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this bill be read the second time?

Hon. Royce Frith, with leave of the Senate and notwithstanding rule 44(1)(f), moved that the bill be now read the second time.

He said: Honourable senators, this bill is not one that I can see as calculated to raise political or professional passion. I shall try to be brief in my explanation of it. In fact, I was so impressed by the record-breaking five-minute performance of the Deputy Leader of the Opposition the other night that I am going to try to equal if not beat it.

The object of the bill is to amend the Customs Tariff. The amendments cover four areas. Before dealing with the areas in detail, let me tell you what they are. The first is the extension of temporary tariff reductions due to expire on June 30, 1978. Honourable senators will recall that last year we had a similar amending bill to the Customs Tariff—a bill which I also had the honour to sponsor.

The second area concerns amendments to withdraw the British Preferential Tariff rate on certain products imported from Britain and Ireland; third, are the proposals to assist Canadian manufacturers of industrial tractor tires and chemicals for pesticides; and fourth, a number of amendments typical of those normally introduced at the time of the annual budget.

The first area, and the most important provision of the bill, concerns the temporary tariff reductions due to expire on June 30, which is tomorrow. Clause 5 of the bill would extend most of these temporary reductions for another year, until June 30, 1979. The proposed extension will result in continued tariff reductions on a wide range of consumer goods which were first introduced in the budget of February 19, 1973. These tariff cuts will apply to products with an estimated value of $1.5 billion. Some of the more important items in trade terms are raw sugar, medicinal and pharmaceutical preparations, motor vehicle parts, hand tools, photographic equipment, vacuum cleaners, chinaware and sporting goods.

The temporary rates for certain processed vegetables, glass tableware, synthetic detergents and certain canned meats are not being continued.

These changes are designed to reflect Tariff Board recommendations in the case of frozen asparagus and frozen brussels sprouts. In the other cases, it was decided that a change in the rates was warranted to take account of changes in the competitive position of Canadian producers since the temporary reductions were introduced.

Going to the second area of amendments, the measures to withdraw the benefits of the British preferential tariff from certain goods imported into Canada from the United Kingdom and Ireland are to be found in clause 3. These goods include confectionery, cranes for mounting on trucks, certain diesel engines, certain apparatus used in community antenna television transmission lines, and knitted garments. Again, this action will assist Canadian manufacturers who are operating at below capacity at the present time or who have lost significant business to imports from the United Kingdom and Ireland. Imports of these goods from those two countries were valued at about $52 million in 1976, representing approximately 12 per cent of total imports of the products in question. These imports will now be dutiable at most-favoured-nation rates of duty.

Honourable senators will be aware that since Britain and Ireland joined the European Economic Community, Canada no longer has an obligation to extend preferential tariff treatment to British and Irish goods. Many of the remaining margins of preference will disappear as a result of tariff reductions made in the multilateral trade negotiations.

Dealing with the third area, clause 3 introduces a measure to exclude tires for non-agricultural tractors from duty-free entry. The reason for this change is to assist Canadian manufacturers of industrial tractor tires and to correct an anomaly whereby tires used on the tractor portion of some equipment are free of duty while the same tires used on the non-tractor portion are subject to duty. In addition, this clause would impose a tariff on two basic chemicals used in the manufacture of pesticides. This action will result in substantial investments being made in expanded production of these chemicals and will help ensure a reliable Canadian source of supply. Formulated pesticides used in agricultural applications are now free of duty, and will continue to be so.

Moving on to the fourth area, clause 3 of the bill also provides for a number of miscellaneous amendments—the ones that normally follow a budget. Some examples of that are temporary duty-free provisions covering aircraft and aircraft engines of types and sizes not made in Canada. It will have to be continued for another year, and the duty is being removed from catgut for markers used for aerial spraying of crops. A reduction in duties is also proposed for certain parts for electric light fixtures.

● (2130)

Honourable senators, that concludes my general remarks. I know the burden that the acting Leader of the Opposition is under, and the pressure that is being put on him. I suggest to honourable senators that there is no need to refer this legislation to a committee. However, the ink is still wet on this bill, figuratively speaking, and the Acting Leader of the Opposition has not had an opportunity to examine it in detail. I have the departmental official here, and he is waiting outside in case the Acting Leader of the Opposition might want to question him and me. If he wishes to adjourn the debate, perhaps we could spend some time with the departmental official and have our own mini-Banking, Trade and Commerce Committee meeting at which Senator Grosart can ask any questions he might need to ask to assure himself that it is not necessary to send this legislation to a committee. Of course, I do not in any way suggest that he is limited, but I do make that offer in case it will assist him in his very difficult job here in these last few days.

Senator Benidickson: Honourable senators, I well recall the very large and broad list of consumer items upon which tariff duties were reduced in the budget of 1973. In subsequent years it has been our practice to extend those duties, but not formally to amend the act. I think that has been done because we have wanted to hold our position with respect to negotiations in GATT. But, Senator Frith, you spoke very rapidly. With respect to the first section in those items for the year 1973, did I understand you to say that some of the items on that original list are being eliminated in the bill tonight?

[Senator Frith.]

Senator Frith: Yes, honourable senator, they are. The temporary rates—and I will speak more slowly—for processed vegetables, glass tableware, synthetic detergents and certain canned meats are not being continued. I have some detail of each of those categories. Gradually, I guess, we are not automatically continuing that schedule every year. Some items are being dropped.

Hon. Allister Grosart: Honourable senators, I thank Senator Frith for his explanation of the bill and for his very kind offer to make available one of the officials of the department in case there should be certain questions. However, it seems to me that this is very much a routine bill; we have had this type of bill before us on other occasions. It is in almost exactly the same terms as previous bills, with just some changes in some of the products and some of the items.

We are all aware of the purpose of the first group, the extension of the temporary tariff reduction on certain items, mostly food items. The purpose of this, of course, was to help to keep down the consumer cost of living, particularly in the area of food imports.

The withdrawal of the British preference is always a matter of some regret, but it is understandable that this is obviously at the request of Canadian manufacturers who appear to have the problem of competing with imports. The same would apply to the bill generally.

It points up, of course, the dilemma facing Canada. Here we are at the present time proclaiming to all the world that we are in favour of trade liberalization, that we are taking this position at the Tokyo Round of the GATT negotiations, and at the same time we have the dilemma of raising some of our tariffs or eliminating some of the preferences from certain goods such as those involved in the case of the British preferential tariff. This is a problem that is facing every nation today, in a world where international trade is not running as smoothly as had been hoped, and GATT itself has not proved to be the efficient regulator of international trade that many hoped it would be. No one of us knows at the moment just what the outcome of the present GATT negotiations will be, but as I see it the tendency at the moment is to be pessimistic. This may be premature, but our Foreign Affairs Committee is dealing with this very problem at the moment, particularly with respect to Canada-United States trade where some of the problems which arise and which make it necessary from time to time for changes to be made in the customs tariff are under consideration.

I do not believe it is necessary for this bill to go to committee, and on behalf of the official opposition I would be quite prepared to see it given second and third readings tonight to expedite the matter.

I regret that I have to be on my feet again. I thank Senator Frith for his expression of, shall I say, pity, and I can only say to honourable senators that they are the ones who should be pitied.

Senator Frith: Perhaps "empathy" is the word rather than "pity".

Motion agreed to and bill read second time.

THIRD READING

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this bill be read the third time?

Senator Frith: With leave, now.

Motion agreed to and bill read third time and passed.

ADJOURNMENT

Leave having been given to revert to Notices of Motion:

Senator Petten, with leave of the Senate and notwithstanding rule 45(1)(g), moved that when the Senate adjourns today it do stand adjourned until tomorrow, Friday, June 30, 1978, at 11 o'clock in the forenoon.

Motion agreed to.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, before I move the adjournment I want to thank honourable senators for their co-operation, especially those in opposition who, because of their smaller numbers, are faced with a rather more difficult task than government members. I feel sure that on the present schedule we can have royal assent some time tomorrow afternoon or evening, depending on the vagaries of our fellow parliamentarians in the other place.

The Senate adjourned until tomorrow at 11 a.m.

APPENDIX

(See p. 965)

COMPETITION POLICY

---

REPORT OF THE STANDING SENATE COMMITTEE
ON
BANKING, TRADE AND COMMERCE

ON

THE SUBJECT MATTER OF BILL C-13

AN ACT TO AMEND THE COMBINES INVESTIGATION ACT AND TO AMEND THE BANK ACT AND OTHER ACTS IN RELATION THERETO OR IN CONSEQUENCE THEREOF

---

June 29, 1978

INDEX

SECTION	HEADING	PAGE NO.
SUMMARY OF PRINCIPAL RECOMMENDATIONS		1006
I—INTRODUCTION		1007
II—GENERAL		1007
III—MERGERS, MONOPOLIZATION AND JOINT MONOPOLIZATION (General Comments)		1008
	SCHEDULE—Specific comments on above proposed provisions.
	A.—Mergers
	1. Advance rulings.
	2. Interplay with Foreign Investment Review Act.
	3. Substantive provisions dealing with mergers.
	B.—Monopolization.
	C.—Joint Monopolization
IV—SPECIALIZATION AGREEMENTS AND JOINT VENTURES		1011
	A.—Specialization Agreements	1012
	B.—Joint Ventures	1013
V—INDUSTRIAL AND INTELLECTUAL PROPERTY		1013
VI—PRICE DISCRIMINATION AND PRICE DIFFERENTIATION		1014
VII—MATTERS HELD OVER FROM PHASE I AMENDMENTS		1015
	A.—Right of Appeal from decisions of the proposed Competition Board	1015
	B.—Regulated Conduct	1016
	C.—Franchises	1016
VIII—OTHER MATTERS		1016
	APPENDIX—SUBMISSIONS RECEIVED ON BILL C-13	1020

SUMMARY OF PRINCIPAL RECOMMENDATIONS

The Committee has concluded that the central provisions of the Bill, namely, those dealing with mergers, monopolizations and joint monopolizations should be withdrawn and reconsidered. To the extent that any revision of the existing provisions of the Act may be necessary, it should take the form of provisions to control abuse of dominant position and the practice of artificial restraints as they occur rather than the setting up of machinery to monitor and prohibit structural changes on the mere chance that they could lead to such situations.

The industrial and intellectual property provisions should be withdrawn and, if the current study of related legislation indicates the desirability of placing further limits on the scope of these rights, which the Committee doubts, any changes should be made by way of amendment to the specific statutes dealing with them and not in competition legislation.

The amendments to the price discrimination section are in the Committee's opinion obscure and the need for them has not been sufficiently explained. They also, therefore, should be withdrawn.

The proposed price differentiation provision, a retrogressive step at a time when authorities in the United States are strongly recommending the repeal of similar provisions there, should be deleted.

The Committee considers that the proposed review of orders of the Competition Board by the Cabinet, subject to the consent of the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs, is entirely unsatisfactory. It continues to recommend that a Cabinet review of the type provided in the National Transpor- tation Act should be provided as well as a full right of appeal to the Federal Court of Appeal. In view of the Committee's recommendation that a substantial portion of the Competition Board's jurisdiction proposed by the Bill be deleted, the recommendation with respect to appeals would relate only to the jurisdiction of the Board under the Phase I amendments.

The Committee considers that the proposed exemption for regulated conduct should be expanded and clarified.

While your Committee is in full agreement that there should be a provision exempting specialization agreements from certain provisions of the Act, it considers that the definition of such agreements proposed by the Bill is too narrow and the proposed manner of seeking the exemption unnecessarily complicated. It recommends a new definition and proposes that the provisions requiring prior approval by the Competition Board be deleted but that the parties to such an agreement be permitted to obtain an advance ruling at their option. Similar recommendations have been made with respect to joint ventures, to be defined as recommended by the Committee.

The Committee considers that legislation containing its recommendations with respect to specialization agreements and joint ventures should be introduced without delay in view of their importance to the competitive position of the Canadian economy. There could be included in the same legislation such non-controversial and apparently desirable provisions of Bill C-13 as the expanded exemption with respect to employers under the collective bargaining provision (clause 4) and the exemption for certain franchise arrangements from the exclusive dealing and market restrictions reviewable practice provisions of the Act (clause 26).

COMPETITION POLICY

REPORT OF THE STANDING SENATE COMMITTEE
ON

BANKING, TRADE AND COMMERCE

I—INTRODUCTION

The Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce, which was authorized to examine and report upon the subject matter of Bill C-13 entitled: "An Act to amend the Combines Investigation Act and to amend the Bank Act and other Acts in relation thereto or in consequence thereof", in advance of the said Bill coming before the Senate, or any matter relating thereto, has, in obedience to the Order of Reference of November 23, 1977, examined the said matter and now reports thereon.

Bill C-13, introduced in the House of Commons on November 18, 1977 represents the re-draft of Bill C-42 which was introduced in the House on March 16, 1977 and immediately withdrawn with the intention that a fresh bill be introduced following public representations on the subject matter. It will be recalled that your Committee, as did the Commons Committee on Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs, studied the subject matter of Bill C-42 and its report thereon was tabled in the Senate on July 7, 1977.<sup>1</sup>

Your Committee, in addition to a number of study sessions, held six hearings on the subject matter of Bill C-13 at which seven briefs were presented—two by organizations that previously had submitted briefs to your Committee on the subject matter of Bill C-42 and one by Dr. L. A. Skeoch and Mr. Bruce C. McDonald, principal authors of the Report<sup>2</sup> upon which the Government claimed Bill C-42 was modelled. A complete list of appearances will be found in Appendix A.

The Minister now responsible for the legislation, the Hon. Warren Allmand, Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs and officials of the Competition Bureau were unable to appear for questioning on account of pressure of other business. However, the views of the Department are well known from the material published by it in connection with both the Phase I and proposed Phase II amendments to the Combines Investigation Act.<sup>3</sup> In addition, reference can be made to the testimony of the then Minister (the Hon. A. C. Abbott) and the officials before the Commons Committee during its study of Bill C-42<sup>4</sup>.

For the sake of brevity, the Combines Investigation Act, which the Bill would amend and whose name it would change to the "Competition Act", will be referred to as the "Act". References to "the Board" are to the "Competition Board", the new name proposed for the present Restrictive Trade Practices Commission. References to "the Advocate" are to the Competition Policy Advocate, the proposed new title for the present office of Director of Investigation and Research.

Unless otherwise indicated, references to Senate Committee Proceedings will be to those in the present (Third) Session of the Thirtieth Parliament and references to Commons Committee Proceedings will be to the last (Second) Session.

II—GENERAL

Bill C-13 comprises what the Government has referred to as "Phase II" of amendments to the Act.

The centrepiece of these amendments are new provisions dealing with corporate concentration. Under the present Act, mergers and monopolies may only be attacked under criminal provisions if they are operating "against the interest of the public". The Bill would substitute for the criminal provisions relating to mergers, a civil review process under the jurisdiction of the Board. The present criminal monopoly provisions would be retained but, in addition, the Board would be given jurisdiction over what has been defined by the Bill as "monopolization". Finally, a newly defined type of conduct—"joint monopolization" would be reviewable by the Board. In all three cases, the Board would have the power to order divestiture, where it saw fit, or to issue orders prohibiting certain types of activity.

To some extent related to these matters are proposed amendments giving the Board jurisdiction, in certain circumstances, to deal with patents, trademarks, copyrights and industrial designs and interlocking directorates and management.

A new provision would allow temporary exemption of "specialization agreements" from section 32 of the Act (the conspiracy provisions) by the Board under certain circumstances.

Other new provisions would amend the "price discrimination" provisions of the Act, add a new reviewable practice called "price differentiation" and create a new offence called "systematic delivered pricing".

Finally, the Bill proposes new Part V.1 providing the class action remedy against persons who have engaged in conduct contrary to the Act for those who may have suffered loss or damage as a result thereof, complementing the Phase I amendment which introduced a civil damage recourse (section 31.1).

For a more detailed history of the genesis of these proposed amendments as well as the "Phase I" amendments enacted with effect January 1, 1976, reference is made to the introduction to your Committee's report on Bill C-42<sup>5</sup> and the various reports of your Committee dealing with Phase I listed in footnote No. 2 to that Report.

In its Bill C-42 Report, your Committee indicated its concern that the basic philosophy of the Skeoch-McDonald Report had not been followed and questioned the wisdom of introducing further highly interventionist legislation, particularly at a time of economic uncertainty. Your Committee's criticism of Bill C-42 may be summarized by quoting the following passage from its Report:

"Your Committee has regretfully concluded that there is hardly a provision in the Bill which does not warrant serious reconsideration either from the policy or the drafting point of view and in many cases, both."<sup>6</sup>

The Commons Committee, whose report was released approximately three weeks after that of your Committee, made considerable recommendations for amendment of Bill C-42. A number of these recommendations followed the same lines as those of your Committee. Divergent claims as to the proportion of Commons Committee recommendations actually reflected in Bill C-13 have been made and obviously any attempt at a purely numerical analysis would be misleading because of the relative importance of some recommendations as against others. Suffice it to say that not all of either the Commons Committee or Senate Committee recommendations were accepted. In several cases, of which appeals from decisions of the Board is an important example, recommendations of neither the Commons nor the Senate Committee were fully accepted.

It would appear, however, that the Commons Committee accepted the basic thrust and philosophy of Bill C-42 and that its recommendations, while more than merely cosmetic in a number of areas, were directed at making what they conceived to be a more workable piece of legislation, within the framework of Bill C-42 as laid down by the Departmental draftsmen, rather than questioning the fundamental need for or desirability of the main provisions.

The changes in Bill C-13 from Bill C-42 are, with minor exceptions <sup>6A</sup>, largely cosmetic: sections have been rearranged, a word changed here and there, but no material change in approach is apparent. It should not be surprising therefore that, in your Committee's view, on the basis of the evidence before it, Bill C-13 does not respond adequately to the criticisms of Bill C-42.

III—MERGERS (new s. 31.71), MONOPOLIZATION (new s. 31.72) and JOINT MONOPOLIZATION (new s. 31.73)

Since the introduction of both Bills C-42 and C-13, there have been a series of developments which confirm the tentative conclusions reached by your Committee in its Bill C-42 Report that these provisions should be shelved and, if anything, a fresh approach in limited areas developed.

1. Release on May 15, 1978 of the Report of the Royal Commission on Corporate Concentration<sup>7</sup>

Commissioned several years ago, the Government did not await the results of this study before proceeding with legislation to implement Phase II although the matters being studied by the Royal Commission were clearly relevant. One beneficial result of having put the cart before the horse is that the Royal Commission has been able to make specific comments on Bill C-13.

With respect to the merger provisions, the Royal Commission said as follows:<sup>8</sup>

"We expressed the opinion earlier that competition was not seriously threatened by corporate mergers, and also that the costs of a review process by the Competition Board were not justified by the unsatisfactory results that may be expected from it... It is not that a process requiring a prediction of the economic effects of mergers cannot be made to work; it is that the process can operate only at what we think will be a prohibitive cost and that the results of the process will not be sufficiently worthwhile.

This conclusion reinforces the view we stated earlier: that competition law should deal with abuses or further entrenchment of market power. The law should act in the traditional prohibitory fashion: if facts are established showing that a firm is guilty of proscribed conduct, the court or responsible tribunal makes an order designed to stop the practice and, possibly, to compensate those who have been injured by it..."

2. Reaction of the authors of the Government commissioned "Dynamic Change Report"

As one of the papers in the Institute for Research on Public Policy's Compilation on Bill C-13 aptly put it<sup>8A</sup>:—

"Bill C-42 made a polite bow to acknowledge the existence of the Skeoch-McDonald Report but then took off in the opposite direction and Bill C-13 is much the same."

Dr. Skeoch publicly disavowed many of the provisions of Bill C-42 and submitted a brief to the Commons Committee, listed in the Commons Committee's Report under the heading "List of Provincial Governments, Organizations and Individuals who submitted briefs but were not selected to appear..."

Both Messrs. Skeoch and McDonald appeared before your Committee in the course of its study of Bill C-13, which they found to be little improvement over Bill C-42, and their evidence clarifies the reasons for their dissatisfaction<sup>9</sup>.

It would appear that in some instances the draftsmen of Bill C-42 may have simply misunderstood what was intended in the "Dynamic Change Report" and that therefore divergence from it was unintentional. For example, the Deputy Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs in her evidence before the Commons Committee on Bill C-42 appeared to assume that the "efficiency defence" in the merger review section of the Bill was the same as Dr. Skeoch's "real cost economies" defence<sup>10</sup>.

In their evidence before your Committee Dr. Skeoch and Mr. McDonald were highly critical of the simple efficiency test and clarified that their concept of "real cost economies" was something entirely different<sup>11</sup>:—

"The Chairman: You say efficiency is overrated as a yardstick.

Dr. Skeoch: Yes. It is not a sufficient goal for public policy. I would say that quite strongly.

... We, in the report, believe that you cannot appraise things just in terms of efficiency, because efficiency takes current goods and current costs... Efficiency is important, but it is not a sufficient test... efficiency is sort of equivalent to what economists call "static economies of scale". You can achieve certain economies by operating on a larger scale, and so on. But this is not really what public policy should worry so much about as change. How do you promote change? At the rate the world is changing today, we cannot just continue to turn out buttoned shoes more efficiently, . . . We have to produce new products by new methods, distribute them by new methods, and so on. The whole world is becoming an integrated market.

. . . . .
 . . . So we do not like such concept as 'short run efficiency,' 'static economies of scale,' and that sort of thing, enshrined as the relevant criteria in the legislation."

In your Committee's view whether there was a genuine misunderstanding or a deliberate departure from the Skeoch-McDonald recommendation is immaterial. What is clear is that legislation developed under these circumstances cannot be allowed to pass without further consideration.

Dr. Skeoch considered that the joint monopolization provisions were unnecessary.<sup>12</sup>

"Oligopoly, as such, I think, should not be a matter of concern as regards public policy except under certain very limited circumstances. The fact that you may get something called conscious parrallelism of pricing should not really be surprising.

. . . . .
 In the first place it is probably not as close as it looks, because you have to distinguish between quoted prices and transaction prices . . .

. . . . .
 I am not nearly as worried as some people seem to be, and as the legislations seems to be, about oligopolistic behaviour . . . It is the dynamic elements that the oligopolists refuse to bring under control that bring about the lowering of these prices.

. . . . .
 . . . If a group of oligopolists get together and agree that they will control their investment, agree that they will not introduce new technology and agree that they will not distribute to any new retail or wholesale system, then I think you have to take a pretty hard look at them. This is where the dynamic variables are brought under control, and at that stage you have to intervene; but you do not find that out by any of the criteria set out in this legislation, which are too much concerned with appearances and not enough with substance."

3. The deep divergence of views at all levels on the amendments proposed by Bill C-13.

In early June 1978, the Institute for Research on Public Policy<sup>12A</sup> published a useful book of papers by a cross-section of critics of competition policy.<sup>13</sup> The widely differing opinions expressed in the various papers illustrate the absence of any clearly accepted role for refinements to competition laws in directing economic policy.

The paper by Mr. Roy M. Davidson, Senior Deputy Director of Investigation and Research, Bureau of Competition Policy, Department of Consumer and Corporate Affairs, entitled "An Overview of the Stage II Amendments—Bill

C-13"<sup>14</sup> is of particular interest because of the notable lack in the "Proposal Books" put out by the Department of Consumer and Corporate Affairs<sup>15</sup> of any convincing explanation as to why such drastic changes are essential. The Department's Stage II Proposals book contents itself in this regard with simplistic generalities such as "many economists believe that a relationship holds between concentration and profits" and that the present merger law is "inadequate".

Perhaps recognizing the Proposals book's weakness in this regard, Mr. Davidson attempts to elaborate on the rationale for the Bill in his paper. He states generally that the existing provisions on mergers and monopolization are unsatisfactory and those on mergers virtually unenforceable. Here he no doubt has in mind the various court cases which have held that certain mergers and monopolies were not being operated against the public interest. He then mentions four more reasons. First, he suggests that where output is concentrated in the hands of a few, "prices tend to be inflexible downwards". Secondly he says:—

" . . . that Canada's international competitiveness suffers when needed inputs in one sector are supplied by another sector which is excessively monopolized. There are a good many resource industries in Canada which compete successfully abroad, and obviously that is gratifying, but we want to be sure that Canadian buyers, and Canadian users of these raw materials are buying at competitive prices. In other words, other procurement costs besides labour costs can affect the international competitiveness of Canadian industry . . ."

Next he states "that competition, it is generally believed, can stimulate improved productivity" and finally he states that "an effective policy on competition . . . helps to promote a consensus about the fairness of income distribution."

With the greatest respect, and without commenting individually on Mr. Davidson's reasons other than to suggest that some of them are repetitive, most seem to beg the question and none is self-evident, in your Committee's opinion, something more forceful and convincing than these undocumented assertions is required before thrusting drastic changes on a protesting system, especially in view of the very cogent and well documented contrary views expressed in a number of other papers published in the same book as well as in the Report of the Royal Commission, the Dynamic Change Report and by others.

Your Committee does not consider this to be an adequate response to the basic question summarized by a witness before your Committee who said:—

"First, why Bill C-13, which is really C-42 in slightly modified form? If you are going to have a piece of legislation brought forward, I think one has to ask why do we have this legislation; what is it going to do? We tried to find out the reason for Bill C-42 when it was first brought forward, and we could not find a logical answer. A couple of the answers that were given to us, which I do not think I like very much, was, first, "Well, no other department is doing anything in this field and therefore we feel we should do something." That is really not a good reason for bringing forth legislation."<sup>16</sup>

Amongst the speakers at a seminar organized by the Conference Board in Canada to discuss Bill C-42 was the Hon. W. Darcy McKeough, Treasurer of Ontario.<sup>17</sup> Speaking of the report of the Commons Committee on Bill C-42, he remarked:<sup>18</sup>—

"... What the Commons Committee could better have asked however is, "Do we need Phase II at all? Do we need it at this point in our history when we face a massive series of institutional crises and a turbulent world trading environment? Do we need yet another encrustation of regulatory barnacles to reduce even further the country's capacity to adapt and change?"

Referring to Bill C-42 he said:<sup>18A</sup>—

"It embodies a highly technical view of competition and market influence; it creates the opportunity to exercise sweeping discretionary power; it apes the philosophical foundations of the U.S. model—which is a huge, insulated and irrelevant model for Canada at this point in time; it worships at the altar of domestic markets without regard to international competitive forces; and finally, it displays an erroneously static view of the industrial process. Taken together, these are the ingredients of a recipe for failure and public frustration."

He concluded as follows:<sup>18B</sup>—

"I am concerned by the open-ended character of the proposed Bill. The proposed civil review of mergers, monopoly, and joint monopolization are phrased in a manner that would make them applicable to a broad and unpredictable set of circumstances. The ill-defined limits that must be observed in order to avoid the high cost of a tangle with the competition bureaucrats will certainly intimidate the business community from engaging in the sort of aggressive business practices essential to our international competitiveness."

With one exception, those who appeared before your Committee both on Bill C-42 and Bill C-13 were opposed to most aspects and certainly the major provisions of the legislation, although it is true that the opposition was often for different reasons and that the proposed solutions were often conflicting. For example, while some of the business briefs welcomed the flexibility which they felt to be inherent in the civil as opposed to criminal reviewability of mergers (while still critical of the particular provisions proposed) others preferred the certainty of per se offences.

The lone proponent of the Bill before your Committee was Dr. W. T. Stanbury<sup>19</sup>. Professor Stanbury, an economist and prolific writer on competition matters, felt that the Bill did not go far enough in certain respects. Yet he did not bring out in his testimony any real reason why legislation of this kind is urgently needed, other than to point to what he characterized as a rather poor record of success before the courts on the part of the Crown in merger and monopoly cases. In discussing, e.g., the effects of the acquittals in the Breweries<sup>20</sup> and B.C. Sugar<sup>21</sup> cases, Professor Stanbury could not assert that consumers had been damaged and he agreed with the Skeoch-McDonald Report's statement that the market share of the accused beer companies dropped considerably in the years that followed the acquittal<sup>22</sup>.

Professor Stanbury also conceded that legislation such as Bill C-13 ranked fairly low in terms of what is needed to help cure the economic ills facing Canada<sup>23</sup>.

The great majority of submissions to the Commons Committee were likewise opposed to most aspects of Bill C-42. A mongst those who favoured all or some of the provisions were the Consumers' Association of Canada and the National Automotive Trade Association. The Consumers' Association, however, in their endorsement of the legislation appeared to assume that it would lead to lower prices. Your Committee would be as gratified as anyone to see lower prices. However, it is not as convinced as the Consumers' Association that tougher competition laws, especially on aspects dealt with in Bill C-13, will necessarily produce these results and in some cases the contrary may be the case. Lower prices were a symptom of the Depression, yet they benefited few people because of the parallel erosion of incomes.

Before the Commons Committee the National Automotive Trade Association supported in particular the proposed joint monopolization provisions of Bill C-42 (which have been retained only in slightly amended form in Bill C-13). They felt that these provisions would have been helpful to independent service station operators in their dealings with the petroleum companies. It would appear that the reviewable practices introduced in the Phase I amendments (refusal to deal, consignment selling) and provisions dealing with pricing would have been as well or better suited to deal with the complaints of the Association than the Board's power to compel structural changes under the proposed joint monopolization provisions, and the representatives of the Association were prepared to acknowledge this to a great extent<sup>24</sup>.

The membership of the Canadian Federation of Independent Business gave no mandate to their representatives in their appearance before the Commons Committee to discuss the proposed merger provisions. To the question "Are you for or against greater control over industries where the supply of an article or service to a market is controlled by a small number of firms?" ("joint monopolization"), the membership was 56% against and 36% for (8% expressing no opinion).<sup>25</sup>

Finally, while complete parliamentary unanimity is hardly a condition precedent to the adoption of legislation, it is worth nothing in the light of certain remarks made recently by the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs in British Columbia in an address to the annual national conference of the Association of Canadian Financial Corporations<sup>26</sup> that the opposition parties appear to be opposed in principle, rather than simply as to details, albeit for different reasons, to the main provisions of Bill C-13.

Mr. Allmand, who was speaking of Bill C-16, the proposed Borrowers and Depositors Protection Act which died on the order paper at the last session, is quoted as follows:—

“Nobody has been picketing Parliament Hill to get BDPB through,” he said. “In the nine months I have been consumer minister, nobody from any of the other political parties or any of the consumer groups ever asked what had happened to BDPB.

“We haven’t had one question in the House about when we were going to re-introduce the bill.”

“We believe the first resort of consumers and business when they meet a problem in the marketplace has to be self-help.

“Government regulation cannot cure everything, and can sometimes even be counterproductive to the interests of the marketplace. From this point on we will be much more careful before we move to regulate than we have in the past.”

In your Committee’s view no legislation on the efficacy of which there is such wide divergence of opinion in the country at the political, industrial and academic levels should go forward without further consideration. Much clearer evidence of a national consensus is required.

In 1969, the Economic Council of Canada, which had been requested by the Government in July 1966 to undertake a study, amongst other things, of “combines, mergers, monopolies and restraint of trade” made the following important recommendation:—

“Since the formation of the Tribunal<sup>27</sup> would be a distinctly new departure, it would seem wise to make provision for a thorough-going review of the Tribunal’s operations and of Canadian competition policy generally. Following the example of the Bank Act, this review should be decennial, with the first review taking place no more than ten years after the legislation setting up the Tribunal first comes into effect. Given the rapid structural and other changes that are likely to occur in the Canadian and world economies over the next decade, it may be anticipated that even the most flexible and forward looking set of competition policies will in some measure be overtaken by events and thus require reassessment.” (Emphasis added.)<sup>28</sup>

The Tribunal which the Council had in mind was partly set up effective January 1, 1976 as a result of the Phase I amendments to the Act granting the Restrictive Trade Practices Commission jurisdiction to make orders in respect of certain trade practices. While ten years have not elapsed since that time and, of course, the Commission has never had any jurisdiction over mergers and monopolies, more than ten years have elapsed since the Council received its mandate and nearly ten since its report was released. The Council probably did not anticipate the long delay in implementing the jurisdiction which it recommended for the Tribunal over mergers and monopolies. (The fact that there has been such a delay is in itself a revealing comment on the nature of the legislation which has been proposed and not proceeded with, beginning with Bill C-256 in 1971.)

Thus, while it is not possible to “review the Tribunal’s operations” as recommended by the Council, in your Committee’s opinion, it is nevertheless appropriate, in terms of the Council’s time table, to re-assess the policies to which it gave general direction in 1969 and which were first proposed in legislative form in 1971 by Bill C-256. Despite the passage of time, despite the overtaking of events and despite the warnings of the Skeoch-McDonald Report, Bill C-42 and C-13 indicate a lamentable resistance to new approaches.

What then do these portents spell for the future of Bill C-13, particularly the merger, monopolization and joint monopoly provisions? In your Committee’s considered judgment, based on all the evidence available to it including the able submissions made by those who appeared before it, these provisions should not be proceeded with in their present form. To the extent that any revision is necessary, it should take the form of provisions to control abuse of dominant position and the practice of artificial restraints as they occur rather than the setting up of machinery to monitor and prohibit structural changes on the mere chance that they could lead to such situations.

To accomplish this, some extension of the Phase I reviewable practices jurisdiction of the Board may be required and this, together with provisions already in the existing Act, in your Committee’s view, are adequate remedies until and unless some compelling reason for greater intervention and interference with the dynamics of the marketplace emerges.

Having said this, it is perhaps superfluous or anti-climatic for your Committee to comment in detail on the specific merger and monopolization provisions contained in Bill C-13. However, because some comment of this nature may serve to illustrate the conclusion which your Committee has reached and because many of the briefs and submissions to your Committee have expressed their point of view in this way, your Committee attaches as a schedule to the present report a more detailed analysis and commentary on these provisions and the changes from Bill C-42 to C-13.

IV—SPECIALIZATION AGREEMENTS (new s. 31.76) and JOINT VENTURES

A positive aspect of the Phase II amendments is the provision whereby agreements amongst firms in an industry to specialize in the output of certain products would be exempt from the conspiracy provisions of the Act where certain economic benefits are likely to result therefrom. As noted in its Bill C-42 Report, however, your Committee is of the opinion that the provision is far too narrow to be of any real practical value.

It must be recognized that Canadian industry is required to compete both domestically and in foreign markets not only with giant firms in the powerful industrial countries such as our neighbour to the south, the U.K., France, West-Germany, Italy and Japan, but also with competition from smaller industrialized countries such as Sweden, the Netherlands and Denmark. In these countries, not only specialization but broader structural rationalization is encouraged and even compelled by governments. While such direct government involvement may not be as compatible with Canadian economic and political institutions, we must be wary, at the least, of new laws which would work against these changes occurring as a result of the operation of natural forces.

Another form of industrial arrangement which your Committee considers should be exempted from the application of competition legislation is the joint venture<sup>29</sup>.

A.—Specialization Agreements

Your Committee's recommendation in its Bill C-42 Report was that proposed section 31.76 did not go far enough in encouraging the kind of improved performance necessary to assist competition in export markets or against foreign imports. The proposal was too restrictive as to the types of agreements which might be permitted, and the duration of the protection from the application of the conspiracy provisions of the Act was too short.

The "Backgrounder Documentation" issued by the Department of Consumer and Corporate Affairs commented as follows:

"One of the major problems facing companies in a number of Canadian industries is that although their plants may be relatively large in size, they produce a wide range of different products or models. As a result, the volume of production of any given item tends to be small and the cost high by comparison with the much larger scale production of many foreign manufacturers. As a means of overcoming this critical problem, the bill proposes to permit groups of companies to apply to the Competition Board for registration of agreements to specialize their production in order to achieve larger scale, lower cost output. Each firm must undertake to discontinue production of particular products. The Board would be authorized to exempt such companies from charges they might otherwise face of conspiring together to prevent or lessen competition unduly if it concluded that the proposed agreement was warranted by the economic circumstances."

Your Committee commends the Department for identifying what is indeed a "critical problem", but considers that the solution proposed by the Bill does not go nearly far enough.

The restrictive conditions and the duration of the exemption are unrealistic in terms of the new capital expenditures which would in most cases be required to be made by industry to make effective adjustments for specialization. Objections to the restrictive nature of the provision were made by many of the groups and companies which appeared before your Committee or submitted briefs concerning Bill C-42 and Bill C-13.

This was confirmed by Messrs. Skeoch and McDonald in their brief to your Committee:—

"In general Bill C-13 does not recognize the breadth or long term nature of the rationalization that may well be required for several Canadian industries if they are to survive and prosper".

"The application of the facts or the creation of the assumptions will vary not only from case to case but as the economic climate or the state of political thought in the country varies. This is, as was argued in the Dynamic Change report, particularly important for small countries. Such countries may feel impelled to encourage rationalization of industry or specialization arrangements and the like in order to develop industries which will be sufficiently strong by world standards to obtain export business and also, perhaps, to become strong enough to establish operations in foreign countries. Such small countries will also have to consider their policies on imports to provide sufficient, but not too much, competition from this source."

In view of s. 32<sup>29A</sup> of the Act, many specialization agreements would leave the parties open to prosecution thereunder. In essence, a specialization agreement is an agreement "to limit... the facilities for... manufacturing... a product". The only latitude allowed to parties to a specialization agreement would be through the word "unduly"—omitted from the above quotation.

However, it seems unlikely that parties would be willing to undertake specialization agreements in the hope that a court would find that the limitation was not undue, having regard to the niceties of judicial interpretation which that word has undergone and the further confusion likely to result from subsection 32(1.1) added by the Phase I amendments.

Moreover, even if the parties could reasonably satisfy themselves that the agreement did not constitute an "undue" limitation, instinctive wariness of any overt agreement in restraint of trade would likely deter any but the most courageous or foolhardy.

In view of the important role which specialization agreements could play in the Canadian economy, (to say nothing of broader forms of rationalization which are not only not encouraged, but rather, discouraged by Bill C-13) it is clear that some kind of exemption from s. 32 is essential.

The method proposed by the Bill is to grant exemption of a specialization agreement, as defined therein, for a maximum of five years<sup>29B</sup> provided it has first been found by the Board as "likely to bring about substantial gains in efficiency... that will save resources for the Canadian economy." Moreover, the Board may revoke its approval if it later finds that this condition is not being met.

Your Committee considers, for the reasons mentioned above, that the definition of a specialization agreement should be broadened to include agreements in respect of services and non-production matters such as research and development and that regional specialization be permitted so that a party would not be obliged to completely discontinue production of a product.

Your Committee received representations, including those from Messrs. Skeoch and McDonald, that no time limit should be placed on the term of the specialization agreement. In your Committee's report on Bill C-42 it recommended increasing the maximum possible term from five years to ten years. While much is to be said for having no time limits at all, contracts in perpetuity have never been favoured. Your Committee therefore recommends that a ten-year term be permitted but that the parties be permitted, by mutual agreement, to extend the term from time to time for further periods of up to ten years each.

The "efficiency" and "saving of resources" tests, also found in the merger provision proposed by the Bill, have been criticized elsewhere in this Report and, in the opinion of your Committee, should be eliminated. In your Committee's opinion, the parties would be unlikely to enter into such an agreement unless they considered that it would result in greater efficiency or some other worthwhile benefit.

Your Committee also considers that the provisions linking permissible specialization agreements to tariff reductions are unnecessary in view of the broad powers to effect tariff reductions contained in section 28 of the Act and even dangerous in view of the possible effect of such reductions on firms in the industry that are not parties to the agreement.

With the removal of the efficiency and customs duties tests, the parties should be able to decide on their own whether or not the agreement falls within the definition, revised as suggested above. It would therefore be unnecessary and wasteful to require the parties to apply to the Board for prior approval of a specialization agreement and your Committee recommends that this requirement be deleted. In the result, any agreement which meets the statutory definition, revised as recommended above, would enjoy, through proposed s. 4.4 with consequential amendments to that section, exemption from s. 32 and s. 31.4, as it applies to exclusive dealing, of the Act. However, for those that wish greater certainty, a procedure permitting the parties, at their option, to apply to the Board for a binding advance ruling confirming that the agreement falls within the exempting definition should be provided.

It should be noted that if the operation of the agreement results in either of the parties having a monopoly, the provisions of the Act pertaining to monopolies are there and the sanctions resulting from operation against the public interest can be applied.

B.—Joint Ventures

Because of the increasing number of important projects in which Canadian companies are involved which can only be performed on a joint venture basis, your Committee recommended in its Bill C-42 Report that joint ventures be exempted from the definition "merger" in proposed subsection 31.71. As an added precaution, your Committee considers that there should be, in addition, an exemption from section 32 of the Act.

The Commons Committee apparently shared your Committee's concern.<sup>30</sup> It suggested that the words "or otherwise" be substituted for the words "or other similar manner". This recommendation was adopted in Bill C-13 (p. 33, line 33). However, no reflection of the Commons Committee's other recommendation to the effect that the position of joint ventures be specifically addressed and clarified was evidenced in Bill C-13 other than the inclusion in lines 36-39 of the words "and includes a joint venture that is effected or to be effected by the creation of a corporation". The word "includes" suggests that not only corporate joint ventures are intended to be covered. These two somewhat contradictory and perverse amendments do not appear to be what the Commons Committee had in mind and certainly do not respond to your Committee's recommendation.

Your Committee does recognize that the simple expression "joint venture" may not be sufficiently clear and therefore urges for consideration of the following:

"'joint venture' means an agreement or arrangement between or among two or more persons for the production, supply or acquisition by them of a specified commodity or service, where

- (a) the agreement or arrangement relates to a single transaction or to a single series of related transactions, or
- (b) none of the persons could reasonably undertake, alone, the object of the agreement or arrangement either because of its size in relation to the physical, staff, financial or other resources of any such persons or because of the risk involved having regard to the magnitude of the risk of contingent payments that is involved in relation to the financial resources and other commitments, actual or contingent of any such person, and includes a joint venture that is effected or to be effected by the creation of a corporation."

Such a joint venture should be exempt from the conspiracy offence (s. 32 of the Act) and any merger provision.

As in the case of specialization agreements, the parties would be exposed to the monopoly provisions of the Act if they operated the joint venture against the public interest. They should also be permitted, at their option to obtain a binding advance ruling confirming that the joint venture qualified for the exempting definition.

V—INDUSTRIAL AND INTELLECTUAL PROPERTY (new s. 31.74)

Your Committee has little to add to the comments made in its Bill C-42 Report<sup>31</sup> dealing with these matters other than to note its continuing concern that these controversial provisions remain in Bill C-13, the only concession being the removal of the obnoxious provisions which would have permitted the Competition Board to revoke a patent or expunge a trademark, copyright or industrial design and to compel the licensing of trademarks. The provision allowing the Competition Board to compel the licensing of a patent, copyright or industrial design remains. The draftsmen also appear to have taken the opportunity to tighten application of the provision by inclusion of the words "whether conferred by statute or otherwise" in line 34.

In view of the fact that the Trademarks, Patent, Copyright, and Industrial Design Acts do not "expressly authorize" licensing of the rights created thereunder, which are by their very nature and design restrictive of competition, all licenses appear to be exposed to application of the proposed provision. It is submitted that such a fundamental change should not be quietly slipped in amongst amendments to competition legislation. If reconsideration of the scope of these rights is required, which your Committee doubts, it should be debated in the context of the current review of the Trademarks, Patent, Copyright, and Industrial Design Acts which your Committee understands is being carried out and, as a matter of observing proper principles of law reform, any change proposed in due course by way of amendment to that legislation.

VI—PRICE DISCRIMINATION (existing paragraph 34(1)(a)) and PRICE DIFFERENTIATION (new s. 31.77)

The present price discrimination provisions in the Act prohibit a seller from making a practice of granting any price advantage to one customer buying comparable goods in the same quantities as another customer unless those customers are not in competition with each other. The provision has been interpreted as prohibiting a supplier from favouring members of a cooperative buying group who simply centralized orders in order to take advantage of any volume discount or similar benefit available from the supplier.

The changes, of which there appear to be three, to section 34 proposed by Bill C-42 (and which remain unamended in Bill C-13) were characterized by the Department as "minor".<sup>32</sup> One, by the addition of the words

"between any of its customers and a person acting on behalf of persons one of whom at least is in competition with such customer" is intended apparently to allow even a loosely knit buying group, including, presumably, one where the "agent" himself is not responsible to the supplier for payment of the price, to qualify for price benefits if their combined purchases at least equal that of another customer of the supplier. It is to be noted that only one member of the buying group need be in competition with that other customer, apparently in respect only of a tiny share of the market, in order for the whole group to qualify for the advantage.

Another change is the addition of the words:—

"under substantially the same terms and conditions of delivery"

The purpose of this amendment is explained by the Department as follows:<sup>33</sup>

"... When comparing two sales, not only the same quantity and quality will have to be demonstrated, but also substantially the same terms and conditions of delivery. It is made to accommodate the representations which have been made by some sellers who have thought that the existing provisions did not permit the reduction of prices to those buyers who cooperated with the sellers to reduce the costs of delivery."

The third change involves addition of the following words:

"Between any of these customers who are in competition with each other for a share of the patronage of the same ultimate customers"

No explanation whatsoever for this change is offered by the Department in the Proposals Book, and your Committee suspects that it can hardly be passed off as "minor". The wording is obscure and this perhaps accounts for the fact that there has been little comment in the representations made to your Committee on this particular change other than complaints of confusion.

It would appear the Commons Committee had difficulties interpreting the wording of the revised section and your Committee considers that it may be of service to quote the explanation given in the Commons Committee by members of the Competition Bureau:—<sup>34</sup>

"Mr. Roy M. Davidson (Senior Deputy Director of Investigation and Research, Department of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): Mr. Chairman, there are two issues here... The reference to the same ultimate customers deals with a situation that you find, for example, in the grocery business, where a food manufacturer may be selling to Steinberg's, which is an integrated operation, and at the same time may be selling to a food wholesaler who is not integrated, the idea being that the food wholesaler is supplying retail stores and the retail stores are competing with Steinberg's retail stores for the patronage of the same ultimate customers.

This provision means that if the unintegrated wholesaler is prepared to buy the same quantities as Steinberg's and it is competing, in the language of the proposed section, for the same ultimate customers, it is entitled to the same price.

...

Mr. Clermont: Mr. Chairman I would like to know what Mr. Bertrand thinks about that.

Mr. Bertrand: (Translation) Mr. Davidson has very well expressed the department's views on this subject. However, I would like to repeat the explanation in French for the benefit of Mr. Clermont. When we speak of the ultimate consumer, we simply would like that, if the IGA group, wholesalers, buys in the same quantities as a competitor, whether it be Steinberg or Dominion, which are completely integrated operations all playing the role of wholesalers, the two could obtain exactly the same prices, under section 34(1)."

In its report, the Commons Committee's only recommendation with respect to section 34, which was not followed in Bill C-13, was to make the subject of the section a reviewable practice rather than a criminal prohibition.

Assuming that the explanation given by the Competition Bureau officials before the Commons Committee represents the intention, your Committee considers that the manner in which the intention has been expressed in the Bill is confusing to say the least. The wording suggests that traditional functional discounts for different levels of trade (based on the assumption that one level does not "compete" with another) offered by suppliers may be put in jeopardy and your Committee does not consider that such a change should be allowed to slip through as an unexplained, obscurely worded, "minor" amendment. The possible ramifications do not appear to have been appreciated and there should be an opportunity for discussion by those affected in full knowledge of the true purpose and intent.

In addition to the above amendments to section 34, Bill C-13 would introduce a new section 31.77 making "price differentiation" a practice reviewable by the Competition Board. This new provision would permit the Competition Board in certain circumstances to order a supplier to cease granting, for example, volume discounts otherwise permissible under paragraph 34(1)(a) unless the supplier could show that such discounts were "based on a reasonable assessment of the difference in the actual or anticipated cost of supplying customers in different quantities . . .".

This provision would be similar to that which applies in the United States under the Robinson-Patman Act, which was introduced, amongst other measures, during the Depression in the expectation that it would assist small business. As indicated above, our law in Canada under paragraph 34(1)(a) of the Act, did not go to the same lengths as the Robinson-Patman provision in that the supplier was not required to cost-justify the different prices.

Today, serious consideration is being given in the United States to repealing the Robinson-Patman Act. The U.S. Department of Justice in its report on the matter notes as follows:<sup>35</sup>

" . . . Unfortunately, Robinson-Patman, so just in principle, cannot be supported as a net benefit to American society because its real effects as an economic regulatory statute are on balance more costly than beneficial to society.

. . . .

The simple truth is that Robinson-Patman is a false promise: it provides little, long-run protection to small businessmen. It is just not possible to legislate equality in a free market system. The basic force in changing the structure of the American marketplace is the consumer. It is the consumer who decides the type of retail establishment with which he or she wishes to deal. The consumer makes the choice as to whether he or she wishes the personalized service and convenience of a small establishment, providing special goods with special know-how, or the lower prices, relatively less service, and greater inconvenience of a larger store . . . "

It is anomalous that Canada is considering introduction of legislation which, at the same moment, the United States is seriously considering abandoning. An important rationale for anti-trust laws must be lower cost to consumers. There is a lamentable absence of proof that such will in fact be the result of most of the Phase II amendments. In "Proposals for a New Competition Policy for Canada—Second Stage" the Department of Consumer and Corporate Affairs has contented itself with unsupported assertions that the present provisions of the Act relating to mergers and monopolies are "obviously inadequate". It is strange that in the matter of price differentiation, the one area covered by Phase II where there is some clear evidence of the effect on costs to the consumer, the Bill would move in the direction of increasing those costs.

Your Committee's recommendation is that the price differentiation provisions contained in proposed section 31.77 be deleted.

VII—MATTERS HELD OVER FROM PHASE I AMENDMENTS

Your Committee's concern with an effective right of appeal from decisions of the Competition Board and the status of regulated industries under the Act began with its examination of the Phase I amendments to the Act effected by Bill C-2 in the first session of the present Parliament. In its report, which appears as an Annex to the Senate Debates of December 10, 1975, your Committee noted in item No. 4 at pp. 1590-1593 that the then Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs had undertaken to consider the status of regulated industries in the Phase II amendments. Your Committee noted in item 7 at p. 1594 that it would be appropriate to consider the question of appeals following introduction of the Phase II amendments.

A.—Right of Appeal from decisions of the proposed Competition Board.

Your Committee recommended in its Bill C-42 Report<sup>35A</sup> a full right of appeal to the Federal Court of Appeal and in addition a right of appeal to the Governor in Council of the kind provided in subsection 64(1) of the National Transportation Act.<sup>35B</sup>

It is to be noted that the right of appeal to the Federal Court of Appeal was in part supported by recommendation 37 of the Commons Committee's report on Bill C-42.<sup>35C</sup>

The response to these recommendations in Bill C-13 has been to reject entirely the recommendation for any appeal to the courts.<sup>36</sup> Your Committee's additional recommendation of an appeal to the Governor in Council has been partly followed in proposed section 31.91 by giving the Governor in Council, on the recommendation of the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs, the right to annul divestiture orders of the Competition Board and orders refusing to allow specialization agreements. No right of Cabinet review whatsoever is provided in respect of the majority of decisions of the Board.

Your Committee considers that this very limited right of review is totally inadequate and it adheres to its earlier recommendation. The provision making exercise of this right of review, such as it is, dependent upon the fiat of someone who will be perceived by the public as the opposite party in the proceedings, is little short of a travesty of justice in a country where the rule of law has been a cherished institution.

B.—Regulated Conduct.

After pointing out the confusion to which industries, trades and professions already regulated by federal or provincial law would be subject if exposed to additional regulation in the form of prosecution or orders issued by the Competition Board under the Competition Act, and deploring the spectre of one government department acting as a watchdog over other departments, your Committee recommended, in its Bill C-42 Report that a statutory exemption should be provided, codifying and clarifying that which the Breweries case 1960 O.R. 601 and the Natural Products Marketing Board case 1957 S.C.R. 198 have already suggested.

The Bill C-13 response to this recommendation, consisting principally of the deletion of paragraph (c) of the definition "regulated conduct" in subsection 4.5(2) and the special status accorded to agricultural products marketing boards fall far short of your Committee's recommendations.

Your Committee considers that the statutory right presently granted to the Director of Investigation and Research (the proposed Competition Advocate) in section 27.1 of the Act to make representations before regulatory tribunals, together with the directions to such tribunals to exercise their powers in a manner least restrictive of competition contained in section 4.6 proposed by the Bill are more than an adequate safeguard against anti-competitive behaviour of regulated trades, industries and professions without subjecting them to the substantive provisions of the proposed Competition Act.

If a statutory right to appear before regulatory tribunals is to be given the Advocate, your Committee considers that there is much to be said for so providing only in the particular statute or regulations governing such tribunal. In this way only will the role of the Advocate be attuned to the context of the matters which the particular tribunal is charged to oversee.

Given that the purpose of most regulatory tribunals is to supervise because of a lack of competition, it seems presumptuous to generalize through a blanket provision, as is proposed by Bill C-13, on the degree of competition which must be observed. Policy and implementing legislation in this regard should be worked out in the context of the particular government department concerned.

It is further recommended that the definition "regulated conduct" in proposed subsection 4.5(2) be replaced by the following:—

"regulated conduct" means any conduct

- (a) of a person the prices, fees or rates charged by whom are subject to approval or disapproval by, or
  - (b) that is subject to approval or disapproval by a regulating agency that
  - (c) is not appointed or elected by the persons, or by classes or representatives of the persons, whose conduct is subject to be regulated by such agency, or
  - (d) is subject to supervision by a supervising agency that is not appointed or elected by the persons, or by classes or representatives of the persons, whose conduct is subject to be regulated by such regulating agency,
- and includes the conduct of a regulating agency acting within a power referred to in the definition "regulating agency" or "supervising agency", whichever is applicable;"

C.—Franchises

In its report on the Phase I amendments to the Act your Committee noted its concern that legitimate franchise arrangements might be seriously affected by the provisions, which of course have since become law, giving the Board jurisdiction to make orders in relation to exclusive dealing, market restrictions and tied selling practices.

Your Committee is gratified to note that this particular difficulty appears to have been satisfactorily addressed by the amendment to subparagraph 31.4(5)(c)(i) of the Act proposed by Clause 26 of Bill C-13.

VIII—OTHER MATTERS

There are a number of other matters not dealt with in the foregoing in respect of which your Committee is content to refer to the comments in its earlier report. In particular, your Committee refers to systematic delivered pricing, interlocking management and interim injunctions.

Your Committee notes with satisfaction that its recommendations dealing with preliminary applications, the question of solicitor client privilege in section 10.1 and removal of the substitute action provisions from the class action section (although other concerns noted with respect to this section remain), have been reflected in the changes from Bill C-42 effected in Bill C-13.

Respectfully submitted,

SALTER A. HAYDEN,
Chairman.

SCHEDULE

SPECIFIC COMMENTS ON PROPOSED MERGERS,
MONOPOLIZATION AND JOINT MONOPOLIZATION
PROVISIONS*A.—Mergers (new s. 31.71)*

This section would make a vast number of mergers in Canada subject to review. While the Advocate would have the burden of proving that the merger should be prohibited or otherwise interfered with by the Board in accordance with the provisions, in many circumstances the onus would shift to the parties to prove that the merger was acceptable within the criteria laid down. The result is to create a presumption that most mergers are bad while in the view of many most mergers are beneficial.

Your Committee made recommendations under the following sub-headings:

1. Advance Rulings.

It was recommended that the parties to a merger should be able to secure an advance ruling as to whether the proposed merger was permissible. While Bill C-13 has on one hand made provision in this direction by authorizing the Competition Policy Advocate to issue a certificate in the nature of an advance ruling, the effect of the provision is, in your Committee's opinion, virtually nullified on the other hand by the insertion of a provision which would allow the Advocate to proceed against the merger notwithstanding his issue of a certificate if directed by the Minister or on the application of six persons under section 7 of the Act. This is a particularly good example of the grudging response to representations which mark Bill C-13.

While it would have been reasonable to suppose that an advance ruling could be repudiated where there had been fraudulent misrepresentation in the disclosure of facts, the actual provision contained in paragraph 20(a) would permit such repudiation if the Board were satisfied that there had been a failure to disclose "material facts". The possibility of respectable differences of opinion as to what constitutes a "material fact" which could arise in almost any case is another reason why your Committee considers that the advance ruling provisions as proposed by the Bill would be unworkable.

2. Interplay with Foreign Investment Review Act.

Your Committee commented on the anomaly of a merger approved by the Governor in Council under the Foreign Investment Review Act being susceptible of attack under the Competition Act. This concern has been addressed in subsections 31.71(9)-(15) by the provision of an elaborate system of notices and certificates back and forth between the Competition Policy Advocate and the Foreign Investment Review Agency. However, your Committee notes that the effect of subsection (15) is to give permanent immunization from the application of the merger provisions of the Act to the parties to a merger subject to FIRA, while, as noted above, there is a broad range of opportunities for repudiating an advance ruling certificate which the Advocate may give with respect to domestic mergers. It is curious that such preferred treatment is reserved to foreign acquirers.

3. Substantive provisions dealing with mergers.

Your Committee at page 7 of its earlier report noted its concern, amongst others, that the jurisdictional threshold of intervention by the Competition Board of "20% of a market" was too low and the test of "substantially lessening competition" was too vague. No changes have been effected in Bill C-13.

Your Committee was also concerned that the "efficiency by way of savings of resources for the Canadian economy" justification in subsection (5) was too rigorous. The only reaction to this concern evidenced by Bill C-13 is the substitution of the expression "clear probability" in line 8 (Bill C-13 p. 36) for the expression "high probability" in line 24 (Bill C-42, p. 31).

If the result of a merger makes the combined firms more competitive on world markets with the result that export sales increase, it may be that a heavier demand for "resources" will result. Is this what the policy of competition legislation is intended to prevent?

B.—Monopolization (new s. 31.72)

Your Committee recommended at page 8 of its Bill C-42 Report that the section should be amended so as to define monopolization in terms of abuse of dominant power as was recommended in the Skeoch-McDonald Report. Your Committee also noted that the defence based on "solely" reflecting superior economic performance would impose an unrealistically difficult burden. Finally, your Committee objected to the "catchall" provision contained in the proposed subparagraph 31.72(2)(a)(b).

The Bill C-13 changes to this section have produced some re-arrangement of wording and the breadth of the catchall provision has been somewhat restricted.

The changes to the "defence" provision, subsection (5) are not of substance, including in your Committee's opinion, substitution of the word "clearly" in line 13 (p. 44) for the word "solely". "Efficiency" as in the case of mergers, remains the basis of the defence (although without the "saving of resources for the Canadian economy" provision) along with "superior economic performance".

C.—Joint Monopolization (new s. 31.73)

Your Committee recommended the complete deletion of this section.

The changes made by Bill C-13 consist of re-arrangement, restricting the catchall provision (now subparagraph 31.73(1)(a)(v)) in an attempt to make its construction iusdem generis with the preceding subparagraphs and substitution of "clearly" for "solely" in the defence subsection. Some improvement results from new subsection (2) which provides that the section only applies where the parties account for more than 50% of the relevant market.

Many complaints were directed against subsection (3) in Bill C-42 which provided that the impugned parallel policies might be "based on nothing more than a mutual recognition of . . . inter-dependence". The subsection has been re-numbered as subsection (6) and, while those particular words have been removed, the effect really remains the same because it continues to provide that no agreement or arrangement amongst oligopolists ("parties to a joint monopoly", in the language preferred by the draftsmen of the Bill) need be proved in order for the Board to make an order against them.

As a result of re-arrangement of the proposed section, the provision (paragraph 31.73(1)(e) in Bill C-42, 31.73(1)(b) in Bill C-13) making any conduct which would be subject to the Phase II reviewable practices jurisdiction of the Board grounds for invoking the remedies under the joint monopolization provisions, would no longer even be dependent on the existence of "parallel policies" or "matching conduct".

FOOTNOTES

- <sup>1</sup> Interim Report of the Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce on the subject matter of Bill C-42, printed as an Appendix to Senate Debates, 2nd Session, 30th Parliament, July 13, 1977.
- <sup>2</sup> Dynamic Change and Accountability in a Canadian Market Economy, March 1976, Supply and Services Canada. Sometimes referred to as "the Skeoch-McDonald Report" or "the Dynamic Change Report".
- <sup>3</sup> Proposals for a New Competition Policy for Canada—First Stage, November 1973, Consumer and Corporate Affairs.
Proposals for a New Competition Policy for Canada—Second Stage, March 1977, Consumer and Corporate Affairs Canada.
- <sup>4</sup> Proceedings of the Standing Commons Committee on Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs, June 1-June 30, 1977.
- <sup>5</sup> See footnote 1, supra, p. 3.
- <sup>6</sup> See footnote 1, supra, p. 5.
- <sup>6A</sup> Such as the removal of the "substitute action" provision from the Class Action section.
- <sup>7</sup> Report of the Royal Commission on Corporate Concentration, 1978, Supply and Services Canada.
- <sup>8</sup> Ibid., pp. 166-7.
- <sup>8A</sup> See footnote 13, infra, chap. 10, pp. 235-244: "Price Discrimination, Price Differentiation, Delivered Pricing and Specialization Agreements under Bill C-13", by F. H. Britton.
- <sup>9</sup> See Senate Committee Proceedings, Issue No. 33, April 12, 1978.
- <sup>10</sup> See Commons Committee Proceedings, Issue No. 49, June 1, 1977, p. 40.
- <sup>11</sup> See footnote 9, supra, pp. 35-7.
- <sup>12</sup> See footnote 9, supra, pp. 37-38.
- <sup>12A</sup> The Institute describes itself as "a national organization whose independence and autonomy are ensured by the revenues of an endowment fund which is supported by the federal and provincial governments and by the private sector".
- <sup>13</sup> Competition Policy in Canada: Stage II, Bill C-13, ed. by J. W. Rowley and W. T. Stanbury. Dalhousie University Press.
- <sup>14</sup> Ibid., chap. 3, p. 43.
- <sup>15</sup> See footnote 3.
- <sup>16</sup> Senate Committee Proceedings, Issue No. 29, March 15, 1978, p. 7.
- <sup>17</sup> Canadian Competition Policy in Transition, The Conference Board in Canada, November 16, 1977, Bonaventure Hotel, Montreal. "Competition Policy: A Provincial Perspective", remarks by the Hon. W. Darcy McKeoch, Treasurer of Ontario.
- <sup>18</sup> Ibid., p. 27.
- <sup>18A</sup> Ibid., p. 28.
- <sup>18B</sup> Ibid., p. 29.
- <sup>19</sup> Associate Professor, Faculty of Commercial and Business Administration, University of British Columbia. Co-Editor of Competition Policy in Canada: Stage II, Bill C-13, published after his appearance before your Committee and referred to earlier in this Report.
- <sup>20</sup> 1960 Ontario Reports 601.
- <sup>21</sup> 1960 32 Western Reports (newseries) 577.
- <sup>22</sup> See Senate Committee Proceedings, Issue No. 32, April 5, 1978, p. 34.
- <sup>23</sup> Ibid., p. 51.
- <sup>24</sup> See Commons Committee Proceedings, Issue No. 67, June 28, 1977, p. 38.
- <sup>25</sup> Commons Committee Proceedings, Issue No. 64A, pp. 2 and 25.
- <sup>26</sup> See Globe and Mail, May 27, 1978.
- <sup>27</sup> The new name of which proposed by Bill C-13 would be "the Competition Board".
- <sup>28</sup> Economic Council of Canada, Interim Report on Competition Policy, July 1969, The Queen's Printer, at p. 130.
- <sup>29</sup> See your Committee's comments on this subject at p. 8 of its Bill C-42 Report.
- <sup>29A</sup> "32.(1) Every one who conspires, combines, agrees or arranges with another person
(a) to limit unduly the facilities for transporting, producing, manufacturing, supplying, storing or dealing in any product, is guilty of an indictable offence and is liable to imprisonment for five years or a fine of one million dollars or both."
...
- <sup>29B</sup> Ten years if approval is conditioned upon a gradual reduction of customs duties.
- <sup>30</sup> See Commons Committee Proceedings, Issue No. 70, paragraphs 184 to 186.
- <sup>31</sup> at p. 10.
- <sup>32</sup> Proposals for a New Competition Policy in Canada, Stage II, p. 62.
- <sup>33</sup> Ibid., p. 63.
- <sup>34</sup> Commons Committee Proceedings, Issue No. 50, pp. 117-8.
- <sup>35</sup> Report on the Robinson-Patman Act, United States Department of Justice, 1977.
- <sup>35A</sup> See footnote 1, supra, p. 7.
- <sup>35B</sup> —"64.(1) The Governor in Council may at any time, in his discretion, either upon petition of any party, person or company interested, or of his own motion, and without any petition or application, vary or rescind any order, decision, rule or regulation of the Commission, whether such order or decision is made inter partes or otherwise, and whether such regulation is general or limited in its scope and application; and any order that the Governor in Council may make with respect thereto is binding upon the Commission and upon all parties."
- <sup>35C</sup> See footnote 4, supra, paragraph 102, at p. 22.
- <sup>36</sup> Other than the "section 28 review", provided by the Federal Court Act and on the inadequacy of which, in the present context, your Committee has commented in its report on Phase I.

APPENDIX

SUBMISSIONS RECEIVED ON BILL C-13

Name	Date of Appearance 1978
Canadian Petroleum Association	February 23	The Canadian Chamber of Commerce	March 1
Independent Petroleum Association of Canada	February 23	The Canadian Manufacturers' Association	March 8
		The Canadian Federation of Agriculture	March 8
		Canadian Construction Association	March 15
		Professor W. T. Stanbury	April 5
		Professor L. A. Skeoch and Mr. B. C. McDonald	April 12
		The Canadian Bar Association

THE SENATE

Friday, June 30, 1978

The Senate met at 11 a.m., the Speaker in the Chair.
Prayers.

INCOME TAX ACT AND EXCISE TAX ACT

BILL TO AMEND—FIRST READING

The Hon. the Speaker informed the Senate that a message had been received from the House of Commons with Bill C-59, to amend the Income Tax Act and the Excise Tax Act in matters relating to the ownership and operation of small businesses.

Bill read first time.

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this bill be read the second time?

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, with leave of the Senate and notwithstanding rule 44(1)(f), I move that this bill be placed on the Orders of the Day for second reading later this day.

Motion agreed to.

DOCUMENTS TABLED

Senator Perrault tabled:

Report of the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce under the Corporations and Labour Unions Returns Act (Part II Labour Unions) for the fiscal periods ended in 1976, pursuant to section 18(1) of the said Act, Chapter C-31, R.S.C., 1970.

Report of Loto Canada, including its accounts and financial statements certified by the Auditor General, for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1978, pursuant to sections 75(3) and 77(3) of the Financial Administration Act, Chapter F-10, R.S.C., 1970.

Report of the Standards Council of Canada for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1978, including its financial statements certified by the Auditor General, pursuant to section 20 of the Standards Council of Canada Act, Chapter 41 (1st Supplement), R.S.C., 1970.

Capital Budget of the National Battlefields Commission for the fiscal year ending March 31, 1979, pursuant to section 70(2) of the Financial Administration Act, Chapter F-10, R.S.C., 1970, together with copy of Order in Council P.C. 1978-2007, dated June 22, 1978, approving same.

Copies of correspondence between the Prime Minister of Canada and the Premier of Nova Scotia concerning the publicity arrangements for the respective contribution towards shared-cost programs and certain joint activities in Nova Scotia.

Reports of the Atlantic Pilotage Authority, the Laurentian Pilotage Authority, the Great Lakes Pilotage Authority, Ltd., and the Pacific Pilotage Authority, including accounts and financial statements certified by the Auditor General, for the year ended December 31, 1977, pursuant to section 28 of the Pilotage Act, Chapter 52, Statutes of Canada, 1970-71-72.

Report of the Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1978, pursuant to section 31 of the Broadcasting Act, Chapter B-11, R.S.C., 1970.

REGULATIONS AND OTHER STATUTORY INSTRUMENTS

FIFTH REPORT OF STANDING JOINT COMMITTEE TABLED AND PRINTED AS APPENDIX

Senator Riley: Honourable senators, I have the honour to table the fifth report of the Joint Committee of the Senate and House of Commons on Regulations and other Statutory Instruments. I ask that the report be printed as an appendix to the Debates of the Senate and to the Minutes of the Proceedings of the Senate of this day and form part of the permanent records of this house.

The Hon. the Speaker: Is it agreed, honourable senators?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

[For text of report see appendix, p. 1030.]

HUMAN RIGHTS

NOMINATION OF HELSINKI MONITORING GROUPS IN U.S.S.R. FOR 1978 NOBEL PEACE PRIZE

Senator Stanbury, with leave of the Senate and notwithstanding rule 45(1)(h), moved:

That the Senate of Canada join with those parliamentarians in the United Kingdom, Norway and Belgium in nominating the Helsinki monitoring groups in the U.S.S.R. for the 1978 Nobel Peace Prize.

He said: Honourable senators are aware that in the Helsinki Final Act of 1975 the Soviet Union undertook certain human rights obligations. During the period since that time there have been five monitoring groups in the U.S.S.R. which have been really putting their own freedom on the line and have been in many respects harassed, sometimes imprisoned and sometimes exiled for their efforts.

● (1110)

I believe that the members in the other place who passed this resolution unanimously yesterday, and we in the Senate, wish to record the importance which we place on human rights in the international community. Freedom of movement of people and ideas is of great importance to international peace. Therefore the suggestion in this motion is that we recognize the contribution made by these people in Russia who have undergone a great deal of hardship in pursuing an international undertaking to ensure that their country observes that international undertaking. That is why the motion is that those groups be recognized by being awarded the 1978 Nobel Peace Prize.

Senator Frith: May I ask the honourable senator a question? What is the nomination procedure and how does this motion fit into that nomination procedure?

Senator Stanbury: I am not sure, honourable senators, that I can properly answer that question. My understanding is that the nominations must go forward, then a committee makes the decision. The time to make the nominations is now, so my assumption is that if we pass this motion and support the action which has unanimously been taken in the other place, we will make it an important resolution and recommendation of the entire Parliament of Canada.

Senator Grosart: Could I ask if the resolution passed in the other place was identical to the one moved here?

Senator Stanbury: I understand it was identical.

Motion agreed to.

THE CONSTITUTION

SPECIAL SENATE COMMITTEE—CHANGE IN MEMBERSHIP

Senator Petten, with leave of the Senate and notwithstanding rule 45(1)(i), moved:

That the names of the Honourable Senators Bosa, Godfrey, Stanbury and Rizzuto be added to the list of senators serving on the Special Committee of the Senate on the subject matter of the Bill C-60 Constitutional Amendment Act, 1978; and

That the name of the Honourable Senator Haidasz be removed from the list of senators serving on the said special committee.

Senator Grosart: Could I ask the mover of the motion if under our rules there is any limit to the number of senators who may serve on that committee?

Senator Petten: My understanding, honourable senators, is no, that we can add senators to it. I would hope that we would not add 40, 50 or 60, but would keep the membership within reason.

Senator Grosart: It would then become a Committee of the Whole.

Senator Perrault: It may have to be treated in that manner.

[Senator Stanbury.]

Senator Grosart: So there would be no restriction on the number of senators from any group?

Senator Petten: No. From time to time and for a variety of reasons a senator may find it impossible to attend a meeting, and he will want to make way for one of his colleagues. In view of the fact that your leader's motion with respect to membership changes during the summer adjournment was adopted, we now have the mechanics to make these changes. So there is no problem.

Motion agreed to.

TRANSPORT

REPORT OF NEWFOUNDLAND TRANSPORT COMMISSION— QUESTION ANSWERED

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, on June 27 Senator Marshall asked the following question with respect to the Sullivan Commission on transportation in Newfoundland:

In view of the fact that this matter is so important to the future economy of Newfoundland, and particularly because certain officials of the CNR have indicated an attitude to abandon freight and passenger rail service in Newfoundland over a period of time, could the deputy leader obtain from the Minister of Transport any information as to the deadline for the submission of this report to Parliament?

The answer to the question is:

The Report of the Commission of Inquiry into Newfoundland Transportation is now being translated into French and being made ready for the printer. Publication of the report is expected in the last week of July.

FISHERIES

PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND—SCALLOP FISHING—QUESTION ANSWERED

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, on June 27 a question was asked by Senator Bonnell with respect to whether the scallop fishing season will be open in the waters off Prince Edward Island by July 1.

The reply is as follows:

The closed season for scallop fishing in Lobster Fishing District 7B1 of the Northumberland Strait has been amended to July 16 to September 15, both days inclusive. The original intention had been to close the season for July and August.

For the remainder of the scallop management area, the closed season will be from July 1 to August 31 in Lobster Fishing District 8. Fishermen based in Lobster District 8 will not, however, be permitted to fish in District 7B1 from July 1 to July 15, and fishermen in Lobster District 7B1 will not be permitted to fish in District 8 from September 1 to 15.

The management plan for the Northumberland Strait scallop fishery was instituted in order to properly manage an over-exploited resource. A closed season is necessary to prevent damage to lobsters during the moulting period when they are soft-shelled and more vulnerable to injury. This is also the period when the scallops are spawning and consequently are not of the highest quality. The moulting and spawning season may vary somewhat from year to year depending on water temperatures.

The amendment, for this year only, was requested by a large number of area fishermen.

NORTHWEST TERRITORIES

INSTALLATION OF TELEVISION RELAY EQUIPMENT—QUESTION ANSWERED

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, on June 22 a question was asked by Senator Adams regarding Telesat relay facilities at two places in the Northwest Territories, namely, Coral Harbour and Chesterfield Inlet.

A reply has been received dated June 29, 1978, which reads as follows:

The communities both have Telesat earth stations, which are used to provide telephone service. Neither of the communities have sufficient population to permit CBC service under the Accelerated Coverage Program (ACP). However, it is understood that these communities are to receive TV service under a program of the Government of the Northwest Territories, with Coral Harbour to be served first. It is suggested that schedules and other specific information on this program be requested from the Territorial Government.

CANADIAN BROADCASTING CORPORATION

TWENTY-FIFTH ANNIVERSARY REPORT—QUESTION ANSWERED

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, on May 23 a question was asked by Senator Riley regarding the production and cost of the CBC's twenty-fifth anniversary report. I apologize for the long delay in providing this answer for Senator Riley.

● (1120)

I am informed by the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation as follows:

The CBC published this souvenir album to celebrate the twenty-fifth anniversary of CBC television. Because of the nature and size of the book, it was decided to publish it separately in English and French.

The total cost for the album, including research, writing, design, photography layout, colour separation, type-setting and printing, was $75,000 for 43,000 copies. Three-fifths of this amount was borne by companies which were closely associated with the development of television in Canada.

[Translation]

It is an error if a French copy of this album was sent to Senator Riley. An English copy has now been sent to him.

[English]

SALARIES OF CBC DIRECTORS AND EMPLOYEES—QUESTION

Senator Norrie: Honourable senators, I would like to ask a question of the Leader of the Government.

How is it that the CBC will provide information such as he has just given but not disclose the salaries of directors and employees? What is the difference?

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, it is not for me to explain the policy decisions of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation. The CBC appears to be more forthcoming with certain information than with other.

Senator Norrie: Where do they draw the line? Could you find that out?

Senator Perrault: I think that that is an inquiry which can be directed to the President of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation by any honourable senator who is interested. The policy with respect to the divulgence, or otherwise, of salary information concerning CBC employees or performers is one which has been explained in the Senate on a number of occasions, although obviously not to the satisfaction of certain senators. Nevertheless, that policy position has been set forth here on more than one occasion.

URBAN AFFAIRS

CANADIAN HOME INSULATION PROGRAM—QUESTION ON THE ORDER PAPER ANSWERED

Question No. 15—By Senator Marshall:

1. By provinces, how many applications have been received under the Canadian Home Insulation Program since its inception on September 1, 1977?

2. By provinces, how many were approved and how many were turned down?

3. What are the locations of new offices established to handle applications for C.H.I.P. and on what basis were the offices established?

Reply by the Minister of State for Urban Affairs:

I am advised as follows by Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation:

1 and 2. Applications under the Canadian Home Insulation Program received and approved for the period September 1, 1977 to May 26, 1978 are shown in the table following:

	Received	Approved
Newfoundland	392	185
New Brunswick	2,381	1,683
Québec	2,820	1,439
Ontario	18,736	14,658
Manitoba	1,814	1,339
Saskatchewan	1,080	702
Alberta	845	381
British Columbia	3,799	3,056
Yukon Territory	3	2
Northwest Territories	7	4
CANADA	31,877	23,449

CMHC does not keep a record of the number of applications rejected.

3. Applications for CHIP are now handled in the following Regional Offices of CMHC: St. John's, Fredericton, Toronto, Winnipeg, Regina, Edmonton, Vancouver, and the CHIP Office in Montreal. CMHC Regional Offices were chosen since they have facilities available and are well located geographically.

MARITIME CODE BILL

SECOND READING

On the Order:

Resuming the debate on the motion of the Honourable Senator McIlraith, P.C., seconded by the Honourable Senator Benidickson, P.C., for the second reading of the Bill C-54, intituled: "An Act to provide a maritime code for Canada and to amend the Canada Shipping Act and other Acts in consequence thereof".—(Honourable Senator Grosart).

Senator Grosart: Honourable senators, I believe that Senator Bourget, who took a distinguished and prominent part in the discussions on this bill when it was before us in the form of Bill C-41, has some comments to make on it. That being so, I would be very glad to yield to him at this time.

[Translation]

Hon. Maurice Bourget: Honourable senators, I want to thank Senator Grosart for giving me the opportunity to say a few words on this bill. With other senators, I was a member of this important committee.

Honourable senators will recall that the Senate Committee on Transport and Communications devoted 23 meetings, that is a total of 51 hours, to the study of this bill. I would also like to add that the committee even sat during last year's summer recess in order to submit its report before the end of the last session and, if my memory serves me well, I think this report was tabled last October 14.

The considerable work accomplished by this committee should also be recalled because it did present more than 80 amendments in the course of its 23 sittings. I want to point out that most of the amendments made to the bill were important amendments, which demonstrates once more that the Senate did an excellent job. Moreover, if we read the official report of the other place, when considering this bill, we will be able to see that all the amendments to this bill were unanimously passed by the other place. Therefore I would like to take the opportunity to emphasize once again the excellent job which was done by the Senate and its various committees.

Unfortunately, quite often this job remains unnoticed. This is why the Senate is unduly criticized on some occasions. I think that we can tell the Canadian people that we have every reason to be proud to be members of this chamber. Moreover, as was mentioned by the Honourable Senator Robichaud about the opening of an experimental farm in New Brunswick, we do an honest, sensible and intelligent job. It is unfortunate that newspapers do not report the kind of work we do. However, I think that we can have the satisfaction of a job well done.

[Senator Marshall.]

I do not intend to consider this legislation in detail. And as I said earlier, many long hours were devoted by the Senate and its committee to the consideration of this bill. Honourable senators have read the report which was submitted last October, so it is not necessary to review all the clauses in this bill.

This legislation on the Maritime Code includes five books, as we are aware. The bill we are dealing with represents the final stage of books I and II. I understand that books III, IV and V will be issued in the next session. Once again, I am sure the Senate will give this legislation the interest it deserves.

In conclusion, I would like to take this opportunity to thank the persons who, in the course of this study, have contributed their generous and intelligent cooperation. I should like to mention, among others, Mr. F. O. Gerity, Q.C., member of the Special Committee on Substantive Shipping of the Canadian Bar Association; Mr. Arthur J. Stone, Q.C., President of the same committee; Mr. Jean Brisset, a Montreal lawyer who was also a member of this committee; Mr. J. J. Mahoney, Q.C., special adviser to the Minister of Transport on the Maritime Code; also the private sector's lawyers, namely Mr. Raynold Langlois, counsel for the Association des propriétaires de navires du Saint-Laurent Inc.; Mr. Gérald P. Barry, counsel to the Dominion Marine Association. I also want to mention the generous contribution of Mr. du Plessis, our Law Clerk and Parliamentary Counsel, as well as the hard-working clerk of the committee, Mrs. Aline Pritchard.

This concludes, honourable senators, the brief remarks I wanted to make in the circumstances. As I was saying a few moments ago, in view of the fact that the House of Commons has passed the bill, as amended, in five or ten minutes, I hope we will have unanimous agreement on it.

Senator Denis: Hear, hear.

• (1130)

[English]

Hon. Allister Grosart: Honourable senators, there is not much that can be added to what has already been said on this important bill by its sponsor and Senator Bourget. I am sure we would all hesitate to pass such a measure without extensive discussion in this place were it not for the special circumstances under which it comes to us. I am glad Senator Bourget has pointed out that it is one of those bills—and far from being the only one—in which the Senate has made major changes in the public interest.

We are often concerned here with these last-minute demands that we pass legislation, but this is one case in which we need have no concern. My recollection is, as confirmed by Senator Bourget, that the original discussion of the bill in the other place took 25 minutes, but when it came to the Senate we debated it for some 23 hours, I believe.

Senator Bourget: Fifty-one hours.

Senator Grosart: That resulted in 80 amendments being made by the Senate. As a consequence, when the bill was presented in the Commons yesterday for second reading it went through in a flash. I doubt if there was ever an occasion when a bill had such fast passage in the House of Commons, although, of course, other bills also went through the House of Commons speedily yesterday.

Honourable senators, I think it is worth commenting on the speedy passage of this bill. You will be interested to know just how expeditiously the House of Commons can pass legislation when it has been thoroughly examined by the Senate.

Hon. Senators: Hear, hear.

Senator Grosart: I should like to refer to page 6869 of House of Commons Debates of yesterday, where it is indicated that the Minister of Transport moved:

—that Bill C-54, to provide a maritime code for Canada and to amend the Canada Shipping Act and other acts in consequence thereof, be read the second time and referred to the Standing Committee on Transport and Communications.

Mr. Pinard, Parliamentary Secretary to the Deputy Prime Minister, then said:

Mr. Speaker, since I believe there is agreement to deal very quickly with this bill at all stages today, I would suggest we amend the motion in order that we may deal with the bill in the committee of the whole, report it back to the House, and give it third reading today.

And that is exactly what happened. When you turn the page in Hansard you find that the bill, as amended by the Senate—that is, incorporating the Senate amendments—was, as someone said, “passed before he could straighten his tie.” That, I think, is certainly a tribute to the Senate, and, as I said earlier, it gives me no cause to voice any concern I might have had about passing this important bill as expeditiously as we have been asked to do today.

It is an important bill, because it makes substantial changes, changes of great concern to those in Canada who are interested in the shipping business and particularly in the peripheral aspects of that business. I have no further comment to make. I am quite sure it would make no sense to suggest that the bill be referred again to a committee of the Senate, because it has already received thorough examination in committee. Therefore, on behalf of my colleagues on this side of the chamber, I agree to the motion for second reading.

Motion agreed to and bill read second time.

THIRD READING

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this bill be read the third time?

Senator Bourget: Honourable senators, with leave of the Senate and notwithstanding rule 45(1)(b), I move that the bill be read the third time now.

Motion agreed to and bill read third time and passed.

INCOME TAX ACT EXCISE TAX ACT

BILL TO AMEND—SECOND READING

Hon. Eric Cook moved the second reading of Bill C-59, to amend the Income Tax Act and the Excise Tax Act in matters relating to the ownership and operation of small businesses.

He said: Honourable senators, before attempting to explain in general terms the provisions of Bill C-59, I should first say that the bill is a relieving measure. It will be recalled that the subject matter of the bill was referred to the Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce on June 13 last. The committee studied the provisions of the bill and reported to the Senate on June 26.

The last paragraph of your committee's report reads as follows:

In view of the benefits extended by the Bill to small businessmen, your Committee recommends the Bill receive favourable consideration.

As I have said, Bill C-59 is a relieving measure. First, it permits allowable capital losses to be deducted from any income for tax purposes when the capital losses are incurred by a taxpayer who sells shares in a controlled private Canadian corporation to a person who is at arm's length to the seller. At the present time such losses may be used to reduce the amount of any capital gains which a taxpayer may have made. Henceforth these losses may be offset against any type of income in the hands of the taxpayer.

The bill also confirms that if a taxpayer owns shares of a bankrupt company, he may claim as a capital loss the amount of the adjusted cost base of these shares in the year when the company becomes bankrupt.

Another relieving measure permits a taxpayer to defer up to $200,000 of capital gains which may be realized upon the transfer of shares of the capital stock of Canadian-controlled private corporations between generations of a family.

• (1140)

Canadian-controlled private corporations are those whose properties consist substantially of (a) assets used in manufacturing, processing, mining, logging, farming, fishing, construction, wholesaling, retailing, and any other business that may be prescribed, or (b) shares and debts of another small business corporation.

The $200,000 is a lifetime maximum, and the deferral will apply whether the shares be transferred during the taxpayer's lifetime or at his death.

The bill also extends, from six to ten years, the period over which a liability for capital gains tax arising from death may be discharged by paying equal instalments.

The provisions regarding the excise tax are as follows: Every person required by Parts III, IV or V of the Excise Tax Act to pay taxes is obliged to file monthly returns showing taxable sales for the previous month. Furthermore, persons granted licences by Parts III, IV or V of the act must, if no taxable sales have been made in the preceding month, make a return each month so indicating.

Clause 10 of the bill proposes amendments to authorize persons to make returns in respect of accounting periods of less than one month and to allow persons whose sales are seasonal, and whose tax for the last preceding calendar year did not exceed $2,400, to make returns in respect of one to six months.

Honourable senators, I commend the bill to your favourable consideration.

Hon. Allister Grosart: Honourable senators, I apologize for rising again, and for having risen so often in these last few days to speak to bills for the opposition. I am sure you are aware that on this side our practice is to assign bills to various senators. As you are also aware, there are senators on this side who make outstanding speeches on important bills.

It seems, however, that in this case the bills that have been assigned to me are all coming to us together as the summer adjournment approaches. It may be coincidental, but probably it is not, that many of these bills are generally regarded as non-controversial, which is perhaps another way of saying it does not matter very much what anybody from the opposition side says about them. In any case, those are the bills I seem to get, and that is the best explanation I can give for having been on my feet so often in these closing hours.

This is not an unimportant bill, but it is fair to say it is non-controversial. Its subject matter has been examined by the Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce, and that committee presented a report a few days ago recommending the bill on the ground that it is highly beneficial to small business concerns in Canada. For that reason I have no hesitation in recommending that we pass it. In my view it is not necessary that it be referred to committee, for the simple reason that its subject matter has already been examined by our committee, and we have a favourable report before us.

As has already been pointed out, it is part of government policy, in the general areas of income tax and excise tax, to give preferential treatment as an incentive to small business. This bill offers additional incentives to small businesses to make profits and to re-invest those profits in the general interest of business in Canada and, particularly, their employees. I am told that some 60 per cent of all employment in Canada is provided by corporations which would come under the special small business provisions of these statutes.

I think we are all aware that small business, taken in the aggregate, is, in many ways, the most important part of merchandising in Canada.

Small business in Canada already has substantial tax concessions. It has been said, and I think with justification, that Canada may well have the most generous provisions and incentives respecting small business of any comparable country in the world. I would not be inclined to dispute that in view of the very special concessions made to small business in the general income tax provision by which, as honourable senators are aware, the income tax payable by small businesses runs from about 20 to 25 per cent, depending on the circumstances, compared to much higher rates running from 40 to 46 or 47 per cent for larger businesses.

There is the recent dividend credit which, I would think, increases the tax differential between a large corporation and a small corporation by perhaps another 10 per cent.

Then, of course, there is the additional advantage which the Income Tax Act now gives to persons in higher income tax brackets who may invest in small businesses and leave both the income and the capital gains in that business, thus deferring, on very preferential terms, the payment of tax on that gain or income.

As has been said so well by Senator Cook, this bill adds two special concessions under the Income Tax Act and two concessions under the Excise Tax Act. It is not necessary for me to go into them in any further detail.

The so-called $200,000 rollover has been widely welcomed by small business and by economists generally. I heard no objection voiced to it at the committee hearing or in the press—particularly the financial press. Therefore, I think we can compliment the government on an important forward-looking step in assisting small business.

Another amendment deals with capital losses. So far as I know, this is the first piece of legislation we have had which recognizes that there are capital gains and also capital losses. It is my own view, but I think it is a view which is fairly widely held, that one of the greatest mistakes made in the tax field in Canada in recent years was the imposition of the capital gains tax. In many cases it has operated to the disadvantage of business, of shareholders and, indeed, of some employees at times. We now have in this field a recognition that there may be an offsetting on capital losses against capital gains under certain circumstances in respect of certain qualifying firms.

• (1150)

There are still some outstanding problems, as I read the bill and the comments made on it. There does not seem to be a very clear definition of a small business firm. Perhaps this will come in the regulations. As a matter of fact, some regulations were placed before the committee—a very forward step, in my view, in the presentation of government legislation. As the bill stands, there may be a question as to whether some of the benefits are available to businesses in what is generally called the service industry, and also, on the other side, a question whether the definition of "beneficiaries," particularly on the capital losses aspect, will be interpreted by the courts as going beyond what would appear to be the intent. These are matters that have been discussed.

The bill makes it clear that there is a good deal of discretion left with the executive, the Governor in Council, to expand the qualifications of corporations that may benefit, particularly from the so-called $200,000 limit rollover.

With those observations, honourable senators, I am prepared, on behalf of my colleagues on this side of the house, to agree that it is not necessary that this bill go again to a committee of the Senate, and to say that we would be prepared to expedite its passage before the end of this session.

Motion agreed to and bill read second time.

THIRD READING

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this bill be read the third time?

Senator Cook: Honourable senators, with leave of the Senate and notwithstanding rule 45(1)(b), I move that the bill be now read the third time.

Motion agreed to and bill read third time and passed.

NATIONAL ANTHEM

DESIRABILITY OF PASSAGE OF BILL C-9—DEBATE CONCLUDED

The Senate resumed from Thursday, June 8, the debate on the inquiry of Senator Bosa calling the attention of the Senate to the desirability of obtaining speedy passage of Bill C-9, respecting the national anthem of Canada.

Hon. Peter Bosa: Honourable senators—

The Hon. the Speaker: I must remind honourable senators that if the Honourable Senator Bosa speaks now his speech will have the effect of closing the debate.

Senator Bosa: Honourable senators, on June 8, 1978, Senator Yuzyk, in the course of his remarks on the subject of the desirability of obtaining speedy passage of Bill C-9, put to me a question as follows:

—why does he not ask the Secretary of State to move immediately the second reading of the bill in the other house.

It is my understanding that if the house leaders of the opposition parties in the other place would agree to give speedy passage to the bill, and could limit themselves to putting up, say, one speaker each, the government would be willing to proceed with this bill. That appears to be the stumbling block.

It seems that yet again July 1, Canada's Birthday, will go by, and Canada will not have an official version of its national anthem.

The Hon. the Speaker: As no other honourable senator wishes to participate in the debate, this inquiry is considered as having been debated.

THE CONSTITUTION

SPECIAL SENATE COMMITTEE—NOTICE OF MEETING

Senator Petten: Honourable senators, there will be an organizational meeting of the Special Committee of the Senate on the Constitution in Room 263-S when we rise.

SPECIAL JOINT COMMITTEE—NOTICE OF MEETING

Senator Petten: Honourable senators, there will be a meeting of the Special Joint Committee on the Constitution in Room 112-N at 1 p.m. today.

BUSINESS OF THE SENATE

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, there is at least a possibility that another bill may be coming to us today, but it is not likely. I understand that presently a measure is under debate in the other place, but it is unlikely that it will come to us before the adjournment.

I move that the Senate do now adjourn during pleasure to the call of the bell at approximately 2.30 p.m. The time could be later. We are not yet certain about the course of events. It is probable, however, that there will be royal assent this afternoon. It is not yet possible to designate a time. That is why the time of 2.30 p.m. must be taken as only approximate.

Senator Grosart: Would the Leader of the Government care to indicate what bill might come to us?

Senator Perrault: I understand the other house is debating Bill C-63, to amend the Canada Elections Act, at the present time. However, there is no immediate indication that the debate will be concluded before the adjournment. That is all the information I have.

Senator Grosart: But that is the only bill?

Senator Perrault: Yes, that is the only bill. Yesterday there were some reports that yet another bill was about to be introduced or debated in the other place, but that has not come to pass.

The Senate adjourned during pleasure.

At 2.45 p.m. the sitting was resumed.

THE CONSTITUTION

SPECIAL JOINT COMMITTEE—CHANGE IN SENATE MEMBERSHIP

Leave having been given to revert to Notices of Motions:

Senator Petten, with leave of the Senate and notwithstanding rule 45(1)(i), moved:

That the name of the Honourable Senator Lang be substituted for that of the Honourable Senator van Roggen on the list of senators serving on the Special Joint Committee of the Senate and House of Commons on proposals on the Constitution of Canada; and

That a message be sent to the House of Commons to acquaint that house accordingly.

Motion agreed to.

BUSINESS OF THE SENATE

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, I have been advised that the Honourable the Deputy of His Excellency the Governor General will be here at approximately 3.30 this afternoon to give royal assent to certain bills. We have no indication of further legislation coming from the other place. Therefore, I would move that the Senate adjourn during pleasure to the call of the bell at approximately 3.30.

Senator Grosart: Honourable senators, this may be our last opportunity to say "Happy Holidays" to each other.

Senator Marshall: You had better not.

Senator Grosart: I said "may be." In case that is so, on behalf of the Leader of the Opposition, Senator Flynn, and all our colleagues on this side of the house, I wish all honourable senators, particularly those who are lucky enough not to be serving on either of the committees on the Constitution, a pleasant and relaxing summer recess.

Hon. Senators: Hear, hear.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, I noted with interest that the Deputy Leader of the Opposition added a conservative qualification to his suggestion that this may be the last time that we meet. I reciprocate in kind, however, by saying that all who are supporters of the government in this house appreciate very much the opportunities we have had during recent months of working with our friends in the opposition parties. Indeed, on behalf of the government, I wish all honourable senators a restful summer break, in the full knowledge that many senators will be extremely active in efforts concerning the constitutional package.

The Senate adjourned during pleasure.

At 3.40 p.m. the sitting was resumed.

ROYAL ASSENT

NOTICE

The Hon. the Speaker informed the Senate that the following communication had been received:

RIDEAU HALL
OTTAWA
GOVERNMENT HOUSE

June 30, 1978

Madam,

I have the honour to inform you that the Honourable Wishart F. Spence, O.B.E., Puisne Judge of the Supreme Court of Canada, in his capacity as Deputy Governor General, will proceed to the Senate Chamber to-day, the 30th day of June, at 3.45 p.m., for the purpose of giving Royal Assent to certain bills.

[Senator Perrault.]

I have the honour to be,
Madam,
Your obedient servant,
Edmond Joly de Lotbinière
Administrative Secretary to the Governor General

The Honourable
The Speaker of the Senate,
Ottawa

THE CONSTITUTION

FIRST REPORT OF THE SPECIAL JOINT COMMITTEE ADOPTED
Leave having been given to revert to Reports of Committees:
[Translation]

Senator Lamontagne: Honourable senators, in my capacity as joint chairman, I have the honour of tabling the First Report of the Special Joint Committee of the Senate and the House of Commons on the Constitution of Canada as follows:
[English]

Friday, June 30, 1978

The Special Joint Committee of the Senate and the House of Commons on the Constitution of Canada has the honour to present its First report, as follows:

In accordance with its Order of Reference of Thursday, June 29, 1978, your Committee recommends that while studying its Order of Reference that the quorum of the Committee be eighteen (18) members whenever a vote, resolution or other decision is taken, so long as both Houses and at least two parties are represented and that the Joint Chairmen be authorized to hold meetings, to receive evidence and authorize the printing thereof when seven (7) members are present so long as both Houses and at least two (2) parties are represented.

Respectfully submitted.

Maurice Lamontagne,
Joint Chairman

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this report be taken into consideration?

Senator Lamontagne: With leave of the Senate and notwithstanding rule 45(1)(e), I move that the report be adopted now.
Motion agreed to and report adopted.

ADJOURNMENT

Leave having been given to revert to Notices of Motions:

Senator Petten: Honourable senators, with leave of the Senate and notwithstanding rule 45(1)(g), I move that when the Senate adjourns today it do stand adjourned until Tuesday, October 10, 1978, at 2 o'clock in the afternoon.

Motion agreed to.

THE CONSTITUTION

SPECIAL SENATE COMMITTEE—QUORUM

Senator Stanbury, with leave of the Senate and notwithstanding rule 45(1)(e), moved:

That the quorum of the Special Committee of the Senate on the subject matter of the Bill C-60, Constitutional Amendment Act, 1978, shall be as ordered by the committee from time to time.

Senator Lang: That means, in effect, no quorum.

Senator Steuart: Whoever shows up.

Senator Stanbury: The motion simply requests the Senate to delegate to the committee the right to determine its quorum from time to time.

Motion agreed to.

The Senate adjourned during pleasure.

---

At 4 p.m. the sitting was resumed.

The Senate adjourned during pleasure.

---

● (1600)

ROYAL ASSENT

The Honourable Wishart F. Spence, O.B.E., Puisne Judge of the Supreme Court of Canada, Deputy of His Excellency the Governor General, having come and being seated at the foot of the Throne, and the House of Commons having been summoned, and being come with their Speaker, the Honourable of Deputy of His Excellency the Governor General was pleased to give the Royal Assent to the following bills:

An Act to amend the statute law relating to income tax and to authorize payments related to provincial sales tax reductions.

An Act to amend the Financial Administration Act.

An Act to amend the Canadian National Railways Capital Revision Act and the Railway Act and to amend and repeal certain other statutes in consequence thereof.

An Act to amend the Currency and Exchange Act.

An Act to amend the Criminal Code.

An Act to amend the Pension Act and the Compensation for Former Prisoners of War Act.

An Act to amend the Export Development Act.

An Act to require the reporting of certain financial and other statistics relating to the affairs of certain petroleum companies carrying on business in Canada.

An Act to amend the Customs Tariff and to amend an Act to amend the Customs Tariff.

An Act to provide a maritime code for Canada and to amend the Canada Shipping Act and other Acts in consequence thereof.

An Act to amend the Income Tax Act and the Excise Tax Act in matters relating to the ownership and operation of small businesses.

The Honourable James Jerome, Speaker of the House of Commons, then addressed the Honourable the Deputy of His Excellency the Governor General as follows:

May it please your Honour:

The Commons of Canada have voted certain supplies required to enable the Government to defray the expenses of the public service.

In the name of the Commons, I present to Your Honour the following bill:

An Act for granting to Her Majesty certain sums of money for the Government of Canada for the financial year ending the 31st March, 1979.

To which bill I humbly request Your Honour's assent.

The Honourable the Deputy of His Excellency the Governor General was pleased to give the Royal Assent to the said bill.

The House of Commons withdrew.

The Honourable the Deputy of His Excellency the Governor General was pleased to retire.

---

The sitting of the Senate was resumed.

The Senate adjourned until Tuesday, October 10, 1978, at 2 p.m.

APPENDIX

(See p. 1021)

REGULATIONS AND OTHER STATUTORY INSTRUMENTS

FIFTH REPORT OF STANDING JOINT COMMITTEE

GENERAL INTRODUCTION

In June 1977, the Secretary of State issued the Green Paper on "Legislation on Public Access to Government Documents". The Green Paper was tabled in the House of Commons on Wednesday, June 29, 1977.

By Order of Reference dated December 16, 1977, the Green Paper was referred to the Standing Joint Committee on Regulations and other Statutory Instruments for its consideration.

Having studied the contents of the Green Paper and having listened to representations from various organizations and other interested groups, your Committee is pleased to make an interim report on the subject-matter of the Green Paper.

Following are the recommendations made by your Committee.

DEFINITION OF DOCUMENT

Your Committee recommends that any legislation pertaining to the release of Government documents should define the term "document" to include reports, tape recordings, computer printouts or other physical media on or in which information is written, recorded, stored or reproduced.

CRITERIA FOR EXCLUSION

Your Committee supports the principle of access to Government documents subject to exemptions for documents falling within certain precisely defined categories of information.

Your Committee is aware of the complexities involved in attempting to draft an appropriate set of exemptions. Nevertheless, your Committee is of the opinion that the list of proposed exemptions set out for discussion purposes in the Green Paper is far too broad and ill-defined, leaving too much discretion to the Government. A major criticism your Committee has of the exemptions outlined in the Green Paper is that they are all prefaced by the word "might". For instance, the Green Paper suggests an exemption for documents the disclosure of which "might be injurious to . . . national defence . . .". In your Committee's view, this test is too broad and a more appropriate test would be whether disclosure could be reasonably expected to be detrimental to the national defence. Your Committee suggests that the following exemptions would be warranted in the Canadian context:

NATIONAL DEFENCE

Documents the disclosure of which could be reasonably expected to be detrimental to the national defence

Your Committee favours the use of the term "national defence" rather than the term "national security" in the relevant exemption as the latter term is too imprecise. To the extent that the term "national security" has broader implications than the term "national defence", thereby covering such things as terrorist activities, your Committee is of the opinion that the proposed exemption pertaining to law enforcement which is discussed later should provide adequate protection. Your Committee believes that the exemption pertaining to national defence should be defined in as much detail as possible; otherwise it will be left to the Government of the day to define it, initially at least, in a way that suits its convenience. At the same time, your Committee recognizes that there must be room for a certain amount of flexibility as it is impossible to cover every eventuality in detail and circumstances change. Nevertheless, your Committee believes it is up to Parliament to define what it means to the extent possible and not abdicate its responsibilities to someone else, be it a Minister, a senior official or the courts. In this regard, therefore, your Committee favours the type of approach taken in the Wall Report<sup>1</sup> wherein the broad exemption of national defence is followed by examples of what is meant without having the effect of strictly confining the exemption to the examples given. In the Wall Report the examples given for national defence were:

"(1) tactical and strategic defence plans, operations or exercises, including the characteristics of equipment and techniques, and the scale, movement and placement of forces, except where the considered and authorized release of such information would assist in the deterrence or prevention of war-like action;

(2) internal and external intelligence and security plans, operations or exercises, including the characteristics of equipment and techniques, and the scale, movement and placement of personnel, except where the considered and authorized release of such information would assist in the deterrence or prevention of actions, whether internally or externally inspired, calculated to displace democratic institutions or procedures by force or violence;

(3) diplomatic plans and negotiations whose essential purpose is the maintenance of the safety and security of the nation."

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

Documents the disclosure of which could be reasonably expected to be detrimental to international relations

FEDERAL-PROVINCIAL RELATIONS

Documents the disclosure of which could be reasonably expected to be detrimental to federal-provincial relations

Your Committee is of the opinion that the relevant clause should not exempt all documents bearing on federal-provincial relations as such a clause would be overly broad and would potentially embrace almost every governmental subject thereby leaving a considerable amount of information restricted. Your Committee therefore recommends that the exemption be limited to documents the release of which could be reasonably expected to be detrimental to the conduct of federal-provincial relations. Moreover, other exemptions would provide additional protection for sensitive federal-provincial relations, such as those pertaining to Cabinet documents and documents containing policy advice as hereinafter defined.

CABINET DOCUMENTS

Documents prepared expressly for or in connection with the deliberations or decisions of the Cabinet or of a Cabinet Committee but not including documents composed of mainly factual or statistical material.

Your Committee is of the opinion that an exemption phrased in the above terms would provide the necessary confidentiality for Cabinet decision-making. The clause would protect: the deliberations or decisions of the Cabinet or of a Cabinet Committee; briefings to Ministers in relation to matters before Cabinet or a Cabinet Committee; a document containing a policy or proposal which has been prepared for presentation to the Cabinet or to a Cabinet Committee; a record of a consultation between Ministers on a matter relating to Government policy.

POLICY ADVICE

Documents containing matter in the nature of an opinion, advice or recommendation prepared by an officer of an Agency or Department and submitted to an Agency or Department for consideration in the performance of any function leading to the making of a decision or the formulation of a policy.

Your Committee advocates an exemption couched in the above terms in order to protect the deliberative and decision-making processes within the Government from compulsory public scrutiny. The exemption is composed of two elements: 1) the author of the document must be an officer of an Agency or Department and 2) the document must be pre-decisional: it must contain advice, opinions or recommendations submitted for consideration in the making of a decision or policy. The exemption therefore does not protect such things as factual and statistical material, and documents which actually contain or explain the decision that has been made or the policy that has been formulated and approved.

Your Committee also favours in general the approach suggested in the Australian Minority Report Bill and approved by the Canadian Bar Association wherein the relevant exemption is qualified by a list of categories of information which would not be protected by the exemption, for example, statistical surveys, cost-benefit analyses and documents composed of mainly factual material.

LAW ENFORCEMENT

Documents the disclosure of which would have a significant adverse effect on law enforcement activities but only to the extent that disclosure would be reasonably expected to

- a) interfere with enforcement proceedings*
- b) deprive a person of a right to a fair trial or an impartial adjudication*
- c) constitute an unwarranted invasion of privacy*
- d) disclose investigative techniques and procedures*
- e) disclose the identity of a confidential source of information or information obtained from such a source, or*
- f) endanger the life or physical safety of law enforcement personnel.*

Your Committee is of the opinion that the exemption pertaining to law enforcement must be specifically defined in such a way as to permit the greatest possible degree of public scrutiny of law enforcement activities. Your Committee therefore advocates the application of a series of specific tests similar to the format used in the U.S. legislation and the Australian Minority Report Bill rather than a very general clause such as the one proposed in the Green Paper exempting, for instance, information obtained in the course of investigation pertaining to the administration or enforcement of any act of Parliament. Such a general clause could be interpreted every nebulously and could be read so as to withhold practically every piece of information in the Government's hands.

There is a large category of documents connected with law enforcement which should routinely be disclosed, for example: inspection reports; a document revealing the use of illegal law enforcement techniques or procedures; a document revealing that the scope of any law enforcement investigation has exceeded the limits imposed by law.

PERSONAL PRIVACY

Documents the disclosure of which would constitute an unwarranted invasion of personal privacy or documents which are voluntarily supplied to the Government on the basis that they be kept confidential.

In drafting this exemption, your Committee favours the approach taken in the U.S. legislation and in the Australian Minority Report Bill whereby the use of the term "unwarranted invasion of personal privacy" implies a balancing process in which the right of privacy of affected individuals must be balanced against the right of the public to be informed. This could be expressly spelled out in the legislation. Your Committee is also in favour of protecting information given the Government in confidence by individuals, groups or organizations. This is reflected in the specific wording of the exemption.

Your Committee is of the opinion that the legislation need not specifically exempt correspondence between a member of the public and an M.P. as such information does not fall within the context of a Freedom of Information statute.

LEGAL OPINIONS

Documents the disclosure of which would reveal (a) privileged communications between lawyer and client in a matter of Government business or (b) legal opinions or advice provided for the use of the Government unless a Minister or other senior Government official refers to a legal opinion in support of a Government action in which case the legal opinion would not be protected.

COMMERCIAL OR FINANCIAL INFORMATION

Documents the disclosure of which would reveal trade secrets or other commercial or financial information that if divulged would be reasonably likely to (a) impair the Government's ability to obtain necessary information in the future or (b) cause significant harm to the competitive position of the commercial or financial enterprise from which the information was obtained.

Your Committee suggests that the exemption pertaining to commercial and financial information be phrased in the above terms rather than the much broader terms in which it is cast in the Green Paper. Your Committee's proposal is based on the interpretation the U.S. Courts have placed on the comparable legislative provision.

STATUTORY EXEMPTIONS

Documents the disclosure of which is prohibited by any federal enactment

Your Committee recommends that all relevant statutes be reviewed<sup>2</sup> and any provisions respecting confidentiality amended so as to conform with the basic principles established in a Freedom of Information Act. One obvious example is section 41 of the Federal Court Act which reads as follows:

'41. (1) Subject to the provisions of any other Act and to subsection (2), when a Minister of the Crown certifies to any court by affidavit that a document belongs to a class or contains information which on grounds of a public interest specified in the affidavit should be withheld from production and discovery, the court may examine the document and order its production and discovery to the parties, subject to such restrictions or conditions as it deems appropriate, if it concludes in the circumstances of the case that the public interest in the proper administration of justice outweighs in importance the public interest specified in the affidavit.

(2) When a Minister of the Crown certifies to any court by affidavit that the production or discovery of a document or its contents would be injurious to international relations, national defence or security, or to federal-provincial relations, or that it would disclose a confidence of the Queen's Privy Council for Canada, discovery and production shall be refused without any examination of the document by the court.'

Your Committee finds that section 41(2) is inconsistent with the principles to be established in a Freedom of Information statute and therefore recommends that it be repealed.

EXEMPTIONS—NOT COMPULSORY

Your Committee recommends that a general clause follow the exemptions to the effect that notwithstanding the exemptions an Agency or Department may order the release of a document falling within an exempt category where in the public interest to do so except where the release is prohibited by another federal enactment.

REVIEW PROCESS

A particular area of concern in the type of appeal procedure that would be available under the legislation to an applicant who complains he or she has improperly been denied access to information requested. At the first instance, the responsible Minister or his or her official would make the determination as to whether a document falls within the list of exemptions and hence would not be disclosed. But who then would review his or her judgment?

The Green Paper suggests five options for review: 1) scrutiny by Parliament in the ways which are currently available; 2) an Information Auditor with the power to examine documents and make an annual report; 3) an Information Commissioner with the power to examine documents and issue advisory reports; 4) an Information Commissioner with the power to order release; and 5) independent judicial review with the power to order release. However, the Green Paper criticizes the last two options as being "contrary to the basic principle of ministerial responsibility".

Having examined a number of possible alternatives for an appeal process, your Committee proposes a review mechanism which would be a combination of options 3 and 5 in the Green Paper.

This would involve the establishment under statute of an Information Commissioner as an officer of Parliament who would attempt to resolve disputes arising from any claimed exemption. The Information Commissioner would investigate cases of complaint to him or her and would examine the documents in question in camera, on a confidential basis. If he or she is of the opinion that a document should be released, he or she would so advise the relevant Minister or official. If that does not result in the release of the document, he or she would then so advise the complainant, at the same time telling the complainant that in his or her opinion the complainant is entitled to the release of the document and informing the complainant of his or her rights under the Act. Where the Information Commissioner is of the opinion that the document comes under an exemption and therefore should not be released, he or she would also so advise the complainant and inform the complainant of his or her rights under the Act. Even though the Information Commissioner would not have the power to overrule a decision not to release a document, it is expected that his or her opinion would ordinarily prevail with Ministers, Agencies and Departments. Likewise, where the opinion of the Information Commissioner is that the complainant is not entitled to the release of the document, it is expected that his or her opinion would probably be accepted by nearly all of the complainants.

Contrary to the assertions in the Green Paper, your Committee is of the opinion it is not the proper role of a Minister to make the final decision as to whether a requested document is covered by one of the exemptions. Your Committee recommends that regardless of the opinion of the Information Commissioner there should be a right to an ultimate appeal to the Courts with the power, if necessary, to examine documents in camera and to order their release. The onus should be placed on the relevant Government Agency or Department to establish that the document in question is exempt under the legislation. Your Committee agrees with the remarks made by Professor Murray Rankin on this matter in a study entitled "Freedom of Information in Canada, Will the Doors Stay Shut?" and prepared for the Canadian Bar Association as a response to the Green Paper. Professor Rankin maintains that "no constitutional, legal, or practical impediment stands in the way of judicial involvement in the adjudication of freedom of information questions", and that the argument that ministerial responsibility precludes it is a time-worn dogma that collapses upon an examination of English and Canadian constitutional precedents. His study concludes that to hand the final decision on disclosure of information to the unreviewable discretion of a Minister "who is hardly a disinterested party" would make a sham of any system of access to Government documents.

In order that certain judges may acquire a familiarity and expertise in these matters, your Committee recommends that the judge hearing the appeal should be selected from a special panel of judges from the Trial Division of the Federal Court. To reduce the expense of an appeal to the complainant, the Federal Court judge could sit in various parts of Canada to hear cases. This would bring the entire process of judicial review closer to the people and would help generate public confidence.

Your Committee also recommends that a decision of a trial judge of the Federal Court be appealable to the Federal Court of Appeal and with leave to the Supreme Court of Canada. Your Committee suggests that costs shall ordinarily follow the event unless the Court otherwise directs.

ELIGIBILITY

Your Committee is in favour of the legislation allowing Canadian citizens, persons residing in Canada, or corporations incorporated under the laws of Canada or a province to obtain access to Government documents. Your Committee rejects any requirement which would oblige the applicant to establish a special interest in the matter under consideration over and above that of the general public before being able to obtain the documentation in question.

ACCESS OFFICER

Your Committee is in agreement with the suggestion made in the Green Paper that Federal Government Agencies and Departments, as the foci of record management, must bear the major burden of the realization of a policy on public access to Government documents. Your Committee therefore recommends that the legislation contain a provision requiring Federal Government Agencies and Departments to designate particular officials to undertake responsibility for departmental administration of access to documents.

DESCRIPTION OF DOCUMENT SOUGHT

It is the opinion of your Committee that the legislation should operate retrospectively as well as prospectively, that is, in regard to documents created or received prior to as well as after the coming into force of the Act. Your Committee suggests some version of the American approach requiring that an applicant requesting a document provide sufficient information about the document to enable a responsible officer who is familiar with the subject area of the request to locate the document with a reasonable amount of effort.

SEGREGABILITY OF DOCUMENTS

Your Committee recommends the inclusion in the legislation of a provision requiring Federal Government Agencies and Departments to release non-exempt portions of partially exempt documents unless the non-exempt portions cannot practicably be separated from the exempt portions, or the exempt portions cannot practicably be deleted.

BURDEN OF PROOF

Your Committee is in favour of placing the burden of showing that a document is exempt under the legislation on the Agency or Department refusing access. The Government, after all, is in possession of the document; the citizen is not.

FEEES

Your Committee recommends that charges made for requests under Freedom of Information legislation should be reasonable charges and should be limited to the direct cost of search for and copying of the documents requested.

Your Committee also advocates the inclusion in the legislation of a provision similar to that contained in the U.S. legislation whereby documents can be furnished without charge or at a reduced charge where the Agency or Department determines that waiver or reduction of the fee is in the public interest because furnishing the information can be considered as primarily benefiting the general public. In determining whether the information can be considered as primarily benefiting the general public, the Agency or Department could take into consideration such matters as the size of the public to be benefited, the significance of the benefit, the usefulness of the material to be released, the likelihood that tangible public good will be realized and other factors bearing upon the appropriateness of public payment.

While your Committee supports reasonable search and reproduction charges, it opposes the imposition of charges for administrative examination or review of documents for a decision on release, as such charges could become a de facto means of frustrating release owing to the large element of discretion involved in review and the calculation of charges thereof.

TIME LIMITS

Your Committee considers that successful operation of Freedom of Information legislation requires that Federal Government Agencies and Departments act expeditiously in meeting requests for documents. Your Committee therefore agrees with the suggestion made in the Green Paper that a reasonable time period during which a decision would have to be made within an Agency or Department as to whether or not to release material relevant to an application is twenty working days, with the legislation requiring availability of released material as soon as possible after decision. Your Committee further recommends that an extension of up to ten working days be allowed in three types of unusual circumstances, in effect where documents must be searched for and collected from other locations, where another Agency or Department having a substantial interest in the status of the information requested must be consulted, or where a request requires an Agency or Department to search for, collect and examine a voluminous amount of separate and distinct documents. A similar provision is contained in the U.S. legislation.

Further to your Committee's recommendation that an Information Commissioner be established under the Act, your Committee recommends that there be a limit of ten working days for him or her to make a finding. With regard to your Committee's proposal that there be a right of appeal to the Federal Court on the question of access to Government documents, your Committee suggests the inclusion in the legislation of a provision similar to that existing in the U.S. legislation whereby the Government's time to answer a suit under the Act is 30 days "unless the Court otherwise directs for good cause shown".

REPORTING

Your Committee is in agreement with the suggestion made in the Green Paper that in order to ensure effective parliamentary oversight of a Freedom of Information statute, the statute should require detailed annual reports from Agencies and Departments including statistics on the compliance by the Agencies and Departments with their obligations under the legislation. An Information Commissioner should likewise be required to report on his or her responsibilities under the legislation. All such reports should stand permanently referred to a Parliamentary Committee.

PRIORITY

Your Committee is of the opinion that no claim to Crown privilege should prevail against a Freedom of Information statute and that Members of Parliament should have the right to receive documents without regard to Crown privilege. Your Committee therefore recommends that the Standing Orders be amended accordingly.

FOOTNOTES

<sup>1</sup> D. F. Wall, "The Provision of Government Information", Privy Council Office, April, 1974. The report is reproduced in Issue 32 of the Minutes of Proceedings of the Standing Joint Committee on Regulations and other Statutory Instruments beginning at page 30 (June 25, 1975).

<sup>2</sup> See the study entitled "Prohibitions Against the Release of Government Information Contained in the Statutes of Canada" prepared by François Pépin of the Research Branch, Library of Parliament for the Standing Joint Committee on Regulations and other Statutory Instruments. The study is set out beginning at page 47 of Issue 23 of the Committee proceedings (April 18, 1978).

THE SENATE

Tuesday, October 10, 1978

The Senate met at 2 p.m., the Speaker in the Chair.
Prayers.

THE CONSTITUTION

SPECIAL JOINT COMMITTEE—CHANGES IN COMMONS MEMBERSHIP

The Hon. the Speaker informed the Senate that messages had been received from the House of Commons with respect to the list of members of the House of Commons appointed to serve on the Special Joint Committee on the Constitution of Canada.

[For texts of messages, see today's Minutes of the Proceedings of the Senate.]

COMMITTEES

CHANGES IN SENATE MEMBERSHIP

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, I have the honour to inform the Senate that the Clerk of the Senate has laid on the Table reports of changes made during the recent summer adjournment in the lists of senators appointed to serve on the Special Joint Committee on the Constitution of Canada, the Special Committee of the Senate on the Northern Pipeline, and the Special Committee of the Senate appointed to inquire into and report upon the subject matter of Bill C-60.

Pursuant to an Order of the Senate of June 27, 1978, the reports will be printed in the Minutes of the Proceedings of the Senate of this day.

THE CONSTITUTION

SPECIAL JOINT COMMITTEE—CHANGES IN SENATE MEMBERSHIP—MESSAGE TO HOUSE OF COMMONS

Senator Petten moved:

That a message be sent to the House of Commons to inform that house of the changes made during the recent summer adjournment in the list of senators serving on the Special Joint Committee of the Senate and House of Commons on the Constitution of Canada.

Motion agreed to.

DOCUMENTS TABLED

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, before I table certain reports and other documents, I should like to say it is good to see the Honourable Leader of the Opposition in buoyant good, non-partisan, health, as we look forward—

Senator Flynn: It is much easier for me.

Senator Perrault: —to another productive session in this place. It is good, as well, to see so many honourable senators back in their places after what can only be described as an extremely busy summer—a summer which saw most honourable senators involved, at one point or another, in the committees concerned with constitutional matters. The participation of honourable senators in both of those committees has been useful and constructive. The record bears that out.

It is hoped that, with the help of the opposition, the remaining minutes of this session will be fruitful.

I now table:

Copies of Reports of the Anti-Inflation Board to the Governor in Council, pursuant to section 17(2) of the Anti-Inflation Act, Chapter 75, Statutes of Canada, 1974-75-76, reporting its reference to the Administrator of the said Act of certain proposed changes in compensation plans, as follows:

1. Willow Creek School Division No. 28 executive employees, dated October 6, 1977.
2. The City of Victoria Police Board and its employees represented by the City of Victoria Police Senior Officers' Association, dated November 22, 1977.
3. Brooke Bond Foods Limited and its factory hourly workers, Montreal, represented by the Canadian Food and Allied Workers, Local 130, dated June 27, 1978.
4. Canadian Liquid Air Ltd., and its hourly paid employees of Varennes, Quebec, dated June 27, 1978.
5. Canadian Liquid Air Ltd., and its hourly paid employees of Tracy, Quebec, dated June 27, 1978.

Copies of Reports of the Administrator under the Anti-Inflation Act, pursuant to section 17(3) of the said Act, Chapter 75, Statutes of Canada, 1974-75-76, respecting certain compensation plans, as follows:

1. Labatt's Ontario Breweries Limited, Toronto, Ontario and the group of its Metro Toronto brewery employees represented by the Brewery, Malt and Soft Drink Workers, Local Union 304 of the Canadian Union of United Brewery, Flour, Cereal, Soft Drink and Distillery Workers. Order dated June 23, 1978.
2. Canada Safeway Limited, Edmonton, Alberta and the group of its retail employees represented by the Retail Clerks Union, Local 401. Order dated June 27, 1978.

Report of Atomic Energy of Canada Limited, including its accounts and financial statements certified by the Auditor General, for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1978, pursuant to sections 75(3) and 77(3) of the Financial Administration Act, Chapter F-10, R.S.C., 1970.

Copies of Order in Council P.C. 1978-1377, dated April 27, 1978, amending the Bankruptcy Rules made by Order in Council P.C. 1954-1976, dated December 16, 1954, as amended, pursuant to section 180(2) of the Bankruptcy Act, Chapter B-3, R.S.C., 1970.

Copies of Order in Council P.C. 1978-1835, dated June 8, 1978, amending Schedule I to the Canada Grain Act, effective August 1, 1978, pursuant to section 15(6) of the said Act, Chapter 7, Statutes of Canada, 1970-71-72.

Capital Budget of Canadian Arsenals Limited for the fiscal year ending March 31, 1979, pursuant to section 70(2) of the Financial Administration Act, Chapter F-10, R.S.C., 1970, together with copy of Order in Council P.C. 1978-2044, dated June 22, 1978, approving same.

Report on the administration of the Canadian Forces Superannuation Act, for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1978, pursuant to section 28 of the said Act, Chapter C-9, R.S.C., 1970.

Report on the administration of the Canadian Forces Superannuation Act, Part II, including amounts credited to or charged against the Regular Force Death Benefit Account for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1978, pursuant to section 41 of the said Act, Chapter C-9, R.S.C., 1970.

Statement by the Department of National Defence of moneys received and disbursed in the Special Account (Replacement of Materiel) for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1978, pursuant to section 11(4) of the National Defence Act, Chapter N-4, R.S.C., 1970.

Report of the Economic Council of Canada, including its financial statement certified by the Auditor General, for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1978, pursuant to section 21(1) of the Economic Council of Canada Act, Chapter E-1, R.S.C., 1970.

Copies of financial statement on the operation and maintenance of the Great Slave Lake Railway for the year ended December 31, 1977, together with a statement showing the net capital investment as at December 31, 1977, pursuant to section 9, Chapter 56, Statutes of Canada, 1960-61.

Report of the number and amount of Loans to Immigrants made under section 65(1) of the Immigration Act for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1978, pursuant to section 65(6) of the said Act, Chapter I-2, R.S.C., 1970.

Report of the Auditor General on the examination of the accounts and financial statements of the National Battlefields Commission for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1978, pursuant to section 12 of An Act respecting the National Battlefields at Quebec, Chapter 57, Statutes of Canada, 1907-08, and sections 75(3) and 77(3) of the Financial Administration Act, Chapter F-10, R.S.C., 1970.

[Senator Perrault.]

Capital Budget of the National Harbours Board for the year ending December 31, 1978, pursuant to section 70(2) of the Financial Administration Act, Chapter F-10, R.S.C., 1970, together with copy of Order in Council P.C. 1978-1814, dated June 1, 1978, approving same.

Capital Budget of the Northern Canada Power Commission for the fiscal year ending March 31, 1979, pursuant to section 70(2) of the Financial Administration Act, Chapter F-10, R.S.C., 1970, together with copy of Order in Council P.C. 1978-1786, dated June 1, 1978, approving same.

Copies of Ordinances, Chapter 1 to 13 inclusive, enacted by the Commissioner-in-Council of the Northwest Territories during the 1978 First Session and assented to February 13, 1978, pursuant to section 16(1) of the Northwest Territories Act, Chapter N-22, R.S.C., 1970, together with copy of Order in Council P.C. 1978-1078, dated April 6, 1978.

Report of the Agricultural Products Board for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1978, pursuant to section 7 of the Agricultural Products Board Act, Chapter A-5, R.S.C., 1970.

Report of the Agricultural Stabilization Board for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1978, pursuant to section 14 of the Agricultural Stabilization Act, Chapter A-9, R.S.C., 1970.

Report of operations under the Crop Insurance Act for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1977, pursuant to section 13 of the said Act, Chapter C-36, R.S.C., 1970.

Copies of Ordinances, Chapter 1 to 4 inclusive, enacted by the Commissioner-in-Council of the Northwest Territories during the 1977 Third Session and assented to October 24, 1977, pursuant to section 16(1) of the Northwest Territories Act, Chapter N-22, R.S.C., 1970, together with copy of Order in Council dated December 22, 1977.

Statement of expenditures and financial commitments made under the Veterans' Land Act for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1978, pursuant to section 49 of the said Act, Chapter V-4, R.S.C., 1970.

Revised Capital Budget of Air Canada for the year ending December 31, 1978, pursuant to section 70(2) of the Financial Administration Act, Chapter F-10, R.S.C., 1970, together with copy of Order in Council P.C. 1978-2430, dated July 26, 1978, approving same.

Report on the administration of the Canada Pension Plan for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1977, pursuant to section 118, Chapter C-5, R.S.C., 1970.

Report on the activities of the Food and Agriculture Organization (FAO) for the fiscal year 1977-78, pursuant to section 3 of the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations Act, Chapter F-26, R.S.C., 1970.

Reports on operations under the Regional Development Incentives Act for the months of April, May, June and July, 1978, pursuant to section 16 of the said Act, Chapter R-3, R.S.C., 1970.

Copies of By-law No. 3 of the Export Development Corporation, pursuant to section 16(3) of the Export Development Act, Chapter E-18, R.S.C., 1970.

Capital Budget of the Export Development Corporation for the year ending December 31, 1978, pursuant to section 70(2) of the Financial Administration Act, Chapter F-10, R.S.C., 1970, together with copy of Order in Council P.C. 1978-1506, dated May 4, 1978, approving same.

Report of the Department of Transport containing a Statement of Leases granted under authority of the Government Harbours and Piers Act, for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1978, pursuant to section 18 of the said Act, Chapter G-9, R.S.C., 1970.

Report of the President of the National Research Council of Canada for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1978, pursuant to section 16 of the National Research Council Act, Chapter N-14, R.S.C., 1970.

Report on the administration of Part I of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police Superannuation Act for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1978, pursuant to section 26 of the said Act, Chapter R-11, R.S.C., 1970.

Report of the Department of Transport containing a Statement of Wharf Revenue Receipts and a Statement of Harbour Dues for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1978, pursuant to section 14 of the Government Harbours and Piers Act, Chapter G-9, R.S.C., 1970.

Statement showing Classification of Deposit Liabilities Payable in Canadian Currency of the Chartered Banks of Canada as at April 30, 1978, pursuant to section 119(1) of the Bank Act, Chapter B-1, R.S.C., 1970.

Report of the Superintendent of Insurance on the administration of the Investment Companies Act, for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1978, pursuant to section 27(1) of the said Act, Chapter 33, Statutes of Canada, 1970-71-72.

Report of the Superintendent of Insurance on the administration of the Pension Benefits Standards Act for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1978, pursuant to section 22 of the said Act, Chapter P-8, R.S.C., 1970.

Capital Budget of VIA Rail Canada Inc., for the year ending December 31, 1978, pursuant to section 70(2) of the Financial Administration Act, Chapter F-10, R.S.C., 1970, together with copy of Order in Council P.C. 1978-3020, dated September 27, 1978, approving same.

Capital Budget of Petro-Canada for the financial year 1976, pursuant to section 70(2) of the Financial Administration Act, Chapter F-10, R.S.C., 1970, together with copy of Order in Council P.C. 1976-1963, dated July 29, 1976, approving same.

Capital Budget of Petro-Canada for the financial year 1977, pursuant to section 70(2) of the Financial Administration Act, Chapter F-10, R.S.C., 1970, together with copy of Order in Council P.C. 1976-3275, dated December 23, 1976, approving same.

Capital Budget of Petro-Canada for the financial year 1978, pursuant to section 70(2) of the Financial Administration Act, Chapter F-10, R.S.C., 1970, together with copy of Order in Council P.C. 1977-3594, dated December 22, 1977, approving same.

Supplementary Capital Budget of Petro-Canada for the financial year 1978, pursuant to section 70(2) of the Financial Administration Act, Chapter F-10, R.S.C., 1970, together with copy of Order in Council P.C. 1978-1995, dated June 16, 1978, approving same.

Copies of Reports of the Administrator under the Anti-Inflation Act, pursuant to section 17(3) of the said Act, Chapter 75, Statutes of Canada, 1974-75-76, respecting certain compensation plans, as follows:

1. The County of Antigonish Municipal School Board, Antigonish, Nova Scotia and the group of its conveyance and maintenance supervisors. Order dated July 7, 1978.

2. The Board of Police Commissioners of the Corporation of the Municipality of Delta, British Columbia and its municipal police group represented by the Delta Municipal Police Association. Order dated July 14, 1978.

3. Domtar Chemicals Limited, Sifto Division, Goderich, Ontario and the group of its mine employees represented by the Canadian Chemical Workers Union, Local 16. Order dated July 7, 1978.

4. Domtar Packaging Limited, Trenton, Ontario and the group of its hourly plant employees represented by the Canadian Paperworkers Union, Local 1470. Order dated July 7, 1978.

5. County of Lacombe, No. 14, Lacombe, Alberta and certain groups of its employees, namely, the executive employees, public works employees, transportation employees, maintenance and custodian employees, school secretarial, aides and other employees and the office administrative and other employees. Orders dated July 5, 1978.

6. Misericordia Hospital, Edmonton, Alberta and the group of its operating engineers represented by the International Union of Operating Engineers, Local 955. Order dated July 14, 1978.

7. Board of Health, Sudbury and District Health Unit, Sudbury, Ontario and the group of its full-time and part-time nurses represented by the Ontario Nurses Association, Local 87. Order dated August 3, 1978.

8. The Lethbridge Herald Company Ltd., Lethbridge, Alberta and certain groups of its employees. Orders dated September 18, 1978.

9. Bell Canada, Montreal, Quebec and the group of its clerical and associated employees represented by the Canadian Telephone Employees Association. Order dated September 25, 1978.

● (1410)

THE CONSTITUTION

INTERIM REPORT OF SPECIAL SENATE COMMITTEE TABLED

Senator Stanbury, Chairman of the Special Committee of the Senate on the Constitution, tabled an interim report of the committee.

He said: Honourable senators, if I may, I should like to read the report because I think it is of some significance to the Senate at this point. It is as follows:

Tuesday, October 10, 1978

The Special Committee of the Senate on the Constitution authorized by the Senate on 28th June, 1978, and appointed on 29th June, 1978, to examine and report upon the subject matter of the Bill C-60, intituled: "An Act to amend the Constitution of Canada with respect to matters coming within the legislative authority of the Parliament of Canada, and to approve and authorize the taking of measures necessary for the amendment of the Constitution with respect to certain other matters", in advance of the said bill coming before the Senate, or any matter relating thereto, makes an interim report as follows:—

Your committee has held a number of meetings in connection with its examination of the subject matter of Bill C-60, and its first report, containing its views on those matters it has had time to deal with to date, is now in the final stages of preparation.

Your committee, therefore, recommends that favourable consideration be given to the reconstitution of the committee at the earliest possible date following the opening of the next session of Parliament for the purpose of enabling the committee to present its report.

Respectfully submitted,

Richard J. Stanbury,
Chairman.

Honourable senators, it is my intention to indicate to you that the committee's report is very close to finality, and we hope to be able to present it within a few days.

SPECIAL SENATE COMMITTEE AUTHORIZED TO MEET DURING SITTING OF THE SENATE

Senator Petten: Honourable senators, with leave of the Senate and notwithstanding rule 45(1)(a), I move:

That the Special Committee of the Senate on the Constitution have power to sit while the Senate is sitting today, and that rule 76(4) be suspended in relation thereto.

Motion agreed to.

[Senator Perrault.]

Senator Stanbury: Honourable senators, I ask the members of the committee to meet in room 356-S at the earliest possible opportunity.

CANADIAN BROADCASTING CORPORATION

REFERENCES TO SENATE IN RADIO PROGRAM—QUESTION OF PRIVILEGE

Senator Forsey: Honourable senators, I should like to rise on a question of privilege. I know that these questions should be brought up at the earliest possible moment, and this may seem to be rather a late moment, but it was quite impossible for me to raise this point before the recess.

On June 25 on a CBC program called Sunday Morning there were a number of references to the Senate, and it took me a certain length of time to get the transcript. I finally succeeded in getting it and I should like to read the relevant parts together with the letter I sent to the CBC.

They call it the Red Chamber. The quiet stately elegance of the Senate may impress these tourists more than anything else in Parliament. When you walk through the Senate corridors it is not so different from the rest of the Centre Block except for the little scarlet mats outside each office door and the highly polished brass mail boxes indicating that this is the Upper House.

So far so good.

Our Fathers of Confederation saw two uses for a second chamber; first, to provide a voice for the regions that are dominated by Quebec and Ontario in the House of Commons; second, to protect the interests of the landed gentry against rash legislation enacted by the great unwashed in the Lower House.

And then come the real gems:

Honourable Senators were given the power to send such legislation back to the House of Commons and on occasion they have felt feisty enough to do it. 1920—

I hope honourable senators will note the dates.

1920, Canada's first old age pension bill is refused; 1926, Senators hold up introduction of unemployment insurance for one year; 1961, the Customs Tariff Bill; 1969, the Investment Companies Bill; 1973, Criminal Code legislation; 1976, the Time and Reader's Digest fight. These are exceptions. The rule of the Senate is not rebellion but self-preservation, and Senators prefer to use backroom influence whenever they can.

And then came some further allegations about lobbyists in the Senate, which I did not actually take up with the President of the CBC. However, I wrote Mr. Johnson on the 24th of August, having by that time received the transcript, and I said:

I have a rather serious matter to bring to your attention. It is something I shall have to raise as a question of privilege in the Senate as soon as we resume sitting.

Then I added:

On Sunday morning, June 25, on the A.M. "Sunday Morning" program dealing with the constitutional amendment proposals, there was an introductory bit on the Senate, which contains a championship collection of gross errors of fact.

And then I gave the sections to which I have just referred.

Even when I heard this, I knew it was replete with errors. I have now had a chance to check it. Here are the results.

1. There was no old age pension bill in 1920. The first old age pension bill was introduced in 1926. The Senate rejected it in 1926, and passed it in 1927.

2. There was no unemployment insurance bill in 1926. The first bill on this subject came in 1935. The Senate did not throw it out. It was assented to June 28, 1935 (Senate Journals, 1935, page 348). I need hardly add that this Act was invalidated by the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, and no unemployment insurance legislation was introduced, or could be introduced, until the British North America Act was amended to provide for it in 1940. Nor need I add that the unemployment insurance bill which followed was passed by the Senate.

3. In 1961, the Senate did insist on an amendment to the Customs Tariff Bill, and the House of Commons refused to accept the amendment, and of course the Bill did not go through. This is the one point at which Mr. Christopher Thomas comes reasonably close to the facts.

4. The Investment Companies Bill of 1969 was introduced in the Senate, and passed there on June 25 (Senate Journals, 1969, page 959). It then of course went to the House of Commons, where it never got past first reading (House of Commons Journals, 1969, page 1271). Another bill on the same subject was presented to the Commons in 1970; it never passed the Commons, so of course it never appeared in the Senate at all.

5. In 1973, there were four pieces of "Criminal Code legislation" which came before the Senate. The first, Bill C-2, passed the Senate, and was assented to on December 5 (Senate Journals, 1973, page 428). The second, Bill S-8, a private member's bill, was withdrawn (Senate Journals, 1973, page 296). The third, S-2, a private member's bill, received second reading in the Senate, and was referred to a committee (Senate Journals, 1973, page 108). Both these bills, of course, were introduced into the Senate, so there could not have been any question of their being "sent back" to the House of Commons. The fourth bill, C-176, passed the Senate and was assented to, January 19, 1974 (Senate Journals, 1973-74, page 501).

● (1420)

6. In 1976, Bill C-58, the one dealing with Time and Reader's Digest, was passed by the Senate without amendment, and received Royal Assent on July 16 (Senate Journals, 1976, page 2450).

Who Mr. Christopher Thomas may be I know not. Where he can have collected this astonishing bundle of fairy tales I cannot imagine. Whoever he is, he deserves to be sharply rapped over the knuckles and told to do his homework before he undertakes to speak again about what the Senate has or has not done. In this case, it would have taken him, at the very outside, half an hour's work in the Parliamentary Library (or, for that matter, any library which has copies of the Senate or Commons Journals or Hansard).

I may add that Mr. Thomas observed that the Fathers of Confederation had set up the Senate "to protect the interests of the landed gentry against rash legislation enacted by the great unwashed in the Lower House". It would be interesting to know how many "landed gentry" there were in Canada in 1867, and also how many Members of the House of Commons since 1867 could have been described as belonging to "the great unwashed", by which pleasing term Mr. Thomas presumably means the Canadian working class. I admit that it would take Mr. Thomas rather more than half an hour to discover how slender was the foundation for this part of his observations. But next time he goes on the air on the subject of the Senate, he might do well not to make statements of this sort without having at least some plausible excuse for them.

For Mr. Thomas' information, I venture to point out that the Senate has not thrown out a bill for over forty years, unless you count that insistence on an amendment in 1961. Three times in the last forty years it has "not proceeded further" with a bill.

And I gave the details. I ended the letter:

Mr. Thomas' performance was an outrageous example of irresponsibility and dog-laziness, and I shall so describe it to the Senate.

I added a postscript:

Towards the end of his masterpiece, Mr. Thomas said: "The Senate this Thursday devoted two minutes to a question on the legal right of the Federal Government to enact Bill C-60, and twenty minutes to discussions of when the fall recess would start and finish".

The facts are: (1) the Senate devoted two minutes (if it was two minutes; I did not count) to a specific question by one Senator: whether the Government would produce the opinion of the Department of Justice on whether Parliament (not "the Federal Government") had the power to pass Bill C-60; (2) the Senate devoted a longer period (again I did not count the minutes) to a discussion of when the summer (not "fall") recess would start and finish, and whether the Senate could complete its work on legislation before it, or to come before it, by the probable date of adjournment.

I should add that I received, almost a month later, a letter from the President of the CBC saying:

The staff on Sunday Morning has now had the opportunity to review your complaints and clearly, the June 25th item about the Senate contained a number of inaccuracies.

A splendid example of English understatement, that.

Unfortunately, the main objective of the item—to show that the Senate has not been inactive as a legislative body—

That was a very peculiar way of putting it.

—was almost totally lost because of poor research into the supporting data.

I can only apologize for this sloppy work and say that the editors of Sunday Morning sincerely regret that it was allowed to go to air in that form.

They are now looking for appropriate ways of correcting this mistake in a future program.

Senator Perrault: I bet!

Senator Forsey: I don't know whether they have done so. If not, I hope they will make all haste to do so.

NATIONAL FINANCE

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON ACCOMMODATION PROGRAM OF DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC WORKS TABLED

Leave having been given to revert to Reports of Committees:

Senator Everett: Honourable senators, I have the honour to table the report of the Standing Senate Committee on National Finance on the Accommodation Program of the Department of Public Works, and I ask leave of the Senate to say a few words in explanation of it.

The Hon. the Speaker: Is it agreed, honourable senators?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

Senator Everett: Honourable senators, I listened with interest to Senator Forsey's correspondence with the President of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation. I am an avid listener to that program, and if the honourable senator continues the correspondence I wish he would ask the president to reinstate the best part of that program which, for some reason, was dropped about a month or two ago, and that was the senator's diary.

Honourable senators, for some time you have had before you the report of the National Finance Committee on the Accommodation Program of the Department of Public Works. We published it approximately three weeks ago, and perhaps you would be interested in a brief history of the mode of examination used by the committee.

Some years ago, when we tried to examine the blue book of estimates and the supplementaries, we found we were dealing with expenditures that were just too large for any committee, or even any chamber, of this Parliament to wrap its mind around; so we determined that what we would do would be to supplement the examination of government spending with a major examination, hopefully on an annual or sessional basis.

[Senator Forsey.]

We began with a detailed examination of the economy, and our report was entitled Growth, Employment and Price Stability. In that report we prescribed a course of economic action for the Government of Canada, and I am arrogant enough to say that if the government had followed our prescription the economy of this country would be in far better shape today.

We had determined that we would repeat such an examination on an annual basis, but we found that what we would really be doing would be duplicating the work of a number of banks, the Economic Council, the C. D. Howe Institute, a number of brokerage firms and others, and that perhaps what we ought to do is make an examination only once every five years or even ten years, but we decided instead to make a detailed examination of a particular department. We started with Information Canada, because it was only a $10 million expenditure, of which $4 million was recovered from the sale of its publications. We thought it would be a rather simple investigation, and one that we could use as a test case for the kind of operation that we proposed. We found, in fact, that we were soon precipitated into an examination of government information services which at that time aggregated more than $150 million per year.

Our next examination was Canada Manpower, which was followed by this examination of the Department of Public Works. We have since begun an examination of the Department of Regional and Economic Expansion.

I am distressed that this examination took as long as it did—it took two years—because we were examining a department that in the 1977-78 fiscal year spent in excess of $950 million and, over and above that, we were examining government realty operations which are well in excess of $1 billion per year. Fifty-eight witnesses appeared before the committee, and there were 84 additional written submissions. While it is true that we could have worked faster, we could only do so at an increased cost, which we were anxious to avoid. Our budgeted cost in those two years was $79,000, in relation to a department that in one year is spending in excess of $950 million.

Before I review our examination with honourable senators, I would like to thank several people who were involved. First of all, I would like to thank my colleagues on the committee. I should also like to thank the staff; the committee clerk, Mr. Cocks; the Library of Parliament which provided services in the person of Mrs. Barbara Reynolds; the Parliamentary Centre for Foreign Affairs and Foreign Trade headed by Peter Dobell, whose services were more directly provided by Mrs. Helen Small. I should also like to thank the Leader of the Government and the Leader of the Opposition for their co-operation.

● (1430)

Honourable senators, there are 62 recommendations in this report. You will be happy to know that I do not intend to review all of them with you, but only the major ones.

First of all, the committee recommends that the bulk of real estate activities in the federal government should be centred in the Department of Public Works. The Department of Public Works should charge other government departments market rates for the use of the accommodation and their services. This is not done at the present time. For the most part, government departments occupy space without paying any rent whatsoever. The committee feels such a recommendation would heighten the cost consciousness of government and make it more aware of the cost of space, and considerably reduce the present over-use.

The report goes further than that. It recommends that the Department of Public Works should live within the revenue that it receives from other government departments—that is, it should be revenue-dependent. The committee has proposed the establishment of a building fund which would be based on the accrual accounting method within the normal cash accounting method of the federal government. What would occur, without going into the detail contained in the report, is that the Department of Public Works would be subject to the same discipline that applies to a private sector developer. The committee feels that this, combined with the charging of services to the user of the premises, would markedly decrease the cost of real estate activities in government.

Over and above that, the committee feels that the Department of Public Works should be the agent of the Treasury Board to set standards of space use throughout government. Those standards should be set, not on an annual salary basis as they are today, but on the basis of the actual functional use of the accommodation as is generally employed by the business community.

As agent of the Treasury Board, DPW would also be required to monitor the use of that space to see that every government department makes the most efficient use of the accommodation it occupies.

The report states that DPW should become the federal government's realty developer. In this regard it should conduct its own activities as a developer would in project development and project management, and those activities should not be delegated to other developers, designers or contractors. DPW should decide upon the best route to provide the accommodation required in government.

The Committee does set out certain comprehensive guidelines and principles on which DPW should make those decisions. There are principles laid down to help DPW to decide whether, in providing accommodation, they should lease or crown-construct.

There is an intensive review of the lease-purchase agreements entered into by the federal government in the past, especially the four in the Ottawa-Hull area. Again, principles are laid down for the future should DPW decide to go into lease-purchase agreements—principles which would prevent the repeat of the situation that occurred with the lease-purchase agreements in the Ottawa-Hull area.

With respect to leasing accommodation from the private sector, the committee discovered the requirement that it be tendered added immeasurably to the cost of that space to the federal government and, therefore, the committee suggests that DPW be permitted to negotiate with the private sector for leased space of up to 20,000 square feet, and annual rentals of $250,000, without prior Treasury Board approval.

We then went into the area of selection of design consultants, which largely involves architects and engineers. I think we suggested here a rather novel method of selection. The committee believes that all construction and major alteration projects undertaken by DPW should be publicly announced. All qualified firms should be permitted to apply, giving their experience, their qualifications and their capabilities. DPW would select, from those who apply, three to five firms that are best qualified. Each firm would be asked to prepare a rough conceptual design of the project and to submit a cost estimate. The three to five firms would then be placed in order and they would be interviewed by DPW, one after the other, to determine which is to be selected and the fee to be paid. The committee states that such a process should be subject to review from time to time by a public advisory committee.

We found that the question of consultants' fees was somewhat of a difficult one. Most consultants' fees are based on a percentage of the final cost of the project. If the consultant's estimate of the cost of a project is $1 million and his percentage fee is 8 per cent, as prescribed by his provincial association, then his fee for designing and supervising that project is $80,000. If the actual cost turns out to be $2 million, the fee is 8 per cent of $2 million and goes to $160,000. The committee has suggested that in that situation the fee be fixed at a percentage of the estimated cost of the designer and DPW, but that the designer be bonused if he is able to bring in the project for less than the estimated cost. In other words, we are reversing the process. In the past the concept has been that the more the actual cost is over the estimate, the more the designer makes. We are saying the more the actual cost is under the estimate, the more the designer makes.

• (1440)

In the report we challenged the architects and engineers because they made a number of submissions to us stating that the Department of Public Works ought to decrease its in-house design staff. We said that if they wanted the department to decrease its in-house staff, then they would have to come up with a fee schedule that bonuses them for improving on the cost estimate rather than the present system.

We also have suggestions and recommendations for improving the efficiency in the crown construction activities of the Department of Public Works. We believe that the tender system of construction should continue, but we think that there are a number of cases where contractors who are permitted to tender can be selected so that only a limited number are allowed to tender. The reason for that is because when there is a broad, open tender there must be rigid design specifications. By pre-selecting contractors on the basis of their capability to do a particular job, one can employ performance specifications. This merely means that instead of designating a particular material to do a job, the contractor can be asked to provide a material that he chooses that will do the particular job. We say that if we can achieve that—not in all construction projects, but in certain construction projects—then, added to the contract, should be a value engineering incentive clause. That merely means that the contractor tenders at a price, is given the performance specifications, and if he can bring in that job by using less costly materials that still perform as required, then he receives a bonus for doing so.

We also suggested that there be certain recommendations to improve the efficiency of the operations of the Department of Public Works. These recommendations would produce a less complex organization with fewer layers of decision-making; improve long-range planning with mandated co-operation from other government departments and Treasury Board on their plans; and improve consultation with other government departments. We also suggest that DPW reduce its in-house design staff to the level that would handle the minimum number of small and medium jobs each year.

In the land management area, we recommend that the Department of Public Works be the acquirer of all property in Canada, with three minor exemptions. Under revenue dependency, DPW will control all general purpose accommodation, which is the bulk of property used by the federal government. Therefore, DPW will determine, under revenue dependency, which of that property is surplus to its need. The committee, therefore, recommends that the Area Screening Program be terminated, and, further, that the requirement presently in the federal government that surplus property be retained in federal ownership be done away with.

Honourable senators, I have reviewed very briefly with you some of the major recommendations of the report. As I say, there are 62 recommendations in all. When a royal commission winds up and makes its report, there is no one to see that the report is implemented. However, such is not the case with a Senate committee. In the case of this report on the Department of Public Works we will interview, between now and Christmas, the Minister of Public Works and the President of Treasury Board to determine what recommendations they propose to implement, and what recommendations they do not agree with, and why they do not agree with them.

This method was employed for the first time in our examination of Canada Manpower. We interviewed the minister, the Honourable Mr. Cullen, and I think I reported to the Senate at that time that of the 56 recommendations in that report, he agreed to take action on 52. But it does not stop there. We are in a position to follow up to see whether the agreement is implemented. In short, what we will do is ask Mr. Cullen, or whoever it may be, to appear before the committee. We will also ask the President of the Treasury Board and the Minister of Public Works to appear before the committee to determine how they are getting along with their agreed implementation.

Finally, honourable senators, I should like to deal with one subject which I believe these reports raise. This deals with cutting the costs of government. Recently, we have watched a global cost-cutting method which involves a reduction of some $2.5 billion. I must admit that it is very dramatic to hear that cuts of that size are going to be made. The problem with that kind of cost-cutting is that you can end up cutting or reducing needed services, and when the crisis is over, because services have been reduced, there is pressure to reinstate those services. So, when the crisis is over, spending goes back to its former level.

[Senator Everett.]

The method we propose to use is really quite different. We are saying, "Improve the efficiency of providing the services. The service remains intact because it is needed, but the saving is found in the method by which you provide that service and the efficiency with which you do it." Honourable senators, I suggest that there is a contrast between that and the global cost-cutting method. The service remains, but it is provided at a lower cost, and when the crisis is over the saving continues year after year. It is not as dramatic as the global cost-cutting method, but it is a more effective way of cutting costs. It is one method that seems to have caught the interest of the Royal Commission on Financial Management and Accountability. I suspect that the activities of the Finance Committee will be reviewed in the final report of that royal commission. What we may well see, not only for the Finance Committee but for other committees of both houses, is that this method of financial restraint is the one that will be employed more and more in government, because it is the one that truly gives Parliament control over the public purse.

THE CONSTITUTION

SECOND REPORT OF SPECIAL JOINT COMMITTEE TABLED AND PRINTED AS AN APPENDIX

[Translation]

Hon. Maurice Lamontagne: Honourable senators, I have the honour of tabling the second unanimous report of the Special Joint Committee of the Senate and the House of Commons on the Constitution of Canada.

[English]

Honourable senators, I would ask that the report be printed as an appendix to the Debates of the Senate and to the Minutes of the Proceedings of the Senate of this day and form part of the permanent record of this house.

The Hon. the Speaker: It is agreed?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

[For text of report see appendix, p. 1050.]

FISHERIES

PROPOSAL TO ESTABLISH SEPARATE DEPARTMENT—QUESTION
ON THE ORDER PAPER ANSWERED

Question No. 10—By Senator Marshall:

In detail, what progress is being made by the government on the establishment of a separate Department of Fisheries?

Reply by the Minister of Fisheries and the Environment:

On June 29th the Honourable A. J. MacEachen, Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council, introduced in the House of Commons Bill C-65 (Ref.

House of Commons Debates, Vol. 121, number 149, June 29, 1978, page 6862) an act respecting the Organization of the Government of Canada and matters related or incidental thereof.

This bill provides for the establishment of a separate Department of Fisheries and Oceans, with a strong mandate in the management, conservation and protection of the fisheries and oceans with the required resources and manpower. While this bill did not receive the required consideration in the House, it is the intention of the government to reintroduce in the new session a bill to establish a separate Department of Fisheries and Oceans.

PROVINCE OF NEWFOUNDLAND

CORNER BROOK HARBOUR DEVELOPMENT STUDY—QUESTION ON THE ORDER PAPER ANSWERED

Question No. 16—By Senator Marshall:

1. What sections of the Department of Transport and the Department of Regional Economic Expansion, or any other department, are involved in the Corner Brook Harbour Development Study?

2. What progress has been made to date by those sections involved?

Reply by the President of the Privy Council:

Insofar as the Department of Regional Economic Expansion is concerned:

1. Department of Regional Economic Expansion (DREE), Newfoundland provincial office.

2. In May 1975, consultants were commissioned to carry out a study to identify development opportunities and constraints associated with the Corner Brook Harbour area on the West Coast of Newfoundland. The study was funded by DREE, Transport Canada and the Government of Newfoundland. The report of the consultants, made public in October 1976, identified the lack of waterfront industrial land and harbour access as the chief constraints to potential development in the area.

Following the receipt of this report, the Government of Newfoundland submitted a proposal for the harbour area to DREE. A review of this proposal is presently being carried out. Completion of the review, however, required essential data on the potential environmental impact of the proposed projects on marine life in the harbour area. A preliminary analysis of those environmental factors is being conducted by the provincial government in consultation with federal environment officials.

Discussions with the provincial government and other federal departments are continuing regarding those elements of the proposal which are not conditional on the completion of the environmental analysis.

Insofar as Transport Canada is concerned:

1. Canadian Marine Transportation Administration, Ottawa Canadian Coast Guard, St. John's.

2. The Department of Regional Economic Expansion has prepared a proposal for a Canada/Newfoundland Subsidiary Agreement on Corner Brook and has requested comments from Transport Canada. The provincial government is funding an initial environmental evaluation which is being monitored by representatives from the Department of Regional Economic Expansion, Transport Canada, the Department of Fisheries and the Environment, as well as representatives of several provincial government departments.

Insofar as the Department of Fisheries and the Environment is concerned:

1. The Environmental Protection, Environmental Management and Fisheries and Marine Services of the Department of Fisheries and the Environment, are involved in the Corner Brook Harbour Development Study.

2. The Newfoundland Department of Industrial Development has engaged the consulting firm Ecologistics Ltd., to prepare an environmental evaluation of the entire project. The above (reply 1) Services of the Department of Fisheries and the Environment have submitted comments on ecologistics' preliminary report to the Newfoundland Department of Consumer Affairs and the Environment. The latter agency chairs the intergovernmental committee on environmental assessment of which DFE is a member.

Environmental studies are being conducted during the summer of 1978 on outstanding concerns respecting the potential effects this proposal development may have on resident and migratory species of fish. A report on the results of these studies is expected to be ready for evaluation by the parties concerned in late 1978 or early 1979.

FISHERIES

SMALL CRAFT HARBOURS PROJECTS IN DISTRICT OF HUMBER-ST. GEORGE'S-ST. BARBE—QUESTION ON THE ORDER PAPER ANSWERED

Question No. 17—By Senator Marshall:

What progress has been made on the following projects under the Small Craft Harbours Division of the Ministry of Fisheries in the district of Humber-St. George's-St. Barbe:

Anchor Point—harbour improvements.

Barr'd Harbour—landing wharf.

Bartlett's Harbour—engine and winch.

Bear Cove—groynes repairs and dredging.

Bellburns—landing wharf.

Benoit's Cove—wharf repairs and dredging.

Big Brook—wharf repairs.

Bird Cove—wharf repairs.
 Blue Beach—breakwater.
 Blue Cove—wharf repairs and dredging.
 Black Duck Cove—community stage and wharf repairs.
 Boat Harbour—breakwater wharf.
 Cape St. George—slipway construction.
 Allen's Cove—marina.
 Cow Head—dredging.
 Crabbe's River—breakwater, dredging, wharf repairs.
 Daniel's Harbour—redredging.
 Eddies Cove East—breakwater.
 Flower's Cove—community stage, wharf repairs and extension.
 Fox Island River—dredging, breakwater, and slipway.
 Gillams—wharf repairs.
 Gravels—slipway extension.
 Green Island Cove—community stage and wharf repairs.
 Lark Harbour—wharf repairs and extension.
 Lourdes—slipway.
 Neddy's Harbour—wharf repairs.
 New Ferolle—dredging.
 Parson's Pond—dredging.
 Port au Choix—wharf repairs, wharf extension and parking lots.
 Pond Cove—wharf repairs.
 River of Ponds—landing wharf.
 Rocky Harbour—wharf reconstruction and canopy.
 Sandy Cove—community stage, wharf repairs.
 Savage Cove—community stage, wharf repairs.
 Ship Cove—wharf.
 Stephenville—wharf repairs.
 St. George's—wharf repairs.
 Trout River—redredging and breakwater.

Reply by the Minister of Fisheries and the Environment:

Anchor Point—Harbour improvements will be completed during 1978/79.
 Barr'd Harbour—Landing wharf. Nil.
 Bartlett's Harbour—Engine and winch will be installed 1978/79.
 Bear Cove—Groyne repairs and dredging. Contract awarded for Groyne repairs.
 Bellburns—Landing wharf. In planning stages at Regional level.
 Benoit's Cove—Wharf repairs and dredging. Department of Public Works is providing cost estimates for wharf repairs. Dredging not required.
 Big Brook—Wharf repairs. Under review by Regional Office and Department of Public Works for report and cost estimated.

[Senator Marshall.]

Bird Cove—Wharf Repairs. Possible 1978/79 project, depending on availability of funds.
 Blue Beach—Breakwater. Harbour development project approved to be implemented over next two years.
 Blue Cove—Wharf repairs and dredging. Project approved. Work will be completed during 1978/79.
 Black Duck Cove—Community stage and wharf repairs. Project to be completed during fiscal year 1978/79.
 Boat Harbour—Breakwater wharf. Under review by Regional Office and Department of Public Works.
 Cape St. George—Slipway construction. Major Canada Works Program two breakwaters 1978/79. Slipway included.
 Allen's Cove—Marina. Regional officials discussing with Commodore.
 Cow Head—Dredging. Scheduled for 1978/79.
 Crabbe's River—Breakwater, dredging, wharf repairs. No plans for breakwater. Dredging and wharf repairs will be completed under Canada Works, 1978/79.
 Daniel's Harbour—Dredging. Scheduled for 1978/79.
 Eddies Cove East—Breakwater. Under review by Department of Public Works and Regional Office.
 Flower's Cove—Community state, wharf repairs and extension. Wharf reconstructed in fiscal 1977/78.
 Fox Island River—Dredging, breakwater and slipway. Major dredging contract by Department of Public Works 1978/79. Breakwater and slipway not planned.
 Gillams—Wharf repairs. Under review by Small Craft Harbours.
 Gravels—Slipway extension. Under review by Regional Small Craft Harbours.
 Green Island Cove—Community stage and wharf repairs. Under review.
 Lark Harbour—Wharf repairs and extension. New wharf and extension completed in 1977/78.
 Lourdes—Slipway. Under review.
 Neddy's Harbour—Wharf repairs. Under review.
 New Ferolle—Dredging. Under review.
 Parson's Pond—Dredging. Scheduled for 1978/79.
 Port aux Choix—Wharf repairs, wharf extension and parking lots. Wharf repairs completed. Wharf extension planned for 1979/80. One parking lot completed 1978/79.
 Pond Cove—Wharf repairs. Planned for future years.
 River of Ponds—Landing wharf. Under review.
 Rocky Harbour—Wharf construction and canopy. Completed 1978/79.
 Sandy Cove—Community stage, wharf repairs. Planned for future years.
 Savage Cove—Community stage, wharf repairs. Planned for future years.

Ship Cove—Wharf. Wharf completely reconstructed 1977/78.

Stephenville—Wharf repairs. Nil.

St. George's—Wharf repairs. Contract awarded.

Trout River—Redredging and breakwater. Dredging completed 1977/78. Breakwater under review by Department of Public Works and Regional Small Craft Harbours.

INDUSTRY

MOTOR VEHICLE AIR-CONDITIONING UNITS—QUESTION ON THE ORDER PAPER ANSWERED

Question No. 19—By Senator Flynn:

1. How many air-conditioning units for use in motor vehicles were sold in Canada in the year preceding May 26, 1976?

2. How many air-conditioning units for use of motor vehicles were sold in Canada in the year following May 26, 1976?

3. How much has the excise tax of $100.00 per unit on air-conditioning devices destined for use in motor cars yielded since it was imposed on May 26, 1976?

Reply by the President of the Privy Council:

I am informed by the Departments of Industry, Trade and Commerce and Revenue Canada as follows:

1. No record was maintained in Canada of air-conditioning units for use in motor vehicles prior to May 26, 1976. It was estimated that sales were in the order of 150,000 units in 1975.

2. 124,283 units were sold between April 1, 1976, and March 31, 1977.

3. $24,514,100.

COMMUNICATIONS

BELL CANADA AND NEWFOUNDLAND TELEPHONE COMPANY—QUESTION ON THE ORDER PAPER ANSWERED

Question No. 21—By Senator Marshall:

1. Is there any relationship, by way of ownership, between Bell Canada and the Newfoundland Telephone Company and, specifically, does Bell Canada own shares, and, if so, how many, in the Newfoundland Telephone Company in the Province of Newfoundland?

2. Who are the directors of the Newfoundland Telephone Company?

3. What is the relationship between the directors of the Newfoundland Telephone Company and Bell Canada?

4. Who is responsible for decisions affecting rates for telephone service in the Province of Newfoundland?

Reply by the Minister of Communications:

As far as the Department of Communications is concerned, the answer to the above question is as follows:

1. As of December 31, 1977, Bell Canada owned 78.2% of Newfoundland Telephone Company's common shares.

2. The directors of Newfoundland Telephone Company are as follows:

L. H. M. Ayre

Chairman, Ayre & Sons, Limited

St. John's, Newfoundland

A. A. Brait

President and Managing Director

Newfoundland Telephone

Company Limited

St. John's, Newfoundland

H. Collingwood

Chairman and President

Baine Johnston & Co. Ltd.

St. John's, Newfoundland

J. H. Farrell

Vice-President-Regulatory Matters

Bell Canada

Ottawa, Ontario

G. L. Henthorn

Vice-President and Comptroller

Bell Canada

Montreal, Quebec

H. L. Lake

Executive Vice-President

The Lake Group Ltd.

St. John's, Newfoundland

A. R. Lundrigan

President, Lundrigans Ltd.

Corner Brook, Newfoundland

M. T. Neill

Resident General Manager

Price (Nfld.) Pulp & Paper Ltd.

Grand Falls, Newfoundland

The Hon. F. A. O'Dea, Q.C.

Senior Partner

O'Dea, Greene, Puddester & Greene

St. John's, Newfoundland

F. J. O'Leary

Chairman, The St. John's Housing

Corporation

St. John's, Newfoundland

3. There are two officers of Bell Canada on the Board of Directors as of December 31, 1977. These officers are Mr. J. H. Farrell, Vice-President of Regulatory Matters and Mr. G. L. Henthorn, Comptroller.

4. The body which regulates telephone rates in Newfoundland is the Board of Commissioners of Public Utilities of Newfoundland.

AGRICULTURE

RESEARCH AND DEVELOPMENT RELATED TO FOOD AND AGRICULTURE—QUESTION ON THE ORDER PAPER ANSWERED

Question No. 23—By Senator Marshall:

As a result of a news announcement by Agriculture Canada, number C-37, dated 5 June 1978, on measures to strengthen and encourage research and development related to food and agriculture, are any consultations taking place with the Province of Newfoundland along the lines of

- (a) expansion of research to develop processing, distribution and retailing agricultural commodities in that province,
- (b) the development of more efficient agricultural machinery and equipment, and
- (c) the exploration of new crop development, keeping in mind the need for Newfoundland to try to become more self-sufficient in agricultural commodities because of the high import cost of those commodities?

Reply by the Minister of Agriculture:

(a) A program for expanded Processing, Distribution and Retailing sector research is under development. Details have yet to be worked out, but there could be benefits to Newfoundland through participation in the research or application of the results.

(b) A new type of small tractor for use on peat soils was recently developed by Agriculture Canada in co-operation with the Research Station at St. John's. It is undergoing trial now. Contracts are awarded annually by Agriculture Canada for research in specified engineering areas under the Development, Research and Evaluation in Agricultural Mechanization program. Tenders from anywhere in Canada are considered for research projects that meet the aims of the Research Branch.

(c) The New Crop Development Fund receives proposals and makes grants annually. Organizations may apply to the fund for assistance in developing new crops in any part of Canada.

FISHERIES

PRESS RELEASE "CANADIAN FISH QUOTAS TO INCREASE IN 1979"—QUESTION ON THE ORDER PAPER ANSWERED

Question No. 24—By Senator Marshall:

With respect to Press Release FMS-HQ-#13 dated May 11, 1978, "Canadian Fish Quotas to Increase in 1979," what interested bodies in the Province of Newfoundland, such as fishermen and trawler owners, will be consulted by region?

[Senator Marshall.]

Reply by the Minister of Fisheries and the Environment:

During the development of the 1979 groundfish fishing plan and Canadian Quota Allocations extensive consultations will take place during meetings of the Atlantic Offshore Groundfish Advisory Committee. Members of this committee represent inshore fishermen, trawler owners, unions, fishermen's associations and provincial governments.

BUSINESS OF THE SENATE

Senator Petten: Honourable senators, I move that the Senate adjourn during pleasure to the call of the bell at approximately 3.45 p.m.

By way of explanation, we are awaiting a bill from the other place. I understand that there is an all-party agreement to proceed reasonably quickly. It is expected that the bill in question will be introduced in the other place at approximately 3 o'clock, and we would hope to get it in the next three-quarters of an hour or so.

The Senate adjourned during pleasure.

At 4.10 p.m. the sitting was resumed.

CANADA ELECTIONS ACT

BILL TO PROVIDE ADDITIONAL ADVANCE POLLS—FIRST READING

The Hon. the Speaker informed the Senate that a message had been received from the House of Commons with Bill C-66, to provide for an additional advance poll in respect of certain by-elections.

Bill read first time.

SECOND READING

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this bill be read a second time?

Hon. George J. McIlraith: With leave, now. I might add that we will ask for such further consent as is required with a view to having all stages of the bill dealt with this afternoon, if that is agreeable to the Senate.

Senator Flynn: Let us take it step by step.

The Hon. the Speaker: Is leave granted, honourable senators?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

Senator McIlraith: Honourable senators, this bill is simple and direct in its form, and I am sure this is something that will be appreciated by all.

The by-elections called for October 16 did not take into account the harvest festival of Succoth. It was felt by most members of the Jewish community that this created a very embarrassing situation, because the advance polls, where they otherwise could have voted, were also held on days that are religious holidays for them, and, unless they were able to vote in the last hour of the voting days in the advance poll, they were precluded from voting. In consequence, the bill now before us, which is, as I said, very direct and simple in form, provides:

Notwithstanding any provision of the Canada Elections Act, an additional advance poll in each by-election shall be established, held, conducted and officered in the manner provided in that Act for advance polls on Thursday, the fourth day before the ordinary polling day at that by-election, and such additional advance poll shall, for all purposes of that Act, be regarded as an advance poll provided for therein.

It is, as I said, a simple and direct piece of legislation aimed at preventing the inadvertent disenfranchisement of a section of the voting public. I am sure this will commend itself to all parliamentarians. I might mention that the other place dealt with this bill rather quickly this afternoon, and I commend it to the favourable consideration of all honourable senators.

Hon. Jacques Flynn: Honourable senators, the sponsor of the bill spoke about its simple purpose, but he should have added that it was to correct an error on the part of the government. That error was caused by the fact that when the first group of by-elections were called on March 1, it was not really the intention of the government that they should take place. At that time we were told in the Senate to rush legislation through because there would be a general election in June. Later, the general election was postponed until the fall, but never at any time was there any serious intention that these by-elections should take place. In fact, it was only about three or four weeks ago that we knew that they would definitely take place, because the government is governing by opinion polls at this time. The Prime Minister looks at a Gallup poll or some other poll and says, "I am going to delay the election."

If the government had seriously intended the by-elections to take place when it chose the date on March 1 last, it would have realized the difficulty created by that choice—a difficulty which this bill is intended to correct. But, as I have said, at no time was the government really thinking seriously of holding these by-elections. We were to have a general election in June, July or August, even as late as October or the beginning of November, and if that had been the case then these by-elections would not be taking place. This is the consequence of the practice of the government in governing and calling elections on the basis of polls.

Of course, we on this side are not going to disenfranchise a group of citizens because of an error on the part of the government. We are going to co-operate with the other place in correcting this mistake on the part of the government—another one in a series that they have made over the years, and more particularly since last fall. We have been operating under the possibility of a general election for over a year now, and now we are to have a mini general election on October 16. We on this side want everyone who has the right to vote to be able to exercise that right.

Senator Grosart: I wonder if the sponsor of the bill could inform the Senate how long the bill, once it becomes an act, will be in force?

Senator McIlraith: It will be in force until the next general election.

Senator Flynn: When will that be?

Senator McIlraith: Well, had I the gift of seeing into the crystal ball, as the Leader of the Opposition seemed to have when he claimed knowledge of the intentions of those who fix the election date, I would be able to answer that question in specific terms. I am afraid I have been around this legislative chamber and the other place for far too long, and am able to resist the temptation to gaze into the crystal ball.

Senator Forsey: I wonder if I might ask the sponsor of the bill who is responsible for the curious word "officered" to which Senator Connolly drew my attention a little while ago. It is a very odd word indeed, and I wonder, in fact, if it exists.

Senator McIlraith: I have no idea, but I assume it means that the returning officers are faced with the responsibility of providing the officers necessary at an advance poll. The honourable senator has good experience in some of that process, and knows exactly how it is carried out on the days advance polls are held.

Senator Forsey: Yes. But the point is that it is a curious bit of bureaucratese as a translation for "et pourvu d'officiers", which seems perfectly clear, but has been translated into the pidgin English which some of the bureaucrats seem to enjoy so much.

Senator Marchand: Honorable senators, I could say to Senator Forsey and the house that the word in French, "officier," is not much better than "officer" in English.

Motion agreed to and bill read second time.

THIRD READING

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this bill be read the third time?

Senator McIlraith: Honourable senators, with leave, now.

Senator Flynn: Certainly.

The Hon. the Speaker: Is leave granted, honourable senators?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

Motion agreed to and bill read third time and passed.

ROYAL ASSENT AND PROROGATION OF PARLIAMENT

NOTICE

The Hon. the Speaker informed the Senate that the following communication had been received:

RIDEAU HALL
OTTAWA
GOVERNMENT HOUSE

October 6, 1978

Madam,

I have the honour to inform you that the Honourable Ronald Martland, Puisne Judge of the Supreme Court of Canada, in his capacity as Deputy Governor General, will proceed to the Senate Chamber on Tuesday, the 10th day of October, at 4.30 p.m., for the purpose of giving Royal Assent to certain bills and proroguing the Third Session of the Thirtieth Parliament of Canada.

I have the honour to be,
Madam,
Your obedient servant,
Edmond Joly de Lotbinière
Administrative Secretary to the
Governor General

The Honourable

The Speaker of the Senate,
Ottawa.

The Senate adjourned during pleasure.

At 4.30 p.m. the sitting was resumed.

The Senate adjourned during pleasure.

ROYAL ASSENT

The Honourable Ronald Martland, Puisne Judge of the Supreme Court of Canada, Deputy of His Excellency the Governor General, having come and being seated at the foot of the Throne, and the House of Commons having been summoned, and being come with their Speaker, the Honourable the Deputy of His Excellency the Governor General was pleased to give the Royal Assent to the following bill:

An Act to provide for an additional advance poll in respect of certain by-elections.

PROROGATION SPEECH

The Honourable the Deputy of His Excellency the Governor General was pleased to close the Third Session of the Thirtieth Parliament with the following speech:

Honourable Members of the Senate:

Members of the House of Commons:

The Third Session of the Thirtieth Parliament was opened by Her Majesty the Queen, on October 18, 1977. Since then Canadians in many regions have been honoured by visits from several members of the Royal Family and Her Majesty visited

[The Hon. the Speaker.]

Newfoundland and Saskatchewan as well as Edmonton, where she opened the Eleventh Commonwealth Games.

Members of the House of Commons:

This was the first session in which the House of Commons was broadcast on radio and television. In many parts of Canada, people may watch and listen to the deliberations of their elected representatives at the same time that they are occurring. In all parts of Canada, citizens may, on a regular basis, watch and listen to recorded segments of the more important proceedings.

As a result of these broadcasts, many more citizens have become aware of the issues that we face and are able to understand better the process of responsible parliamentary government.

Honourable Members of the Senate:

Members of the House of Commons:

During this session Canadian unity has been a paramount issue. The Government put before you a number of measures and you established a Special Joint Committee to consider these and other proposals on the Constitution of Canada.

You have also, in this session, focussed on international affairs. During this session, the House of Commons held a major debate on our foreign relations for the first time in many years. The Government has continued its efforts for peace among nations and the maintenance of basic human rights in all parts of the world.

The Canadian economy and, indeed, the world economy have been of great concern during this session. In July, the Prime Minister attended a meeting of the heads of government of the leading industrial nations and, since then, the Government has announced a number of major economic initiatives, many of which you will consider in a future session.

Much of your time has been used for discussion of economic matters. You enacted five measures amending the Income Tax Act, the Excise Tax Act and the Customs Tariff. These amendments provided many incentives to economic growth. They also included special measures to assist small businesses.

You amended the Anti-inflation Act in order to facilitate the period of de-control and you extended the Bank Act so that your study of proposed revisions to this legislation may be complete. You enacted a measure to permit the Export Development Corporation to provide greater support to Canadian industry and for the Farm Credit Corporation to do more for Canadian farmers.

Matters relating to energy were of great importance in this session. You passed the Northern Pipeline Act which will govern the construction of one of the greatest projects undertaken on this continent. You also enacted measures to provide for the monitoring of the financial operations of petroleum corporations and to stimulate the development of the tar sands of Alberta.

The institutions and agencies of government were of great interest to you. A measure was enacted to create the Comptroller General of Canada and you passed two Acts revising the structures of Air Canada and of Canadian National Railways.

You enacted important amendments to the Canada Labour Code and you established the Canadian Centre for Occupational Health and Safety.

Amendments were made to the Pension Act and, twice, improvements were made to the compensation of former prisoners of war.

A measure was enacted to control the discounting of tax rebates and important amendments were made to the Criminal Code to allow trials in the official language of the accused.

After many years of deliberation, you established a Maritime Code. You also passed a measure assisting the development of facilities in fishing and recreational harbours.

You twice amended the Canada Elections Act.

Many other actions of great importance were undertaken during this session.

Members of the House of Commons:

I thank you for the provision you have made for the public services in the previous and in the current fiscal year.

Honourable Members of the Senate:

Members of the House of Commons:

May Divine Providence continue to bless our country.

The Honourable The Speaker of the Senate then said:

Honourable Members of the Senate:

Members of the House of Commons:

It is the will and pleasure of the Honourable the Deputy of His Excellency the Governor General that this Parliament be prorogued until three o'clock in the afternoon tomorrow, Wednesday, the 11th day of October, 1978, to be here holden; and this Parliament is accordingly prorogued until three o'clock in the afternoon tomorrow, Wednesday, the 11th day of October, 1978.

---

APPENDIX

(See p. 1042)

THE CONSTITUTION

SECOND REPORT OF SPECIAL JOINT COMMITTEE

WEDNESDAY, October 4, 1978.

The Special Joint Committee of the Senate and the House of Commons on the Constitution of Canada has the honour to present its

SECOND REPORT

On June 12, 1978, the Prime Minister tabled a document entitled "A Time for Action" which set out "principles for the renewal of the Canadian federation" and on June 20, Bill C-60 was given first reading. On June 27 the House of Commons and on June 29 the Senate passed resolutions establishing a Special Joint Committee of the Senate and the House of Commons to "examine and report upon proposals that have been and in the future are from time to time made public by the Government of Canada, on subjects related to the Constitution of Canada". On June 30, the Committee held its organizational meeting.

The first full meeting of the Committee was held on August 15 and 34 meetings have been held since then.

An Interim Report

When the Minister of State for Federal-Provincial Relations appeared before the Committee on August 15, he drew attention to the unusual manner of proceeding—the submission of a Bill rather than a White Paper, which was then referred to the Committee following only first reading. The Minister stressed that the approach was deliberate—a Bill to emphasize the urgency which the Government attached to constitutional reform; the reference of that Bill to committee before second reading to demonstrate that "the government is not only open to every constructive and helpful comment and suggestion, it very much wants them".

In this interim report we have sought to offer constructive comment. But we have also been very much aware that the subject is vast and complex. We have concluded that we should only offer our views where we have sufficient evidence to present balanced and responsible comments. Moreover, we know that a meeting of First Ministers on constitutional change, which is bound to have a major effect on the Government's future action in this field, will take place at the end of this month. Finally, the report of the Task Force on Canadian Unity will not be available until at least December. For all these reasons, we are not now in a position to submit a final report.

Work Schedule

The decision to begin hearings in mid-summer complicated the Committee's work. Some witnesses were unavailable; others could not find time to prepare submissions which would take proper account of the detailed nature of the Government's proposals. Nevertheless, the Committee received much useful testimony. To everyone who responded to the Committee's request for written submissions or agreed to appear as witnesses, we express our appreciation.

In addition to meeting with federal ministers and officials, the Committee has already heard from representatives of some Provincial and Territorial Governments, several national organizations and many other experts and knowledgeable witnesses. A list of those who have appeared as witnesses is attached as Appendix "A".

In response to its letters of invitation and advertisements in newspapers across the country the Committee has received some four hundred replies from concerned citizens. Further communications continue to be received daily. A list of all who have submitted briefs or letters to date to the Committee is attached as Appendix "B".

Future Work

The meetings already held have provided a national public forum for discussion of constitutional questions and specific commentary on the Government's proposals. Meetings with federal ministers and officials elaborated and clarified the Government's proposals. The Committee has also offered an opportunity to present their views to Provincial and Territorial Governments. Representatives of the Government of the Province of British Columbia have appeared. A scheduled meeting with the Premier of New Brunswick had to be postponed because of the impending provincial election. Representatives of the governments of the Yukon and Northwest Territories have also met the Committee and we have received written reactions from Premier Moores of Newfoundland. Other premiers have indicated they wish to comment on the federal proposals first at the First Ministers' meeting at the end of October. After that date, however, it might be desirable and possible to arrange meetings with representatives of other provincial governments. Our meetings with representatives of national organizations and other experts have also provided an important sounding board for public opinion.

We believe the Committee's work should be continued in the new session. However, the Committee is dealing with a large volume of evidence on subjects of great complexity, and will need further expert assistance.

Recommendation 1.

The Special Joint Committee on the Constitution of Canada should be reconstituted in the new session and the new Order of Reference should include a provision empowering the Committee to retain the services of advisers.

Scope of the Report

Because the Government has presented Bill C-60 as a set of proposals for discussion rather than as an ordinary bill, the Committee assumed that the Government would not proceed with this legislation early in the forthcoming session unless it received broad support. Such broad support does not exist at the moment, although some of the principles enunciated in the Bill were well received. While objections to certain parts of the Bill are related to its wording rather than its intent and substance, several other elements were vigorously challenged by witnesses. We decided, therefore, in this second report to concentrate on the clauses where a measure of consensus exists.

Although the Committee has already received thoughtful testimony, we are in a position to attempt detailed but preliminary conclusions and recommendations only on some aspects of the Charter of Rights and Freedoms. On other elements of the proposals we can only make some general comments.

Subsequent to tabling Bill C-60, the Government released on August 8 a paper entitled "The Canadian Constitution and Constitutional Amendment". While the Committee has received insufficient testimony to take any position on this difficult issue, we share the Government's conviction that an agreed amending procedure is central to constitutional reform.

The Minister of State for Federal-Provincial Relations several times asserted that, although the federal Government had not made specific proposals about the division of powers, it recognized that this was a major element of constitutional reform which it was ready to discuss at any federal-provincial meeting. This is an area on which the Committee has received little testimony, but we do recognize its importance as part and parcel of the process of constitutional reform and will be seeking more information and views.

The Need for Constitutional Reform

The need for constitutional reform and for an appropriate amending formula to permit patriation of the Canadian constitution is apparent and is seen by many people as urgent. Nevertheless, unanimous agreement at the federal-provincial level is even less likely than in the past. Indeed, the basic goal of the present Government of the Province of Quebec is not constitutional reform but separation from the rest of Canada. Thus, in the forthcoming negotiations, a most important partner cannot be expected to play its full role. This situation may lead to the preservation of the status quo, which the Quebec government could be expected to exploit. This paradox was raised by Professor Léon Dion, a prominent political scientist from Laval University. He said:

"Therefore, we have to decide whether it would be better to carry out the revision of the Constitution immediately, without the participation of the Quebec Government, or whether on the contrary the whole matter should be postponed as long as Quebec, through a referendum or otherwise, would not have succeeded in expressing a unanimous opinion. By waiting for Quebec, we risk causing a serious delay in the reshaping of our country, but by acting without Quebec, we risk doing useless work and reaping sour grapes."

This dilemma exists but it is probable that a substantial majority of Quebecers want a renewed federalism sooner rather than later. Canadians should not get the impression that the Constitution cannot be changed.

The Process of Constitutional Reform

Two aspects of the process of constitutional reform originally proposed by the Government have been of particular interest to the Committee. First, Bill C-60 makes the implicit claim that the Canadian Parliament has the right to change certain federal institutions unilaterally. Secondly, the Government has proposed an approach to constitutional reform based on two different stages. Those two issues will be considered in turn in this report.

(a) Parliament's Right to Act Unilaterally

When discussing the Order of Reference in the House of Commons on June 27, the Prime Minister said that "the Parliament of Canada has, under the present Constitution, the power to amend the Constitution . . . except in certain areas." He proposed that "we exercise our rights under Section 91" to replace the Senate with a House of the Federation and to codify those sections concerning the Crown. Subsequently, the Minister of State for Federal-Provincial Relations and the Minister of Justice claimed that, while the Government was seeking the agreement of the provinces to these constitutional changes, the federal Parliament had the right unilaterally to amend these elements of the British North America Act.

The Committee sought the views of constitutional experts on this point. They were not in agreement, some challenging the Government's position, others agreeing that parliament had the right to act unilaterally.

In the face of conflicting opinions held by recognized experts the Committee adopted the following resolution:

"That this Committee report to the Senate and House of Commons its concern with the position of the Government to the effect that it can proceed unilaterally, that is, by a mere Law of Parliament, with the provisions of Bill C-60 respecting the Senate of Canada and the position of the Crown."

"That the Committee include in its report a recommendation that the Government consider the advisability of referring these provisions to the Supreme Court of Canada for a decision as to whether they are intra vires

the federal government acting alone, either through unilateral action by the Parliament of Canada under Section 91(1) of the B.N.A. Act, or by means of a joint address from the Parliament of Canada to the Parliament of the United Kingdom without the agreement or substantial compliance of the governments of the provinces.

On September 14 the Minister of Justice announced that the Government would seek an advisory opinion from the Supreme Court with regard to the Senate but would not refer the question of amending the sections of the B.N.A. Act dealing with the Crown and the Governor General since no change of role or powers was intended.

The Committee welcomes this reference of the constitutional legality of the Senate provisions of the Bill to the Supreme Court. It notes, however, that the advisability of unilateral action in such matters is a separate issue.

(b) The phases of constitutional reform

The government has proposed two stages of constitutional reform. Phase I would be limited mainly to the charter of rights and to federal institutions covered by Bill C-60 with a target date of July 1, 1979. Phase II would be devoted to the division of powers between the federal and provincial governments with a target date of July 1, 1981. This approach raised serious concern.

Provincial premiers expressed their position in Regina on August 10 as follows:

"It was agreed that discussions on constitutional reform cannot be compartmentalized into artificial divisions. Institutional and jurisdictional problems interact in such a way that they must be considered together . . . A comprehensive review is unlikely to be successful if arbitrary deadlines are imposed."

Evidence presented to the Committee raised the same concern. Many Canadians feel that changes in the role and composition of federal institutions should be considered in the light of concrete proposals for a new division of powers because they are closely inter-related. For instance, if provincial powers were to be substantially extended, the case for strong provincial representation in Parliament and for direct input into its decision-making would be considerably weakened. That case would become much stronger however, if a new division of powers were to extend significantly the areas of federal responsibility.

The Committee agrees with the government's desire to proceed with celerity and notes Mr. Lalonde's statement that formal discussions on the division of powers would begin during the federal-provincial conference at the end of October. The Prime Minister has since expressed his views in his recent letter to Premier Allan Blakeney:

"There is no necessity for the 'jurisdictional problems' to be considered apart from 'institutional' areas: discussion of the two can begin and can proceed simultaneously. We think, however, that action that can constitutionally be taken in Canada, by Parliament acting within its own powers, should be taken. It should not have to wait upon other revisions that may require more time to consider and that can only be completed by the British Parliament. The Federal Government does not any more than the Premiers, want an "unrealistic" or "rigid" time-table."

The Committee notes the clarification made by the Prime Minister and considers that the proposals on the division of powers to be put forward at the end of October will help greatly in its future work. However, some witnesses seriously doubted the possibility and the desirability of Parliament's dealing with all the matters covered by Bill C-60 before July 1, 1979 if concurrent consideration of the two phases and federal-provincial consultations are to take place as they should.

The Preamble and the Aims of the Federation

The Committee agrees with the intent and the goals expressed in the preamble of Bill C-60 and in the section dealing with the aims of the Federation. We believe, however, that this part of the Bill is repetitive and complicated and reads like an ordinary piece of legislation. We prefer the approach suggested by Marcel Faribault and Robert M. Fowler when they wrote:

"A constitution is not an ordinary statute. Its spirit is more important than its letter. It should, of course, be precise and carefully worded. But it can afford to speak with inspiration and some emotion to the people whose life it governs. Its form and style need not follow the arid legalisms and technicalities of a tax statute. It should be cast in words that appeal to people's emotions and inspire them to some consciousness of a national identity. If, thereby, the task of judges who may be required to interpret the constitution is made unfamiliar and somewhat more difficult, this is no serious objection. This is what judges are for, and Canadian judges will respond to inspiration like other people. (Ten to One—the Confederation Wager) McClelland and Stewart Limited, 1965, p. 27).

The Committee recommends that the two parts of the Bill be redrafted in this spirit and in a more concise form.

We also recommend the recognition of economic rights as illustrated by the principles set out in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights. Further, although we recognize that the concept of multiculturalism is implicitly covered by the phrase "equal respect for the many origins, creeds and cultures . . . that help shape Canada," we urge that the word "multiculturalism" should also be included.

Recommendation 2.

The Preamble and Statement of Aims of the proposed Bill should be redrafted for conciseness, style and content.

Later in our report we propose a further change in this part of the Bill concerning the reference to the English and French languages.

We strongly urge that consultation take place during the process of revision and redrafting. Outside experts should be invited to participate in this new exercise and our Committee could be used as a sounding board.

The Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms

The purpose of the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms (clauses 5-29 in Bill C-60) is to affirm "that in a free and democratic society there are certain rights and freedoms which must be assured to all of the people of that society," individually and collectively. This purpose is to be accomplished by elevating them and removing them from the ordinary exercise of legislative and administrative authority. In this respect the Charter represents an advance over the present Canadian Bill of Rights, itself a crucial innovation in our law.

We believe a charter of Rights and Freedoms is generally supported by Canadians. It also has our endorsement.

A few witnesses said that an entrenched bill of rights would undermine the rightful prerogatives of Parliament and give the courts too much latitude. We do not feel the matter involves an opposition between Parliament and the courts. Rather a constitutionally entrenched bill of rights combines the competences of both for the public benefit. The narrow limits within which courts now "legislate" would be somewhat broadened, but only where the people most need protection from governmental action—their fundamental rights and freedoms.

The unambiguous constitutionalization and effective entrenchment of a charter would mark another major advance in our law. We therefore recommend the adoption of a charter.

Recommendation 3.

A Canadian charter of Rights and Freedoms should form an integral part of the Constitution of Canada, but the proposed Charter should be redrafted.

(a) Human Rights

To be effective, we believe a charter must enjoy a clear supremacy over ordinary legislation. Since that supremacy has been denied to the predecessor Canadian Bill of Rights by the courts through the so-called "frozen concepts" doctrine, the factors causing that denial must be avoided in the proposed Charter. A principal cause was the verbal tense of the initial declaratory statement ("there have existed and shall continue to exist"). The Charter is an improvement over the Bill of Rights because it discards the past tense ("There have existed") in the declaration, but it is still a mistake to employ the modal verb "continue" ("shall continue to enjoy") in clauses 6 and 7. Since this verb contains a past as well as a future reference, it thus implies that the protected rights and freedoms should exist in the future only in the way and to the extent that they have existed in the past. The unadorned future imperative verb ("shall enjoy") accomplishes all that is necessary without implying any limitation in the scope of the protection. The French version of the Charter uses only the verb form jouit, "enjoys".

Similarly, the remedial provision in clause 23 is still too weak to remove all doubt that Parliament intends the Charter to be an overriding statute. While it improves upon section 2 of the Bill of Rights by dropping the implication that the only recourse for the courts is to construe any offending laws consistently with the Bill, we insist upon a provision that insofar as any law is inconsistent with the Charter it shall be pro tanto invalid or inoperative.

Recommendation 4.

To ensure that the provisions of the proposed Charter are interpreted by the courts as overriding other legislation, clause 6, 7 and 23 should be redrafted.

While the words "individual" and "person" refer to the same natural entity, we believe that it is the human person that is the proper subject of rights and freedoms. The word "individual" connotes the individuation or distinctness of the human being, but not his or her dignity.

We are also troubled by the limitation to natural persons or individuals of the right to the use and employment of property, and the right not to be deprived thereof except in accordance with law. We can see no prima facie reason why corporations and groupings of persons should be denied this protection. Moreover, the broadening of the protection would meet the concern expressed before the Committee by Inuit spokesmen, who feared that the limitation to individuals would deprive their preferred form of property holding of the protection of the Charter. This is a further reason for the redrafting of clause 6.

The right not to be deprived of the use and enjoyment of property is qualified by the phrase "except in accordance with law." We would ask to have considered whether the concept "due process of law", as in the present Canadian Bill of Rights, would not provide more satisfactory protection.

We are puzzled by the introductory words of clause 7, "In addition to the fundamental rights and freedoms declared by section 6". In our view the legal protections in clause 7 are specifications of some of those in clause 6 (principally due process of law) rather than additions to them. There is a similar problem with clause 9, which as located is discontinuous with clause 6, whereas it should be linked with the principle of equal protection of the law in that clause.

Recommendation 5.

The proposed Charter should be revised to indicate more clearly the relationships among different clauses.

We also heard evidence to the effect that the legal civil liberties protected are selective and incomplete. We share this concern, but we have some confidence that the appropriate expression of these rights will take place through the courts, given the aid of both parts of our recommendation 4. We would therefore propose two amendments to clause 7.

As interpreted by the courts, the pre-trial rights to retain and instruct counsel without delay appears often ineffectual as applied. We believe that the deficiency lies largely in the lack of any stated obligation on the part of the state to facilitate retention and instruction of counsel.

Moreover, in view of the increased concurrency of legislation in the criminal and quasi-criminal fields, we are convinced that the right not to be placed in double jeopardy must be explicitly guaranteed.

Recommendation 6.

Clause 7 should be redrafted to provide for the obligation to facilitate retention and instruction of counsel and for the protection against double jeopardy.

We have grave reservations about clause 8 of the Charter. It would create two new rights, but only for citizens. The first is the right to move to and reside in any part of Canada, the second the right to acquire and hold property and to pursue the gaining of a livelihood anywhere in Canada. We can see an expansion of freedom in the provision that the two rights are protected from limitation on the basis of residence or domicile, previous residence or domicile, or birth. But we question whether the restriction of such rights to citizens alone belongs in the Constitution.

While landed immigrants currently have the same rights as citizens to move, reside, hold property, and work everywhere in Canada, we are aware that geographical limitations on immigrants as conditions of their admission have been considered in recent years. There may be circumstances which justify such limitations, but we would not wish to engrave in the Constitution a permanent distinction between the rights of citizens and landed immigrants even to gain for citizens the expanded liberty referred to above.

We are strengthened in our reservations about clause 8 by its relationship to clause 6 and 9 respectively. In clause 6 the right to the use and enjoyment of property, to equality before the law and to the equal protection of the law is guaranteed to every person, whether citizen, landed immigrant, temporary resident or mere visitor. In other words, section 6 guarantees to everyone substantially the same rights as are recognized by clause 8 as belonging only to citizens. Similarly the injunction in section 9 against discrimination because of national or ethnic origin might be interpreted to be inconsistent with the limitation of section 8 to citizens. We can foresee a century of acrimonious litigation if clause 8 is allowed to stand.

This latter consideration might be resolved by making clause 8 subject to clause 6, but that would not remove our first concern, viz., the establishment of a constitutional preference for citizens in an area where so permanent a distinction is unwarranted. We therefore firmly recommend that clause 8 be withdrawn.

Recommendation 7.

Clause 8 of the proposed Charter should be deleted.

Various additions have been proposed to the prohibited grounds of discrimination in clause 9, but with one exception we prefer to remain with the universally accepted grounds of "race, national or ethnic origin, language, colour, religion, age or sex", as in clause 9. Grounds such as physical or other disability or sexual preference might be meaningful in legislation which provides protections with respect to employment, accommodation, and the provision of goods and services, as much as human rights legislation does. But the political and legal rights and freedoms contained in clauses 6 and 7 would not be expanded by the addition of these grounds, since they are already expressly guaranteed by those sections to every person without exception.

The further ground of marital status has, however, a greater plausibility. It is contained among the prescribed grounds of discrimination in section 3 of the Canadian Human Rights Act, and is also found in most of the provincial human rights acts. We certainly favor it as a goal. At the same time we are concerned that its inclusion could create possible problems for differential treatment of single and married persons in tax laws or pension legislation or unemployment insurance. We recommend that the ground of marital status be added to the prohibited grounds of discrimination if the Government can resolve this practical problem.

With respect to the electoral rights contained in clause 10 and the fundamental parliamentary rules established by clauses 11 and 12, we have also received suggestions for amendment. However, we prefer to retain these rights in the relatively minimal form in the Charter rather than to encourage judicial involvement in political questions by providing further detailed rules. These should be left to ordinary legislation.

We find substantial problems with clause 24. On the one hand, clause 24 might be interpreted to allow anyone at anytime to obtain a declaration in the abstract, even in the absence of a case or controversy. In our view this would amount to an abuse of the courts. On the other hand, clause 24 appears to make the protected rights ones of last resort. Any request for a declaration might be met by an argument that some other remedy is available to the litigant and that he must pursue that remedy before proceeding. At the very least, such an issue could consume several days of court time. The problem is an awkward one, but we believe it can be met by redrafting.

In effect, the courts should have power to grant whatever remedy may be appropriate in the circumstances, including pecuniary damages, to enforce the protected rights and freedoms. This should explicitly include the right to hold evidence inadmissible in the interests of justice where it has been obtained by means inconsistent with the protections of clauses 6 and 7. Moreover, the courts should have the specific obligation placed upon them to grant an effective remedy where a denial of rights has occurred. They must not be allowed to decline to intervene.

Recommendation 8.

Clause 24 should be redrafted to ensure that it requires the courts to provide a remedy where there is a denial of rights and that the remedy is adequate.

Clause 25 of the Charter serves two purposes. First, it instructs the courts on how to interpret the Charter by making explicit that the protected rights and freedoms are not absolutes but may be limited in their exercise or enjoyment in the interest of several aims justifiable in a free and democratic society. In our view the Charter would in any event be read this way by the courts, and the explicit direction to the courts is unnecessary. Coupled with the second purpose of the clause, it is also harmful through overextension. This first purpose should be therefore abandoned.

The second purpose of the clause is to replace section 6 of the Canadian Bill of Rights, which preserves the limitation of liberty by the War Measures Act, allowing for its invocation "upon the issue of a proclamation of the Governor in Council declaring that war, invasion, or insurrection, real or apprehended, exists." In the Charter the War Measures Act is preserved by implication rather than explicitly.

The case for justifiable limitations on rights by the War Measures Act applies principally to the political rights and freedoms in clause 6 rather than to the legal rights and freedoms of clause 7. Many of the more precise legal protections in clause 7 should not require limitation even in wartime crises. For example, we do not see how the state could ever be justified in imposing cruel and unusual punishment. In our view, any limitations on the protected rights should be exactly spelled out in the Charter. Moreover, the accountability of the Government to Parliament for the invocation and administration of entrenching legislation should be established by the Charter.

Recommendation 9.

Clause 25 should be replaced by a clause which exactly specifies permissible limitations on protected rights and freedoms by the War Measures Act or similar legislation, and the Government should be required to justify to Parliament the invocation of such legislation.

Clause 26, providing that the Charter shall not derogate from existing rights and freedoms, is a useful one, but, in singling out the native peoples for special mention, might unintentionally restrict their rights by referring only to the rights and freedoms they may have acquired by virtue of The Royal Proclamation of October 7, 1763. In our view, it would be preferable to omit the reference to this particular document.

Recommendation 10.

Clause 26 should be redrafted to omit the reference to the Royal Proclamation of 1763.

We have resisted invitations to include economic rights in the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms. In our view, the role of the Charter is to limit the powers of governments, not to increase them. In any event, we have suggested that economic rights be included in the clause on the aims of federation.

We would also add two additional clauses to the Charter. First, we believe that special programs on behalf of disadvantagged groups or persons should be protected. Such programs are intended to prevent or reduce disadvantages suffered by groups on the basis of such factors as are specifically authorized by the Canadian Human Rights Act. This protection should perhaps be added to clause 9.

Recommendation 11.

The proposed Charter should not prevent special programs on behalf of disadvantaged groups.

Second, we believe there should be provision for reasonable access to government documents and records. We would not wish to attempt to spell out in a constitution precise requirements as to the ready availability of information, but we think that some obligation on the government to inform the people should be made explicit in a charter of rights. Without knowledge, there can be no democracy.

Recommendation 12.

The proposed Charter should provide that people are entitled to reasonable access to documents of governments and government agencies.

(b) Linguistic rights

The Charter of rights and freedoms contained in Bill C-60 also provides meaningful constitutional guarantees for the use of English and French and in the field of education. The Committee endorses what Mr. Claude Ryan, the leader of the Quebec Liberal Party, has said about those provisions in the attachment to his letter to the Committee:

"With respect to language, if the federal bill is adopted, the country will have taken a decisive step towards justice and equality. In certain matters, it sanctions the official character of English and French. New Brunswick and Ontario now both fall under the provisions of section 133 (B.N.A. Act) which had hitherto been meant for Quebec only. The bill recognizes new language rights for francophones in certain courts of the country, in education, in federal government services and institutions, etc."

The Committee recognizes the need to protect basic linguistic rights by means of constitutional guarantees. Beyond that, progress in the use of a minority language can only be assured if Parliament and the Legislatures have the political will to promote it. Minority groups must also receive support from governments to help sustain and promote their cultures. A language cannot flourish without a cultural environment that protects its . . .

Ultimately, the progress of bilingualism in Canada will depend upon the evolution of public opinion, not on compulsion. In that context, more rapid improvements will occur when Canadians realize that learning English or French as a second language is desirable not so much as a political concession to another group but as a source of personal cultural enrichment.

The Commissioner of Official Languages, Mr. Maxwell Yalden, has pointed out that in some instances Bill C-60 does not go as far as the Official Languages Act and expressed the fear that the Courts might attach more importance to the provisions contained in the Constitution than to those included in a simple act of Parliament. The points raised by Mr. Yalden should be taken into account in the revision of the provisions of Bill C-60, particularly in the statement of aims of the federation where English and French are referred to as "principal spoken languages" rather than "the official languages".

Recommendation 13.

The English and French languages should be clearly mentioned in the statement of aims of the Federation as having equal status as the official languages of the Parliament and Government of Canada.

The Committee believes the Charter of Rights and Freedoms could benefit greatly from meaningful consultations with the provinces at the forthcoming conference. Important parts of the Charter fall under provincial jurisdiction and the premiers may wish to go beyond Bill C-60 in protecting individual and collective rights.

With regard to entrenchment of the Charter we regard it as desirable that a satisfactory amending formula be arrived at prior to the formal proceedings necessary to entrench.

In the course of redrafting the Charter, the process of open consultation recommended in the previous section of this report should be followed. More specifically, some of the experts who appeared before the Committee should be consulted.

The Monarchy

Some members of the Committee are convinced that Bill C-60 as drafted would significantly change the role of the Monarchy in Canada. Others do not agree. When Mr. Lalonde appeared before us, he observed that this role had evolved since 1867 and he stated that the provisions of the Bill were intended to take this evolution into account but not to change the present status of the Crown.

The Prime Minister confirmed that view in his letter to Mr. Blakeney. He wrote:

"... the purpose of the federal government is to make clear that the Queen remains the "sovereign head" of Canada and to have that position embedded formally in our Constitution. All that the proposals do with respect to the Monarch and the Governor General is to state the present reality as it is, taking into account the developments in our constitutional practice since 1867. It is the view of the federal government that, in any revised Constitution, such a statement of the present constitutional reality is desirable ..."

The Committee takes note of this statement. A number of Members of the Committee think it is undesirable to codify the functions of all the major institutions of government which are now defined largely by evolving conventions. In any case, we are not yet in a position at this time to redraft the provisions of Bill C-60 dealing with the Monarchy.

The Courts and Parliament

Bill C-60 contains important provisions concerning the courts. Concern has been expressed about the method of appointment of judges to the Supreme Court proposed in the Bill and about proposals for providing regional representations on that court.

Proposals have also been made with regard to the reform of the House of Commons, including its composition and its role.

Most of our witnesses have expressed views on the subject of a second chamber. Indeed, it is probably the topic on which the widest range of opinion has been manifested. Four major proposals have been advanced: an elected Senate, a House of the Federation as provided in Bill C-60, a House of the Provinces similar to the Bundesrat in West Germany, and modified versions of the present Senate. There has been no agreement among witnesses on an appropriate second chamber.

The Committee is not in a position at this stage to make specific recommendations on these most important proposals respecting the Courts and Parliament. The overwhelming body of witnesses and a substantial majority of the members of the Committee are prepared to recommend, however, that the Parliament of Canada should have a second Chamber and that the Senate as now constituted should be reformed.

Respectfully submitted,

Maurice Lamontagne
Joint Chairman

(Appendix "A" to report.)Witnesses who appeared before the Committee

Names are listed in the order in which they appeared at the hearings. The issue of the Minutes of Proceedings of the Committee in which their evidence is recorded is indicated.

	Issue No.
Lalonde, The Honourable Marc, Minister of State for Federal-Provincial Relations	1 to 3	Mr. Gordon F. Gibson, M.L.A., Leader of the Liberal Party in British Columbia;	9
Dr. B. L. Strayer, Assistant Deputy Minister of Justice	1, 2 and 8	Mr. Ronald G. Atkey, Barrister and Solicitor.	9
Mr. R. G. Robertson, Secretary to the Cabinet for Federal-Provincial Relations	3	From the Canadian Bar Association:	10
Representing the Legislative Assembly of the Northwest Territories:	4	Dr. Gérard V. La Forest, Q.C., Mr. David Matas.
Mr. Arnold McCallum, Minister of Health, Local Government and Social Services		From the Canadian Human Rights Commission:	11
Representing the Government of the Yukon Territory:	4	Mr. G. L. Fairweather, Chief Commissioner; Mrs. Rita Cadieux, Deputy Chief Commissioner.
Mr. W. L. Lengerke, M.L.A., Chairman, Standing Committee on Constitutional Development.		Commissioner of Official Languages	11 and 13
Dr. David W. Elliott.		Mr. Maxwell F. Yalden.
Dr. W. R. Lederman, Professor of Law, Queen's University	5 and 12	Dr. W. S. Tarnopolsky, Professor of Law, Osgoode Hall, York University	12
Representing the Native Council of Canada:	5	Professor R. Simeon, Professor of Political Science, Queen's University;	13
Mr. Harry Daniels, President.		From the Canada West Foundation:	14
Representing the National Indian Brotherhood:	5	Mr. Stanley C. Roberts, President; Dr. David Elton, Research Direction
Mr. Noel Starblanket, President.		Dr. Peter W. Hogg, Professor of Law, Osgoode Hall Law School, York University	15
From the Ontario Advisory Committee on Confederation:	6	Professor Edward Ratushny, Faculty of Law, University of Ottawa;	16
Mr. Ian Macdonald, Chairman; Judge Rosalie Abella; Mr. Rodrigue J. Bilodeau; Mr. Ken Dryden; Mr. George Korey; Mr. Richard Simeon.		Professor Léon Dion, Faculty of Social Sciences, Université Laval.	16
From Inuit Tapirisat of Canada:	7	Dr. Edward McWhinney, Q.C., Head of the Political Science Department at Simon Fraser University, and Membre titulaire de l'Institut de Droit International	17
Mr. Eric Tagoona, president; Mr. Togak Curley; Mr. John Amagoalik; Mr. Peter Ittinuar.		Professor Arthur Tremblay, Ecole Nationale d'Administration publique	18
From the Monarchist League of Canada:	7	From the Government of the Province of British Columbia:	18
Mr. John L. Aimers, Chairman; Professor Hereward Senior; Mr. Arthur Bousfield; Mr. R. B. Bryce;	7	Hon. K. Rafe Main, Chairman, Cabinet Committee on Confederation and Minister of Consumer & Corporate Affairs
Lang, The Honourable Otto, Minister of Justice	8	Mr. Melvin H. Smith, Deputy Minister, Constitutional Affairs (Premier's Office)
		The Honourable J. V. Clyne, Q.C.	19

(Appendix "B" to report.)List of other Submissions

The following are individuals and groups whose submissions were received by the Committee.

NAME	ADDRESS	NAME	ADDRESS
	-A-
ADPR—The Association to Defend Property Rights	Calgary, Alberta	Canadian Lesbian and Gay Rights Coalition	Ottawa, Ontario
Allen, Mr. Isabelle	St. Thomas, Ontario	Canadian Protestant League	London, Ontario
Alliance for the Preservation of English Canada	Halifax, N.S.	Centre d'aide aux professionnels immigrants	Montréal, Québec
Andrews, Mr. J. Vian	Vancouver, B.C.	Christian Science Federal Representative for Canada	Toronto, Ontario
Arvay, Mr. Joseph	Windsor, Ontario	Clark, Mrs. Mary	Owen Sound, Ontario
Association of Metis & Non Status Indians of Saskatchewan	Regina, Saskatchewan	Comiskey, Mr. John P.	London, Ontario
Atkey, Mr. R. G.	Toronto, Ontario	Communist Party of Canada	Toronto, Ontario
Atkinson, Mrs. Annie L.	Shelburne, N.S.	Conklin, Mr. William E.	Windsor, Ontario
	-B-	Cook, Mr. E. H.	Princeton, B.C.
Bace, Mr. C.	Ottawa, Ontario	Cook, Mr. William Ph. D.	Toronto, Ontario
Bagnall, Mrs. Lynn	Victoria, B.C.	Corporation of the Town of Alliston	Alliston, Ontario
Baldwin, Mr. G. W., M.P.	Ottawa, Ontario	Corry, Professor J. A.	Kingston, Ontario
Balser, Geraldine & Allen	Moncton, N.B.	Cunningham, Mrs. Elizabeth	Willowdale, Ontario
Bancroft, Mr. John G.	Calgary, Alberta		-D-
Barker, Mr. D. S.	Peterborough, Ontario	De Nevers, Mr. Michel	Windsor, Ontario
Barr, Mr. Bruce A.	Victoria, B.C.	Denny, Mr. Alex	Sydney, N.S.
Barrett, Mr. J. D.	Vancouver, B.C.	Detweiler, Mr. W. J.	Ajax, Ontario
Bastla, Mr. Clifford H.	London, Ontario	Dempsey, Mr. John W.	Peterborough, Ontario
Baxter, Margaret	Ottawa, Ontario	Dominion of Canada English Speaking Association	Moncton, N.B.
Bazinet, Mr. Pierre-Louis	Hull, Quebec	Driedger, Dr. Elmer A.	Ottawa, Ontario
Beck, Mr. Michel	Medicine Hat, Alberta	Druggett, Mr. B.	Lowe Sackville, N.S.
Bell, Mr. F. H.	Victoria, B.C.	Dubois, Miss Marie	Summerland, B.C.
Bennett, Mrs. J. A.	Calgary, Alberta		- E -
Benton, Mr. S. B.	Oromocto, N.B.	Earl, Mrs. Marion R.	Kingston, Ontario
Biron, Mr. Rodrigue	Quebec, Quebec	Engelman, Mr. F. C.	Edmonton, Alberta
Blair, Mr. Alec M. C.	St. Catharines, Ontario		- F -
Blomm, Mr. Philip	St. Laurent, Quebec	Fanaken, Mr. Geoff	Toronto, Ontario
Blow, Mr. Barrey L.	Duncan, B.C.	Felsen, Ms. Marjorie	Victoria, B.C.
Board of Trade of Metropolitan Toronto (The)	Toronto, Ontario	Ferguson, Mr. W. James	Toronto, Ontario
Boyd, Mr. & Mrs. Joseph L.	Toronto, Ontario	Ferland, Mr. Philippe	Montreal, Québec
Brennan, Mr. & Mrs. Hugh V.	Willowdale, Ontario	Fisher, Mr. William A.	Bedford, N.S.
Brewerton, Mr. T. W.	Calgary, Alberta	Fisheries and Marine Service	Burlington, Ontario
Bright, Mr. Hugh J., M.D.	Ottawa, Ontario	Fitzgerald, Mr. R. N.	Victoria, B.C.
British Columbia Civil Libertie Association	Vancouver, B.C.	Fleming, Ms. Isabel	Saint John, N.B.
Brown, Mr. Harold W.	Winnipeg, Manitoba	Forbes, Mrs. Ivyly	Ottawa, Ontario
Brown, Mr. Irvine J.	Owen Sound, Ontario	Fournier, Mr. P. L.	Ottawa, Ontario
Browne, Professor G. P.	Ottawa, Ontario	Fox, Mr. William	Toronto, Ontario
Burns, Mr. Kevin	London, Ontario	Fraser, Mr. Francis	Wolfville, N.S.
Bustard, Mr. E. E.	Oakville, Ontario	Freedom of Choice Movement	Montreal, Quebec
	-C-	French Association of Ontario School Boards	Ottawa, Ontario
Caldwell, Mr. & Mrs. W.	Scarborough, Ontario		- G -
Canadian Environmental Law Association	Toronto, Ontario	Gale, Mr. Godfrey	Montreal, Quebec
Canadian Freeman	Ward's Island, Toronto, Ontario	Gelber, Miss Sylva M.	Hull, Quebec
Canadian Human Rights Association	Ottawa, Ontario	Gerard, Mr. & Mrs. F. A.	Victoria, B.C.
		Gerard, Mr. & Mrs. Gerard	Victoria, B.C.

Gilchrist, Mr. A.
 Gilchrist, Mrs. Florence
 Gilchrist, Mrs. Irene C.
 Gordon, Miss Penny J.
 Grand Orange Lodge of Canada
 Greene, Mr. Hugh
 Greene, Mr. M.
 Grindon, Mr. John
 Guy, Mr. & Mrs. Ralph B.

Moncton, N.B.
 Ottawa, Ontario
 Moncton, N.B.
 Trenton, Ontario
 Fredericton, N.B.
 Montreal, Quebec
 Toronto, Ontario
 Aylmer West, Ontario
 Burlington, Ontario

- H -

Haeberle, Mr. Brian
 Haines, Mrs. Andrea C.
 Haines, Mr. R. Waldo
 Harding, Mr. David
 Harding, Miss Elizabeth A.
 Hartle, Mr. George E.
 Hashman, Mr. L. H.
 Hawley, Mr. Adam O.
 Hayman, Blanche and Leonard
 Henderson, Mr. Peter
 Horvath, Mr. Louis
 Hurd, Mr. Larry D.

Winnipeg, Manitoba
 Lunenburg, N.S.
 Lunenburg, N.S.
 Guelph, Ontario
 Armdale, N.S.
 Chesterville, Ontario
 Mayfair, Calgary, Alberta
 Peterborough, Ontario
 London, Ontario
 Parry Sound, Ontario
 Don Mills, Ontario
 Winnipeg, Manitoba

- I -

Imperial Order Daughters of the Empire
 Imperial Order Daughters of the Empire

Lunenburg, N.S.
 Toronto, Ontario

- J -

Jackson, Mr. Arthur S.
 James, Mrs. Mary S.
 James, Mr. Norman G.
 Jardine, Mr. Alex M.
 John the Poet
 Julien, Mr. L.-Donat

Ottawa, Ontario
 Lunenburg, N.S.
 Burlington, Ontario
 Victoria, B.C.
 Chatham, Ontario
 Valleyfield, Quebec

- K -

Kalevar, Mr. C. K.
 Kear, Mr. A. R.
 Kamoff-Nicolsky, Mr. M.
 Kelsey, Mr. Ian Bruce
 Kennaird, Miss Audrey
 Kennedy, Mr. Michael P. J.
 Kennedy, Mrs. Y.
 Kesteven, Mr. Bruce R.
 Kinnaid, Mr. Ellis
 Kucheran, Mr. D. M.
 Kunzelman, Mr. Richard C.

Toronto, Ontario
 Winnipeg, Manitoba
 Montreal, Quebec
 Vancouver, B.C.
 Ottawa, Ontario
 Saskatoon, Saskatchewan
 Moncton, N.B.
 Mississauga, Ontario
 Ottawa, Ontario
 Red Lake, Ontario
 Winnipeg, Manitoba

L

Lafontaine, Mr. Julien A.
 Landry, Mr. Réjean
 La Plant, Mr. J. A.
 Lawrence, Mr. A. M.
 Lemire, Mr. Jean-Marc
 Liber, Mr. Bruno

Saint-Bruno-de-Montarville, P.Q.
 Quebec, P.Q.
 Willowdale, Ontario
 Vancouver, B.C.
 Ottawa, Ontario
 South Edmonton, Alberta

Lin, Mr. Che-shung
 Lloyd, Mr. A. F.
 Lloyd, Mrs. Eva
 Lunde, Mr. Earl S.
 Lyon, Mr. J. N.

Windsor, Ontario
 Penticton, B.C.
 Severn Bridge, Ontario
 Richmond, B.C.
 Kingston, Ontario

- M -

Mabey, Mr. Richard
 MacDonald Mr. Arnold
 MacDonald, Mrs. Freda
 MacDonald, Mr. and Mrs. H. M.
 MacKinnon, Mr. Frank
 MacKinnon, Mrs. Marjorie
 Maccloud, Mr. Keith
 MacKenzie, Mr. J. D.
 MacKintosh, Mr. G. B.
 MacPherson, Mr. James C.
 Mains, Mr. Geoff
 Mallory, Dr. J. R.
 Marchand, Mr. C. K.
 Marshall, Mrs. V.
 Meisel, Professor John
 Melvin, Mrs. J.
 Mennonite Central Committee
 Merritt, Mrs. Donna
 Metis Cornerstone of Canadian Confederation
 Milne, Mr. Alan
 Mitchell, Mr. B. A.
 Morris, Mrs. Dorothy
 Morton, Mr. W. L.
 Multicultural Association of Fredericton

Murduff, Mrs. C.
 Murphy, Mrs. W. K.
 Murray, Mr. D. C.
 McCarthy, Mr. Farrell
 McCaughan, Mr. Chev. John A.
 McConnachie, Mr. P. Nairn
 McCullough, Lieutenant-
 Colonel W. J.
 McDonald, Mr. Kenneth
 MacKenzie, Mr. Howard H.
 McKinney, Mr. R. J.
 McLellan, Mr. O. Ross
 McLeod, Mrs. Jane
 McNaught, Mr. Kenneth

N.S. Institute of Research
 Nadler, Mr. Joseph Y. C.S.C.
 New Brunswick Association of Metis and non-status Indians
 Nightingale, Mr. Donald A.

St. Stephen, N.B.
 Cornwall, Ontario
 Moncton, N.B.
 Elora, Ontario
 Calgary, Alberta
 Lunenburg, Nova Scotia
 Campbellville, Ontario
 L.R. Sackville, N.S.
 Ottawa, Ontario
 Victoria, B.C.
 Vancouver, B.C.
 Montreal, Quebec
 Toronto, Ontario
 Lachine, Quebec
 Kingston, Ontario
 Lethbridge, Alberta
 Ottawa, Ontario
 Smithville, Ontario

Ottawa, Ontario
 Toronto, Ontario
 Watertown, Ontario
 Toronto, Ontario
 Winnipeg, Manitoba

Fredericton, N.B.
 Peterborough, Ontario
 Toronto, Ontario
 Guelph, Ontario
 Newcastle, N.B.
 Toronto, Ontario
 Vancouver, B.C.

Ottawa, Ontario
 Willowdale, Ontario
 Truro, N.S.
 Sault Ste-Marie, Ontario
 Ottawa, Ontario
 Bobcaygeon, Ontario
 Toronto, Ontario

- N -

Ottawa, Ontario
 Montreal, Quebec
 Fredericton, N.B.
 Rexdale, Ontario

- O -

Ontario Historical Society
 Ontario Riding Committee on the Constitution of LADA
 Operation Dismantle
 Oxner, Mrs. Edythe E.

Toronto, Ontario
 Pickering, Ontario
 Toronto, Ontario
 Lunenburg, N.S.

-P-

Paget, Mr. Harold A.	Kingston, Ontario
Palmer, Mrs. Guy S.	Vancouver, B.C.
Pars, Mrs. M. J.	Mississauga, Ontario
Park, Mr. Marvin	Confield, Ontario
Patriarche, Mr. V. H.	Victoria, B.C.
Pattison, Mr. John C.	London, Ontario
Pederson, Mr. Laurence	Surrey, B.C.
Peterborough United Services Institute	Peterborough, Ontario
Philpot, Mr. J. C.	Peterborough, Ontario
Pilkey, Mr. Noah	London, Ontario
Poots, Mr. J. J.	Scarborough, Ontario
Porteous, Mr. J. A.	Willowdale, Ontario
Porzecanski, Mr. Walter	Vancouver, B.C.
Potter, Mr. William Vincent	Inverness Co, N.S.
Powell, Mr. Edward	Napanee, Ontario

-Q-

Quebec Committee for Language Regions ( The )	Montreal, Quebec
---	------------------

-R-

Redmond, Mr. B. A.	Glen Margaret, N.S.
Riddolls, Miss Grace	Listowel, Ontario
Rimmer, Mr. T.	Markham, Ontario
Rodgers, Mr. Ronald George	Toronto, Ontario
Roston, Mr. J.	Woodslee, Ontario
Rowes, Mr. John Youlken	Ottawa, Ontario
Royal Canadian Military Institute	Toronto, Ontario
Rusak, Mr. Stephen	Toronto, Ontario
Ruston, Mr. R. James	Ottawa, Ontario
Ryan, Mr. Claude	Quebec, Quebec

-S-

St. Guilhme Trust ( The )	Pictoir, N.S.
Save Canada Committee	Port Alberni, B.C.
Schiff, Mr. Stanley	Toronto, Ontario
Schuldes, Mr. Wulf K. F.	Victoria, B.C.
Schwartz, Mr. Brian	Ottawa, Ontario
Shaughnessy, Mr. J. O.	Peterborough, Ontario
Sholds, Mr. Russell	Lunenburg, N.S.
Skelton, Mr. Len	Victoria, B.C.
Smith, Ms. Deborah J.	Halifax, N.S.
Smith, Mr. Douglas N. W.	Ottawa, Ontario
Smith, Mr. R. L.	Moncton, N.B.
Smith, Mr. Stuart	Toronto, Ontario

Sproule, Mr. William
Stevens, Mr. Alastair B.
Stevenson, Mr. Garth
Stock, Mr. David J. B., Q.C.
Sturgess, Mrs. J. M.

Peterborough, Ontario
Nanaimo, B.C.
Edmonton, Alberta
Woodstock, Ontario
Lyr, Ontario

-T-

Talbot, Mr. R. J.	Victoria, B.C.
Tanser, Dr. Paul H.	Hamilton, Ontario
Tennant, Mr. Walton	Kamloops, B.C.
Terry, Mr. Terrin	Victoria, B.C.
Thome, Mr. Kelly R.	Red Deer, Alberta
Thompson, Mr. Ruby M.	Wolfville, N.S.
Thorburn, Professor H. G.	Kingston, Ontario
Tieman, Ms. Janet K.	Mississauga, Ontario
Tilley, Dr. & Mrs. A. R.	Toronto, Ontario
Triscott, Mr. James T.	Edmonton, Alberta
Tupper, Mr. Allan	Edmonton, Alberta
Turbide, Mr. Claude	Noranda, Quebec

-U-

Ukrainian Canadian Committee Headquarters	Winnipeg, Manitoba
--	--------------------

-W-

Walfield, Mr. Arnold	Bridgewater, N.S.
Wallace, Mr. J. D.	Copper Cliff, Ontario
Wallin, Mr. Halger	Thunder Bay, Ontario
Wertheim, Mr. Max-Joachim	Casselman, Ontario
West, Mr. E. G.	Ottawa, Ontario
Westell, Mr. Anthony	Ottawa, Ontario
Whetham, Mr. Jean	Kingston, Ontario
Whiston, Mr. N. H.	Edmonton, Alberta
Wilkinson, Mr. Philip	Sidney, B. C.
Williams, Mr. Marc	Outremont, Quebec
Willis, Mr. I. D.	Alliston, Ontario
Wilson, Mrs. L.	Kingston, Ontario
Winer, Mr. Stanley L.	Ottawa, Ontario
Witchell, Mr. John B.	Pierrefonds, Quebec
Woodbridge, Mr. C. G.	Penticton, B.C.
World Citizen No. 20727	Mississauga, Ontario
World Federalists of Canada	Winnipeg, Manitoba
Wright, L. Col. W. N.	Toronto, Ontario

-Y-

Youakim, Mr. P.	Burlington, Ontario
-----------------	---------------------

ABBREVIATIONS

1r, 2r, 3r	=	First, second, third reading
amds	=	amendments
com	=	committee
div	=	division
m	=	motion
neg	=	negatived
ref	=	referred rep	=	report
r.a.	=	royal assent

Acts passed during the Session

Chapter	PUBLIC ACTS	Bill No.
Assented to December 15, 1977
1	Statute law relating to income tax and to provide other authority for the raising of funds .....	C-11
2	Appropriation Act No. 3, 1977-78 .....	C-15
Assented to December 20, 1977
3	Canada Elections Act amendment .....	C-5
Assented to February 2, 1978
4	Income Tax Act amendment and the Employment Tax Credit Act .....	C-23
5	Air Canada Act, 1977 .....	C-3
Assented to March 22, 1978
6	Appropriation Act No. 4, 1977-78 .....	C-30
7	Appropriation Act No. 1, 1978-79 .....	C-31
8	Canada Elections Act, Election Expenses Act and Northwest Territories Act amendment in respect of territorial elections .....	C-33
9	Transfer of Offenders Act .....	C-21
10	Bank Act and Quebec Savings Banks Act amendment .....	C-16
11	Compensation for Former Prisoners of War Act amendment .....	C-27
12	Electoral Boundaries Readjustment Act (Hochelaga-Maisonneuve) .....	C-418
13	Electoral Boundaries Readjustment Act (Humber-Port-au-Port-St. Barbe) .....	C-412
14	Electoral Boundaries Readjustment Act (Megantic-Compton-Stanstead) .....	C-423
15	Electoral Boundaries Readjustment Act (Pontiac-Gatineau-Labelle) .....	C-358
16	Electoral Boundaries Readjustment Act (Prince Edward-Hastings) .....	C-414
17	Electoral Boundaries Readjustment Act (Prince George-Peace River) .....	C-267
18	Electoral Boundaries Readjustment Act (Saint-Henri-Westmount) .....	C-415
19	Electoral Boundaries Readjustment Act (Sainte-Marie) .....	C-417
Assented to April 12, 1978
20	Northern Pipeline Act .....	C-25
21	Cape Breton Development Corporation Act amendment .....	C-38
22	Miscellaneous Statute Law Amendment Act, 1978 .....	C-41

Acts passed during the Session—concl'd

PUBLIC ACTS—Concluded

Chapter	Assented to April 20, 1978	Bill No.
23	Postal Service Operations Act, 1978 .....	C-45
24	Petroleum Administration Act and Energy Supplies Emergency Act amendment .....	C-19
25	Tax Rebate Discounting Act .....	C-46
26	Anti-Inflation Act and guidelines amendment .....	C-18
27	Canada Labour Code amendment .....	C-8
28	Farm Credit Act amendment .....	C-29
29	Canadian Centre for Occupational Health and Safety Act .....	C-35
30	Fishing and Recreational Harbours Act .....	C-2

Assented to June 30, 1978

31	Appropriation Act No. 2, 1978-79 .....	C-61
32	Statute law amendment relating to income tax and to authorize payments related to provincial sales tax reductions .....	C-56
33	Financial Administration Act amendment .....	C-10
34	Canadian National Railways Capital Revision Act and Railway Act amendment and to amend and repeal certain other statutes in consequence thereof .....	C-17
35	Currency and Exchange Act amendment .....	C-39
36	Criminal Code amendment .....	C-42
37	Pension Act and Compensation for Former Prisoners of War Act amendment .....	C-58
38	Export Development Act amendment .....	C-36
39	Petroleum Corporations Monitoring Act .....	C-12
40	Customs Tariff amendment and to amend An Act to amend the Customs Tariff .....	C-48
41	Maritime Code Act .....	C-54
42	Income Tax Act and Excise Tax Act amendment in matters relating to the ownership and operation of small businesses .....	C-59

Assented to October 10, 1978

43	Canada Elections Act .....	C-66
----	----------------------------	------

LOCAL AND PRIVATE ACTS

Assented to March 22, 1978

44	Marriage Law Exemption Act (James Richard Borden and Judy Ann Borden) .....	S-5
45	Marriage Law Exemption Act (François Eugène Arthur Waddell and Marie Anne Marguerite Benoit) .....	S-6

Assented to April 11, 1978

46	Bell Canada .....	C-1001
47	Royal Canadian Legion .....	S-10

Adams, Hon. Willie

- Northwest Territories
  - Telesat relay facilities to Coral Harbour and Chesterfield Inlet, 906, 1023
- Rankin Inlet Hamlet Council, Peter Tatty and Melinda Tatty, visitors to Senate, 368

Address in reply to Speech from the Throne

- Consideration of Speech from the Throne, 5; termination date of
  - Address in reply, 8; engrossing and presenting of Address to Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth II, 110
- Motion for Address in reply, Hon. Royce Frith, 7-9; seconded, Hon. Jean Marchand, 9-12; Address in reply adopted, 103
- Message from the Queen, 655

Speakers: Senators

- Bonnell, M. Lorne, 60-64
- Bosa, Peter, 80-83
- Choquette, Lionel, 103-05
- Connolly, John J., 95-99
- Desruisseaux, Paul, 77-80
- Flynn, Jacques, 27-32
- Fournier, Edgar E., 40-42, 52-53
- Frith, Royce, 7-9
- Graham, Alasdair, 70-74
- Grosart, Allister, 105-10
- Langlois, Leopold, 89-93
- Lawson, Edward M., 83-85
- Marchand, Jean, 9-12
- Norrie, Margaret, 99-102
- Perrault, Raymond J., 32-38
- Rowe, Frederick William, 42-46, 55
- Smith, George I., 55-60
- Sullivan, Joseph A., 66-70
- Thompson, Andrew, 83

Agreements, treaties, conventions

- Fisheries interim agreement, Canada-United States, 769, 779
- Helsinki Agreement, 328-30, 498-501, 526-30, 541-2, 1021-2
- Income Tax Convention, Canada-United States, exemptions on
  - donations to charitable institutions, 754, 766, 770, 794;
  - donations to universities, 766
- Income Tax Conventions, 358, 368-70, 377-80, 392, 421
  - Agreement—Malaysia, 378
- James Bay and Northern Quebec Native Claims Settlement Act,
  - revocation of orders in council, 631
- Northern pipeline, Canada-United States agreement, 530
- Nuclear safeguards, Canada-United States agreement, 144
- Safe Containers Convention, 200, 221-3, 239-41, 249-50
- Textile and textile products, Memoranda of Understanding relating
  - to export of, 906, 923
- Whaling, International Agreement, 201, 235-6

Agriculture

Beef industry

- Exports to United States and resulting high prices to Canadians, 861
- Producer losses and subsidy to consumers, 861-2
- Recognizing the Realities: A Beef Import Policy for Canada*, 13-23, 46-51, 74-76, 101-02, 299
- Strike of beef producers in Saskatchewan and Manitoba, m to
  - adjourn to discuss matter, 400-21; m withdrawn, 421
- Government assistance to producers, 422-3
- Benefits from exchange rate of Canadian dollar, 367
- Farm Credit bill, question re introduction of legislation, 377, 437
- Grain elevator facilities at Prince Rupert, opposition from Pioneer
  - Grain Co. and/or Saskatchewan Wheat Pool, 358, 437-8, 517

Agriculture—concl'd

- Maritime potato producers, 411, 412, 413
- New Brunswick, establishment of experimental farm in Kent
  - County, 508-11, 848
- Research and development, news release by Agriculture Canada, 1046
- Western grain stabilization fund payments, 159, 308, 314, 458, 516, 546
- Wheat exports, 886, 903
- See* Beef industry, Recognizing the Realities: A Beef Import Policy for Canada, 13-23, 46-51, 74-76, 101-02, 299

Agriculture, Standing Senate Committee

- Agricultural industry and beef industry, m re study of, 102; m
  - withdrawn, 167
- Agricultural industry and related industries, authority to make
  - study of, 167-8
- Beef industry, authority to make study of, 168
- Beef industry, authority to publish and distribute report on, 902
- Budget, 169
- Expenses, 121
- Farm Credit bill, authority to study amending legislation in advance
  - of receipt of bill, 508
- International co-operation in marketing of grains and other agricultural
  - products, authority to study, 825
- Kent County Can Be Saved*, authority to inquire into implementation
  - of committee report and to travel to New Brunswick, 168
- Meetings during Senate sittings, 524, 582
- Members, 40
- Reports
  - Farm Credit bill C-29, rep without amdt but with observations
    - and recommendations, 546, 553-4, 645-6
  - Recognizing the Realities: A Beef Import Policy for Canada*, 13-23, 46-51, 74-76, 101-02, 299
- Terms of reference, 102; withdrawn, 167
- Terms of reference, 167-8, 825

Air Canada

- Response in French to request in English for reservation information, 325-6
- Threatened strike by pilots, 893, 906, 975

Air-conditioning units for motor vehicles

- Excise tax on, 1045
- Number sold in Canada 1975-77, 1045

Air Canada (Bill C-3)

- Amdts by committee, 256-7, 261-3
- Auditors, 118
- Board of directors, 117, 160
- Business principles, 160
- Capacities and activities of corporation, 123, 146, 147, 154
- Directives by Governor in Council, 118, 124-5, 145, 146, 159, 160
- Hotel operations, 159-60
- Illegal activities, 147
- Order of Governor in Council, publication in Canada Gazette, 263
- Powers of Air Canada and Governor in Council, 123-5, 144, 161, 261-2
- Reports, referral to any committee of Parliament, 262-3
- Shares held by CNR, cancellation of, 117, 122, 145, 261
- Shares or debt obligations, 160-1
- Speakers: Senators
  - Benidickson, W. M., 146-7
  - Flynn, Jacques, 154
  - Forsey, Eugene A., 263
  - Goldenberg, Carl, 147

Air Canada (Bill C-3)—concl'd*Speakers: Senators—concl'd

Greene, John J., 125, 263
 Grosart, Allister, 144-6, 147, 148
 Langlois, Leopold, 147-8, 154
 McElman, Charles, 117-18, 159-61, 263
 Smith, George I., 122-5, 256-7, 261-3
 van Roggen, George C., 147

Air Canada bill C-3. 1r, 94; 2r, 117-18, 122-5, 134, 144-8, 154-5, 159-61; ref to com, 161; rep with amds, 256-7, 261-3; 3r, 263-4; Commons concurrence in amds, 285; r.a., 301

Alaska Highway pipeline

Authority to coordinate planning and programs, 13, 25-27, 40
 Statement of Hon. Allan MacEachen, 25-27
 Interpretation of agreement, 13, 25-27, 133-4, 151, 152-3, 201
 Manufacture and supply of pipe by Canadian companies, 133, 151, 201, 272
 Negotiations between Canada and United States, 88, 95
 Pipe specifications, 134, 151

Alberta

Beef industry and agriculture, 15, 75-76, 84-85
 Canadian Wheat Board, restructuring of, statement by Premier Lougheed, 757, 778
 Husky Oil Company
 Assets and ownership of, 875-6, 886, 950, 975
 Provincial sales tax, absence of and resulting discrimination in Bill C-56, 928, 931-2, 939

AlCan pipeline

Procurement and tendering, Canada-United States agreement, 88, 95

Alternatives Canada, Conference on, 552, 653-4, 691-7, 702-08

Canada West Foundation, 691
 Committees of Parliament, power of, 694
 Commons reform, 693, 695
 Committees, 695
 Want of confidence votes, 695
 Constitutional Court, 704-05
 Binding opinion of court, 704
 Prohibiting of dissenting opinions, 704
 Constitution of Canada, m re restructuring of, 694
 Delegates to conference, 692
 Division of powers, 705-06
 Banking, 705
 Education, 705
 Health and social welfare, 705-06
 Transportation, 705
 Federal-provincial conference, 694
 Judges appointments, 706
 Parliamentary jurisdiction by order in council over provincial 'nationalized' industry, excerpt from recommendation re, 702
Le pouvoir déclaratoire du Parlement, by Madame Andrée Lajoie, 702
Reforming Institutions, workshop of Liberal Convention, 694
 Senate reform
 House of Provinces, m for, 693-6, 703-04, 707
 Appointments to, 693, suggestion of Joint Committee on the Constitution, 707
 Opposition representation, 707
 Federal-provincial conferences, ongoing role, 703
 Ordinary legislation or legislation dealing with conditional grants, 703

Alternatives Canada, Conference on,—concl'd*Senate reform—concl'd

House of Provinces, m for,—concl'd
 Power to review and set aside orders in council, 693, 694
 Provincial premiers as ex officio members, 693
 Suspensive veto, 703-04
 Law Clerk, 696
 Leader and cabinet representation, 696
 Motion re provincial participation in appointments, 694
 Opposition representation, 695-6; western Canada, 696
 Research facilities, 696
 Secretarial service, 696
 Work of Senate, 695
 Amdts to bills, 696
 Senate vs Commons, 695

Speakers: Senators

Argue, Hazen, 552, 653-4, 691-7
 Forsey, Eugene A., 702-08

Amendments, observations or recommendations in or re committee reports

Air Canada bill C-3, rep with amds, 256-7, 261-3; Commons concurrence, 285
 Canada Business Corporations bill S-2, rep with amds, 448-53, 460-3
 Canada Non-Profit Corporations bill S-3, rep with amds, 471-5, 486-90
 Canadian National Railways Capital Revision and Railways bill C-17, rep without amdt but with observations, 874
 Farm Credit bill C-29, rep without amdt but with observations and recommendations, 645-6
 Fishing and Recreational Harbours bill C-2, rep without amdt but with recommendations, 630-1
 Income Tax bill C-23, rep without amdt but with observations re legislation by regulation, 293-5
 Marriage Law Exemption (François Eugène Arthur Waddell and Marie Anne Marguerite Benoit) bill S-6, rep without amdt, 334-5
 Marriage Law Exemption (Lucien Roch Joseph Morin and Marie Rose Hélène Morin) bill S-7, recommendation that bill be not proceeded with, 506-07
 Northern Pipeline bill C-25, rep without amdt but with recommendations, 544-5, 562-71
 Safe Containers Convention bill S-4, rep with amds, 323, 335
 Tax Rebate Discounting bill C-46, rep without amdt but with observations, 699, see 708-12

Anderson, Hon. Margaret Jean

Introduced in the Senate (Apr. 4/78), 513

Anti-inflation

Agreements reached at First Ministers' Conference, 549
 Authority of administrator to deal with contraventions, 549
 Bank of Canada target, 549
 Date of decontrol commencement, 550, 572, 585, 588
 Decontrol process, 549
 Employees of AIB, escalation of, 573
 Federal government spending, 572
 Filing of information for period covered by controls, 549
 Inflationary rates, international statistics, 572
 Mandatory controls, back-dating of, 549, 587, 588
 Money supply increase (1968-77), 572
 Monitoring of incomes, prices and productivity, 549, 585-6, 587
 Statements of Hon. Jean Chrétien, 586, 587
 Retroactivity aspects of bill, 587, 588
 Strikes, loss of man-days (1976-77), 549
 Time limit on referral of matter to administrator, 549

Anti-inflation—concl'd*Speakers: Senators

Flynn, Jacques, 549, 550
 Grosart, Allister, 585-7, 588
 Hicks, Henry D., 548-50, 585, 587-8
 Phillips, Orville H., 550, 571-3

Anti-Inflation bill C-18. 1r, 543; 2r, 548-50, 571-3, 585-8, (See p. 660); ref to com, 588; rep without amdt, 630; 3r, 655; r.a., 713

Appendixes

Canada-United States Inter-Parliamentary Group, New Orleans meeting, see appendix of Apr. 20/78
 Competition policy, rep of com on subject matter of Bill C-13 to amend the Combines Investigation Act, Bank Act and other related acts, 1004-20
 Comptroller of the Treasury, responsibilities of, 725, see Financial Administration bill C-10
 Constitution of Canada, second rep of Special Joint Committee, 1050-60
 Crown corporations, 52-53
 Estimates
   Year ending Mar. 31/78, Supplementary (A), rep of com, 175, 185-8
 Farm Credit bill C-29, rep of com, 553-4
 Financial Administration bill C-10
   Responsibilities of Comptroller General, 725
 Fishing and Recreational Harbours bill C-2, net voting and cost recovery, 345-6
 Grain Transport Operations Analysis—Terms of Reference, 911-12
 Income tax, advance study of budget resolutions respecting income tax and any bill or other matter re
   First rep of com, see appendix of Dec. 8/77
   Second rep of com, see appendix of Dec. 14/77
 Income Tax and Excise Tax (small businesses) bill C-59, rep of com on subject matter, 948-9
 Income Tax (amdt to statute law and authority for provincial sales tax reductions) bill C-56
   First rep of com on subject matter, 942-6
   Second rep of com on subject matter, 947
 North Atlantic Assembly, resolution on increased co-operation in alliance arms procurement, see appendix of Dec. 8/77
 Regulations and other Statutory Instruments Committee, fifth report, 1030-4
 Retirement age policies
   Flexibility of retirement age: Pension systems in OECD member countries by type, coverage, normal age when benefits paid and early retirement qualifications, 132
   Life expectancy at birth and retirement age in selected countries, 131
 Safe Containers Convention bill S-4
   Inter-Governmental Maritime Consultative Organization, statement from, 331
   International Convention for Safe Containers, procès-verbal of rectification, 332-3

Appropriation bill No. 3, 1977-78 C-15. 1r, 227-8; 2r, 236-9; 3r, 249; r.a., 264

Appropriation bill No. 4, 1977-78 C-30. 1r, 455; 2r, 465-70; 3r, 478-9; r.a., 511

Appropriation bill No. 1, 1978-79 C-31. 1r, 471; 2r, 482-4, 490-3; 3r, 511; r.a., 512

Appropriation bill No. 2, 1978-79 C-61. 1r, 913; 2r, 921, 940; 3r, 954-5; r.a., 1029

Argue, Hon. Hazen*Agriculture

Benefits from exchange rate of Canadian dollar, 367
 Farm Credit bill, question re introduction of legislation, 377, 437
 Grain elevator facilities at Prince Rupert, opposition from Pioneer Grain Co. and/or Wheat Board, 358, 437-8, 517

Agriculture, Standing Senate Committee

Agricultural industry and beef industry, m re study of, 102; withdrawn, 167
 Agricultural industry and related industries, authority to make study of, 167-8

Beef industry

Authority to make study of, 168
 Authority to publish and distribute report on, 902

Farm Credit bill, authority to study amending legislation in advance of receipt of bill, 508

International co-operation in marketing of grains and other agricultural products, authority to study, 825

Kent County Can Be Saved, authority to inquire into implementation of committee report and to travel to New Brunswick, 168

Meetings during Senate sittings, 524, 582

Reports

Farm Credit bill C-29, rep without amdt but with observations and recommendations, 546, 553-6, 645-6

Recognizing the Realities; A Beef Import Policy for Canada, 13-23, 46-51, 74-76, 101-02, 299

Terms of reference, 102; withdrawn, 167

Terms of reference, 167-8, 825

Alternatives Canada, Conference on, 552, 653-4, 691-7

Canada West Foundation, 691-2

Committees of Parliament, power of, 694

Commons reform, 693, 695

Committees, 695

Want of confidence votes, 695

Constitution of Canada, m re restructuring of, 694

Delegates to conference, 692

Federal-provincial conferences, 694

Reforming Institutions, workshop of Liberal Convention, 694; vote re Senate reform, 694

Senate reform

House of Provinces, m for, 693-6

Appointments to, 693

Power to review and set aside orders in council, 693, 694

Provincial premiers as ex officio members, 693

Law Clerk, 696

Leader and cabinet representation, 696

Opposition representation, 695-6; western Canada, 696

Provincial participation in appointments, 694

Research facilities, 696

Secretarial service, 696

Work of Senate, 695

Amdts to bills, 695

Senate vs Commons, 695

Banff School of Fine Arts, leadership of Hon. Donald Cameron, 692

Argue, Hon. Hazen—concl'd

- Beef industry, 13-18
  - Canadian Federation of Agriculture press release re committee report, 18
  - Committee recommendations:
    - Policy proposal, 15
    - Price guide, 16
    - Production vs imports, 15
    - Tariff increase, 15-16
  - Contribution to GNP, 15
  - EEC beef policy, 16-17
  - GATT provisions, 16
  - Imports and lack of control of, 14, 17
  - National Cattlemen's Assoc. proposals, 17-18
  - Purebred cattle and breeding stock, 19
  - Support price provided by government, 14
  - US quotas, 14, 17
- Beef industry, strike of producers in Saskatchewan and Manitoba, 406-08, 409, 417-18, 423
  - Agricultural policies, improvement in, 408
  - Consumption of beef, statistics, 408, 409
  - Import policy, 407-08
  - Ontario beef industry, 406
  - Prices, 409
  - Provincial percentages of beef industry, 406
  - Recommendations of Senate Agriculture Committee, 408
  - Subsidies, 407
  - US action to control imports, 407
- Canada Labour Code bill C-8, 597, 601-02
- Constitutional amendment, 883
- Debates of the Senate
  - Speech by Senator Bosa, question of privilege re change, 342
- Farm Credit bill C-29, 546, 553-4, 645-6
  - Age limit of 35 years, 645-6
  - Authorizations for additional capital, referral to committee of Parliament, 645
  - Committee recommendations, 553-4
    - Capital of corporations, increase in, 553, 645
    - Ceiling on loans, increase in, 553
    - Increasing of capital of Farm Credit Corporation under an appropriation act, 554
    - Interest penalty on arrears, 553
    - Legal services re loans, 554
    - 'Market value' as basis for appraisal of farm land, 553
  - Legal costs of loans, 646
  - Loan maximum, 645
  - Supervisory fee, 646
- Michaud, Hon. Hervé, the late, 833
- National security
  - Socan Aircraft Limited, appearance of president before Senate committee, 367-8
- New Brunswick, establishment of experimental farm in Kent County, 510-11
- Rules of the Senate
  - Motion to adjourn to discuss matter of urgent public importance, 406, 417-18
- Samoa, Hon. Tagaloa Leota Pita, visitor to Senate, 724
- Senate
  - Committee studies, 15-16, 553-4
  - Reform, 693-6
  - Role of, 15, 408, 417-18
- Turks and Caicos Islands diplomats, visitors to Senate, 339

Asselin, Hon. Martial, P.C.

- Bilingualism, remarks attributed to Senator Buckwold at Banff conference, 677, 679

Asselin, Hon. Martial, P.C.—concl'd

- Constitution of Canada
  - Proposed special Senate committee, 951, 954
  - Question re amendment bill, 881-2
- Financial Administration bill C-10, 766-7, 772-3
  - Comptroller General
    - Lack of parliamentary jurisdiction, 773
    - Responsibilities, 773
- First Ministers' Conference, senators as observers, 335
- Hockey, international, committee report submitted to Minister of State (Fitness and Amateur Sport), 429-31
  - Cost-sharing by governments, 430
  - Government responsibility in sports and physical fitness of nation, 429-30
- Green Paper on Amateur Sports, tabled in Commons, 429
- Professional sport and international hockey, 430
  - Investigation and Enquiry into Violence in Amateur Hockey*, Ontario study (1974), 430
  - New Brunswick Hockey Study Report*, 430
  - The Violent Game*, by Gary Ron Berg, 430
  - Training costs, 430
  - Violence in hockey, 430
- Income Tax (amdt to statute law and authority for provincial sales tax reductions) bill C-56, 928-30
- National Anthem 'O Canada' as part of the Constitution, 925
- National finance
  - Provincial sales tax, 547, 663
    - Amdts suggested by senators, newspaper report re, 804
    - Meeting between Prime Minister and Quebec premier, 803-04
    - Quebec proposals, 794, 795, 887
- National unity
  - Federal government grant to Unity Canada, 583
  - Speech by Senator Molgat in Winnipeg re Quebec referendum, 341
- Northern gas pipeline, motion for special Senate committee, 389-90, 395
  - Members, choosing of, 390
  - Point of order, 395
- Postal Service Operations bill C-45, 677-9, 682
  - Application for injunction, 678
  - Deficit in post office operations, 678
  - Fines for non-compliance with back-to-work orders, 678
  - Point of order re implication of compulsory arbitration, 682
  - Right of Public Service to strike, 677-8

Atlantic provinces

- Economic conditions, 71-73
  - Coal industry, Cape Breton Island, 71; DEVCO operations, 71
  - Industrial plants, Nova Scotia, 71
  - Regional disparities, 73-74
- Steel industry, 71; Hawker-Siddeley, Canstel, 71
- Fundy tidal power sites, 314
- Montreal container pier, adverse effects for Halifax and Saint John, 102
- New Brunswick, Kent County experimental farm, 508-10, 848
- Newfoundland, oil storage at Bell Island, 313-14

Atomic energy

- CBC documentary program The Fifth Estate, 54-55

Austin, Hon. Jack

- Agriculture
  - Grain elevator facilities at Prince Rupert, 358, 437-8
- Beef industry
  - Exports to United States and resulting high prices to Canadians, 861, 872
  - Strike of producers in Saskatchewan and Manitoba, 408, 409, 418

Austin, Hon. Jack—cont'd

- British Columbia
  - Bicentennial of visit of Captain James Cook, 438
  - Heroin users, proposed compulsory treatment of, 772, 886
- Coal supplies from US to Canada, 207, 218
- Concentration of Corporate Power, Royal Commission on, publication of report, 732
- Economy
  - Situation with respect to the Canadian dollar, the floating exchange rate and its relevance to the Canadian economy, 352-7, 373, 374
  - 'Clean float', 356, 374
  - Comparisons with world currencies, 353
  - Consequences to Canadian consumer, 353-4
  - Current account deficit, 355
  - Debt serving costs, 356
  - Excerpt from speech of Acting chairman of Economic Council, 354
  - Foreign exchange trading, 355-6
  - Increase in personal income, 353-4
  - Interest rate differential Canada-US, 356-7
  - Periodic analysis of money supply, 373
  - Speculative movements into and out of Canadian dollar, 356
  - US Corporate Accounting Rules, 356
- Economy, value of the Canadian dollar, 877-9
  - Canadian dollar vs US dollar, 878
  - Economic factors related to exchange rate, 877
  - Facts and statistics of Canadian economy, 879
  - Inflation, 878
  - Price and wage controls, 878
  - Recovery cycle Canada-US, 878
  - Supply/demand and borrowings from external markets, 878-9
- Energy
  - Alberta Gas Trunk Line Co. Ltd., 975
  - Husky Oil Company
    - Assets and ownership of, 875, 886, 950, 975
  - Oil storage at Bell Island, Nfld., 313-14
- Fisheries interim agreement, Canada-United States, 769, 779
- Fundy tidal power sites, 314
- Income Tax (amdt to statute law and authorization for provincial sales tax reductions) bill C-56, 928-30
  - Alberta, 929
  - Building materials and agricultural implements, 929
  - Discrimination in reductions for various provinces, 929
  - Le Devoir* article re, 929-30
  - Provincial jurisdiction, 929
  - Quebec, 929-30
- Legislation, introduction of Bank Act, 201
- National finance
  - Provincial sales tax, Quebec proposals, question re acceptance of, 873
- National revenue
  - Dumping duty on wide-flange steels beams, 893-4, 904-05, 926, 950-1
  - Illegal importing of jewellery, 906
- North Atlantic Assembly, Paris meeting, 223-6, see also appendix of Dec. 8/77
  - Atlantic Economic Questions*, report of Mr. J. Wiggin, UK Member of Parliament, 224
- Cooperation in alliance arms procurement, 225-6
- Defence expenditures, 223-5
  - Canada, 223-5; Navy, 224
  - Contributions of member nations, 224
  - Interoperability and standardization of equipment, 224, 225
  - Resolution on increased co-operation in alliance and arms procurement, 226, see appendix "B" of Dec. 8/77

Austin, Hon. Jack—concl'd

- North Atlantic Assembly—concl'd
  - Energy policy and supplies, 225
  - Energy policy committee, 225
  - Price stability, 225
  - US imports, 225
  - Warsaw Pact, 225
- Northwest Territories
  - Inuit representation in government, 171
  - Mineral exploration in Baker Lake area, 632
- Perrault, Hon. Raymond J., acting Prime Minister, 206
- Point of order, Speaker's decision on, 418
- Senate regional representation, 158, 169-70
- Solar energy, observation of SUN-DAY, 734
- United States President, visit to Canada, 201
- West coast oil ports, committee of inquiry, suspension of, 144, 152
- Whaling, International Agreement on, 201, 235-6

Australia

- White Paper on relations between manufacturers and state, 111

Austria

- Income Tax Conventions bill S-9, 358, 368-70, 377-80, 392, 421

Auto pact, Canada-United States

- Geographical compass of agreement, 893, 903-04

Baltic States

- Honorary Consuls, visitors to the Senate, 376
- Occupation of Baltic States by Soviet Union, 376, 377
- Sixtieth anniversary of proclamation of independence of Estonia, 368

Banff School of Fine Arts

- Leadership of Hon. Donald Cameron, 692

Bank and Quebec Savings Banks

- Duration of authority to carry on business, 423
- Senate committee report (1976) on act, 423
- Speakers: Senators
  - Flynn, Jacques, 423, 424
  - Macnaughton, Alan A., 421, 424

Bank and Quebec Savings Banks bill C-16. 1r, 392; 2r, 421, 423-4; ref to com, 424; rep without amdt, 448; 3r, 458; r.a., 511Banking, Trade and Commerce, Standing Senate Committee

- Banks and Banking Law Revision Act, authority to study legislation in advance of receipt of bill, 823-4
- Budget, 169, 900
- Competition policy, authority to examine and report on subject matter of Bill C-13 (Combines Investigation Act, Bank Act and other related Acts), 158
- Expenses, 86
- Income tax, authority to study legislation in advance of receipt of bill, 66, 812-13, 822-3
- Meetings during Senate sittings, 94, 121, 150, 175, 200, 219, 399-400, 676, 825, 860, 874, 900
- Members, 39-40
- Reports
  - Anti-Inflation bill C-18, rep without amdt, 630
  - Bank and Quebec Savings Banks bill C-16, rep without amdt, 448
  - Canada Business Corporations bill S-2, rep with amdts, 448-53, 460-3
  - Canada Non-Profit Corporations bill S-3, rep with amdts, 471-5, 486-90

Banking, Trade and Commerce, Standing Senate Committee—concl'd
Reports—concl'd

- Competition policy, (Combines Investigation Act, Bank Act and other related Acts), rep on subject matter of Bill C-13, 1004-20
- Income Tax and Excise Tax bill C-59 (small businesses), rep on subject matter, 948-9
- Income Tax bill C-56 (amdt to statute law and authorization of payments re provincial sales tax), interim rep on subject matter, 942-6; final rep on subject matter, 947; further rep without amdt, 965
- Income Tax Conventions bill S-9, rep without amdt, 392
- Income tax, first rep of com, 219, 228-34, 241, see appendix of Dec. 8/77
- Income tax, second rep of com, 245-7, see appendix of Dec. 14/77
- Petroleum Administration and Energy Supplies Emergency bill C-19, rep without amdt, 698
- Tax Rebate Discounting bill C-46, rep without amdt but with observations, 699, see 708-12
- Temporary resignation of member on discussion of banking legislation, 861
- Terms of reference, 66, 158

Bank of Canada Act

See Banks and Banking Law Revision Act, 1978 Bill C-57

Bankruptcy

- Administration of consumer arrangement and bankruptcies, 519
- Amdts to former Bill C-60 suggested by Senate committee, 517
- Appointment of trustee as liquidator of foreign property, 519
- Consumer and commercial arrangements as alternative to bankruptcy, 519
- Insurance fund to cover wage loss, non-acceptance of recommendation, 519, 525
- Italicized items defining expenditure of public funds with which Senate has no power to deal, 517-18, 525-6
- Excerpt from Bourinot's Parliamentary Procedure, 518
- Excerpt from memorandum from Clerk of the Table in House of Lords, 518
- Quote from speech by Hon. John J. Connolly (Aug. 29/66), 518
- Wage earners priority of $2,000 over secured creditors, 519, 525
- Speakers: Senators
  - Flynn, Jacques, 525-6
  - Hayden, Salter A., 517-20

Bankruptcy bill S-11. 1r, 486; 2r, 517-20, 525-6; ref to com, 526

Banks and Banking Law Revision Act, authority to com to study legislation before receipt of bill, 823-4

Barrow, Hon. A. Irvine

Income Tax bill C-23 (to establish Employment Tax Credit Program), 293

Beaubien, Hon. L. P.

Transfer of Offenders bill C-21, 498

Beef industry, 13-23, 46-51, 74-76, 101-02, 872-3, 902

- Authority to publish and distribute report of Agriculture Committee, 902
- Canadian Federation of Agriculture press release re committee report, 18
- Committee recommendations:
  - Policy proposal, 15
  - Price guide, 16
  - Production vs imports, 15
  - Quotas, 15

Beef industry—concl'd

Committee recommendations—concl'd

- Tariff increase, 15-16
- Contribution to GNP, 15
- EEC beef policy, 16-17
- Erosion of farmland, 101
- Agriculture and Land Planning*, by Norman Pearson, 101
- Excerpt from speech of Alberta Agriculture Minister re committee report, 75
- Export quotas, 872-3
- Feed problem, 48
- Food shortages, 101-02
- GATT provisions, 16, 19, 47, 50
- Imports, 14, 17, 47-49, 74-76, 101; from United States, New Zealand and Australia, 48-49
- Income of ranchers, decrease in, 47; report of Winnipeg consulting firm, 47
- Inflationary effects on industry, 22
- Losses of producers, 74, 75
- National Cattlemen's Assoc. proposals, 17-18
- OECD report on food expenditures, 49, 50, 51
- Press comments on committee report, 75
- Pricing mechanism, 19-22, 74-76
  - Cattlemen*, excerpt from, 19
  - Consumer representation on boards re, 21
  - Dumping practices, 20
  - Lack of producers' influence on, 20
- Production and transportation costs, 50-51
- Production statistics, 48
- Purebred cattle and breeding stock, 19
- Quotas, 14, 17, 48-51, 74-76
  - EEC, 50
  - US, 14, 17
- Senate role in inquiry, 21
- Sheep industry, 49
- Support price provided by government, 14
- Speakers: Senators
  - Argue, Hazen, 13-18
  - Austin, Jack, 872
  - Belisle, Rhéal, 48, 51
  - Buckwold, Sidney L., 50, 51
  - Fournier, Edgar, 51
  - Greene, J. J., 21-23, 50
  - Molgat, Gildas, 46-51
  - Norrie, Margaret F., 101-02
  - Olson, Horace A., 18-21, 23
  - Perrault, Raymond J., 872-3
  - Yuzyk, Paul, 74-76

Beef industry, strike of beef producers in Saskatchewan and Manitoba, m to adjourn to discuss matter, 400-21; m withdrawn, 421

- Agricultural policies, improvement in, 408
- Beef consumption, statistics, 408, 409
- Beef industry percentages, provincial, 402, 406
- Causes and effect of strike, 405
- Crisis in western provinces, 401, 403
- Dairy producer profits, 403
- Debt position of Canadian farmers, article in Regina Leader Post, 401
- GATT penalties for dumping, 413
- Government assistance to producers, 422-3
- Illegal strike aspect, 410
- Import policy, 407-08, 412, 413, 420, 421
- Maritime agricultural industry, 411, 412, 413
- Potato producers, borrowings, 412

Beef industry, strike of beef producers in Saskatchewan and Manitoba—*concl'd

Marketing boards, 410, 413

Motion that Senate regrets government failure to implement recommendations of Senate Agriculture Committee, 415; point of order re motion, 415-21

Ontario beef industry, 406

Picketing of entry ports from Manitoba and Saskatchewan to US, 403

Recommendations of Senate Agriculture Committee, 401, 402, 403-04, 408

Statement of Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs, 411-12

Subsidies, 402-03, 407, 409-10

Canadian Agricultural Movement suggestion, 409-10

Supply-marketing programs, 413

US action to control imports, 407

Speakers: Senators

Argue, Hazen, 406-08, 409, 417-18

Austin, Jack, 408, 409, 418

Bourget, Maurice, 417

Buckwold, Sidney L., 409-10, 413

Côté, Jean-Pierre, 404

Flynn, Jacques, 400, 401, 417, 418, 419-20

Grosart, Allister, 405, 406, 417, 419

McElman, Charles, 414-15, 418-19, 420

McIlraith, George, 414, 415-16, 417

Molgat, Gildas L. (motion), 400, 401, 402, 403, 405, 406, 419, 420-1

Olson, Horace A., 404-05, 416-18

Phillips, Orville H., 411-12

Riley, Daniel, 401, 402-03, 404, 410-11, 420

Smith, George I., 414-15, 418-19, 420

Steuart, David G., 403-04

Yuzyk, Paul, 412-13

Bélisle, Hon. Rhéal

Beef industry, 48, 51

Canada Labour Code bill C-8, 588-91, 592, 595, 597, 598, 599, 602, 638

Averaging provision, 590

Canadian Labour Relations Board role, 590

Federal-provincial jurisdiction, 589

Health and safety, 590, 591

Imposition of first agreement upon non-conciliation of parties, 590-1

Job security, 589

Labour-management-government relations, 588-9

Managers and professionals, statutory rights of, 589

Permits for lengthening of work week, 590

Regulation of industrial relations, 589

Statistics on union membership, 589

Economy, exchange rate of Canadian dollar, 375

Inter-Parliamentary Union, Bulgaria meeting, 212-14, 215

Brezhnev statements, 213-14

Diplomatic and political action against Chile, 212-13

Helsinki Accords, 213

International tensions and disarmament, 212, 214

Israeli-Arab conflict, 213

Universal Declaration of Human Rights, 213, 214-15

Canadian policy, 214, 215

USSR and other nations violation of human rights, 213

Price controls, 51

Bell Canada

Altering of capital structure, powers and share capital by letters patent, 575

Bell Canada—*concl'd

Amdts by Commons to Bill C-1001, 551, 576

Borrowing powers, 550, 574-5

Investment in subsidiary, 575

Power to increase authorized capital, 550, 551, 574, 575, 576

Regulatory authority of CRTC, 551, 573, 574, 575

Shares and dividends, 550

Six months' hoist, Commons motion re, 574

Speakers: Senators

Deschatelets, Jean-Paul, 550-1, 574, 576-7

Grosart, Allister, 551, 573, 574-6, 577

Langlois, Leopold, 551

Bell Canada bill C-1001. 1r, 543; 2r, 550-1, 573-6; suspension of Rule 93, 576-7; 3r, 583; r.a., 604

Bell Canada—Newfoundland Telephone Company

Board of Directors, 1045-6

Rates in Newfoundland, 1046

Shares owned by Bell Canada, 1045

Bell, Hon. Ann Elizabeth

British Columbia, bicentennial of visit of Captain James Cook, 438

Constitution of Canada, Special Senate Committee, members, 972

Economy, exchange rate of Canadian dollar, 373

Financial Administration bill C-10, 853

Comptroller General, lack of parliamentary jurisdiction, 853

Government, foreign federal systems, question re study of, 307

Pension and Compensation for Former Prisoners of War bill C-58, 855

Science policy, 196-8

Research and development, 197-8

Industrial sector weaknesses, 197

National Research Council, 197

Statements of MPs and others, 197-8

Benidickson, Hon. W.M., P.C.

Air Canada bill C-3, 146-7

Capacities and activities of corporation, 146

Canadian National Railways Capital Revision and Railway bill C-17, 821-2

Investments for improvements, 822

Concentration of Corporate Power, Royal Commission, question re report on takeover bid by Power Corporation of Canada Ltd. of Argus Corporation Ltd., 54, 153, 236, 453-4

Customs Tariff bill C-48, 1002

Estimates (Appropriation bill C-30)

Government expenditures, 468

National revenue

Charitable organizations, directive on loss of status due to political activities, 720

Retirement age policies, 173

Senators, 173

Transportation

Charter airlines within Canada, newspaper reports re air fares, 457-8, 546

Bilingualism, biculturalism and multiculturalism, 80-81, 98, 103-04

Air Canada, response in French to request in English for reservation information, 325-6

Canada, Nation and Neighbour, by Arthur Lower, 104

Canadians in the Making, by Arthur Lower, 104

Excerpts from speeches by Queen Elizabeth II and other dignitaries, 103-04

Remarks attributed to Senator Buckwold at Banff conference, 677, 679

Bills, general data

- Amendments, observations or recommendations regarding bills
 Air Canada bill C-3, rep with amdts, 256-7, 261-3
 Canada Business Corporations bill S-2, rep with amdts, 448-53, 460-3
 Canada Non-Profit Corporations bill S-3, rep with amdts, 471-5, 486-90
 Canadian National Railways Capital Revision and Railways bill C-17, rep without amdt but with observations, 874
 Farm Credit bill C-29, rep without amdt but with observations and recommendations, 645-6
 Fishing and Recreational Harbours bill C-2, rep without amdt but with recommendations, 630-1
 Income Tax (to establish Employment Tax Credit Program) bill C-23, rep without amdt but with observations re legislation by regulation, 293
 Marriage Law Exemption (Francois Eugene Arthur Waddell and Marie Anne Marguerite Benoit) bill S-6, rep with amdts, 334-5
 Marriage Law Exemption (Lucien Roch Joseph Morin and Marie Rose Helene Morin) bill S-7, recommendation that bill be not proceeded with, 506-7
 Northern Pipeline bill C-25, rep without amdt but with recommendations, 544-6
 Safe Containers Convention bill S-4, rep with amdts, 323, 335
 Tax Rebate Discounting bill C-46, rep without amdt but with observations, 699-700

Bills, Numerically, Commons

- C-2 Fishing and Recreational Harbours
 C-3 Air Canada
 C-5 Canada Elections
 C-8 Canada Labour Code
 C-10 Financial Administration
 C-11 Income Tax (amdt to statute law and authorization for raising of funds)
 C-12 Petroleum Corporations Monitoring
 C-15 Appropriation No. 3, 1977-78
 C-16 Bank and Quebec Savings Banks
 C-17 Canadian National Railways Capital Revision and Railway
 C-18 Anti-Inflation
 C-19 Petroleum Administration and Energy Supplies Emergency
 C-21 Transfer of Offenders
 C-23 Income Tax (to establish Employment Tax Credit Program)
 C-25 Northern Pipeline
 C-27 Compensation for Former Prisoners of War
 C-29 Farm Credit
 C-30 Appropriation No.4, 1977-78
 C-31 Appropriation No.1, 1978-79
 C-33 Canada Elections, Election Expenses, Northwest Territories
 C-35 Canadian Centre for Occupational Health and Safety
 C-36 Export Development
 C-38 Cape Breton Development Corporation
 C-39 Currency and Exchange
 C-41 Miscellaneous Statute Law Amendment
 C-42 Criminal Code (language of accused)
 C-45 Postal Service Operations
 C-46 Tax Rebate Discounting
 C-48 Customs Tariff
 C-54 Maritime Code
 C-56 Income Tax (amdt to statute law and authorization of payments re provincial sales tax)
 C-58 Pension and Compensation for Former Prisoners of War
 C-59 Income Tax and Excise Tax (small businesses)
 C-61 Appropriation No.2, 1978-79

Bills, Numerically, Commons—*concl'd

- C-66 Canada Elections
 C-267 Electoral Boundaries Readjustment (Prince George-Peace River)
 C-358 Electoral Boundaries Readjustment (Pontiac-Gatineau-Labelle)
 C-412 Electoral Boundaries Readjustment (Humber-Port-au-Port-St.Barbe)
 C-414 Electoral Boundaries Readjustment (Prince Edward-Hastings)
 C-415 Electoral Boundaries Readjustment (Saint-Henri-Westmount)
 C-417 Electoral Boundaries Readjustment (Sainte-Marie)
 C-418 Electoral Boundaries Readjustment (Hochelaga-Maison-neuve)
 C-423 Electoral Boundaries Readjustment (Megantic-Compton-Stanstead)
 C-1001 Bell Canada

Bills, Numerically, Senate

- S-1 Railways (pro forma)
 S-2 Canada Business Corporations
 S-3 Canada-Non-Profit Corporations
 S-4 Safe Containers Convention
 S-5 Marriage Law Exemption (James Richard Borden and Judy Ann Borden)
 S-6 Marriage Law Exemption (Francois Eugene Arthur Waddell and Marie Anne Marguerite Benoit)
 S-7 Marriage Law Exemption (Lucien Roch Joseph Morin and Marie Rose Helene Morin)
 S-8 Fugitive Offenders
 S-9 Income Tax Conventions
 S-10 Royal Canadian Legion
 S-11 Bankruptcy

Bills, Private, Commons

- Bell Canada C-1001. 1r, 543; 2r, 550-1, 573-6; suspension of Rule 93, 576-7; 3r, 583; r.a., 604

Bills, Private, Senate

- Marriage Law Exemption (James Richard Borden and Judy Ann Borden) S-5. 1r, 271; 2r, 304-06; ref to com, 306; rep without amdt, 334; 3r, 343; message from Commons that bill passed without amdt, 399; r.a., 511
 Marriage Law Exemption (François Eugene Arthur Waddell and Marie Anne Marguerite Benoit) S-6. 1r, 271; 2r, 306; ref to com, 306; rep with amdts, 334-5; 3r, 343; message from Commons that bill passed without amdt, 399; r.a., 511
 Marriage Law Exemption (Lucien Roch Joseph Morin and Marie Rose Helene Morin) S-7. 1r, 271; 2r, 307-09; ref to com, 309; rep with recommendation that bill be not proceeded with, 506-07
 Royal Canadian Legion S-10. 1r, 448; 2r, 463-5, 479-82; ref to com, 482; rep with amdt, 537-8; 3r, 538; message from Commons that bill passed without amdt, 581; r.a., 604

Bills, Public, Commons

- Air Canada C-3. 1r, 94; 2r, 117-18, 122-5, 134, 144-8, 154-5, 159-61; ref to com, 161; rep with amdts, 256-7, 261-3; 3r, 263-4; Commons concurrence in amdts, 285; r.a., 301
 Anti-Inflation C-18. 1r, 543; 2r, 548-50, 571-3, 585-8, (See p. 660); ref to com, 588; rep without amdt, 630; 3r, 655; r.a., 713
 Appropriation No. 3, 1977-78 C-15. 1r, 227-8; 2r, 236-9; 3r, 249; r.a., 264

Bills, Public, Commons—cont'd

- Appropriation No. 4, 1977-78 C-30. 1r, 455; 2r, 465-70; 3r, 478-9; r.a., 511
- Appropriation No. 1, 1978-79 C-31. 1r, 471; 2r, 482-4, 490-3; 3r, 511; r.a., 512
- Appropriation No. 2, 1978-79 C-61. 1r, 913; 2r, 921, 940; 3r, 954-5; r.a., 1029
- Bank and Quebec Savings Banks C-16. 1r, 392; 2r, 421, 423-4; ref to com, 424; rep without amdt, 448; 3r, 458; r.a., 511
- Canada Elections C-5. 1r, 265; 2r, 265-9; 3r, 272; r.a., 273
- Canada Elections C-66. 1r, 1046; 2r, 1046-7; 3r, 1047; r.a., 1048
- Canada Elections, Election Expenses, Northwest Territories C-33. 1r, 471; 2r, 484-5, 494-5; 3r, 511; r.a., 511
- Canada Labour Code C-8. 1r, 543; 2r, 577-9, 588-91; motion that bill be ref to Committee of the Whole, 591-5, carried, 595; bill considered in Committee of the Whole, Hon. Alan Macnaughton in the Chair, Hon. John Munro, Minister of Labour, taking part in debate, 596-604, 605-28; rep without amdt, 628; motion that bill be ref to Health, Welfare and Science Com, 628, 632-44, neg, 644-5; 3r, 656; r.a., 713
- Canadian Centre for Occupational Health and Safety C-35. 1r, 662; 2r, 674-5, 690-1, 3r, 701; r.a., 713
- Canadian National Railways Capital Revision and Railway C-17. 1r, 763; 2r, 774-6, 786-91, 805-10, 815-21; ref to com, 821-2; rep without amdt but with observations, 874; 3r, 888-91, 896-8; r.a., 1029
- Cape Breton Development Corporation C-38. 1r, 515; 2r, 540-1; 3r, 548; r.a., 604
- Compensation for Former Prisoners of War C-27. 1r, 392; 2r, 424-9; ref to com, 429; rep without amdt, 456; 3r, 476-7; r.a., 511
- Criminal Code (language of accused) C-42. 1r, 913; 2r, 955-60; 3r, 975; r.a., 1029
- Currency and Exchange C-39. 1r, 753; 2r, 767, 799-802; ref to com, 802; rep without amdt, 814; 3r, 826; r.a., 1029
- Customs Tariff C-48. 1r, 1001; 2r, 1001-03; 3r, 1003; r.a., 1029
- Electoral Boundaries Readjustment C-267 (Prince George-Peace River). 1r, 442; 2r, 458; 3r, 477; r.a., 511
- Electoral Boundaries Readjustment C-358 (Pontiac-Gatineau-Labelle). 1r, 442; 2r, 458; 3r, 477; r.a., 511
- Electoral Boundaries Readjustment C-412 (Humber-Port-au-Port-St. Barbe). 1r, 442; 2r, 458-9; 3r, 447; r.a., 511
- Electoral Boundaries Readjustment C-414 (Prince Edward-Has-tings). 1r, 442; 2r, 459; 3r, 477; r.a., 511
- Electoral Boundaries Readjustment C-415 (Saint-Henri-West-mount). 1r, 442; 2r, 459-60; 3r, 477; r.a., 511
- Electoral Boundaries Readjustment C-417 (Sainte-Marie). 1r, 442; 2r, 460; 3r, 477-8; r.a., 411
- Electoral Boundaries Readjustment C-418 (Hochelaga-Maison-neuve). 1r, 442; 2r, 460; 3r, 478; r.a., 511
- Electoral Boundaries Readjustment C-423 (Megantic-Compton-Stanstead). 1r, 442; 2r, 460; 3r, 478; r.a., 511
- Export Development C-36. 1r, 965; 2r, 985-91; 3r, 991; r.a., 1029
- Farm Credit C-29. 1r, 571; rep without amdt but with observations and recommendations, 645-6; 2r, 646-52; 3r, 656; r.a., 713
- Financial Administration C-10. 1r, 719; 2r, 721-4, 725, 734-41, 747-50, 758-62, 766-7, 772-3, 782-5; ref to com, 786; rep without amdt, 814; m for 3r, 826, m in amdt, 826-31, 841-5, 848-52, m in amdt to m in amdt, 852-3, neg, 853, m in amdt neg, 853; 3r, 853; r.a., 1029
- Fishing and Recreational Harbours C-2. 1r, 302; 2r, 326-8, 336-7, 343-4, 345-6, 348-52, 360-3; ref to com, 363; rep without amdt but with recommendations, 630-1; 3r, 655; r.a., 713
- Income Tax (amdt to statute law and authorization for raising of funds) C-11. 1r, 235; 2r, 250-5, 258-61; 3r, 261; r.a., 264

Bills, Public, Commons—concl'd

- Income Tax (amdt to statute law and authorization of payments re provincial sales tax) C-56. 1r, 900; 2r, 913-21, 927-40; ref to com, 940; interim rep on subject matter, 942-6; final rep on subject matter, 947; further rep without amdt, 965; 3r, 965-71; r.a., 1029
- Income Tax (to establish Employment Tax Credit Program) C-23. 1r, 274; 2r, 280-4, 286-91; ref to com, 291; rep without amdt but with observations re legislation by regulation, 293; 3r, 294-5; r.a., 301
- Income Tax and Excise Tax (small businesses) C-59. 1r, 1021; 2r, 1025-7; 3r, 1027; r.a., 1029
- Maritime Code C-54. 1r, 1000; 2r, 1000-01, 1024-5; 3r, 1025; r.a., 1029
- Miscellaneous Statute Law Amendment C-41. 1r, 543; 2r, 579-80; 3r, 584-5; r.a., 604 (For rep of com, see Statute Law Amendment proposals, 293, 295, 347-8, 363-5, 376)
- Northern Pipeline C-25. 1r, 521-4; 2r, 530-6; ref to com, 536; rep without amdt but with recommendations, 544-6; m for 3r, 562; m in amdt (Clause 23.1), 562-7; neg, 567; 3r, 571; r.a., 604
- Pension and Compensation for Former Prisoners of War C-58. 1r, 836; 2r, 853-7; 3r, 862; r.a., 1029
- Petroleum Administration and Energy Supplies Emergency C-19. 1r, 662; 2r, 666-8, 687-90; ref to com, 690; rep without amdt, 698; m for 3r, 698; 3r, 702; r.a., 713
- Petroleum Corporations Monitoring C-12. 1r, 994; 2r, 994-9; 3r, 999; r.a., 1029
- Postal Service Operations C-45. 1r, 661-2; 2r, 664-6, 677-87; m for 3r, 700-01; m in amdt, 701, neg, 701; 3r, 701; r.a., 713
- Tax Rebate Discounting C-46. 1r, 662; 2r, 668-74; ref to com, 674; rep without amdt but with observations, 699-700; 3r, 708-12; r.a., 713
- Transfer of Offenders C-21. 1r, 471, 2r, 495-8; 3r, 511; r.a., 511

Bills, Public, Senate

- Bankruptcy S-11. 1r, 486; 2r, 517-20, 525-6; ref to com, 526
- Canada Business Corporations S-2. 1r, 94; 2r, 118-20, 122; ref to com, 122; rep with amds, 448-54, 460-3; 3r, 478
- Canada Non-Profit Corporations S-3. 1r, 121; 2r, 148-9, 155; ref to com, 155; rep with amds, 471-5, 486-90; 3r, 511
- Fugitive Offenders S-8. 1r, 276; 2r, 295-8, 303-04; ref to com, 304; rep without amdt, 347; 3r, 360
- Income Tax Conventions S-9. 1r, 358; 2r, 368-70, 377-80; ref to com, 380; rep without amdt, 392; 3r, 421
- Railways S-1 (pro forma). 1r, 6
- Safe Containers Convention S-4. 1r, 200; 2r, 221-3, 239-41, 249-50; ref to com, 250; rep with amds, 323, 335; 3r, 343

Bird, Hon. Florence Bayard (Introduced in the Senate Apr.4/78)

- Constitution of Canada, Special Joint Committee, 981
- Foreign affairs
- Evacuation of Canadians from Zaire, 770, 778-9

Bonnell, Hon. Lorne

- Address in reply to Speech from the Throne, 60-64
- Canada Labour Code bill C-8, 607
- Egypt and Israel, commendation of initiative by leaders of, 150
- Energy-saving technology, PEI, 63
- Export trade, 62
- Extinction*, by Hon. Frederick William Rowe, 61
- Federal government depts., distribution of, 63-64
- Fisheries
- Prince Edward Island scallop fishing season, 925, 1022-3
- Health, Welfare and Science Committee
- Childhood experiences as causes of criminal behaviour, authority to make study of, 87

Bonnell, Hon. Lorne—*concl'dHealth, Welfare and Science Committee—concl'd

Reports

Compensation for Former Prisoners of War bill C-27, rep without amdt, 456

Royal Canadian Legion bill S-10, rep with amdts, 537-8

Terms of reference, 87-88

Social services, 61-62

Guaranteed annual income, 61, 62

Transportation, 62-64

Fares increase, 62-63

Motor vehicle accidents, statistics, 64

Prince Edward Island, 62

Unemployment, 61-62

Lack of work incentives, 62

Senior citizens, 61

Bosa, Hon. Peter

Address in reply to Speech from the Throne, 80-83

Beef industry, 23

Bilingualism, 80-81

Canada Labour Code bill C-8, 602

Canadian Broadcasting Corporation

Fifth Estate documentary program

Report re dispute between Italian government and Canadian construction firm, 82-83, 175, 201-02

Report re Friuli earthquake and aid from Canada, 286

China, People's Republic of, visit of parliamentarians, 951

Debates of the Senate, change in speech, 342

Eurocommunist parties

Attainment of power, 182

NATO membership, 181

Folkloric costumes, customs duty on, 887-9

Helsinki Agreement, 217

Human rights

Report of task force on racial discrimination, 177

Italian community in Canada, 81-83

Aid to Friuli earthquake victims, 81-83; inauguration of Canadian earthquake assistance project, 810-12

Participation in Canadian history, 81

Prejudices in publicity and stereotyping, 82; CBC programs, 82-83

Toronto area, 81

Middle East, Canadian foreign policy, 202

Moro, Hon. Aldo, former Prime Minister of Italy, death of, tributes, 752

Multiculturalism and ethnic attitudes in Canada, 652-3

National Anthem, translation into various heritage languages, 857-9, 1027

Retirement age policies, 211

Rules of the Senate

Motion for which no notice is required, 560

Security and Co-operation in Europe, Conference on, 328-30

Economics, science, technology and the environment, 329

Austria, development of inland waterway system, 329

Brezhnev proposal re energy, transportation and the environment, 329

Helsinki Agreement, 328, 329-30

Legal boundaries, 329-30

Humanitarian matters, 329

Family reunification, 329

Military and political matters, 329

Compulsory notification of intended manoeuvres, 329

Yugoslavia, 328

Unemployment, 328; right to work, 328

Bosa, Hon. Peter—*concl'd

Senate

Business, 88

Reform, newspaper report of Progressive Conservative Party proposals, 700

Sports, CBC telecast of World Soccer Games, 885

United Nations, 80-81

Canada's role, 80-81

Canadian Ambassador, 80

Security Council, 80

Bourget, Hon. Maurice, P.C.

Maritime Code bill C-54, 1024

Marriage Law Exemption (James Richard Borden and Judy Ann Borden) bill S-5, 304-05

Marriage Law Exemption (Francois Eugene Arthur Waddell and Marie Anne Marguerite Benoit) bill S-6, 306

Speaker pro tem, 448

Transport and Communications Committee

Reports

Safe Containers Convention bill S-4, 323, 335

British Columbia

Aircraft crash at Cranbrook, 325, 335

Bicentennial of visit of Captain James Cook, 438

Heroin users, proposed compulsory treatment of, 772, 886

Parliamentary interns visitors to Senate, 399

Work stoppages and effect on economy, 84

British North America Act

Authority of Government of Canada to declare a project to be in the national interest, 55

See Constitution of Canada

Broadcasting

CBC political poll in Newfoundland, authority for and costs, 772

Northwest Territories, Telesat relay facilities to Coral Harbour and Chesterfield Inlet, 906

QCTV Edmonton letter re "Television in House of Commons" (picture of Senate chamber), 757-8

Buckwold, Hon. Sidney L.

Beef industry, 50, 51

Beef industry, strike of producers in Saskatchewan and Manitoba, 409-10

Marketing boards, 410

Subsidies, Canadian Agricultural Movement suggestion, 409-10

Bilingualism, remarks attributed to Senator Buckwold at Banff conference, 677, 679

Canadian Transport Commission, domestic air charter rights, Air Canada and CP Air, 220, 312

Club Optimiste, Laval, Quebec, 159

Constitution of Canada

Supreme Court of Canada judgment re Saskatchewan legislation, 170

Economic conditions, 60

Estimates (Appropriation bill C-31)

GNP appropriated by governments, 484

Hockey, International

Report of Committee on International Hockey to Minister of State (Fitness and Amateur Sport), 381-4

Canada Cup series, 382

Coach and manager for Team Canada, permanency suggested, 384

Criticism of Team Canada behaviour in Vienna, 381, 384

Development process of international hockey, 383

Buckwold, Hon. Sidney L.—concl'dHockey, International—concl'd

Report of Committee on International Hockey to Minister of State (Fitness and Amateur Sport)—concl'd

Junior hockey leagues

In-depth study by government, recommendation for, 384

Lack in educational fields, 383-4

Scholarships, 383

Professional leagues, 382

Questionnaire from MPs to constituents, 381-2

Salaries, 383, 384

Hockey star Gordie Howe, tribute to, 220

Northern gas pipeline, special Senate committee, 391, 435

Precedents in establishment of special committees, 391

Nurses in northern Saskatchewan, delay in wage settlement, 847

Porteous, Hon. George, Lieutenant Governor of Saskatchewan, the late, 307

Postal Service Operations bill C-45, 664-6, 679, 686, 687, 701

Government intervention on behalf of public interest, 665, 686-7

National economic and social interest, 665

Negotiation process, continuation of, 665

Wildcat strikes, 687

Retirement age policies, 204-05

Performance work record of senior citizens, 205

US "grey rights drive", 204-05

Saskatchewan Court of Queen's Bench vacancies, 27

Student loans, newspaper article re non-repayment of, 663

Trade, textiles and textile products, bilateral restraint agreement, 906, tabled, 923

Transportation costs, 50, 51

Budget Speech

Date of presentation and accommodation for senators in gallery, 539, 540

Distribution of minister's speech, 547

Provincial retail sales tax reductions

Alleged remarks by Prime Minister, 662-3

Questions, 547, 662-3

Business corporations

See Canada Business Corporations bill C-5, 94, 118-20, 122, 448-54, 460-3, 478

Canada Business Corporations

Arrangement concept, 119-20

Continuance of federal corporation under act, 462-3

French version of bill, 119

Inspector, 461

Limitation on directors' powers re share transfers, 120

Minority shareholder's interests, 120

Powers of public distributing company, 462

Regulation powers with respect to stock exchange takeover bids, 119

Rights of class shareholders, 120, 462

Selling of shares or transfer of property, 461-2

Short form liquidation, 461

Transfer agent or registrar, 461

Speakers: Senators

Connolly, John J., 119

Flynn, Jacques, 122

Hayden, Salter A., 460-3

Lang, Daniel A., 118-20

Canada Business Corporations bill S-2, 1r, 94; 2r, 118-20, 122; ref to com, 122; rep with amds, 448-54, 460-3; 3r, 478

Canada Elections bill C-66, 1r, 1046; 2r, 1046-7; 3r, 1047; r.a., 1048

Canada elections

Allowable expenses and anonymous donations, 267, 268, 269

Electoral Officer's report to Commons Speaker re amendments, 266

Hours of polling stations, 266

Incapacitated electors, 269

Registration of political parties, 266

Revisions, 266

Student voting, 266

Task force on elections legislation, 266

Speakers: Senators

Denis, Azellus, 265-7, 269

Greene, John J., 269

Grosart, Allister, 265-9

Canada Elections bill C-5, 1r, 265; 2r, 265-9; 3r, 272; r.a., 273

Canada elections, election expenses, Northwest Territories

Election expenses, 484

Legislative authority of NWT Commissioner, 484

Omission of names of Yukon and NWT senators from Canada Year Book, 494

Self-government of Territories and control of resources, 494

Transfer of legislative and administrative responsibilities in Council elections in Yukon and Northwest Territories, 484

Speakers: Senators

Grosart, Allister, 494-5

Lucier, Paul, 484-5

Canada Elections, Election Expenses, Northwest Territories bill C-33, 1r, 471; 2r, 484-5; 494-5; 3r, 511; r.a., 511

Canada labour code

Added benefits for employees, 577

Appeals, 577

Averaging provision, 579, 590; western grain elevator systems, 579

Canadian Labour Relations Board role, 590

Canadian Trucking Assoc. objection re retroactive application to impositions of first agreement, 579

Federal-provincial jurisdiction, 589

Health and safety, 590, 591

Imposition of first agreement upon non-conciliation of parties, 590-1

Job security, 589

Labour-management-government relations, 588-9

Managers and professionals, statutory rights re annual leave etc., 577, 589

Ministerial powers to cancel permits, 578

Permits for lengthening of work week, 578, 590

Protection of safety and health, 577, 590, 591

Regulation of industrial relations, 577-8, 590

Statistics on union memberships, 589

Violation of Code, 578

Speakers: Senators

Argue, Hazen, 597, 601-02

Bélisle, Rhéal, 588-91, 592, 595, 597, 598, 599, 602, 638

Bonnell, M. Lorne, 607

Bosa, Peter, 602

Cook, Eric, 593, 637

Everett, Douglas D., 603, 604, 605, 608, 616, 617-18, 638

Flynn, Jacques, 592, 593, 594, 595, 604, 606, 607, 608, 609,

611-12, 613, 615, 616, 617, 620-1, 622, 624, 625-6, 628, 632, 656

Forsey, Eugene A., 613, 616, 618, 622-3, 626, 641

Canada labour code—concl'd*Speakers: Senators—concl'd

Godfrey, John M., 593, 597
 Grosart, Allister, 628, 632, 633, 637, 641-3, 644
 Haidasz, Stanley, 611
 Laird, Keith, 591
 Langlois, Léopold, 635-6, 638-9
 Macdonald, John M., 599, 600, 601, 605, 610, 611, 621, 623
 Marchand, Jean, 577-8, 591, 595, 604, 605, 613, 619, 620, 624-5, 637-8, 639, 656
 Molgat, Gildas L., 594
 Molson, Hartland de M., 591, 592, 595, 603, 604
 Neiman, Joan, 640-1
 Perrault, Raymond J., 592-3, 594, 595, 627, 628, 632-4, 637, 643-4
 Phillips, Orville H., 593
 Roblin, Duff, 606, 607, 609-10, 617, 623, 624, 634-5
 Smith, George I., 614, 615, 618-20, 621, 622, 623, 625, 626, 627
 Sparrow, Herbert O., 599, 600, 602, 639-40
 Steuart, David G., 578-9, 594, 596, 597, 598, 599, 601
 Also Munro, Hon. John, Minister of Labour, 596-604, 605-28

Canada Labour Code bill C-8. 1r, 543; 2r, 577-9, 588-91; motion that bill be ref to Committee of the Whole, 591-5, carried, 595; bill considered in Committee of the Whole, Hon. Alan Macnaughton in the Chair, Hon. John Munro, Minister of Labour taking part in debate, 596-604, 605-28; rep without amdt, 628; motion that bill be ref to Health, Welfare and Science Com, 628, 632-44, neg, 644-5; 3r, 656; r.a., 713

Canada non-profit corporations

Association of Universities and Colleges of Canada, 489
 Canadian Red Cross Society, 487-8
 Disclosure of financial information to public or members, 148, 488
 Distribution of assets in event of liquidation or dissolution of corporation, 489
 Federal non-profit corporations, 149
 French text amds, 487
 Hospitals and charitable organizations, 488
 Meetings of members, 488
 Non-profit charitable corporations and membership corporations, 148-9
 Public contributors participation in corporations affairs, 149
 Right of dissent to decisions of management of boards of trade or chambers of commerce, 488-9, 490
 Statistics on non-profit organizations, 148
Speakers: Senators
 Connolly, John J., 149, 490
 Flynn, Jacques, 155
 Hayden, Salter A., 471-5, 486-90
 Hicks, Henry D., 489
 McIlraith, George, 148-9

Canada Non-Profit Corporations bill S-3. 1r, 121; 2r, 148-9, 155; ref to com, 155; rep with amds, 471-5, 486-90; 3r, 511

Canada-United States Inter-Parliamentary Group. New Orleans meeting, 716-18, see appendix of Apr. 20/78
See Inter-Parliamentary Group, Canada-United States

Canada-United States relations

Authority to Foreign Affairs Committee to make study of, 87
 Authority to publish and distribute Foreign Affairs Committee report on, 880, 972
 Garrison Dam project in the State of North Dakota, 753-4, 765

Canada-United States relations—concl'd

Inter-Parliamentary Group, 716-18, see appendix of Apr. 20/78
 President Carter, visit to Canada, 201
 Statements by US ambassador to Canada, 249

Canada Week

Slogan, 894

Canadian Broadcasting Corporation

Callwood, Miss June, article in L'actualite re national unity, 314-19, 380-1
 "Duplessis" documentary program, 498, 501-04, 508
Charbonneau et le chef, 503
 Discrepancies and untrue reporting in portrayal of historical figures, 501-02, 503-04
 Excerpt from letter from Archbishop of Sherbrooke, 501
 Lack of history teaching in school curriculum, 503
La Tribune editorial re CBC historical program, 501
 Radio Canada's responsibility in verification of facts, 503-04
Fifth Estate documentary program
 Report re atomic energy, 54-55
 Report re dispute between Italian government and Canadian construction firm, 82-83, 175, 201-02
 Report re Friuli earthquake and aid from Canada, 286
 First Ministers' Conference, coverage of, 326
 Political poll conducted in Newfoundland, 772, 927
 Production The Tar Sands, editorial comments re, 100-01
 Report of 25th anniversary, cost of production and combination of English-French version, 805, 1023-4
Sunday Morning radio program, allegations re Senate, 1038-40
 World Cup Soccer Games, CBC telecast of, 885-6

Canadian Centre for Occupational Health and Safety

Governing council, 674
 Integrated information system for occupational health and safety, 674
 Self-governing centre, 674
 Statistics on injury, illness and death, ineffectiveness of regulations, 674
Speakers: Senators
 Marshall, Jack, 690-1
 Stanbury, Richard J., 674-5, 691

Canadian Centre for Occupational Health and Safety bill C-35. 1r, 662; 2r, 674-5, 690-1; 3r, 701; r.a., 713

Canadian human rights

See Human rights, 177, 216-17, 919-20, 1021-2
 Miscellaneous Statute Law Amendment bill C-41, 543, 579-80, 584-5, 604
 Statute Law amendment proposals, 347-8, 363-5, 376

Canadian Labour Congress

Immediate Past President Mr. Joe Morris and advisers, visitors to Senate, 632

Canadian National Railways

Ocean Limited and Scotian revenues, 313

Canadian National Railways capital revision

Access to money markets, 896-7
 Accountability to and control by Parliament, 817-18, 891
 Appropriation of government funds to meet deficits, 774
 Atlantic provinces transportation system
 Halifax development assistance from CNR, 808-09
 Newfoundland losses, 789, 791, 987-8
 Problems, 808-09

Canadian National Railways capital revision—concl'd

- Auditors, 775
- Cancellation of certain shares, 774, 775, 786
- Cancellation of debt, 774, 775, 786, 788, 808
- Capital expenditures, 790
- Communications, 890-1
- Competition CN-CP, 819
- Consolidation of remaining debt, 774-5
- Crowsnest Pass freight rates, 789, 791, 897
- Debt-equity ratio, 788-9, 806, 817, 821, 897
- Excerpts from 1952 speeches re CNR, 787
- Hotel activities, 790, 791
- Interest on converted debt, 775
- Investments over last 20 yrs., 817
  - Questions, 822
- Losses (1977), 898
- Pension plan, 806-07, 818-19, 889
- Precedents of government assistance to CNR, 806, 819
- Profitability, 788, 818-19, 889
- Recapitulation of CNR history, 816, 817
- Reports to Parliament and reference to committee, 775
- Role of CNR, 808, 820-1
  - National unity, 808
- Securities, when and where payable and interest on, 775
- Subsidies, 821
- Trucking industry, 790, 807, 808, 809-10, 819, 889, 890
  - Subsidizing of CNR trucks, 810
- User pay policy, 807-08
- Winnipeg Tribune* article re CNR recapitalization, 806
- Speakers: Senators
  - Benidickson, W. M., 821-2
  - Choquette, Lionel, 821
  - Godfrey, John Morrow, 810
  - Goldenberg, Carl, 791
  - Grosart, Allister, 889
  - Hicks, Henry D., 807, 809
  - Langlois, Leopold, 774-6, 815-16, 817-21, 889-90
  - Norrie, Margaret, 810
  - Roblin, Duff, 786-91, 816-17, 821, 896-8
  - Smith, George I., 805-10, 888-9, 890-1

- Canadian National Railways Capital Revision and Railway bill C-17. 1r, 763; 2r, 774-6, 786-91, 805-10, 815-21; ref to com, 821; rep without amdt but with observations, 874; 3r, 888-91, 896-8; r.a., 1029

Canadian Wheat Board

- Restructuring of, statement by Premier Lougheed, 757, 778

Cape Breton Development Corporation

- Payments in lieu of taxes, 540
- Statement of Commons Speaker (Dec. 7/77), 540-1
- Speakers: Senators
  - Forsey, Eugene A., 541
  - Graham, Alasdair, 540-1

- Cape Breton Development Corporation bill C-38. 1r, 515; 2r, 540-1; 3r, 548; r.a., 604

Capital punishment

- Statement attributed to government leader in the Senate, 727-8

Childhood experiences as causes of criminal behaviour

- Authority to com to make study of, 87

China, People's Republic of

- Exchange visit of parliamentarians, 951-2, 960

Choquette, Hon. Lionel

- Address in reply to Speech from the Throne, 103-05
- Bilingualism, 103-04
  - Canada, Nation and Neighbour*, by Arthur Lower, 104
  - Canadians in the Making*, by Arthur Lower, 104
  - Excerpts from speeches by Queen Elizabeth II and other dignitaries, 103-04
  - School training in French language, 104-05
- Canadian National Railways Capital Revision and Railway bill C-17, 821
- National unity, 103-05
  - Quebec separatism, 105
- Unemployment insurance, overpayment of benefits, 780

Citizenship Act

- Persons convicted of offence, waiting period for granting of citizenship, 347-8, 364
- See* Statute Law amendment proposals

Clerk of the Senate

- Letter from Senator Roblin giving opinion of Law Clerk re conflict of interest, 907
- Receipts and disbursements for 1977-78, tabled and ref to com, 860

Combines investigation

- Authority to com to examine and report on subject matter of Bill C-13, 158
- Rep of com, 1004-20

Commissions, inquiries, etc.

- Constitutional Reform, Ontario Royal Commission, 584, 632
- Sullivan Commission on Transportation in Newfoundland, 861

Committee of Selection

- See* Selection Committee

Committee of the Whole

- Canada Labour Code bill C-8, Hon. Alan Macnaughton in the Chair, Hon. John Munro, Minister of Labour, taking part in debate, 596-604, 605-28

Committee on Orders and Customs and Privileges of Parliament

- Appointment, 5

Committees, general data

- Agriculture
  - Terms of reference, m withdrawn, 167
  - Terms of reference, 167-8, 825
- Banking, Trade and Commerce
  - Expenses re examination of documents, bills and other matters, 86
- Fisheries, question re standing Senate committee on, 754
- Foreign Affairs
  - Expenses re examination of Canada-United States relations, 86
- Health, Welfare and Science
  - Expenses re inquiry into experiences in prenatal life and early childhood experiences as related to personality disorders or criminal behaviour, 86
- Membership changes, see Journals of the Senate
- National Finance
  - Expenses re examination of legislation and other matters, 86
- Northern pipeline, motion for special Senate committee, 377, 386-7, 388-9, 390-1, 393-4, 397, 398; m agreed to, 398; see also 824, 825, 900
- Recommendation that provision for membership changes be incorporated into rules, 40

Committees, general data—concl'd

Retirement Age Policies, m for appt. of special Senate committee, 126-32, 155-7, 171-3, 177-8, 189-91, 203-05, 208-12; amdt, 212, m as modified agreed, 212

Senate committee work in examination of subject matter of bills, 250-1, 253-4, 258-60

Special Senate committees, precedents in establishment of, 388, 391, 395-6

See Journals of the Senate for information re membership

Committees, Special, Joint

Constitution of Canada
National Capital Region

Committees, Special, Senate

Constitution of Canada
Northern Pipeline (formerly Northern Gas Pipeline)
Retirement Age Policies

Committees, Standing, Joint

Library of Parliament
Printing of Parliament
Regulations and other Statutory Instruments
Restaurant of Parliament

Committees, Standing, Senate

Agriculture
Banking, Trade and Commerce
Foreign Affairs
Health, Welfare and Science
Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration
Legal and Constitutional Affairs
National Finance
Rules and Orders
Transport and Communications

Communications

Bell Canada charges for pay telephone calls in Newfoundland and other parts of Canada, 887

Compensation for former prisoners of war

Compensation to evaders and prisoners of war of another power, 424-5

Compensation to spouse, 425

Escapees, 424-8; aircrew, 426, 427

Evaders, 424-8

Maximum compensation, 425-6, 428

Newfoundland war casualties, 428

Polish and other allied forces, 426, 476, 477, 478

RAF Escaping Society, 426, 427, 428, 476

Three-month cutoff provision, 429

World War I veterans, 425

Speakers: Senators

Connolly, John J., 427-8, 477

Flynn, Jacques, 477

Forsey, Eugene A., 478

Godfrey, John Morrow, 427

Lafond, Paul C., 428

McElman, Charles, 424-5, 428-9, 477, 478

Perrault, Raymond J., 426

Phillips, Orville H., 425-6, 427

Rowe, Frederick William, 426, 427

Compensation for Former Prisoners of War bill C-27. 1r, 392; 2r, 424-9; ref to com, 429; rep without amdt, 456; 3r, 476-7; r.a., 511

Competition policy

Authority to com to examine and report on subject matter of Bill C-13 (Combines Investigation Act, Bank Act and other related Acts), 158

Rep of com, 1004-20

Comptroller General of Canada

Responsibilities of, 725

Special appointment regulations, Public Service Employment Act, 764

Status of Mr. Harry Rogers, questions, 726-7, 732-3, 745-6, 754, 763-4, 778

See Financial Administration bill C-10, 719, 721-4, 734-41, 747-50, 758-62, 766-7, 772-3, 782-5, 786, 814, 826-31, 841-5, 848-53

Concentration of Corporate Power, Royal Commission

Takeover bid by Power Corporation of Canada Ltd. of Argus Corporation Ltd., question re report on, 54, 153, 236, 453-4, 732

Conferences

Alternatives Canada, 552, 653-4, 691-7, 702-08

Inter-Parliamentary Group, Canada-United States, New Orleans meeting, 716-18

See appendix of Apr. 20/78

Inter-Parliamentary Union, Bulgaria meeting, 193-5, 212-18, 241-2

North Atlantic Assembly, Paris meeting, 138-42, 178-82, 215-18, 223-6

Security and Co-operation in Europe, 328-30, 498-501, 526-30, 541-2

Conflict of interest

Letter from Senator Roblin to Clerk of Senate giving opinion of Law Clerk, 907

Temporary resignation of Banking, Trade and Commerce Committee member on discussion of banking legislation, 861

Connolly, Hon. John J., P.C.

Address in reply to Speech from the Throne, 95-99

Canada Business Corporations bill S-2, 118-20

French version of bill, 119

Canada Non-Profit Corporations bill S-3, 149, 490

Right of dissent, 490

Compensation for Former Prisoners of War bill C-27, 427-8, 478

Escapees, 427

Polish and other allied forces, 427-8, 477

RAF Escaping Society, 427

Constitution of Canada

Motion to authorize a special Senate committee to study subject matter of Bill C-60, 953-4; agreed, 954

Members, choosing of, 953

Possible duplication with work of Special Joint Committee, 954

Publication of report, 954

Terms of reference, 953

Economic conditions, 96, 97

Fugitive Offenders bill S-8, 304

Haig, Hon. J. Campbell, resignation from the Senate, 243-4

Hockey, International 348

Income Tax (amdt to statute law and authorization for raising of funds) bill C-11, 250-3, 254, 260

Additional exemption for taxpayers and children, 252

Capital losses, 252

Connolly, Hon. John J., P.C.—*concl'd

- Income Tax (amdt to statute law and authorization for raising of funds) bill C-11—concl'd
  - Dividend income and capital gains, 251, 252
  - Employment expense deduction, 251-2
  - Exemptions related to salary, 252
  - Gas and oil depletion rates, 253
  - Insulation of homes, 253
  - Inventory allowance, private sector, 252
  - Investment tax credit, 252
  - Legal fees and land transfer taxes, 252
  - Life insurance, 251
  - Loans to employees and shareholders, 252
  - Pension income to taxpayers over 65 years, 252
  - Pollution equipment, 253
  - Scientific research expenses, 252
  - Senate role in study of subject matter of bill, 250-1, 260
  - Sulphur production from natural gas, 253
- Income Tax (to establish Employment Tax Credit Program) bill C-23, 280-4, 290-1
  - Administration of program by Canada Employment and Immigration Commission, 281
  - Amount of credit in various regions, 281
  - Auditing of tax returns, 281
  - Capital investment, 283
  - Cooperatives, 283
  - Corporate income tax rates, 281-2
  - Costs of program, 283
  - Eligible employer, employment or worker, definition of, 284
  - Fisheries and agricultural industries, 291
  - Form of agreement, 283
  - Investment and employment tax credit on winding-up, 290-1
  - Minimum period of employment, 291
  - New businesses, 283-4
  - Provincial tax, 291
  - Qualification for tax credit, 283
  - Students and other temporary workers, 291
- James Bay and Northern Quebec Native Claims Settlement Act
  - Orders in Council, motion for revocation of, 631, 656-8, 659; neg, 659
    - Hunter's Support Program, 657
    - Negative resolution procedure, 658
    - Northeastern Quebec Agreement, 657
    - Orders in Council approving agreements, date of effect, 657
    - Relocation of community of Fort George, 657
    - Rights of Inuit of Port Burwell, 657
- National unity, 95-99
  - Federal-provincial responsibilities, 97
  - Freedom of religion, language and education, 96-97, 98
  - Historical facts re French Canadians, 98-99
- Northern Pipeline bill C-25, 564
- Royal Canadian Legion bill S-10, 448, 463-5, 481-2, 538
  - Community programs of Legion, 464
  - Consultation with Dominion Command re amdt, 465
  - Dominion and Provincial Commands and branches, 464, 482
  - Membership, 463-4, 482
    - Associate members, 464, 482
- Safe Containers Convention bill S-4, 222
  - Interprovincial and intraprovincial trade, 222
- Senate role in examination of subject matter of bills, 250-1, 260

Constitution of Canada

- Alternatives Canada Conference, 552, 653-4, 691-7, 702-08
- Constitutional Reform, report of Ontario Royal Commission, 584, 632

Constitution of Canada—*concl'd

- National Anthem, 'O Canada' as part of the Constitution, 925
- Senate reform, newspaper report of Progressive Conservative Party proposal, 700
- Supreme Court of Canada judgment re Saskatchewan legislation, 170-1, 175-6
- White Paper on Constitutional Reform, 777

Constitution of Canada, renewal of the Canadian Federation, questions, 864-6, 875, 881-5, 892-3, 894-6, 903

Speakers: Senators

- Argue, Hazen, 883
- Asselin, Martial, 881-2
- Buckwold, Sidney L., 894
- Denis, Azellus, 883, 884
- Flynn, Jacques, 864-5, 875, 881, 883, 894, 895, 903
- Forsey, Eugene A., 866, 885, 895
- Lang, Daniel, 903
- Manning, Ernest C., 865-6, 882
- McDonald, A. Hamilton, 884
- Molgat, Gildas L., 882
- Molson, Hartland de M., 882
- Perrault, Raymond J., 865, 881, 882, 883-5, 892-3, 903
- Smith, George I., 884, 895
- van Roggen, George C., 883
- Walker, David J., 884
- Williams, Guy, 884
- Yuzyk, Paul, 895

Constitution of Canada, Special Joint Committee

- Appointment, motion re, 960-4, 975-85; agreed, 985
- Members
  - Commons, 994
  - Senate, 994
- Message from Commons, 923
  - Consideration of, 960-4, 975-85
- Message to Commons, 961
- Reports
  - Quorum, authority to hold meetings and to print proceedings, 1028
  - Time for Action, A*, 1050-60
- Representation on, question of privilege, 999-1000
- Terms of reference, 923, 960

Constitution of Canada, Special Senate Committee

- Motion to authorize a special Senate committee to study subject matter of Bill C-60, 953-4; agreed, 954
- Meeting during Senate sitting, 1038
- Members, 972, 1022
- Possible duplication with work of Special Joint Committee, 954
- Publication of report, 954
- Reports
  - Interim report, 1038
  - Quorum, 1029
  - Reconstitution of Committee, 1038

Conventions

- Income Tax Conventions bill S-9, 358, 368-70, 377-80, 392, 421

Cook, Hon. Eric

- Canada Labour Code bill C-8, 593, 637
- Financial Administration bill C-10, 721-3, 725, 783-5, 848-51
- Comptroller General
  - Auditor General's appt., excerpt from Act re, 783-4

Cook, Hon. Eric —concl'dFinancial Administration bill C-10—*concl'd*Comptroller General—*concl'd*Newspaper report re appt. of Mr. Harry Rogers, 723, see also 742

Public spending, Parliament's authorization for, 783

Recommendation in 1976 report of Auditor General, 733

Evidence before Commons Committee, 785

Reporting to Parliament through Auditor General, 850-1

Responsibilities and duties, 723, 725, 784-5, 849-50

Excerpt from committee proceedings re, 850

UK Auditor General's position as Officer of Parliament, 850-1

Income Tax and Excise Tax (small businesses) bill C-59, 1025-6

Allowable capital losses, 1025

Authority for submitting excise tax returns within certain time limits, 1025-6

Capital gains tax payable on death, 1025

Shares of bankrupt company, 1025

Transfer of shares of capital stock of small business corporations, 1025

Corporations

Canada Business Corporations bill S-2, 94, 118-20, 122, 448-54, 460-3, 478

Canada Non-Profit Corporations bill S-3, 121, 148-9, 155, 471-5, 486-90, 511

Cape Breton Development Corporation bill C-38, 515, 540-1, 548, 604

Concentration of Corporate Power, Royal Commission, 54, 153, 236, 453-4, 732

Crown corporations, 41, 52-53, 715-16, 876-7

Côté, Hon. Jean-Pierre, P.C. (Resigned Apr. 20/78)

Beef industry, strike of producers in Saskatchewan and Manitoba, 404

Electoral Boundaries Readjustment bill C-418 (Hochelaga-Maison-neuve), 460

Electoral Boundaries Readjustment bill C-358 (Pontiac-Gatineau-Labelle), 458

Electoral Boundaries Readjustment bill C-417 (Sainte-Marie), 460

First Ministers' Conference, CBC coverage of, 326

Tributes on resignation from Senate and appointment as Lieutenant Governor of Quebec, 714-15

Cottreau, Hon. Ernest G.

Fishing and Recreational Harbours bill C-2, 326-8, 343, 361-3

Berthing fees, 327-8, 361, 362, 363

Enforcement officers, 362

Indian reserves, 363

Leasing arrangements, 362

Marinas and launching ramps, development of, 327

Ministerial jurisdiction in management and maintenance of harbours, 327

Net voting, 343, 361

Offences and punishments, 362

Small craft harbours, consolidation of, 361

Wharfingers, 327

Michaud, Hon. Herve, the late, 833-4

Retirement age policies, 189-90

Forced retirement and hardship involved, 190

Crime

Childhood experiences as causes of criminal behaviour, 87

Fugitive Offenders bill S-8, 276, 295-8, 303-04, 347, 360

Criminal Code (language of accused)

Accused to be advised of right, 955

Application for trial in official language of accused, 955, 957

Criminal Code (language of accused)—concl'd

Change of venue, 955, 957

Coming into force in any province, 955

Consultation between federal and provincial authorities and federal Justice Minister, 955, 957

Financial arrangements with provinces, 955, 956

Implementation of bilingual system in various provinces, 956-7

Manitoba government support of bilingualism, 958-9

National unity aspect, 957-8

New Brunswick, 959

Program of Equal Opportunity, 959

Universities, 959

Work of opposition leader of legislature, 959

Ontario Attorney General's action re bilingualism in courts, 956

Provincial jurisdiction in administration of justice, 957

Statement of Justice Minister in Commons Committee meeting, 957

Speakers: Senators

Goldenberg, Carl, 956

Greene, John J., 955

McElman, Charles, 959, 960

McIlraith, George, 955, 956

Roblin, Duff, 958-9

Wagner, Claude, 956-8

Criminal Code (language of accused) bill C-42. 1r, 913; 2r, 955-60; 3r, 975; r.a., 1029Croll, Hon. David A.

Haig, Hon. J. Campbell, resignation from the Senate, 243

Retirement age policies, 126-32, 211-12

Flexibility of retirement age, pension systems in OECD member countries, 132

Life expectancy at birth in selected countries, 131

Psychological burdens at retirement age, 129

Requirement to retire to qualify for pension, 132

Resolution on Commons order paper, 126-7

Retirement age in selected countries, 128, 131

Senate Committee on Aging, 127

Senate role in inquiry, 127

See appendix, 131-2

Retirement Age Policies, Special Senate Committee

Members, 235, 255

Motion for appt., 126-32, 155-7, 171-3, 177-8, 189-91, 203-05, 208-12; amd, 212; m as modified agreed, 212

Reports

Quorum of committee, 323-6

Crown corporations, 41, 52-53, 715-16, 876-7

Audit requirements, 715-16

Minister responsible for such corporations, 876-7

Names of crown corporations answerable to federal government, 876-7

Surplus or deficit 1976-77, 876-7

Cuba

Military instructors of Cuban nationality involved with Zaire rebel attacks, 815

Currency and exchange

Authorization to Royal Mint to strike and issue gold coins, 767, 799-801, 826

Erosion of powers and prerogatives to Parliament, 799, 801, 826

Export opportunities, 799

Mining Assoc. of Canada letter to opposition leader, 800, 801

Objections from coin collectors, 800

Olympic coins, 767, 800

South African Krugerrand, 801

Currency and exchange—concl'd*Speakers: Senators

Forsey, Eugene A., 826
 Grosart, Allister, 799-802
 Marchand, Jean, 767

Currency and Exchange bill C-39. 1r, 753; 2r, 767, 799-802; ref to com, 802; rep without amdt, 814; 3r, 826; r.a., 1029

Customs tariff

Aircraft and aircraft engines, 1002
 Extension of temporary tariff reductions, 1001
 GATT negotiations, 1002
 Industrial tractor tires and chemicals used in pesticides, 1001, 1002
 Withdrawal of British preferential tariff on certain imports, 1001-02

Speakers: Senators

Benidickson, W. M., 1002
 Frith, Royce, 1001-02
 Grosart, Allister, 1002-03

Customs Tariff bill C-48. 1r, 1001; 2r, 1001-03; 3r, 1003; r.a., 1029

Davey, Hon. Keith*Sports

CBC telecast of Pearson Cup baseball game, 847-8, 876

Deaths

Ewasew, Hon. John (Mar. 26/78), 514-15
 Michaud, Hon. Herve J. (June 5/78), 832-4
 Moro, Hon. Aldo, former Prime Minister of Italy, 751-2
 Porteous, Hon. George, Lieutenant Governor of Saskatchewan, 307
 Stanfield, Mary, wife of Hon. Robert Stanfield, P.C., 71

Debates of the Senate

Correction in translation, question of privilege, 235
 Speech by Senator Bosa, change in, 342

Denis, Hon. Azellus, P.C.

Canada Elections bill C-5, 265-7, 269
 Allowable expenses and anonymous donations, 267, 269
 Electoral Officer's report to Commons Speaker re amdts, 266
 Hours of polling stations, 266
 Identification of elector, 266
 Incapacitated electors, 266
 Registration of political parties, 266
 Revisions, 266
 Student voting, 266
 Task force on elections legislation, 266
 Constitutional amendment, 883, 884
 Electoral Boundaries Readjustment bill C-423 (Megantic-Compton-Stanstead), 460
 Electoral Boundaries Readjustment bill C-415 (Saint-Henri-Westmount), 459-60
 Income tax, 234
 Income Tax bill C-23 (to establish Employment Tax Credit Program), 283
 Income Tax bill C-56 (amdt to statute law and authorization of payments re provincial sales tax), 932
 National revenue
 Olympic Stadium, exemption from customs duties, 771
 Quebec independence and association with other provinces, 93
 Separatism, newspaper report of remarks re, 894
 Transfer of Offenders bill C-21, 497
 Conviction and sentence abroad, effect of transfer on, 497

Deschatelets, Hon. Jean-Paul, P.C.

Auto Pact, Canadian losses, 50
 Beef industry, 50
 Bell Canada bill C-1001, 550-1, 574, 576-7
 Amdts by Commons, 551, 576
 Borrowing powers, 550
 Power to increase authorized capital, 550, 551, 576
 Regulatory authority of CRTC, 551, 574
 Shares and dividends, 550
 Economy, state of secondary industries in Canada, 112
 Marriage Law Exemption (Lucien Roch Joseph Morin and Marie Rose Helene Morin) bill S-7, 307-08, 309, 507
 Retirement age policies, 210-11
 Rules of the Senate
 Question of privilege to allow senator to speak on 3r, 888, 889
 Speaker pro tem, 310, 880, 892
 Textile imports, 112

Desruisseaux, Hon. Paul

Address in reply to Speech from the Throne, 77-80
 Beef industry, 50
 Canadian Broadcasting Corporation
 Documentary program "Duplessis", 498, 501-03
 Discrepancies and untrue reporting in portrayal of historical figures, 501-02
 Excerpt from letter from Archbishop of Sherbrooke, 501
La Tribune editorial re CBC historical program, 501
 Radio Canada's responsibility in verification of facts, 502-03
 Economic conditions, 78-80
 AIB controls, 78
 Deficit forecast, 78
 Government spending, 79
 Gross National Product, 79
 Industry-business-government conferences, need for, 79
 Job creation, 78
 Trade policies, 79, 80
 Unemployment, 78, 79
 Economy, exchange rate of Canadian dollar, 370-1, 373
 Bank of Canada role, 371
 Economic Council's recommendation, 371
 Free floating exchange rate, 371
 Inflation rates in industrialized countries, 370
 Periodic analysis of money supply, 373
 Personal income, increase in, 371
 Trade advantages, 371-2
 Economy, state of secondary industries, 110-14
Agenda for Action, brief from Canadian Manufacturers' Association, 113-14
 Australian white paper on relations between manufacturers and the state, 111
 Dollar devaluation, 113
 Economic Council analysis and recommendations, 111
 Factors contributing to poor economy, 112
 Free trade, 110
 Imports affecting domestic markets, 111-12; dumping, 112; textiles 112
 Industry-government relations, 111
 Labour problems, 112
 Provincial consultation in trade matters, 111
 Science Council analysis of conditions of industry, 113
 Economy, value of the Canadian dollar, 866-70
Chase Manhattan article re exchange rate and Canada-Quebec relations, 867
Chimo article by Royal Bank of Canada chairman re value of Canadian currency, 869
 Export trade and balance of payments, 868, 869

Desruisseaux, Hon. Paul—concl'd

- Economy, value of the Canadian dollar —concl'd
  - Federal deficit, 868
  - FIRA, 868
  - GATT, 868
  - Le Devoir* article re reflection of internal economy and external factors on currency, 869-70
  - Monetary unions to regulate currencies at international level, 867
- Financial Administration bill C-10, 782-3
  - Comptroller General
    - Lack of parliamentary jurisdiction, 783
    - Responsibilities, 783
- Government documents and information, right of public access to, 444-7
  - Cabinet policy deliberations, disclosure of, 445
  - Canadian Bar Assoc. study, 444, 445, 447
    - Freedom of Information in Canada—Will the Doors Stay Shut?*, 445
  - Crown documents, privileges re, 445
  - Government expenditures, 447
    - Crown corporations, 447
  - Legislation since 1867 relating to subject matter, 444-5
  - Public Service, 446
  - Sweden and United States legislation, 446
- National unity, 78
- Northern Pipeline bill C-25, 535
  - Economic impact and costs of project, 535
- Science policy, 191-2
  - Research and development, 192
    - Granting councils, 192
    - Industrial sector weaknesses, 192
- Senate reform, 80

Document referred to committee

- Statute Law amendment proposals, 295; rep of com, 347-8, 363-5

Documents tabled, see Journals of the Senate*Duggan, Hon. James (Resigned Feb. 28/78)

- Tributes, 513-14

Duke of Edinburgh's Award, 182-4*Economic conditions and prospects, 28, 30-32, 33-34, 55, 57-60, 78-80, 96, 97, 107

- AIB controls, 34-37, 78, 83-85
  - Rulings of Board and derogatory effects of, 84-85; appeals, 85
- Atlantic provinces, 71-73
  - Coal industry, Cape Breton Island, 71; DEVCO operations, 71
  - Industrial plants, Nova Scotia, 71
  - Regional disparities, 73-74
  - Steel industry, 71; Hawker-Siddeley, Canstel, 71
- Balance of payment problems, 37
- Canada vs other OECD countries, 30, 36
- Commodity prices, statistics on, 35-36
- Decision to borrow abroad to support Canadian dollar, 358, 393
- Deficit forecast, 78
- Dollar devaluation, 31, 34, 57-58, 60, 107-08, 109
- Economic Council comment, 108
- Economic planning, federal-provincial conferences re, 919
- Five-point plan proposed by government, 31
- Government expenditures, 37, 79
- Government mismanagement, factors related to, 59
- Gross National Product, 79
- Income tax, 30, 37
  - Job credit plan, 37
- Industry-business-government conferences, need for, 79

Economic conditions and prospects—concl'd

- Labour problems, 30, 84
  - Effect of work stoppages, 84
  - Employee commitment and responsibility, 85
- Meeting between Canada-US treasury officials, report and agreement re currency, 437
- OECD economic survey, excerpts from, 34-35, 36
- Pipeline potential for employment, goods and services, 38
- Private enterprise problems, 41, 107, 108
- Toronto Sunday Star editorial, 33
- Tourism, 37
- Trade policies, 79, 80
- Unemployment, 30, 31, 36-37, 55, 58-59, 61-62, 78, 79, 83, 99-100
  - Job creation, 37, 78
  - Lack of work incentives, 62
  - Senior citizens, 61
  - Unemployment, motion to adjourn to consider matter of urgent public importance, 556-62
- Young Canada Works Program, additional funding for, 885

Economic Council of Canada

- Bilateral aid program, policy re, 950
- CIDA, new department in relation to, 950
- Prime Minister's letter to Council re taking on of responsibilities for analysis of inflation and productivity developments, 475-6

Economy, exchange rate of Canadian dollar, 352-7, 370-5, 443-4

- Bank of Canada role, 371
- Canada vs United States, 371-2, 443
- 'Clean float', 356
- Comparisons with world currencies, 353
- Consequences to Canadian consumer, 353-4
- Current account deficit, 355
- Debt serving costs, 356
- Economic Council recommendation, 371
- Excerpt from speech of Acting Chairman of Economic Council, 354
- Foreign exchange trading, 355-6
- Foreign investments, 373
- Free floating exchange rate, 371
- Government responsibility, 443-4
- Increase in personal income, 353-4
- Inflation rates in industrialized countries, 370, 372, 443
- Interest rate differential Canada-US, 356-7
- International marketplace advantages, 372
  - Prairie grain producers, 372
- National Finance Committee capacity to deal with study of subject matter, 374
- Periodic analysis of money supply, 373-4
- Personal income, increase in, 371
- Reaction of Canadian industry, 443
- Speculative movements into and out of Canadian dollar, 356
- Standby credit arranged by Finance Minister, 373
- Trade advantages, 371-2, 443
- US Corporate Accounting Rules, 356
- Withdrawal from international money market by provinces and agencies, 373

Speakers: Senators

- Austin, Jack, 352-7, 373, 374
- Belisle, Rheal, 375
- Bell, Ann Elizabeth, 373
- Desruisseaux, Paul, 370-1, 373
- Everett, Douglas D., 374
- Flynn, Jacques, 443-4
- Olson, Horace A., 372-3
- van Roggen, George C., 371-2, 375

Economy, state of secondary industries in Canada, 110-15

Agenda for Action, brief from Canadian Manufacturers' Association, 113-14

Dollar devaluation, 113

Factors contributing to poor economy, 112

Free trade, 110

Imports affecting domestic markets, 111-12; dumping, 112; textiles, 112

Industry-government relations, 111

Labour problems, 112

Provincial consultation in trade matters, 111

Science Council analysis of conditions of industry, 113

Solutions suggested by economists, 113

Unemployment, 114-15

Unemployment insurance, 114-15

Economy, value of the Canadian dollar, 866-70, 877-9

Canadian dollar vs US dollar, 878

Chase Manhattan article re exchange rate and Canada-Quebec relations, 867

Chimo article by Royal Bank of Canada chairman re value of Canadian currency, 869

Economic factors related to exchange rate, 877

Export trade and balance of payments, 868, 869

Facts and statistics of Canadian economy, 879

Federal deficit, 868

FIRA, 868

GATT, 868

Inflation, 878

Le Devoir article re reflection of internal economy and external factors on currency, 869-70

Monetary unions to regulate currencies at international level, 867

Price and wage controls, 878

Recovery cycle Canada-US, 878

Separatism, 869

Supply-demand and borrowings from external markets, 878-9

Speakers: Senators

Austin, Jack, 877-9

Desruisseaux, Paul, 866-70

Egypt and Israel

Commendation of initiative taken by President of Egypt and Prime Minister of Israel, 150

Elections

See Canada Elections bill C-5, 265-9, 272, 273

Canada Elections bill C-66, 1046-7, 1048

Canada Elections, Election Expenses, Northwest Territories bill C-33, 471, 484-5, 494-5, 511

Electoral Boundaries Readjustment bill C-267 (Prince George-Peace River). 1r, 442; 2r, 458; 3r, 477; r.a., 511

Electoral Boundaries Readjustment bill C-358 (Pontiac-Gatineau-Labelle). 1r, 442; 2r, 458; 3r, 477; r.a., 511

Electoral Boundaries Readjustment bill C-412 (Humber-Port-au-Port-St. Barbe). 1r, 442; 2r, 458-9; 3r, 477; r.a., 511

Electoral Boundaries Readjustment bill C-414 (Prince Edward- Hastings). 1r, 442; 2r, 459; 3r, 477; r.a., 511

Electoral Boundaries Readjustment bill C-415 (Saint-Henri-Westmount). 1r, 442; 2r, 459-60; 3r, 477; r.a., 511

Electoral Boundaries Readjustment bill C-417 (Sainte-Marie). 1r, 442; 2r, 460; 3r, 477-8; r.a., 511

Electoral Boundaries Readjustment bill C-418 (Hochelaga-Maison-neuve). 1r, 442; 2r, 460; 3r, 478; r.a., 511

Electoral Boundaries Readjustment bill C-423 (Megantic-Compton-Stanstead). 1r, 442; 2r, 460; 3r, 478; r.a., 511

Emergency legislation

Postal Service Operations bill C-45, 661-2, 664-6, 677-87, 700-01, 713

Employment Tax Credit Program

See Income Tax bill C-23 (to establish Employment Tax Credit Program), 274, 280-4, 286-91, 292-5, 301

Energy resources

Alberta Gas Trunk Line Co. Ltd., 975

Energy-saving technology, PEI, 63

Fundy tidal power sites, 314

Garrison Dam, 753-4, 765, 892, 904, 926-7

Husky Oil Company

Assets and ownership of, 875-6, 886, 950, 975

Newfoundland, 42-45

BRINCO Agreement, 43-44

Oil storage at Bell Island, 313-14

North Atlantic Assembly subcommittee on energy policy, 225

Energy supplies emergency

See Petroleum Administration and Energy Supplies Emergency bill C-19, 662, 666-8, 687-90, 698, 702, 713

Estimates

Debate on the budget, question, 556

Federal Spending Plans 1978-79, 555, 556, 583-4

Estimates (Appropriation bill C-15)

Authorized expenditures, 236, 238

Dollar items, 237-8

Major items of appropriation, 237

Numbering of appropriation acts, 236-7

Regional and Economic Expansion Dept., 237

Transport Ministry, 237

Estimates (Appropriation bill C-30)

Armed forces retirement benefits, 466

Cash outlay budget, 466, 469

Central Mortgage and Housing Corp., 466

CIDA, 466

Dairy Commission, accumulated deficit, 466

Dollar items, 466

Export Development Corp., 466

Estimates (Appropriation bill C-30)—concl'd

- Government expenditures, 467, 468, 469, 478, 479
- Grants and contributions to departments, 468
- Nelson River Transmission facility, transfer of, 466
- Net voting, 466, 468
- Parliamentary spending authority, 466
- Provincial revenue guarantee payments, 466
- Public debt costs, 466
- Restraints, 466, 467, 469; government employment, 469
- Retroactivity clause, 478-9
- Treasury Board directive on definitions, 467-8
- Write-offs, contributions to international financial institutions and repayments of loans, investments, advances, 466

Estimates (Appropriation bill C-31)

- Borrowing authority, 483
- Budgetary and non-budgetary expenditures, 483, 491
- Canada Council, 491
- CBC deficit, 492
- Central Mortgage and Housing Corp., 491
- Export Development Corp., 491
- Federal Expenditures Plan: How your tax dollar is spent*, 492
- GNP appropriated by governments, 484, 492
- Health and Welfare Dept., 491-2
- Net voting, 491, 493
- Public debt increase, 492
- Restraints, 490
- Terms of Clause 2 re three-twelfths of budget, 483, 484, 490, 492, 493

Estimates referred to National Finance Committee

- Year ending Mar. 31/77, 87
- Year ending Mar. 31/78, 87
  - Supplementary (A), 116; rep of com, 175, 185-8, 198-9, 202-03, 206-08
  - Supplementary (B), 392; rep of com, 455-6, 465
- Year ending Mar. 31/79, 366; rep of com, 871-2, 898-9

Estimates year ending Mar. 31/78, Supplementary (A), 175, 185-8, 198-9, 202-03, 206-08

- Auditor General's report re wasteful spending, 203
- Dollar items, 186-7
- Energy, Mines and Resources, 187-8
- Expenditures vs GNP, 198
- External Affairs, 187
- Finance, 197
- Government expenditures and inflation, 207-08
  - Other nations, 207
- Health and Welfare, 188
- Industry, Trade and Commerce, 188
- Statutory expenditures in relation to voted expenditures, 185, 186, 206-07
- Supplementaries in reverse, 208
- Target, authorized and real expenditures, 202-03
- Transfer payments to provinces, 198-9
- Year-end spending by departments, 208

Estimates year ending Mar. 31/78, Supplementary (B), 392, 455-6, 465

- Cash outlays, 455
- Comparability in government expenditures, 455
- Grants, non-accounting of, 456
- Items requiring parliamentary approval, 455
- Net voting, 456
- Revolving funds, 456

Estimates year ending Mar. 31/79, 366, 871-2, 898-9, 907-10

- Budgetary and non-budgetary items by type of authority, 871
- Capital investment funds used for operating purposes, 872
- CIDA, 872
- Expenditures, statistics (1974-79), 907
- Export Development Corporation, 909
- Foregoing of tax revenue, erosion of parliamentary control in program, 871-2
- GNP vs expenditures, 909
- Grants to foreign countries, 872
- Inflation, 907-08
- Man-year increase and personnel costs, 899
- Net voting, 872, 899, 908
- Public debt, 899, 909
- Revenue expenditures, 909
- Transfer payments, 909

Estonia

- Baltic Honorary Consuls, visitors to Senate, 376
- Sixtieth anniversary of Proclamation of Independence, 368

Everett, Hon. Douglas D.

- Appropriation bill No. 3 1977-78 C-15, 236-7, 238
- Appropriation bill No. 4 1977-78 C-30, 465-6, 469
- Canada Labour Code bill C-8, 603, 604, 605, 608, 616, 617-18, 638
- Economy, exchange rate of Canadian dollar, 374
  - National Finance Committee capacity to deal with study of subject matter, 374
  - Periodic analysis of money supply, 374
- Estimates (Appropriation bill C-15)
  - Authorized expenditures, 236, 238
  - Major items of appropriation, 237
  - Numbering of appropriation acts, 236-7
  - Regional and Economic Expansion Dept., 237
  - Transport Ministry, 237
- Estimates (Appropriation bill C-30)
  - Armed forces retirement benefits, 466
  - Cash outlay budget, 466, 469
  - Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. 466
  - CIDA, 466
  - Dairy Commission, accumulated deficit, 466
  - Dollar items, 466
  - Export Development Corp., 466
  - Nelson River Transmission facility, transfer of, 466
  - Net voting, 466
  - Parliamentary spending authority, 466
  - Provincial revenue guarantee payments, 466
  - Public debt costs, 466
  - Restraints, 469; government employment, 469
  - Write-offs, contributions to international financial institutions and repayments of loans, investments, advances, 466
- Estimates year ending Mar. 31/77, ref to com, 87
- Estimates year ending Mar. 31/78, Supplementary (A), ref to com, 87; rep of com, 175, 185-8, 198-9, 202-03, 206-08
  - Dollar items, 186-7
  - Energy, Mines and Resources, 187-8
  - Expenditures vs GNP, 198
  - External Affairs, 187
  - Finance, 187
  - Health and Welfare, 188
  - Industry, Trade and Commerce, 188
  - Items to be voted in supplementary estimates, 186
  - Statutory items, 185
- Estimates year ending Mar. 31/78, Supplementary (B), ref to com, 392; rep of com, 455-6, 465
  - Cash outlays, 455
  - Comparability in government expenditures, 455

Everett, Hon. Douglas D.—concl'd

- Estimates year ending Mar. 31/78, Supplementary (B)—concl'd
  - Grants, non-accounting of, 456
  - Net voting, 456
  - Revolving funds, 456
- Estimates year ending Mar. 31/79, ref to com, 366; rep of com, 871-2, 898-9
  - Budgetary and non-budgetary items by type of authority, 871
  - Capital investment funds used for operating purposes, 872
  - CIDA, 872
  - Foregoing of tax revenue, erosion of parliamentary control in program, 871-2
  - Grants or contributions to foreign countries, 872
  - Major decreases and increases in government spending, 899
  - Man-year increase and personnel costs, 899
  - Net voting, 872, 899
  - Public debt, 899
  - Target ceiling 1978/79, 871, 898
- Financial Administration bill C-10, 829-31
  - Comptroller General
    - Auditor General's recommendation, 829
    - Duties, 830
    - Precedents in appt. of two deputy ministers, 830-1
    - Responsibility to report to Auditor General, 829-30
    - Tenure of office, 831
  - UK Comptroller and Auditor General, duties and responsibilities, excerpt from Encyclopaedia of Parliament, 830
- Fishing and Recreational Harbours bill C-2, 351, 352, 360-1
  - Net voting, 351, 360-1
  - Study on the Accounts of Canada, Report on*, 360-1
  - Revenue dependency and revolving fund, 352
- National Finance Committee
  - Reports
    - Estimates year ending Mar. 31/78, Supplementary (A), 175, 185-8, 198-9, 202-03, 206-08
    - Estimates year ending Mar. 31/78, Supplementary (B), 455-6, 465
    - Estimates year ending Mar. 31/79, 871-2, 898-9, 907-10
    - Public Works Dept. accommodation program, 1040-2
  - Terms of reference, 87

Ewasew, Hon. John (Deceased Mar. 26/78)

- Tributes, 514-15

Excise tax

- See Income Tax and Excise Tax bill C-59, 864, 924-5, 948-9, 1021, 1025-7, 1029

Export development

- Authorized capital, 986
- Bell Canada and Saudi Arabia contract, 986, 987, 990
- Bid bonds and performance guarantees, 986
- Energy and fisheries potential in Newfoundland, 990
- Government account for loans and guarantees, 986
- Insurance ceiling, 986, 987-9
- Interference with Canadian Commercial Corp. and Federal Business Development Bank, 989
- Statement of officer of Canadian General Electric Co., 988-90
- Liability under contracts, guarantees, etc. outstanding, 987
- Limit of liability, 986, 987-8
- Provisions of export support programs, 986
- Pulp and paper industry, 988-9, 991
  - Bankruptcy of Labrador mill, 989
  - Competing foreign industry, 989
  - Statement of chairman of association, 988-9

Export development—concl'd

- Speakers: Senators
  - Marshall, Jack, 987-90
  - Smith, George I., 987
  - Stanbury, Richard J., 985-7, 990-1

Export Development bill C-36. 1r, 965; 2r, 985-91; 3r, 991; r.a., 1029External Affairs

- See Foreign affairs

Farm credit

- Agriculture Committee, authority to study amending legislation in advance of receipt of bill, 508, 645-6

Farm credit (bill C-29)

- Age limit of 35-years, 645-6, 647
- Authority for additional capital, referral to committee of Parliament, 645, 647, 652
- Capital of corporation, 645, 646, 647
- Committee recommendations, 553-4
  - Capital of corporations, increase in, 553
  - Ceiling of loans, increase in, 553
  - Increasing of capital of Farm Credit Corporation under an appropriation act, 554
- Interest penalty on arrears, 553
- Legal services re loans, 554
- 'Market value' as basis for appraisal of farm land, 553
- Debt of agriculture community, 649
- Interest rates, 649-50
- Legal costs of loans, 646
- Lending powers of corporation, 652
- Loan maximum, 645, 647-8
- Loans outstanding, 651
- Market value of farm, use in assessing loan, 648, 650
- Newfoundland farmers, 650, 651
- Penalty interest, 648, 651
- Point of order re Orders of the Day, 645
- Prince Edward Island, 652
- Production and building costs, 649
- Provision for losses on loans, 648
- Supervisory fee, 646, 650
- Speakers: Senators
  - Argue, Hazen, 546, 553-4, 645-6
  - Marshall, Jack, 650-1
  - Michaud, Herve J., 650
  - Molgat, Gildas L., 645, 646-8, 651-2
  - Phillips, Orville H., 645, 648-50, 651, 652
  - Roblin, Duff, 648

Farm Credit bill C-29. 1r, 571; rep with observations and recommendations (prior to receipt of bill), 645-6; 2r, 646-52; 3r, 656; r.a., 713Federal-provincial affairs

- Visit of Quebec premier to France, 88

Felicitations

- Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth II, 25th anniversary of Coronation, 832

Financial administration (bill C-10)

- Amdts proposed to Commons but not accepted, 739
- Comptroller General of Canada
  - Appearance before parliamentary committee to report, 741
  - Question of subpoena, 739-40
  - Auditor General's appt., excerpt from Act re, 783-4

Financial administration (bill C-10)—concl'd

Comptroller General of Canada—concl'd

Auditor General's recommendation and statements, 734, 758-9, 762

Control of public purse, 747-8

Beauchesne's Fourth Edition, excerpt re, 748

Deputy Minister title, questioned, 842-3

Duties, description omitted from bill, 748-9, 760-1, 827, 851-2

Duties, statutory enumeration of, 844

Auditor General's remarks re, 762

Duties vs Auditor General's duties, 843

Erskine May citation re "The Comptroller and Auditor General", 738

Lack of parliamentary jurisdiction, 736, 749, 759-60, 773, 782, 853

Precedents in appt. of two deputy ministers, 830-1

Public spending, Parliament's authorization for, 783

Reporting to Parliament through Auditor General, 850-1

Responsibilities, 723, 725, 737, 740, 749-50, 773, 783-5, 826-7, 830, 849-50

Statement from Senator Forsey re motion in amdt, 835-6

Tenure of office, 831

UK Auditor General's position as Officer of Parliament, 737, 850-1

Duties and responsibilities, excerpt from Encyclopaedia of Parliament, 830Speakers: Senators

Asselin, Martial, 766-7, 772-3

Bell, Ann Elizabeth, 853

Cook, Eric, 721-3, 725, 783-5, 848-51

Desruisseaux, Paul, 782-3

Everett, Douglas D., 829-31

Flynn, Jacques, 782, 851-2

Forsey, Eugene A., 724, 737-40, 826-8, 829

Greene, John J., 736, 739, 749-50

Grosart, Allister, 723, 724, 734-7, 741, 750

Langlois, Leopold, 740-1

Olson, Horace A., 828-9

Roblin, Duff, 747-9

Smith, George I., 758-62, 829, 842-5

Financial Administration bill C-10. 1r, 719; 2r, 721-4, 725, 734-41, 747-50, 758-62, 766-7, 772-3, 782-5; ref to com, 786; rep without amdt, 814; m for 3r, 826, m in amdt, 826-31, 841-5, 848-52, m in amdt to m in amdt, 852-3, neg, 853, m in amdt neg, 853; 3r, 853; r.a., 1029

First Ministers' Conference

Availability of government position papers and report of proceedings, 325

CBC coverage, 326

Objectives of conference, 339-40

Senators as observers, 335

Fisheries

Depletion of stocks by foreign countries outside 200-mile limit, 745, 765, 769, 778

Designation as subject matter of standing Senate committee, 754, 781

Fish quotas allocation, 1046

Fisheries and Oceans Dept., establishment of, 1043

Fishing boundaries, Canada-US, negotiations re, 769, 779, 885, 892

PEI scallop fishing season, 925, 1022-3

Small craft harbours projects, 1043-4

Fishing and recreational harbours

Berthing fees, 327-8, 336-7, 361, 362, 363

Fishing and recreational harbours —concl'd

Enforcement officers, 351, 362

Indian reserves, 363

Leasing arrangements, 362

Marinas and launching ramps, development of, 327

Ministerial jurisdiction in management and maintenance of harbours, 327, 350-1

Net voting, 336, 337, 343-4, 345-6, 348-50, 351-2, 360-1

Study on the Accounts of Canada, Report on, 343, 349, 360-1

Offences and punishment, 351, 360, 362

Revenue dependency and revolving fund, 352

Seizure provisions, 337

Small craft problems in relation to consolidation of harbours, 337, 361

Small harbours, neglect of, 336

User-pay policy in regard to fishermen, 336

Wharfinger, 327, 337

Speakers: Senators

Cottreau, Ernest G., 326-8, 343, 361-3

Everett, Douglas D., 351, 352, 360-1

Flynn, Jacques, 360-1

Grosart, Allister, 337, 343-4, 345-6, 348-52

Phillips, Orville H., 336-7

Fishing and Recreational Harbours bill C-2. 1r, 302; 2r, 326-8, 336-7, 343-4, 345-6, 348-52, 360-3; ref to com, 363; rep without amdt but with recommendations, 630-1; 3r, 655; r.a., 713

Flynn, Hon. Jacques, P.C., Leader of the Opposition in the Senate

Address in reply to Speech from the Throne, 27-32

Air Canada bill C-3, 154

Capacities and activities of corporation, 154

Air-conditioning units for motor vehicles, 1045

Anti-Inflation bill C-18, 549, 550

Appropriation bill No. 3, 1977-78 C-15, 238, 239

Authorized expenditures, 238

Appropriation bill No. 4, 1977-78 C-30, 478-9

Bank Act and Quebec Savings Banks bill C-16, 423, 424

Duration of authority to carry on business, 423

Senate committee report (1976) on act, 423

Bankruptcy bill S-11, 525-6

Insurance fund to cover wage loss, 525

Italicized items defining expenditure of public funds with which Senate has no power to deal, 525-6

Wage earners priority of $2000 over secured creditors, 525

Beef industry, strike of producers in Saskatchewan and Manitoba, 400, 401, 417, 418, 419-20

Canada Business Corporations bill S-2, 122

Canada Labour Code bill C-8, 592, 593, 594, 595, 604, 606, 607, 608, 609, 611-12, 613, 615, 616, 617, 620; m that clause 43 be deleted, 620-1; neg, 621; 622, 624, 625-6, 628, 632, 656

Canada Non-Profit Corporations bill S-3, 155

Committees, membership changes during summer adjournment, 902, 921-2, 941

Committees, terms of reference, 167-8

Compensation for Former Prisoners of War bill C-27, 477

Polish veterans, 477

Constitution of Canada

Proposals of Prime Minister re, 700

Renewal of the Canadian Federation, 864-5, 875, 881, 883, 892-3, 903

White Paper on Constitutional Reform, 777

Constitution of Canada, Special Joint Committee, 954, 962-3

Côté, Hon. Jean-Pierre, retirement from Senate and appointment as Lieutenant Governor of Quebec, 714-15

Duggan, Hon. James, resignation from the Senate, 514

Flynn, Hon. Jacques, P.C.—*cont'd

- Economic conditions, 28, 30-32
  - Canada vs other OECD countries, 30
  - Dollar devaluation, 31
  - Five-point plan proposed by government, 31
  - Income tax, 30
  - Labour problems, 30
  - Unemployment, 30, 31
- Economic Council of Canada
  - Prime Minister's letter to Council re taking on of responsibilities for analysis of inflation and productivity developments, 475, 476
- Economy, exchange rate of Canadian dollar, 443-4
  - Canada vs United States, 443
  - Government responsibility, 443-4
  - Inflation and unemployment, 443
  - Reaction of Canadian industry, 443
  - Trade aspects, 443
- Estimates (Appropriation bill C-30)
  - Government expenditures, increase in, 478
  - Retroactivity clause, 478-9
- Estimates (Appropriation bill C-31)
  - Terms of Clause 2 re three-twelfths of budget, 483, 484
- Estimates year ending Mar.31/78, Supplementary (A), 202-03
  - Auditor General's report re wasteful spending, 203
  - Target, authorized and real expenditures, 202-03
- Ewasew, Hon. John, the late, 514
- Exchange rate of Canadian dollar, 367
- Farm Credit Act, advance study of amending legislation by Agriculture Committee, 508
- Federal-provincial affairs
  - Visit of Quebec premier to France, 88
- Financial Administration bill C-10, 782, 851-3; m in amdt to m in amdt, 852, neg, 852-3
  - Comptroller General
    - Duties, description omitted from bill, 851-2
    - Lack of parliamentary jurisdiction, 782
    - Responsibilities, 782
- First Ministers' Conference, objectives of, 339-40
- Fishing and Recreational Harbours bill C-2, 360
  - Net voting, 360
  - Offences and punishment, 360
- Fugitive Offenders bill S-8, 298
- Haig, Hon. J. Campbell, resignation from the Senate, 243
- Income Tax (amdt to statute law and authorization for raising of funds) bill C-11, 258-9
  - Complexity of income tax legislation, 259
  - Senate role in examination of bill, 258-9
- Income Tax (amdt to statute law and authorization of payments re provincial sales tax) bill C-56, 822-3, 965-7, 971
  - Provincial sales tax, 965-6
    - Federal-provincial consultation, 966, 967, 971
    - Provincial jurisdiction, 967
    - Quebec, 966, 967, 971
    - Statement of Finance Minister, 966
- Income Tax (to establish Employment Tax Credit Program) bill C-23, 281, 283, 294-5
  - Eligible employer, employment or worker, definition of, 294
- James Bay and Northern Quebec Native Claims Settlement Act, orders in council re, 658-9
- Legislative program
  - Prime Minister's decision re general election and Postal Services Operations bill, 768, 769, 777
- Michaud, Hon. Herve, the late, 832-3
- Miscellaneous Statute Law Amendment bill C-41, 580, 584-5

Flynn, Hon. Jacques, P.C.—*concl'd

- National finance
  - Provincial sales tax
    - Alleged remarks by Prime Minister, 662-3
    - Counter-proposals from Quebec, 861, 873
    - Federal government appropriation of provincial sources of revenue, 582
- National revenue, investment of RRSP in annuities as opposed to trust funds, 515-16, 524-6, 539
- National unity
  - Constitutional conference, 29-30
  - Financial assistance to Quebec organizations supporting federalism, 582
  - Individualism of Canada, 30
  - Quebec separatism, 28-29
    - Referendum question, 29
- New Brunswick, establishment of experimental farm in Kent County, 510, 511
- Northern Gas Pipeline, Special Senate Committee, 387, 389, 391, 432-4, 629
  - Appointment, statement re debate on, 629
  - Meeting during Senate sitting, 456
  - Members, question re, 389
  - Terms of reference, 387
- Northern Pipeline bill C-25, 521, 522, 523-4, 533, 545, 562-4, 565, 566; motion in amdt (Clause 23.1), 564, 565, 566, neg, 567-8
  - Native land claims, 562-4, 565, 566
- Point of order re question and answer out of order, 367
- Postal Service Operations bill C-45, 661, 684-5, 686, 700, 701
  - Motion for additional clause re proclamation date, 700; neg, 701
- Regulations and other Statutory Instruments Committee
  - Fourth report, Post Office, 691
- Remembrance Day tributes, 116
- Rules of the Senate
  - Motions for which no notice is required, 558, 561
  - Motion to adjourn to discuss matter of urgent public importance, 417, 418, 419-20
  - Oral and written questions, 200-01
  - Point of order, non-existence of without Speaker's ruling, 420
  - Point of order re bill C-29 and com report on subject matter, 596
  - Rule 46(G), question re clarification of, 582-3
- Senate
  - Authority to amend money bills, 258
  - Business, 901, 902
  - Committee work in examination of subject matter of bills, 258-9
  - Constituency allowances for senators, 905
  - Reform, 28, 276, 277
    - Alleged statements of Senate government leader, press report of, 276, 277
- Separatism, newspaper reports of remarks of Senator Denis, 804
- Tenth anniversary as Leader of the Opposition in the Senate, 77
- Transport and Communications Committee meeting, attendance of Minister of Fisheries and the Environment, 386
- Transport Department, Mirabel Airport, strike by blue-collar workers, 249
- Welcome to new senators, 513

Food

- Agriculture and Land Planning*, by Norman Pearson, 101
- Agricultural industries, 49, 101-02
- Food conference, 20-23
- Food shortages, 101
- Resources for Tomorrow Conference, 101
- Statistics on international food expenditures, 49

Foreign affairs

- Auto pact, Canada-United States, 893, 903-04
- Baltic States, occupation by Soviet Union, 377
- Canada-United States relations, authority to publish and distribute report on, 972
- Canadian assistance to earthquake victims of Friuli, Italy, 810-12
- Egypt and Israel, commendation of initiative taken by leaders of, 150
- Fisheries
  - Canada-United States negotiations re fishing boundaries, 861, 885, 892
- Helsinki Monitoring Groups in USSR, nomination for 1978 Nobel Peace Prize, 1021-2
- Middle East
  - Canadian foreign policy, 202
  - Terrorist raid on Israel and retaliatory action, 457, 476, 479
  - United Nations peacekeeping force, participation of Canada in defence of southern Lebanon, 476, 479, 516-17, 525, 539, 548, 728, 746-7
- South Africa and other countries, government-sponsored commercially-supported activities of Canada, phasing out of, 271-2, 278
- Soviet nationals in Canada, violation of Official Secrets Act by, 312
- Statement by Secretary of State for External Affairs, 319-21
- Whaling, International Agreement, 201, 235-6
- Zaire
  - Diplomatic discussions re action against guerrillas, 815
  - Evacuation of Canadians, 770, 778-9
  - Intervention by foreign nations in Zaire and Eritrea, 781, 799
  - Kolwezi massacre, question as to involvement of Canadian citizens, 815

Foreign Affairs, Standing Senate Committee

- Budget, 169, 900
- Canada-United States relations, authority to publish and distribute Vol. II of report on, 880
- Expenses, 86
- Meeting during Senate sitting, 880
- Members, 39
- Terms of reference, 87

Forsey, Hon. Eugene A.

- Air Canada bill C-3, 263
- Alternatives Canada, Conference on, 702-08
- Constitutional Court, 704-05
  - Binding opinion of court, 704
  - Prohibiting of dissenting opinions, 704
- Division of powers, 705-06
  - Banking, 705
  - Education, 705
  - Health and social welfare, 705-06
  - Transportation, 705
- Judges appointments, 706
- Parliamentary jurisdiction by order in council over provincial "nationalized" industry, excerpt from recommendation re, 702
- Le pouvoir déclaratoire du Parlement*, by Madame Andrée Lajoie, 702
- Senate reform
  - House of Provinces
    - Appointments, suggestion of Joint Committee on the Constitution, 707
    - Opposition representation, 707
  - Federal-provincial conferences, ongoing role, 703
  - Ordinary legislation or legislation dealing with conditional grants, 703
  - Suspensive veto, 703-04

Forsey, Hon. Eugene A.—cont'd

- Beef industry, strike of producers in Saskatchewan and Manitoba, 410, 416
- Bell Canada bill C-1001, 551
- Canada Labour Code bill C-8, 613, 616, 618, 622-3, 626, 641
- Cape Breton Development Corporation bill C-38, 541
- CBC Sunday Morning program, references to Senate, question of privilege, 1038-40
- Compensation for Former Prisoners of War bill C-27, 478
  - Polish veterans, 478
- Comptroller General of Canada
  - Status of Mr. Harry Rogers, 746
  - Order in Council re appointment, 746, 764
- Constitution of Canada
  - Excerpt from Throne Speech re, 277
  - Renewal of the Canadian Federation, 866
- Currency and Exchange bill C-39, 826
  - Erosion of powers and prerogatives of Parliament in currency controls, 826
- Debates of the Senate*, correction in translation, question of privilege, 235
- Electoral Boundaries Readjustment bills, comment re, 458
- Financial Administration bill C-10, 724, 737-40, m in amdt re duties and responsibilities, 826-7; neg, 853
- Comptroller General
  - Amdts proposed in Commons but not accepted, 739
  - Appearance before parliamentary committee, question of subpoena, 739-40
  - Erskine May* citation re "The Comptroller and Auditor General", 738
  - Excerpt from Revised Statutes of Canada re Comptroller, 738
  - Responsibilities, 737, 826-7
    - Description omitted from bill, 827
    - Lack of parliamentary jurisdiction, 737, 739
  - Statement (read by Senator G. I. Smith) re m in amdt, 835-6
  - UK Comptroller and Auditor General, designation as Officer of Parliament, 737
- Guay, Hon. J.-P., first Revenue Minister in Senate since 1882, 539
- Income Tax (to establish Employment Tax Credit Program) bill C-23, 284, 295
- Justice Department
  - Libel action, authority and precedents for payment of costs assessed against Hon. Mr. Goyer, 720, 733, 974-5
- La Voix de l'Est*, article by G. R. Scott re Hon. Eugene A. Forsey, question of privilege, 227
- National revenue
  - Charitable organizations, directive on loss of status due to political activities, 721, 730-1
  - Information Circular re Registered Charities, 721, 730-1
  - Olympic Stadium, exemption from customs duties, 771
- National unity
  - L'actualité*, article by June Callwood, 295, 314-19, 464, 498
- Northern Gas Pipeline, Special Senate Committee
  - Members, choosing of, 394
- Northern Pipeline bill C-25, 566, 570
- Nuclear weapons
  - Government policy re neutron bomb, 805, 841
  - Safeguards for sale of reactors, 201
- Parliament Buildings
  - Use of facilities for Liberal Party convention, 340, 342, 359
- Penitentiaries, qualifications of new Commissioner, 228, 278-9
- Petroleum Administration and Energy Supplies Emergency bill C-19, 668
- Point of order re discussion on beef industry, 416
- Postal Service Operations bill C-45, 682, 683
  - Emergency legislation due to delays in negotiations, 682-3

Forsey, Hon. Eugene A.—*cont'd

Postal Service Operations bill C-45 —concl'd

Imperfection of legislation, 683

Wildcat strike, danger of, 683

Post Office

Increased fees prescribed by Postmaster General, 653, 663-4

Privilege, question of

Parliamentary Procedure Simplified—A Complete Guide to Rules of Order, misleading use of picture of Senate chamber on commercial publication, 768

Public Works Department

Illumination of government buildings in Hull, 258, 312-13

Queen's Privy Council of Canada

Instrument of advice for summoning a person, 486, 548

Regulations and other statutory instruments

Public access to government documents, 1030-4

Access officer, 1033

Burden of proof for exemption, 1033

Criteria for exclusion from access, 1030

Definition of document, 1030

Description of document sought, 1033

Public access to government documents, 1030-4

Documents related to

Cabinet, 1031

Commercial or financial information, 1032

Federal-provincial relations, 1031

International relations, 1031

Law enforcement, 1031

Legal opinions, 1032

National defence, 1031

Personal privacy, 1031-2

Policy advice, 1031

Statutory exemptions, 1032

Eligibility for access, 1033

Exemptions—not compulsory, 1032

Fees for requests under Freedom of Information legislation, 1033-4

Priority against Crown privilege, 1034

Reports on compliance by agencies and departments, 1034

Time limits for release of information, 1034

Regulations and other Statutory Instruments Committee

Reports

1st report re quorum, engagement of staff, sittings during adjournments, 143

2nd report with additional criterion for Review of Statutory Instruments, 310-11, 337-8

3rd report re Green Paper on Legislation on Public Access to Government Documents, tabled in Commons Apr.6/78

4th report re increased fees prescribed by Postmaster General, 653, 659-60, 663-4, 691

5th report re Green Paper on Legislation on Public Access to Government Documents, 1021, 1030-4

Rules of the Senate

Motions for which no notice is required, 558, 560

Motions which are debatable, lack of rule re, 416

Senate

Appointments, question re prerogative of Prime Minister, 278

Heating of offices, 6, 151-2

Privileges and immunities of senators, 176

Reform proposals adopted by Nova Scotia legislature, 757, 799

Vacancies, 299-301, 498

Official opposition, depletion of seats, 300

"Order of demerit", 299-300

Provincial statistics, 299-300

Sports

Soccer, World Cup Games, CBC telecast of, 886

Forsey, Hon. Eugene A.—*concl'd

Statute Law Amendment proposals, 364-5

Error in French translation of BNA Act section dealing with education, 364-5

Tax Rebate Discounting bill C-46, 673, 712

Determination of consideration paid, 673

Fournier, Hon. Edgar

Address in reply to Speech from the Throne, 40-42, 52-53

Beef industry, 51

Canadian National Railways, Ocean Limited and Scotian revenues, 200, 313

Crown corporations, 41, 52-53

Ministers responsible for such corporations, 876-7

Names of crown corporations answerable to federal government, 876-7

Surplus or deficit 1976/77, 876-7

Economic conditions, 40-42

Government expenditures, 40

Private enterprise problems, 41

Unemployment, 41; job creation, 42

Food expenditures, 51

National unity, 40-42

Freedom of speech, 41

Quebec "quiet revolution", 40

Rules of the Senate

Oral and written questions, 200

Fournier, Hon. Michel

Michaud, Hon. Hervé, the late, 834

Frith, Hon. Royce

Address in reply to Speech from the Throne, 7-9

Constitution of Canada, Special Joint Committee, 981-2

Customs Tariff bill C-48, 1001-02

Aircraft and aircraft engines, 1002

Extension of temporary tariff reductions, 1001

Industrial tractor tires and chemicals used in pesticides, 1001, 1002

Withdrawal of British preferential tariff on certain imports, 1001-02

Income Tax (amdt to statute law and authorization of payments re provincial sales tax) bill C-56, 921

Senate, role of, 9

Social and political processes of Canadian life, 8-9

Democratic Promise—The Populist Moment in America, by Lawrence Goodwyn, 8

Involvement of individuals, 8-9

Quebec separatism, 9

Regionalism in provinces, 8

Fugitive offenders

Agreement between Commonwealth ministers, Scheme Relating to the Rendition of Fugitive Offenders in the Commonwealth, 296, 303

Bail, 297-8

Circumstances in which judge may issue warrant, 303

Civil liberties of refugees, 303

Committal proceedings, 303

Conviction of a returnable offence, 296, 303

Death penalty, discretionary power of Justice Minister re, 297, 303

Extradition proceedings, 298

Political offence, 296-7

Rights in respect of countries with which no treaty exists, 298

Treason, 296

Speakers: Senators

Connolly, John J., 304

Fugitive offenders—concl'd*Speakers: Senators—concl'd

Flynn, Jacques, 298
 Hicks, Henry D., 297
 Macdonald, John M., 303-04
 McIlraith, George, 295-8

Fugitive Offenders bill S-8. 1r, 276; 2r, 295-8, 303-04; ref to com, 304; rep without amdt, 347; 3r, 360

Garrison Dam project

Negotiations between Canada and United States, 753-4, 765
 US Congress hearings and Manitoba government involvement in,
 892, 903-04, 926-7

General election

Prime Minister's announcement of continuation of 3rd session of 30th Parliament, 764-5

Germany

President of Senate and party, and Ambassador of Federal Republic of Germany, visitors to Senate, 221

Godfrey, Hon. John M.

Canada Labour Code bill C-8, 593, 597
 Canada Week slogan, 894
 Canadian National Railways Capital Revision and Railway bill
 C-17, 810

Compensation for Former Prisoners of War bill C-27, 427

Evaders, 427; aircrew, 427

Income Tax (amdt to statute law and authorization for provincial sales tax reductions) bill C-56, 935, 938

Budget secrecy, 935

National revenue

Charitable organizations, directive on loss of status due to political activities, 728-9

Information Circular re Registered Charities, 728, 755

North Atlantic Assembly, Paris meeting, 178-81, 182

Eurocommunism, 181, 182

Military commitments of NATO members, 178-9

France, 179

Nuclear energy, 179-81

Accidents in nuclear plants, 179, 181

Management of Canada's Nuclear Wastes, report of committee chaired by Dr. Hare, 180

Report by Mr. Gerard Flamig of Germany, 180

Report by Prof. Rasmussen of Massachusetts Institute of Technology, 179

Storage and disposal of waste material, 180

North Atlantic Treaty Organization, 178-9, 181, 182

Retirement age policies, 209-10

Safe Containers Convention bill S-4, 240

Science policy, 164-7

Research and development, 164-7

Canadian companies vs US companies, 164

Report prepared for Industry, Trade and Commerce Dept. by Mr. Gordon Sharwood, 165-6

Defence Industry Productivity Program, 165-6; Canadair and De Havilland Dash 7, 165-6

Grants to large firms, 165

PAIT, DIP, IRDIA, AGMAP, 165

R & D deficiencies, 166

Goldenberg, Hon. Carl

Air Canada bill C-3, 147

Illegal activities, 147

Goldenberg, Hon. Carl—concl'd

Canadian National Railways Capital Revision and Railway bill
 C-17, 791

Criminal Code (language of accused) bill C-42, 956

Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee

Reports

Fugitive Offenders bill S-8, rep without amdt, 347

Marriage Law Exemption (James Richard Borden and Judy Ann Borden) bill S-5, rep without amdt, 334

Marriage Law Exemption (François Eugène Arthur Waddell and Marie Anne Marguerite Benoit) bill S-6, rep with amdts, 334-5

Marriage Law Exemption (Lucien Roch Joseph Morin and Marie Rose Hélène Morin) bill S-7, recommendation that bill be not proceeded with, 506-07

Statute Law Amendment proposals (Bill C-41), 347-8, 363-4,
 365, 376

Miscellaneous Statute Law Amendment bill C-41, 579-80

See Statute Law Amendment proposals

Statute Law Amendment proposals, 347-8, 363-4, 365, 376

Canadian Human Rights Act

Appropriate Minister, definition of, 347, 364

Citizenship Act

Persons convicted of offence, waiting period for granting of citizenship, 347-8, 364

Referral of amendment proposals to Senate committee before introduction of bill in Commons, 364; clarification of statement, 376

Small Loans Act

Loan, definition of, 348, 364

Loans made on or after Jan. 1/56, 348

Tax Review Board Act

Members of Board, eligibility for holding of office, 348

Transfer of Offenders bill C-21, 495-6, 497, 498

Application for transfer, 497

Canadians held without trial, 498

Canadians imprisoned in US and Mexico, and Americans imprisoned in Canada, 496

Conviction and sentence abroad, effect of transfer on, 495, 497

Designation of authority to deal with application, 498

Juveniles, 496

Parole, 495-6

Provincial responsibility for custody, 495

Recommendation of Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee, 495

Revocation of parole or pardon, 497

Serving of remaining time in federal penitentiary, 497

Transfer of Canadian offenders to Canada, 495

Government

Authority under the British North America Act to declare a project to be in the national interest, 55

Decentralization of federal government depts. and decision-making powers, 71-72

Expenditures as threat to democracy, 207; Chile, United Kingdom and New York City cited, 207

Expenditures, OECD economic survey re, 34

Foreign federal systems, question re study of, 307

Government documents and information, right of public access to,
444-7

Cabinet policy deliberations, disclosure of, 445

Canadian Bar Assoc. study, 444, 445, 447

Freedom of Information in Canada—Will the Doors Stay Shut?, 445

Crown documents, privileges re, 445

Government documents and information, right of public access to, —concl'd

- Government expenditures, 446, 447
- Crown corporations, 447
- Legislation since 1867 relating to subject matter, 444-5
- Public Service, 446
- Sweden and United States legislation, 446
- See Regulations and other Statutory Instruments Committee report on Green Paper on Legislation on Public Access to Government Documents, 1030-4

Governor General, His Excellency the Right Honourable Jules Leger Deputy

- Laskin, Rt. Hon. Bora, P.C., Chief Justice of Canada
  - Royal assent, 301
- Martland, Hon. Ronald, Puisne Judge of the Supreme Court of Canada
  - Royal assent, 1048
- Pigeon, Hon. Louis-Philippe, Puisne Judge of the Supreme Court of Canada
  - Royal assent, 511-12
- Spence, Hon. Wishart, F., Puisne Judge of the Supreme Court of Canada
  - Royal assent, 264, 273, 604, 712-13, 1029

Goyer, Hon. Jean-Pierre

- Libel action, statement by Minister of Justice re, 719-20
- Legal advice given to Hon. Mr. Goyer, authority for, 720, 974
- Payment of costs by Department, precedents and authority for, 720, 733-4, 974-5

Graham, Hon. B. Alasdair

- Address in reply to Speech from the Throne, 70-74
- Atlantic provinces, grants and equalization payments to, 73
- Cape Breton Development Corporation bill C-38, 540-1
  - Payments in lieu of taxes, 540
  - Statements of Commons Speaker (Dec. 7/77), 540-1
- Economic conditions, 71-72
  - Coal industry, Cape Breton Island, 71; DEVCO operations, 71
  - Industrial plants, Nova Scotia, 71
  - Steel industry, 71; Hawker-Siddeley, Canstel, 71
- Government decentralization of federal depts. and decision-making powers, 71-72
- National unity, 73-74
  - Regional disparities, 73; Atlantic provinces needs, 73-74
- Stanfield, Mary, the late, wife of Hon. Robert Stanfield, P.C., 71
- Transportation, flight scheduling policy of airlines, 72-73

Grain

- Canadian Wheat Board, restructuring of, statement of Premier Lougheed, 757, 778
- Transportation of, committee to inquire into, 872, 904, 911-12
  - Grain transportation analysis, terms of reference, 911-12
- See Agriculture

Green papers

- International hockey, 381-5, 429-31
- Public Access to Government documents, legislation on, ref to com, 265, see p. 444-7, 1030-4

Greene, Hon. John J., P.C.

- Air Canada bill C-3, 125, 263
- Alaska Highway pipeline
  - Labour priorities, 153
  - Manufacture of pipe by Canadian companies, 133, 151, 272
- Beef industry, 21-23, 50
  - Imports, 22
  - Inflationary effects on industry, 22

Greene, Hon. John J., P.C.—concl'd

- Beef industry —concl'd
  - Price-setting, 22
  - Senate role in inquiry, 21
- Canada Elections bill C-5, 269
- Comptroller General of Canada, status of Mr. Harry Rogers, 726
- Criminal Code (language of accused) bill C-42, 955
- Financial Administration bill C-10, 736, 739, 749-50
  - Comptroller General, lack of parliamentary jurisdiction re, 749-50

GATT, 50

- Health and Welfare Dept. drug research, 70
- Kennedy, John, anniversary of assassination of former President of United States, 153-4

National revenue

- Information Circular re Registered Charities, point of order re, 731, 745

Retirement age policies, 190-1

Saccharin, ban on, 70

Safe Containers Convention bill S-4, 222-3

- Action in Canadian court by non-Canadian commercial interest, 222-3

Science policy, 137

Senate

- Appointment of cabinet ministers, 731
- Committee studies, 21
- Political parties representation, 60

Transportation, domestic air charter rights, Wardair application, 220-1

Grosart, Hon. Allister, Deputy Leader of the Opposition in the Senate

- Address in reply to Speech from the Throne, 105-10

Air Canada bill C-3, 144-6, 147, 148

- Capacities and activities of corporation, 146, 147
- Directives of Governor in Council, 145, 146
- Illegal activities, 147
- Powers of Air Canada and Governor in Council, 144
- Shares held by CNR, cancellation of, 145

Anti-Inflation bill C-18, 550, 585-7, 588

- Date of decontrol commencement, 585
- Monitoring of incomes, prices and productivity, 585-7
- Statements of Hon. Jean Chrétien, 586, 587

Retroactivity aspects of bill, 587, 588

Appropriation bill No. 3, 1977-78 C-15, 237-8

Appropriation bill No. 1, 1978-79 C-31, 490-2, 493

Appropriation bill No. 2, 1978-79 C-61, 940

Beef industry, strike of producers in Saskatchewan and Manitoba, 405, 406, 415, 417, 419, 422

- Motion that Senate regrets government failure to implement recommendations of Senate Agriculture Committee, 415

Bell Canada bill C-1001, 551, 573, 574-6, 577

- Altering of capital structure, objects, powers and share capital by letters patent, 575

Borrowing powers, 574-5

Investment in subsidiary, 575

Power to increase authorized capital, 574, 575

Regulatory authority of CRTC, 573, 575

Six months' hoist, Commons motion re, 574

Canada Elections bill C-5, 267-9

- Allowable expenses and anonymous donations, 267, 268
- Incapacitated electors, 269

Canada Elections, Election Expenses, Northwest Territories bill C-33, 494-5

- Omission of names of Yukon and NWT senators from Canada Year Book, 494

Self-government of Territories and control resources, 494

Grosart, Hon. Allister—cont'd

- Canada Labour Code bill C-8, 628; m to ref bill to Health, Welfare and Science Committee, 628, 632, 633, 637, 641-3, neg, 644
- Canadian National Railways Capital Revision and Railways bill C-17, 889
- Capital punishment, statement attributed to Government Leader in the Senate, 727-8
- Committee meetings during Senate sittings, 436, 437
- Comptroller General of Canada
  - Canadian Press report of remarks made in Senate re appointment of Mr. Harry Rogers, question of privilege, 742
  - Special appointment regulations, Public Service Employment Act, 763-4
- Status of Mr. Harry Rogers, 723, 726, 732-3, 746, 763-4, 778
- Treasury Board publication re appointment, 792-3
- Crown corporations, audit requirements, 715-16
- Currency and Exchange bill C-39, 799-802
  - Authorization to Royal Mint to strike and issue gold coins, 799-801
  - Erosion of powers and prerogatives of Parliament, 799-801
  - Export opportunities, 799
  - Mining Assoc. of Canada letter to opposition leader, 800, 801
  - Objections from coin collectors, 800
  - Olympic coins, 800
  - South African Krugerrand, 801
- Customs Tariff bill C-48, 1002-03
  - GATT negotiations, 1002
  - Withdrawal of British preferential tariff on certain imports, 1002
- Economic prospects, 107-09
  - Dollar devaluation, 107-08, 109
  - Economic Council comment, 108
  - Editorial comments, 108
  - Inflation, 107
  - Private enterprise, 107, 108
- Economy, decision to borrow abroad to support Canadian dollar, 358, 393
- Electoral Boundaries Readjustment bill C-267 (Prince George-Peace River), 458
- Estimates (Appropriation bill C-15), 237-8
- Estimates (Appropriation bill C-30)
  - Forecast of government expenditures, 467, 469
  - Grants and contributions to departments, 468
  - Net voting, 468
  - Restraints program, 467
  - Treasury Board directive on definitions, 467-8
- Estimates (Appropriation bill C-31)
  - Budget and non-budgetary expenditures, 491
  - Canada Council, 491
  - CBC deficit, 492
  - Central Mortgage and Housing Corp., 491
  - Export Development Corp., 491
  - Health and Welfare Dept., 491-2
  - Net voting, 491
  - Public debt increase, 492
  - Restraints, 490
  - Terms of Clause 2 re three-twelfths of budget, 490, 493
- Estimates year ending Mar.31/78, Supplementary (A), 206-08
  - Government expenditures and inflation, 207-08
  - Other nations, 207
  - Statutory expenditures in relation to voted expenditures, 206-07
  - Supplementaries in reverse, 208
  - Year-end spending by departments, 208
- Estimates year ending Mar. 31/79, 907-10
  - Expenditures, statistics (1974-79), 907
  - Export Development Corporation, 909

Grosart, Hon. Allister—cont'd

- Estimates year ending Mar. 31/79—concl'd
  - GNP vs expenditures, 909
  - Inflation, 907-08
  - Net voting, 908
  - Public debt, 909
  - Revenue expenditures, 909
  - Transfer payments, 908
- Financial Administration bill C-10, 723, 724, 734-7, 741, 750
  - Comptroller General of Canada
    - Appearance before committee, 741
    - Comments of Auditor General re position, 734
    - Lack of parliamentary jurisdiction, 736
    - Responsibilities, 735
    - See 726, 732-3, 742, 746, 763-4, 778, 792-3
  - Fisheries, designation as subject matter of standing Senate committee, 781, 905
- Fishing and Recreational Harbours bill C-2, 337, 343-4, 345-6, 348-52
  - Enforcement officers, 351
  - Minister's regulatory powers, 350-1
  - Net voting, 337, 343-4, 345-6, 348-50, 351-2
  - Study on the Accounts of Canada, Report on*, 343, 349
  - Offences and punishment, 351
  - Revenue dependency and revolving fund, 352
- General election
  - Prime Minister's announcement of continuation of 3rd session of 30th Parliament, 765
- Government expenditures, 107, 109, 207
  - As threat to democracy, 207; Chile, United Kingdom and New York City cited, 207
- Income tax, 241, 246
- Income Tax (amdt to statute law and authorization for provincial sales tax reductions) bill C-56, 935-8
  - Scientific research, 936-7
  - Discrimination against small businesses, 937
  - IRDIA, 936-7
  - Suggested changes to amdt, 937-8
- Income Tax (amdt to statute law and authorization for raising of funds) bill C-11 253-5
  - Communal organization, 255
  - Nil assessments, 255
  - Pre-1972 surpluses, 254
  - Recommendations of committee, 254
  - Senate role in examination of bill, 253-4
- Income Tax and Excise Tax (small businesses) bill C-59, 1026-7
  - Allowable capital losses, 1026
  - Rollover limit, 1026
- Income Tax Conventions bill S-9, 377-80
  - Agreement and convention, definition of, 378
  - Malaysia, 378
  - Discretionary powers of Revenue Minister, 378
  - Gains from alienation of property, 379
  - Governor in Council's power to approve amdts, 379
  - Italy, exemption of pensions, 379-80
  - Provincial jurisdiction, 378
- Inter-Parliamentary Union, Bulgaria meeting, 214-15
- Universal Declaration of Human Rights, 214, 215
  - Canadian policy, 214, 215
- Legislation
  - Bills received at closing for summer recess, 966-8, 1000, 1024
- Maritime Code bill C-54, 1000-01, 1024-5
  - Amdts suggested by Senate committee, 1025
- Marriage Law Exemption (Lucien Roch Joseph Morin and Marie Rose Helene Morin) bill S-7, 506

Grosart, Hon. Allister—concl'd

Middle East

Observation of ceasefire and participation of Canadian authorities in decisions, 539, 548

Miscellaneous Statute Law Amendment bill C-41, 579-80, 584, 585
Moro, Hon. Aldo, former Prime Minister of Italy, death of, tributes, 751-2

National revenue

Charitable organizations, directive on loss of status due to political activities, 721

Information Circular re Registered Charities, 721, 744-5

Reciprocal agreements between Canada and United States re tax exemptions on donations to charitable institutions, 754, 766, 770, 794; donations to universities, 766

Tax exemptions, registered charities, political activity vs cancer research, 744-5, 754

Northern Gas Pipeline, Special Senate Committee, 388-9, 390-1, 393-4, 397, 398

Point of order, 390-1

Precedents in establishment of special committees, 388

Retraction of statement, 393-4

Terms of reference, 388

Northern Pipeline bill C-23, 521, 545-6, 566

Social and economic impact on residents adjacent to pipeline, 545

Recommendation for inquiry, 545-6

Petroleum Corporations Monitoring bill C-12, 996-9

Access to information re operations of companies, 998

Act referred to committee of House of Commons, 998

Statements made in 'another place', 997

Pita, Hon. Tagaloe Leota, visitor to Senate, 724

Rules of the Senate

Motion to adjourn to discuss matter of urgent public importance, 406, 415, 417

Moving of substantive motion, 417

M to revert to motion for 3r, 889

Point of order

Motion to adjourn to discuss beef industry, 417, 419

Re leave to debate motion to adjourn, 557

Revised edition (1976-77), 7

Science policy, 242, 438-40

Security and Co-operation in Europe, Conference on, 329, 330

Helsinki Agreement

Legal boundaries, 329, 330

Status of Estonia, Lithuania, Latvia and the Ukraine, 330

Senate

Business, 991-4

Committee work in examination of subject matter of bills, 250-1, 253-4, 259-60

Statute Law Amendment proposals, ref to Senate committee before introduction of bill in Commons, 364

Tax Rebate Discounting bill C-46, 670-2, 673, 708, 709, 710-11, 712

Determination of consideration paid, 673, 710-11

Disclosure of information and documents, 672, 673

Discount rate as an annual rate, 671

Documentation required, 672

Limitation of discounters fee, 671, 672

Loan-sharking, 672

Guay, Hon. Joseph-Philippe, P.C. (Introduced in the Senate Apr. 4/78)

First Revenue Minister in the Senate since 1882, 539

National finance

Provincial sales tax, federal government appropriation of provincial sources of revenue, 582

Guay, Hon. Joseph-Philippe, P.C.—concl'd

National revenue

Charitable organizations, directive on loss of status due to political activities, 728-31, 743-4, 745

Deferral of income tax on proceeds from sale of livestock, 539

Dumping duty on wide-flange steel beams, 893-4, 905, 926, 950-1

Employment tax program, 793, 804

Illegal importing of jewellery, 906

Information Circular re Registered Charities, 728-9, 731, 743-4, 745, 755

Information services, Communique—Revenue Canada, Customs and Excise, 815

Investment of RRSPs in annuities as opposed to trust funds, 539

Negotiations re Canadian Co-operative Implements Ltd., 584

Olympic Stadium, exemption from customs duties, 771

Pornographic film 'The Many Faces of Christ', 926

Quebec income taxpayers, 781

Reciprocal agreements between Canada and United States re tax exemptions on donations to charitable institutions, 754, 766, 770, 794; donations to universities, 766

Tax exemptions, registered charities, political activity vs cancer research, 743-5, 754

Rules of the Senate

Motion for which no notice is required, 559

Commons rule cited, 559

Tax Rebate Discounting bill C-46, 709, 710

Haidasz, Hon. Stanley, P.C. (Introduced in the Senate Apr. 4/78)

Canada Labour Code bill C-8, 611

Pension and Compensation for Former Prisoners of War bill C-58, 862

Motion made in Commons re prisoners of war in World War I and World War II, 862

Security and Co-operation, Conference on, 541-2

Human rights, 542

Canada's participation in discussions on, 542

Commitment re non-recognition of territorial status quo in Europe, 542

Final Act of Helsinki Agreement, 542

Human rights legislation, 542

Multiculturalism, 542

Senate role, 542

Signatory to International Convention of Human Rights, 542

Haig, Hon. J. Campbell (Resigned Dec. 29/77)

Tributes, 243-4; reply, 244

Harbours

See Fishing and Recreational Harbours bill C-2, 302, 326-8, 336-7, 343-4, 345-6, 348-52, 361-2

Hayden, Hon. Salter A.

Banking, Trade and Commerce Committee

Banks and Banking Law Revision Act, authority to study legislation in advance of receipt of bill, 823-4

Competition policy, authority to examine and report on competition legislation, 148

Income tax and excise tax, authority to study subject matter in advance of receipt of Bill C-59, 864

Income tax, authority to study legislation in advance of receipt of bill, 66, 812-13, 822-3

Reports

Anti-Inflation bill C-18, rep without amdt, 630

Bank and Quebec Savings Banks bill C-16, rep without amdt, 448

Hayden, Hon. Salter A.—cont'dBanking, Trade and Commerce Committee—*concl'd*Reports—concl'd

- Canada Business Corporations bill S-2, rep with amds, 448-53, 460-3
- Canada Non-Profit Corporations bill S-3, rep with amds, 471-5, 486-90
- Competition policy, subject matter of Bill C-13 (Combines Investigation Act, Bank Act and other related Acts),-1004-20
- Income Tax and Excise Tax (small businesses) bill C-59, rep on subject matter, 948-9
- Income Tax (to establish Employment Tax Credit Program) bill C-23, rep without amdt but with observations, 293
- Income Tax (amdt to statute law and authorization of payments re provincial sales tax) bill C-56, interim rep on subject matter, 942-6; final rep on subject matter, 947; further rep without amdt, 965
- Income Tax Conventions bill S-9, rep without amdt, 392
- Income tax, first rep of com, 219, 228-32, 234, 241, see appendix of Dec. 8/77
- Income tax, second rep of com, 245-7, see appendix of Dec. 14/77
- Petroleum Administration and Energy Supplies Emergency bill C-19, rep without amdt, 698
- Tax Rebate Discounting bill C-46, rep without amdt but with observations, 699-700
- See 708-12*
- Terms of reference, 66, 158
- Bankruptcy bill S-11, 517-20
  - Administration of consumer arrangements and bankruptcies, 519
  - Amdts to former Bill C-60 suggested by Senate committee, 517
  - Appointment of trustee as liquidator of foreign property, 519
  - Consumer and commercial arrangements as alternative to bankruptcy, 519
  - Insurance fund to cover wage loss, non-acceptance of recommendation, 519
  - Italicized items defining expenditure of public funds with which Senate has no power to deal, 517-18
  - Excerpt from Bourinot's Parliamentary Procedure, 518
  - Excerpt from memorandum from Clerk of the Table in House of Lords, 518
  - Quote from speech by Hon. John J. Connolly (Aug. 29/66), 518
  - Wage earners priority of $2000 over secured creditors, 519
- Canada Business Corporations bill S-2, 460-3
- Continuance of federal corporation under act, 462-3
- Existing body corporate, 461
- Inspector, 461
- Powers of public distributing company, 462
- Rights of class shareholders, 462
- Selling of shares or transfer of property, 461-2
- Short form liquidation, 461
- Transfer agent or registrar, 461
- Canada Non-Profit Corporations bill S-3, 471-5, 486-90
- Canadian Red Cross Society, 487-8
- Disclosure of financial information, 488
- Distribution of assets in event of liquidation or dissolution of corporation, 489
- French text amds, 487
- Hospitals and charitable organizations, 488
- Meetings of members, 488
- Right of dissent to decisions of management of boards of trade or chambers of commerce, 488-9
- Income tax, 228-32, 234, 245-7
- Advertising in publications, edited or printed in Canada, 231

Hayden, Hon. Salter A.—concl'dIncome tax—concl'd

- Carry-forward of losses, retroactive effect, 246
- Cattle herd sales, 234
- Designated surplus, 231
- Distribution on pre-1972 surpluses, 231-2, 245
- Hutterites, 246
- Inventory allowance, 231
- Life insurance, 229-30, 245, 246-7
- Multinational insurance companies, 230-1, 245, 246-7
- Nil assessment, 231, 245-6
- Stock dividends, 232
- Income Tax (amdt to statute law and to authorize payments re provincial sales tax reductions) bill C-56, 913-18, 924, 938-40, 942-7, 965, 967-9
- Depreciable property, 917-18
- Employment at special work site or remote location, 917
- Family farms, 916, 945
- Family law reform, 945-6
- Life insurance, 916-17, 944-5, 947
  - Actuarial reserves, non-capital losses and other write-offs, 916-17, 944-5, 947
- Loans to employees, 918
- Provincial sales tax, 913-14, 938, 942, 947
  - Federal-provincial conferences, 969
  - Method of reimbursement, 914
  - Provincial jurisdiction, 968
  - Quebec, 914, 939-40, 942
  - Statement of Finance Minister, 938, 968
- RRSP and RRIF, 914-15, 942-3, 947
  - Income-averaging annuity option, 915
  - Taxation of benefits at death, 915-16, 942
- Scientific research, 916, 939, 945
- Income Tax and Excise Tax bill (small businesses) C-59, 924, 948-9
- Allowable business investment losses, 948
- Authority for submitting excise tax returns within certain time limits, 948
- Capital gains tax payable on death, 948
- Transfer of shares of capital stock of small business corporations, 948
- Northern Pipeline bill C-25, 565
- Tax Rebate Discounting bill C-46, 668-70, 672-4, 699-700
  - Determination of consideration paid, 673-4
  - Discounters method of operation, 669-70
  - Limitation of discounters fee, 669, 672, 673
  - Loan-sharking, 673
  - Refund of tax, 669, 672
  - Students and part-time employees tax, 669, 670
- Senate
  - Business, 901, 902

Hays, Hon. Harry, P.C.

Beef industry, 18

Health and welfare

- Canadian Centre for Occupational Health and Safety bill C-35, 662, 674-5, 690-1, 701, 713
- Discussion at Alternatives Canada Conference, 705-06
- Nurses in northern regions, lack of salary contract, 847
- Saccharin, lack of evidence of cancer link, 67-69

Health, Welfare and Science, Standing Senate Committee

- Budget, 169
- Childhood experiences as causes of criminal behaviour, authority to make study of, 87
- Expenses, 86
- Meeting during Senate sitting, 436-7

Health, Welfare and Science, Standing Senate Committee—*concl'd

Members, 40

Reports

Compensation for Former Prisoners of War bill C-27, rep without amdt, 456

Royal Canadian Legion bill S-10, rep with amdt, 537-8

Terms of reference, 87-88

Helsinki Conference

See Security and Co-operation in Europe, Conference on, 328-30, 498-501, 526-30, 541-2

Hicks, Hon. Henry D.

Anti-Inflation bill C-18, 548-50, 585, 587-8

Agreements reached at First Ministers' Conference, 549

Authority of administrator to deal with contraventions, 549

Bank of Canada target, 549

Date of decontrol commencement, 550, 572, 585, 588

Decontrol process, 549

Filing of information for period covered by controls, 549

Mandatory controls, back-dating of, 549, 587, 588

Monitoring of incomes, prices and productivity, 549

Retroactivity aspects of bill, 587

Strikes, loss of man-days (1976-77), 549

Time limit on referral of matter to administrator, 549

Canada Non-Profit Corporations bill S-3, 489

Association of Universities and Colleges of Canada, 489

Canadian National Railways Capital Revision and Railway bill C-17, 807, 809

Trucking industry, 807, 809

Fugitive Offenders bill S-8, 297

National unity, magazine article by June Callwood, 380

Nomination of Miss Callwood for Order of Canada, 380

Retirement age policies, 163

Hockey, International

Report of Committee on International Hockey to Minister of State (Fitness and Amateur Sport), 381-5, 429-31

Canada Cup series, 382

Coach and manager for Team Canada, permanency suggested, 384

Cost-sharing by governments, 430

Criticism of Team Canada behaviour in Vienna, 381, 384

Development process of international hockey, 383

Government responsibility in sports and physical fitness of nation, 429-30

Green Paper on Amateur Sports, tabled in Commons, 429

Junior hockey leagues, 383-4

In-depth study by government, recommendation for, 384

Lack of educational fields, 383-4

Scholarships, 383

Professional leagues, 382

Professional sports and international hockey, 430

Investigation and Enquiry into Violence in Amateur Hockey, Ontario Study (1974), 430

New Brunswick Hockey Study Report, 430

The Violent Game, by Gary Ron Berg, 430

Training costs, 430

Violence in hockey, 430

Questionnaire from MPs to constituents, 381-2

Salaries, 383, 384

Hockey, International—*concl'd

Report of Committee on International Hockey to Minister of State (Fitness and Amateur Sport)—concl'd

Speakers: Senators

Asselin, Martial, 429-31

Buckwold, Sydney L. 381-4

Connolly, John J., 384

Langlois, Leopold, 384

Perrault, Raymond J., 385

See Sports

House of Commons

Messages to and from Commons

Constitution of Canada, Special Joint Committee, terms of reference, 923, 975-6; Senate and Commons members, 994

Library of Parliament Committee, Senate members, 64

Nation Capital Region Committee, Commons members, 285

Printing of Parliament Committee, Senate members, 64-65

Regulations and other Statutory Committee

Green Paper re legislation on Public Access to Government

Documents ref to com, 265

Senate members, 65

Restaurant of Parliament Committee, Senate members, 65

QCTV Edmonton letter re 'Television in House of Commons', (picture of Senate chamber), 757-8

Reform, 693, 695

Committees, 695

Want of confidence votes, 695

Speaker of the House, Hon. James Jerome, message of sympathy re accident involving son, 244

Housing

Home insulation program, 1023-4

Applications received, approved or rejected, 1023

Location of offices, 1024

Human rights

Minority rights, 919-20

Nomination of Helsinki Monitoring Groups in USSR for 1978 Nobel Peace Prize, 1021-2

Report of task force on racial discrimination, 177

Resolution adopted at North Atlantic Assembly, Paris meeting, 217

US policy and support by President Carter, 216

USSR and other communist countries, persecutions by, 216

Income tax, first rep of com on budget resolutions respecting income tax and any bill or matters relating thereto, 219, 228-34, 241, 245-7, see also appendixes of Dec. 8/77 and Dec. 14/77

Advertising in publications edited or printed in Canada, 231

Carry-forward of losses, retroactive effect, 246

Cattle herd sales, 232-3, 234

Designated surplus, 231

Distribution on pre-1972 surplus, 231-2, 245

Hutterites, 246

Inventory allowance, 231

Life insurance, 229-30, 245, 246-7

Motion for authority to study legislation in advance of receipt of bill, 812-13, 822-3

Multinational insurance companies, 230-1, 245, 246-7

Nil assessment, 231, 245-6

Rollovers and deferments, 233

Stock dividends, 232

Speakers: Senators

Denis, Azellus, 234

Grosart, Allister, 241, 246

Hayden, Salter A., 219, 228-32, 234, 241, 245-7

Income tax, first rep of com on budget resolutions—concl'd*Speakers: Senators—concl'd

McDonald, A. Hamilton, 247
Olson, Horace A., 232-4
Walker, David A., 247

Income tax (amdt to statute law and authority for raising of funds)

Additional exemption for taxpayers and children, 252
Capital losses, 252
Communal organizations, 255
Complexity of income tax legislation, 259
Dividend income and capital gains, 251, 252
Employment expense deduction, 251-2
Exemptions related to salary, 252
Gas and oil depletion rates, 253
Insulation of homes, 253
Inventory allowance, private sector, 252
Investment tax credit, 252
Legal fees and land transfer taxes, 252
Life insurance, 251
Loans to employees and shareholders, 252
Nil assessments, 255
Pension income of taxpayers over 65 years, 252
Pollution equipment, 253
Pre-1972 surpluses, 254
Recommendations of committee, 254
Scientific research expenses, 252
Senate role in examination of bill, 250-1, 253-4, 258-9, 260
Sulphur production from natural gas, 253

Speakers: Senators

Connolly, John J., 250-3, 254, 260
Flynn, Jacques, 258-9
Grosart, Allister, 253-5
Lang, Daniel A., 259-60

Income Tax (amdt to statute law and authorization for raising of funds) bill C-11. 1r, 235; 2r, 250-5, 258-61; 3r, 261; r.a., 264*Income tax (amdt to statute law and authorization of payments re provincial sales tax)

Budget secrecy, 935
Cooperative federalism, 970-1
Depreciable property, 917-18
Employment at special work site or remote location, 917
Family farms, 916, 945
Family law reform, 945-6
Life insurance, 916-17, 944-5, 947
Loans to employees, 918
Provincial sales tax reductions, 913-14, 918-21, 927-35, 938-9, 942, 947, 965-71
Discrimination in various provinces, 928, 931-2
Federal-provincial conferences, 932-3, 934, 935
First Ministers' conference, 970, 971
Quebec, 914, 920, 927, 930, 939-40, 942, 966, 967, 971
Statement of Finance Minister, 938, 966, 968
Western provinces, 928, 939
Alberta, 928, 931-2, 939
Yorkton conference of western premiers, excerpt from statement re federal budget, 933-4
RRSP and RRIP, 914-15, 942-3, 947
Income-averaging annuity option, 915
Taxation of benefits at death, 915-16, 942
Scientific research, 916, 936-7, 939, 945

Income tax (amdt to statute law and authorization of payments re provincial sales tax)—concl'd

RRSP and RRIP, 914-15, 942-3, 947
Taxation of benefits at death, 915-16, 942
Discrimination against small businesses, 937
IRDIA, 936-7

Suggested changes to amdt, 937-8*Speakers: Senators

Asselin, Martial, 928-30
Denis, Azellus, 932
Flynn, Jacques, 965-7
Frith, Royce, 921
Godfrey, John M., 935, 938
Grosart, Allister, 935-8
Hayden, Salter A., 913-18, 938-40, 942-7, 965, 967-9
Langlois, Leopold, 930-1
McElman, Charles, 970-1
Olson, H. A., 931-2
Roblin, Duff, 932-5
Smith, George I., 969-75
Steuart, David G., 920-1, 927-8

Income Tax (amdt to statute law and authorization of payments re provincial sales tax) bill C-56. 1r, 900; 2r, 913-21, 927-40; ref to com, 940; interim rep on subject matter, 942-6; final rep on subject matter, 947; further rep without amdt, 965; 3r, 965-71; r.a., 1029*Income tax and excise tax (ownership and operation of small businesses)

Allowable business investment losses, 948, 1025, 1026
Authority for submitting excise tax returns within certain time limits, 948, 1025-6
Capital gains tax payable on death, 948, 1025
Rollover limit, 1026
Shares of bankrupt company, 1025
Transfer of shares of capital stock of small business corporations, 948, 1025

Speakers: Senators

Cook, Eric, 1025-6
Grosart, Allister, 1026-7
Hayden, Salter A., 924, 948-9

Income Tax and Excise Tax (ownership and operation of small businesses) bill C-59. 1r, 1021; 2r, 1025-7; 3r, 1027; r.a., 1029

Authority to com to study subject matter in advance of receipt of bill, 864; rep of com, 924-5, 948-9

Income tax conventions

Agreement and convention, definition of, 378
Capital gains, 369
Development incentives, exemption for, 369
Discretionary powers of Revenue Minister, 378
Gains from alienation of property, 379
Governor in Council's power to approve amdts, 369, 379
Italy, exemption of pensions, 369, 379-80
Malaysia, 369, 378
Provincial jurisdiction, 378
Tax-sparing provision, 369
Teachers and professors, 369
Withholding tax, 369
Royalties, 369

Speakers: Senators

Grosart, Allister, 377-80
Lang, Daniel A., 368-70

Income Tax Conventions bill S-9. 1r, 358; 2r, 368-70, 377-80; ref to com, 380; rep without amdt, 392; 3r, 421

Income tax (Employment Tax Credit Program)

Administration of program by Canada Employment and Immigration Commission, 281

Amount of credit in various regions, 281

Auditing of tax returns, 281

Capital investment, 283

Certificate of unemployment, 289

Cooperatives, 283

Corporate income tax rates, 281-2

Costs of program, 283

Eligible employer, employment or worker, definition of, 284, 288-9, 294

Fisheries and agricultural industries, 291

Form of agreement, 283

Investment and employment tax credit on winding-up, 290-1

Job potential under employment tax credit program, 287

Minimum period of employment, 291

New businesses, 283-4

Provincial tax, 291

Qualification for tax credit, 283

Regional tax credit disparities, 288

Students and other temporary workers, 288-9, 291

Treasury Board powers, 288

Unemployment, 286-7, 289-90

Statistics, 286-7

UIC abuses, 290

Speakers: Senators

Connolly, John J., 280-4, 290-1

Denis, Azellus, 283

Flynn, Jacques, 281, 282, 283

Forsey, Eugene A., 284

Manning, Ernest C., 283

Molson, Hartland de M., 289-90

Phillips, Orville H., 286-9, 291

Income Tax (to establish Employment Tax Credit Program) bill C-23. 1r, 274; 2r, 280-4, 286-91; ref to com, 291; rep with observation re legislation by regulation, 293; 3r, 294-5; r.a., 301

Income tax, discounting of overpayments

See Tax Rebate Discounting bill C-46, 662, 668-74, 699-700, 708-10, 713

Indians, Eskimos, Inuit

Extinction, by Hon. Frederick William Rowe, 61

James Bay and Northern Quebec Native Claims Settlement Act

Orders in Council, motion for revocation of, 631, 656-9; neg, 659

Hunter's Support Program, 657

Negative resolution procedure, 658

Northeastern Quebec Agreement, 657

Orders in Council approving agreements, date of effect, 657

Relocation of community of Fort George, 657

Rights of Inuit of Port Burwell, 657

Joint committee of government and representatives of National Indian Brotherhood, existence of, 766, 837

Cutback in funds available to Brotherhood, 766, 838

Northwest Territories, Inuit representation in government, 171

Industry

Air-conditioning units for motor vehicles, 1045

Australian white paper on relations between manufacturers and the state, 111

Coal supplies from US to Canada, 207, 218

Inman, Hon. F. Elsie

International Women's Day, 422

Retirement age policies, 155-7

Accomplishments of famous older persons, 156

Bismarck's compulsory retirement age policy, 155-6

Loss of experienced manpower, 157

Inquiries

See Questions

Inquiries, calling the attention of the Senate to matters of national and international interest

Alternatives Canada, Conference on, 552, 653-4, 691-7, 702-08

Beef industry, 13-23

Canadian Broadcasting Corporation

Documentary program "Duplessis", 498, 501-04

Duke of Edinburgh's Award, 182-4

Economy

Depreciation of the Canadian dollar, 866-75, 877-9

Exchange rate and its relevance to the Canadian economy, 352-7, 370-5, 443-4

State of secondary industries in Canada, 100-15

Government documents and information, right of public access to, 444-7

Inter-Parliamentary Union, Bulgaria meeting, 193-5, 214-15, 241-2

National Anthem, translation into various heritage languages, 857-9, 862-3, 1027

National unity, magazine article by June Callwood, 314-19, 380-1, 498

North Atlantic Assembly, Paris meeting, 138-42, 178-82, 215-18, 223-6

Retirement age policies, 126-31, 155-7, 161-4, 171-3, 177-8, 189-91, 203-05, 208-12

Senate vacancies, 299-301, 498

Sports

International hockey, report of committee submitted to Minister of State (Fitness and Amateur Sport), 381-5, 429-31

Unemployment, motion to adjourn to consider matter of urgent public importance, 556-62; neg, 562

Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration, Standing Senate Committee

Members, 39

Reports

Budgets of committees

Agriculture, 169

Banking, Trade and Commerce, 169, 900

Foreign Affairs, 169, 900

Health, Welfare and Science, 169

National Finance, 169, 900

Northern Pipeline, 900

Regulations and other Statutory Instruments, 169

Retirement Age Policies, 310

Transport and Communications, 169

Salary revisions, 900

Senators' indemnity and allowance, 256

International Women's Day, 422

See Women, status of

Inter-Parliamentary Group, Canada-United States, New Orleans meeting, 325, 708, 716-18

Advertising limitations, 717

Canada-United States relations, 716

Convention expense tax, 717-18

Energy, 717

Inter-Parliamentary Group, Canada-United States, New Orleans meeting—*concl'd

Environmental concerns, 717

Trade, 717

Speaker: Senator Daniel A. Lang, 325, 708, 716-18Inter-Parliamentary Union, Bulgaria meeting, 193-5, 214-15, 241-2

Agenda of meeting, 193

Brezhnev statements, 213-14

Diplomatic and political action against Chile, 212-13

Helsinki Accords, 213

International tensions and disarmament, 212, 214

Israeli-Arab conflict, 213, 241-2

Law of the Sea, 193-4

Amendments submitted by international delegations, 194

Fishing amendments, 193-4

World shipping and coastal state powers, 193-4

Political Questions, International Secretary and Disarmament Committee, 193

Universal Declaration of Human Rights, 213, 214, 242

Canadian policy, 214, 215, 242

USSR and other nations violation of human rights, 213

Speakers: Senators

Belisle, Rheal, 212-14, 215

Grosart, Allister, 214-15

Olson, Horace A., 241-2

Petten, William J., 193-5

Italy

Canadian assistance to earthquake victims of Friuli, 810-12

Income Tax Conventions bill S-9, 358, 368-70, 377-80, 392, 421

Italian community in Canada, 81-83

Aid from Canadians of Italian extraction to Friuli earthquake victims, 81-83

National Congress of Italian Canadians, 83

Participation in Canadian history, 81

Prejudices in publicity and stereotyping, 82, 83; CBC programs, 82-83

Toronto area, 81

Moro, Hon. Aldo, former Prime Minister, the late, tributes, 751-2

James Bay and Northern Quebec Native Claims Settlement Act

Orders in Council, motion for revocation of, 631, 656-9; neg, 659

Hunter's Support Program, 657

Negative resolution procedure, 658

Northeastern Quebec Agreement, 657

Orders in Council approving agreement, date of effect, 657

Relocation of community of Fort George, 657

Rights of Inuit of Port Burwell, 657

Justice Department

Libel action against Hon. Jean-Pierre Goyer, statement by Minister of Justice re, 719-20

Legal advice given to Hon. Mr. Goyer, authority for, 720, 974

Payment of costs by Department, authority for, 720, 733-4, 974-5

Saskatchewan, vacancies in Court of Queen's Bench, 27

Kennedy, John, anniversary of assassination of former President of United States, 153-4Labour

British Columbia work stoppages and effect on economy, 84

See Canada Labour Code bill C-8, 543, 577-9, 588-604, 605-28, 632-45, 656, 713

Lafond, Hon. Paul C.

Compensation for Former Prisoners of War bill C-27, 428

Escapes and evaders, 428

Lafond, Hon. Paul C.—*concl'd

Electoral Boundaries Readjustment bill C-415 (Saint-Henri-Westmount), 459

Ewasew, Hon. John, the late, 515

National Capital Region, Special Senate Committee, 398

Nuclear weapons

Agreement between Canada and United States re nuclear safeguards, 144

Regulations and other Statutory Instruments Committee

Increased fees prescribed by Postmaster General, report on, 659

Laird, Hon. Keith

Canada Labour Code bill C-8, 591

Internal Economy Committee

Reports

Budgets of committees

Agriculture, 169

Banking, Trade and Commerce, 169, 900

Foreign Affairs, 169, 900

Health, Welfare and Science, 169

National Finance, 169, 900

Northern Pipeline, 900

Regulations and other Statutory Instruments, 169

Retirement Age Policies, 310

Transport and Communications, 169

Salary revisions, 900

Senators' indemnity and allowance, 256

Lamontagne, Hon. Maurice, P.C.

Constitution of Canada, Special Joint Committee

Reports

Quorum, authority to hold meetings and to print proceedings, 1028

Time for Action, A, second report, 1040, 1050-60

Federal-provincial conferences, 798

Income tax, Quebec, 795

Science policy, 134-7

Agriculture research, 137

Canada's technological gap, 135

Government reaction to committee proposals, 134, 135

Granting councils, 136

Implementation of proposals, 136

Make-or-buy policy, support to industry and universities, 136

Minister of State for Science and Technology (MOSST), 134-7

National and government research, lack of improvement in, 135

Recommendations in Vol.4 of report, 136-7

Science Policy Committee

Expenses, 94

Reports

A Science Policy for Canada, Vol. 4, Progress and Unfinished Business, 25, 134-7, 164-7, 191-2, 196-8, 438-41Lang, Hon. Daniel

Air Canada bill C-3, 125

Directives by Governor in Council, 125

Air Canada, response in French to reservation information request in English, 325-6

Canada Business Corporations bill S-2, 118-20

Arrangement concept, 119-20

French version of bill, 119

Limitation on directors' powers re share transfers, 120

Minority shareholders' interests, 120

Regulation powers with respect to stock exchange takeover bids, 119

Rights to shares, 120

Lang, Hon. Daniel—*concl'd

- Canada-United States Inter-Parliamentary Group, New Orleans meeting, 325, 708, 716-18, see appendix of Apr. 20/78
- Advertising limitations, 717
- Canada-United States relations, 716
- Compliments to Madam Speaker, 325
- Convention expense tax, 717-18
- Energy, 717
- Environmental concerns, 717
- Trade, 717
- Canada-United States relations
  - Statements by US ambassador to Canada, 249
- Constitution of Canada
  - Renewal of the Canadian Federation, 903
- Income Tax (amdt to statute law and authorization for raising of funds) bill C-11, 259-60
- Income Tax Conventions bill S-9, 368-70
  - Capital gains, 369
  - Development incentives, exemption for, 369
  - Governor in Council's power to approve amdts, 369
  - Italy, exemption of pensions, 369
  - Tax-sparing provision, 369
  - Teachers and professors, 369
  - Withholding tax, 369
    - Malaysia, 369
    - Royalties, 369
- Petroleum Administration and Energy Supplies Emergency bill C-19, 666-8, 690
  - Discretionary power, amdt made by Commons, 666
  - International price of oil, 667
  - Levy on domestic petroleum and on petroleum and petroleum products, 669
  - Oil tar sands development, 666-7, 668
    - Government support of, 667
  - OPEC, 666, 667
  - Syncrude, 667
- Petroleum Corporations Monitoring bill C-12, 995-6, 999
  - Access to information re operations of companies, 995, 999
  - Act referred to committee of House of Commons, 996
  - Failure to file return or provide supplementary information, 996
  - Incorporation of amdts suggested by Senate committee, 995
  - Returns to be filed with minister, 995
- Senate role in examination of subject matter of bills, 260
- South Africa and other countries
  - Government-sponsored commercially-supported activities of Canada, phasing out of, 271-2, 278
- War veterans
  - Meals at Sunnybrook Hospital, question of privilege re discussion on, 839-40

Langlois, Hon. Leopold, Deputy Leader of the Government in the Senate

- Address in reply to Speech from the Throne, 89-93
- Address to Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth II from the Senate, 5
- Air Canada bill C-3, 147-8, 154
- Appropriation bill No. 2, 1978-79 C-61, 921
- Banking, Trade and Commerce Committee
  - Meetings during Senate sittings, 94, 175, 200, 219, 399-400, 825, 861, 874, 900
- Bell Canada bill C-1001, 551
- British Columbia heroin users, proposed compulsory treatment of, 772
- Budget Speech, accommodation for senators in gallery, 540
- Canada Labour Code bill C-8, 635-6, 638-9
- Canadian Broadcasting Corporation
  - Political poll in Newfoundland, 772, 927

Langlois, Hon. Leopold—*cont'd

- Canadian Broadcasting Corporation—concl'd
  - Report of 25th anniversary, question re cost of production and combination of English-French version, 805
- Canadian National Railways Capital Revision and Railway bill C-17, 774-6, 815-16, 817-21, 889-90
  - Accountability to and control by Parliament, 817-18
  - Appropriation of government funds to meet deficits, 774
  - Auditors, 775
  - Cancellation of certain shares, 774, 775
  - Cancellation of debt, 774, 775
  - Competition CN-CP, 819
  - Consolidation of remaining debt, 774-5
  - Debt-equity ratio, 817, 821
  - Interest on converted debt, 775
  - Investments over last 20 yrs., 817
  - Pension fund, 818-19, 889
  - Profitability, 818, 819
  - Recapitulation of CN history, 816, 817, 819
  - Reports to Parliament and reference to committee, 775
  - Role of CNR, 820-1
  - Securities, when and where payable and interest on, 775
  - Subsidies as of Dec. 31/77, 821
  - Trucking industry, 819, 889
- Committees, membership changes during summer adjournment, 902
- Constitution of Canada, Special Joint Committee
  - Motion re appointment of committee, 960-1, 984-5; agreed, 985
- Economic Council of Canada
  - Bilateral aid program, policy re, 950
  - CIDA, new department in relation to, 950
- Energy
  - Alberta Gas Trunk Line Co. Ltd., 975
  - Husky Oil Company, assets and ownership of, 950, 975
- Estimates (Appropriation bill No. 2, 1978-79 C-61), 921
  - Budgetary and non-budgetary, to be voted, 921
  - Statutory, 921
- Estimates ref to National Finance Committee
  - Year ending Mar. 31/78, Supplementary (B), 392
  - Year ending Mar. 31/79, 366
- Financial Administration bill C-10, 740-1
  - Comptroller General
    - Appearance before parliamentary committee to report, 741
    - Excerpt from Commons committee report re status as Officer of Parliament, 740-1
    - Responsibilities, 740
- Fisheries interim agreement, Canada-United States, 769
- Fisheries, PEI scallop season, 925
- Foreign affairs
  - Kolwezi massacre in Zaire, involvement of Canadian citizens, 815
  - Diplomatic discussions re action against guerrillas, 815
- Foreign Affairs Committee, meeting during Senate sitting, 880
- Gander International Airport, USSR use of, 974
- Health, Welfare and Science Committee, meeting during Senate sitting, 436, 437
- Hockey, International, 384
- Income tax (amdt to statute law and authorization for provincial sales tax reductions) bill C-56, 930-1
  - Provincial sales tax, 930
  - Quebec, 930; excerpt from Finance Minister's budget, 930-1
- Internal Economy Committee
  - Foreign Affairs Committee
    - Canada-United States relations, authority to publish and distribute rep on, 972

Langlois, Hon. Leopold—cont'd

- Internal Economy Committee—concl'd
- National Finance Committee
  - Public Works Dept. accommodation program, authority to publish and distribute rep on, 972
- Justice Department
  - Libel action against Hon. Jean-Pierre Goyer, statement by Minister of Justice re, 719-20
  - Legal advice given to Hon. Mr. Goyer, authority for, 720, 974
  - Payment of costs by Department, precedents and authority for, 720, 974-5
- Legislative program
  - Prime Minister's decision re general election and Postal Services Operations bill, 768-9
- National Anthem, 'O Canada' as part of the Constitution of Canada, 925
- National finance
  - Provincial sales tax
    - Amdts suggested by senators, newspaper report re, 804
    - Meeting between Prime Minister and Quebec premier, 803, 804
- National Finance Committee
  - Meeting during Senate sitting, 437
- National revenue
  - Charitable organizations, directive on loss of status due to political activities, 720, 721
- National unity, 90-93
  - Magazine article by June Callwood, 319
- Quebec separatism, 90-92
  - Montreal Gazette report of interview between Quebec premier and Keith Spicer, 90-91
- Referendum, 93
- Newfoundland
  - Royal designation for Newfoundland constabulary, 925
  - Sullivan Commission on transportation, 925
- Northern gas pipeline, motion for special Senate committee, 377, 386-7, 390, 391, 394-7; agreed to, 397; further discussion, 434-5
  - Contravention of rules in establishment of special committee, question of, 390
  - Members, choosing of, 396-7, 435
  - National scope of subject matter of bill, 395
  - Precedents in establishment of special committees, 395-6
- Northern Pipeline bill C-25, 564-5
  - Native claims, 564-5
- Northern Pipeline Committee
  - Meeting during Senate adjournments, 902
  - Meeting during Senate sitting, 825
- Nuclear weapons, government policy re, 805
- Parliament, dissolution of and legislation pending, 805
- Perrault, Raymond J., absence on official business in British Columbia, 825
- Public Service
  - Transport Dept., Revenue Canada and Health and Welfare Dept. employees, move from Saint John, N.B., 805
- Rules of the Senate
  - Motions for which no notice is required, 560
  - Procedure in unprovided cases, 560-1
  - Commons rule cited, 560-1
- Senate
  - Business, 13, 54, 86-87, 143-4, 169, 196, 295, 339, 457, 507-08, 538, 631, 743, 792, 860-1, 900-01
  - Easter adjournment, 507
  - Reform, 89-90; excerpt from 1973 speech, 89-90
- Transport and Communications Committee
  - Meetings during Senate sittings, 437, 581-2, 825, 861

Langlois, Hon. Leopold—concl'd

- War veterans
  - Alleged discrimination in pension rights of widows, 772
  - Meals at Sunnybrook Hospital, 814, 838-41

Lapointe, Hon. Renaude, Speaker of the Senate

- Canada-United States Inter-Parliamentary Group, compliments on influence at meeting, 325
- Clerk of the Senate, receipts and disbursements for 1977-78, tabled and ref to com, 860
- Constitution of Canada, Special Joint Committee
  - Members, Commons, 994
  - Message from Commons, 923
- Northern Pipeline bill C-25, motion in amdt (Clause 23.1), 564, neg, 568
- Official Languages, report of Commissioner, 486
- Opening of Parliament, communication from Canadian Secretary to the Queen, 1
  - Message from the Queen, 655
- Public Access to Government Documents*, Green Paper on Legislation on, ref to com, 265
- Rulings and statements
  - Motion for amdt on 3r of bill, precedents referred to in Senate Rules, 829
  - Motion ruled inadmissible, excerpts from May's Nineteenth Edition and Beauchesne's Fourth Edition re, 835-6
  - Motions for which no notice is required (motion to adjourn to discuss unemployment), 562
  - Procedure after motion has been put, 596
  - Question of privilege to allow senator to speak on 3r, 888, 889
- Senators, new
  - Anderson, Hon. Margaret Jean, 513
  - Bird, Hon. Florence Bayard, 513
  - Guay, Hon. Joseph-Philippe, P.C., 513
  - Haidasz, Hon. Stanley, P.C., 513
  - Lewis, Hon. Philip Derek, 513
  - Marshall, Hon. Jack, 513
  - Roblin, Hon. Duff, P.C., 513
  - Wagner, Hon. Joseph Napoleon Claude, 714
- Visitors
  - British Columbia Parliamentary Interns, 399
  - Canadian Labour Congress officials, 632
  - China, People's Republic of, delegation from National Congress, 960
  - Club Optimiste, Laval, Quebec, 159
  - Germany, President of Senate and party, and Ambassador of Federal Republic of Germany, 221
  - Les Dames Helene de Champlain, Ottawa Region, 482
  - Regional Parliamentary Seminar, visitors from Caribbean and Canadian provinces, 86
  - Saskatchewan Lieutenant Governor Hon. George Porteous and Mrs. Porteous, 292
  - Saskatchewan Lieutenant Governor Hon. Irwin McIntosh and Mrs. McIntosh, 687

Laskin, Rt. Hon. Bora, P.C., Chief Justice of Canada

- Royal assent, 301

Lawson, Hon. Edward M.

- Address in reply to Speech from the Throne, 83-85
- Constitution of Canada, Special Joint Committee, 983-4
- Economic conditions, 83-85
  - AIB controls, 83-85; rulings of Board and derogatory effects of, 84-85; appeals, 85
- Unemployment, 83

Legal and Constitutional Affairs, Standing Senate Committee

Members, 39

Reports

Fugitive Offenders bill S-8, rep without amdt, 347

Marriage Law Exemption (James Richard Borden and Judy Ann Borden) bill S-5, rep without amdt, 334

Marriage Law Exemption (Francois Eugene Arthur Waddell and Marie Anne Marguerite Benoit) bill S-6, rep with amdts, 334-5

Marriage Law Exemption (Lucien Roch Joseph Morin and Marie Rose Helene Morin) bill S-7, recommendation that bill be not proceeded with, 506-07

Statute Law amendment proposals, rep with recommendation for amdts, 347-8, 363-5, 376

Legislation

Bills received at closing for summer recess, 996-8, 1000, 1024

Increasing of capital of Farm Credit Corporation under an appropriation act, 554

Introduction of Bank Act, 201

Postal service operations, emergency legislation due to delays in negotiations, 682-3

Lewis, Hon. Philip Derek

Introduced in the Senate (Apr.4/78), 513

Liberal Party of Canada

Tenth anniversary of election of Right Hon. Pierre Trudeau to leadership of Liberal Party, 539-40

Liberia

Income Tax Conventions bill S-9, 358, 368-70, 377-80, 392, 421

Library of Parliament, Standing Joint Committee

Members

Senate, 39

Report of Parliamentary Librarian, 256

Lucier, Hon. Paul

Alaska Highway pipeline, planning and coordinating authority, 13, 25-27, 40

Statement of Hon. Allan MacEachen, 25-27

Canada Elections, Election Expenses, Northwest Territories bill C-33, 484-5

Election expenses, 484

Legislative authority of NWT Commissioner, 484

Transfer of legislative and administrative responsibilities in Council elections in Yukon and Northwest Territories, 484

Nurses in northern regions, lack of salary contract, 847

Shields of Arms of Yukon and Northwest Territories, absence from door of Senate chamber, 220

Transportation

Passenger facilities at Whitehorse and Watson Lake airports, 258, 279-80

Macdonald, Hon. John M., Chief Opposition Whip in the Senate

Canada Labour Code bill C-8, 599, 600, 601, 605, 610, 611, 621, 623

Electoral Boundaries Readjustment bill C-414 (Prince Edward-Hastings), 458

Fugitive Offenders bill S-8, 303-04

Agreement between Commonwealth law ministers, 303

Circumstances in which judge may issue warrant, 303

Civil liberties of refugees, 303

Committal proceedings, 303

Conviction of a returnable offence, 303

Death penalty, discretionary power of Justice Minister re, 303

Macdonald, Hon. John M.—*concl'd

Northern Gas Pipeline, Special Senate Committee

Members, choosing of, 394

Retirement age policies, 177-8

Provision for retirement, 177-8

Stevedores and coal miners, 178

Terms of reference of proposed committee, 178

Royal Canadian Legion bill S-10, 479-81

Community programs of Legion, 479-80

Consultation with Dominion Command re amdt, 481

Members, associate, 481

Purposes and objects of Legion, excerpt from Statutes of Canada, 480

St. Andrew's Day, 195

Senate, office heating, 151-2, 227

Speaker pro tem, 347

Transfer of Offenders bill C-21, 496-7, 498

Application for and agreement to transfer, 496

Canadians held without trial, 498

Canadians imprisoned in US and Americans imprisoned in Canada, 497

Entitlement to counsel in foreign country, 496

Revocation of parole or issue of pardon by foreign authority, 496-7

Serving of remaining time in federal penitentiary, 496

Macnaughton, Hon. Alan A., P.C. (Retired July 30/78)

Bank and Quebec Savings Banks bill C-16, 421

Duration of authority to carry on business, 421, 424

Banking, Trade and Commerce Committee

Reports

Petroleum Administration and Energy Supplies Emergency bill C-19, rep without amdt, 698

Tax Rebate Discounting bill C-46, rep without amdt but with observations, 699-700, 708-09

Committee of the Whole

Canada Labour Code bill C-8 considered in Committee of the Whole, Hon. Alan Macnaughton in the chair, rep without amdt, 596-604, 605-28

Malaysia

Income Tax Agreement bill S-9, 358, 368-70, 377-80, 392, 421

Manning, Hon. Ernest C., P.C.

Alaska Highway pipeline agreement, 152

Banking, Trade and Commerce Committee

Temporary resignation as member on discussion of banking legislation, 861

Constitutional amendment, 882

Constitution of Canada, renewal of the Canadian Federation, 865-6

Constitution of Canada, Special Joint Committee, 963, 976-81

First Ministers' conference, availability of government position papers and report of proceedings, 325

Income Tax (to establish Employment Tax Credit Program) bill C-23, 283

National revenue

Charitable organizations, directive on loss of status due to political activities, 731

Information Circular re Registered Charities, 731

Petroleum Administration and Energy Supplies Emergency bill C-19, 668

Syncrude and Great Canadian Oil Sands Co., 668

Retirement age policies, 163, 164

Loss of experienced manpower, 163

Marchand, Hon. Jean, P.C.

Address in reply to Speech from the Throne, 9-12

Marchand, Hon. Jean—concl'd

- Canada Labour Code bill C-8, 577-8, motion that bill be committed to Committee of the Whole, 591; carried, 595, 604, 605, 613, 619, 620, 624-5, 637-8, 639, 656
- Added benefits for employees, 577
- Appeals, 577
- Managers and professionals, statutory rights re annual leave, etc., 577
- Protection of safety and health, 577
- Regulation of industrial relations, 577-8
- Canadian Broadcasting Corporation
  - "Duplessis", documentary program, 503-04
  - Charbonneau et le chef*, 503
  - Discrepancies and untrue reporting in portrayal of historical figures, 503-04
  - Lack of history teaching in school curriculum, 503
- Canadian Labour Congress officials, visitors to Senate, 632
- Cap-a-la-Roche dredging contract, newspaper report re, question of privilege, 442
- Currency and Exchange bill C-39, 767
  - Authorization to Royal Mint to strike and issue gold coins, 767
  - Benefits from program, 767
  - Olympic coins, 767
- Mackasey, Hon. Bryce, newspaper report of remarks re appointments to Senate, 803
- National Capital Commission, Ottawa Citizen article re statement by former chairman of commission, question of privilege, 846-7, 866
- National Capital Region, Special Joint Committee
  - Reports
    - Time extension for completion of inquiry, permission to travel to Washington, D.C., with necessary staff, 386, 398
- Newspaper article re public apology to Crown attorney, question of privilege, 285
- Postal Service Operations bill C-45, 679-82
  - Co-operation committees, 680
  - International Labour Organization, 681
  - Public reaction to strikes, 682-3
  - Right of Public Service to strike, 680-3
  - Woods Commission on disputes in the Public Service, 682
- Quebec referendum question, 10-12
  - Reactions of other provinces to separatism, 11
- Security and Co-operation in Europe, Conference on, 501
- Senate
  - Role of, 12
- Speaker of the House of Commons, message of sympathy re accident involving son, 244
- World War II, thirty-fourth anniversary of D-Day, 834-5

Maritime code

- Amdts suggested by Senate committee, 1000, 1024, 1025
- Compulsory registration of small craft, 1000
- Transfer of registration system from Customs Branch to Transport Dept., 1000

Speakers: Senators

- Bourget, Maurice, 1024
- Grosart, Allister, 1000-01, 1024-5
- McIlraith, George J., 1000

Maritime Code bill C-54. 1r, 1000; 2r, 1000-01, 1024-5; 3r, 1025; r.a., 1029

Marriage Law Exemption (James Richard Borden and Judy Ann Borden) bill S-5. 1r, 271; 2r, 304-06; ref to com, 306; rep without amdt, 334; 3r, 343; message from Commons that bill has been passed without amdt, 399; r.a., 511

Marriage Law Exemption (François Eugene Arthur Waddell and Marie Anne Marguerite Benoit) bill S-6. 1r, 271; 2r, 306; ref to com, 306; rep with amdts, 334-5; 3r, 343; message from Commons that bill has been passed without amdt, 399; r.a., 511

Marriage Law Exemption (Lucien Roch Joseph Morin and Marie Rose Helene Morin) bill S-7. 1r, 271; 2r, 307-09; ref to com, 309; rep with recommendation that bill be not proceeded with, 506-07

Marshall, Hon. Jack (Introduced in the Senate Apr. 4/78)

- Agriculture, research and development in Newfoundland, 1046
- Bell Canada charges for pay telephone calls in Newfoundland and other parts of Canada, 887
- Bell-Canada—Newfoundland Telephone Company
  - Board of Directors, 1045-6
  - Rates in Newfoundland, 1046
  - Shares owned by Bell Canada, 1045
- Canadian Centre for Occupational Health and Safety bill C-25, 690-1
- Economy
  - Young Canada Works Program, additional funding for, 885
- Export Development bill C-36, 987-90
  - Energy and fisheries potential in Newfoundland, 990
  - Insurance ceiling, 987-8
  - Interference with Canadian Commercial Corp. and Federal Business Development Bank, 989
  - Statement of officer of Canadian General Electric Co., 989-90
  - Limit of liability, 987-8
  - Pulp and paper industry, 988-9
    - Bankruptcy of Labrador mill, 989
    - Competing foreign industry, 989
    - Statement of chairman of association, 988-9
- Farm Credit bill C-29, 650-1
  - Newfoundland farmers, 650
- Fisheries
  - Canada-United States negotiations on fishing boundaries, 861, 885, 892
  - Depletion of stocks by foreign countries outside the 200-mile limit, 745, 765, 769, 778
  - Designation of standing Senate committee, 754, 781, 905-06
  - Fish quotas allocation, 1046
  - Fisheries and Oceans Dept., establishment of, 1043
  - Small craft harbours project, 1043-5
- Home insulation program, applications received, approved or rejected, location of offices, 1023-4
- National revenue
  - Employment tax credit program, 793, 804
  - Pornographic film 'The Many Faces of Christ', 926
- Newfoundland
  - Corner Brook Harbour development, 1043
  - Gander International Airport, USSR use of, 974
  - Royal designation for Newfoundland constabulary, 925
  - Sullivan Commission on transportation, 803, 861, 925, 1022
- Pension and Compensation for Former Prisoners of War bill C-58, 855-7
  - Amputees, 856
  - Herman Report recommendations, 856-7

Marshall, Hon. Jack —*concl'd

- Pension and Compensation for Former Prisoners of War bill C-58 —concl'd
- Prisoners of war, 856
- Scale of pensions for veterans, wives and dependants, 855
- Single and married rates, 855
- Veterans Charter, inconsistencies in, 857
- Widow of veteran with 48% disability, 856
- Woods Committee study, 855
- Senate
  - Business, 902
  - Constituency allowances for senators, 905
  - QCTV Ltd. Edmonton, letter re 'Television in the House of Commons' (picture of Senate chamber), question of privilege, 757-8
- War veterans
  - Alleged discrimination in pension rights of widows, 772
  - Husband and wife veterans, eligibility for casual earnings as single persons, 862
  - Meals at Sunnybrook Hospital, 814, 838, 839, 840
  - Pension rights, 745

Martland, Hon. Ronald, Puisne Judge of the Supreme Court of Canada
 Royal assent, 1048

McDonald, Hon. A. Hamilton

- Constitutional amendment, 884
- Foreign affairs
  - Intervention by foreign nations in Zaire and Eritrea, 781, 799
- Income tax, 247
- North Atlantic Assembly, Paris meeting, 138-42
  - Defence spending, 138-42
    - Contributions of NATO member nations, 138, 139
    - Cruise missile, 140
    - Electronic warfare, 140
    - Interoperability and standardization of equipment, 141-2
    - Leopard tanks, 142
    - Marine strength and aircraft, 140, 141
    - Nuclear weapons, 140
    - Reinforcements and anti-armour, 139
    - USSR, 139, 140-1
  - Greece and Turkey, 141
  - Portugal, 140
  - Warsaw Pact, 140, 141
- Pension and Compensation for Former Prisoners of War bill C-58, 853-5
  - Canada's role in World War I, 854
  - Cost of living allowance, 854
  - Rehabilitation programs, 854
  - Scale of pensions for veterans, wives and dependants, 854
  - Widows or widowers eligibility, 855
- Security and Co-operation in Europe, Conference on, 330
  - Helsinki Agreement, legal boundaries, 330
- Senate, opposition members, 138

McElman, Hon. Charles

- Air Canada bill C-3, 117-18, 159-61
  - Acquiring of additional routes, 118
  - Auditors, 118
  - Board of directors, 117, 160
  - Business principles, 160
  - Directives by Governor in Council, 118, 159, 160-1
  - Hotel operations, 159-60
  - Shares held by CNR, cancellation of, 117
  - Shares or debt obligations, 160-1

McElman, Hon. Charles —*concl'd

- Beef industry, strike of producers in Saskatchewan and Manitoba, 413-14
  - GATT penalties for dumping, 413
  - Import policy, 413
  - Maritime agricultural industry, 413
  - Marketing board, 413
  - Supply-marketing programs, 413
- Compensation for Former Prisoners of War bill C-27, 424-5, 428-9, 477, 478
  - Compensation to evaders and prisoners of war of another power, 424-5
  - Compensation to spouse, 425
  - Escapees, 424, 428
  - Evaders, 424, 428
  - Maximum compensation, 428
  - Polish and other allied forces, 476, 477, 478
  - RAF Escaping Society, 428, 476
  - Three-month cutoff provision, 429
  - World War I veterans, 425
- Criminal Code (language of accused) bill C-42, 959, 960
  - New Brunswick, 959
    - Program of Equal Opportunity, 959
    - Universities, 959
    - Work of opposition leader of legislature, 959
- Eurocommunist parties
  - Italian government action re, 182
  - Representation at North Atlantic Assembly meetings, 182
- Hockey star Gordie Howe, tribute to, 220
- Income Tax (amdt to statute law and authorization of payments re provincial sales tax) bill C-56, 970-1
  - Cooperative federalism, 970-1
  - Federal-provincial consultations, 971
  - First Minister's conference, 970, 971
- Michaud, Hon. Herve J., the late, 833
- New Brunswick, establishment of experimental farm in Kent County, 510
- Northern Gas Pipeline Committee
  - Meeting during Senate sitting, 456-7
- Rules of the Senate
  - Motion to adjourn to discuss matter of urgent public importance, 419, 420
  - Point of order that leave not given, 557
- War veterans, accommodation at Saint John General Hospital, 841

McIlraith, Hon. George J., P.C.

- Beef industry, strike of producers in Saskatchewan and Manitoba, 415-16
- Canada Non-Profit Corporations bill S-3, 148-9
  - Disclosure to public or members, 148
  - Federal non-profit corporations, 149
  - Non-profit charitable corporations and membership corporations, 148-9
  - Public contributors participation in corporations affairs, 149
- Constitution of Canada, Special Joint Committee
  - Members, choosing of, 963-4
- Criminal Code (language of accused) bill C-42, 955, 956
  - Accused to be advised of right, 955
  - Application for trial in official language of accused, 955
  - Change of venue, 955
  - Coming into force in any province, 955
  - Consultation between federal and provincial authorities and federal Justice Minister, 955
  - Financial arrangements with provinces, 955, 956
  - Proclamation of bill, 955

McIlraith, Hon. George J., P.C.—concl'd

Fugitive Offenders bill S-8, 295-8

Agreement between Commonwealth law ministers, Scheme Relating to the Rendition of Fugitive Offenders in the Commonwealth, 296

Bail, 297-8

Death penalty, discretionary power of Justice Minister re, 297

Extradition proceedings, 298

Political offence, 296-7

Rights in respect of countries with which no treaty exists, 298

Treason, 296

Maritime Code bill C-54, 1000

Amdts suggested by Senate committee, 1000

Compulsory registration of small craft, 1000

Transfer of registration system from Customs Branch to Transport Dept., 1000

Point of order re discussion on beef industry, 415-16

Rules of the Senate

Motions for which no notice is required, 560

Motion to adjourn to discuss matter of urgent public importance, 414, 415-16, 417

Procedure in unprovided cases, 560

Commons rule cited, 560

Tax Rebate Discounting bill C-46, 710-11

Michaud, Hon. Hérve J. (Deceased June 5/78)

Experimental farm in Kent County named in honour of Senator Michaud, The Senator Herve Michaud Experimental Farm, 848

Farm Credit bill C-29, 650

New Brunswick

Experimental farm in Kent County, 508-10, see also 848

Agronomy course offered at Moncton University, 509

Emphasis on commodity groups, 509

Market development, storage and processing facilities, 509

Senate committee recommendations re Kent County, 508-09

Subsidiary agreement for agriculture under general Development Agreement, 509; excerpt from communique re, 509

Tributes, 832-4, 848, 965

Middle East

Canadian foreign policy, 202

Terrorist raid on Israel and retaliatory action, 457, 476, 479

United Nations peacekeeping force, participation of Canada in defence of southern Lebanon, 476, 479, 516-17, 525, 548, 728, 746-7

Observation of ceasefire and participation of Canadian authorities in decisions, 539, 548

Minutes of the Proceedings

Correction re Bell Island, Nfld., 312

Miscellaneous statute law

Speakers: Senators

Flynn, Jacques, 364, 365, 580, 584-5

Forsey, Eugene A., 364-5

Goldenberg, Carl, 347-8, 363-4, 365, 376, 579-80, 584, 585

Grosart, Allister, 364

Perrault, Raymond J., 293, 295, 364

Smith, George I. 580, 584

See Statute Law Amendment proposals, 293, 295, 347-8, 363-5, 376

Miscellaneous Statute Law Amendment bill C-41. 1r, 543; 2r, 579-80; 3r, 584-5; r.a., 604

(For rep of com see Statute Law Amendment proposals, 293, 295, 347-8, 363-5, 376)

Molgat, Hon. Gildas L.

Appropriation bill No. 4, 1977-78 C-30, 479, 492-3

Auto Pact, benefits and losses to Canada, 50

Beef industry, 46-51

Cattle production, statistics, 48

Dumping, 51

Feed situation, 48

GATT negotiations, 47, 50

Import increases, 47; quotas, 48-49; EEC quotas, 50; controls, 51

Income decrease of ranchers, 47; report of Winnipeg consulting firm, 47

OECD report on food expenditures, 49, 50, 51

Production and transportation costs, 50-51

Sheep industry, 49

Beef industry, m to adjourn to discuss strike of producers in Saskatchewan and Manitoba, 400-21; m withdrawn, 421

Crisis in western provinces, 401

Debt position of Canadian farmers, article in Regina Leader Post, 401

Import policy, 402, 421

Picketing of entry ports from Manitoba and Saskatchewan to US, 403

Recommendations of Senate Agriculture Committee, 401, 402

Subsidies, 403

Canada Labour Code bill C-8, 594

Canadian Broadcasting Corporation

Documentary program "Duplessis", 508

Estimates (Appropriation bill C-30)

Government expenditures, 479

Estimates (Appropriation bill C-31)

Borrowing authority, 483

Budgetary and non-budgetary expenditures, 483

Federal Expenditures Plan: How your tax dollar is spent, 492

GNP appropriated by governments, 484, 492

Net voting, 493

Terms of Clause 2 re three-twelfths of budget, 484, 492

Farm Credit bill C-29, 645, 646-8, 651-2

Age limit of 35-years, 646, 647

Authorization for additional capital, referral to committee of Parliament, 647, 652

Capital of corporation, 646, 647

Lending powers of corporation, 652

Loans outstanding, 651

Market value of farm, use in assessing loan, 648

Maximum loan, 647-8

Newfoundland, 651

Penalty interest, 648, 651

Prince Edward Island, 652

Provision for losses on loans, 648

Supervisory fee, 648, 651

National unity

Newspaper report of speech in Winnipeg re Quebec referendum, 340-2

Rules of the Senate

Motion to discuss matter of urgent public importance, 400, 406

Molson, Hon. Hartland de M.

Canada Labour Code bill C-8, 591, 592, 595, 603, 604

Constitutional amendment, 882

Income Tax (to establish Employment Tax Credit Program) bill C-23, 289-90

Unemployment, 289-90

UIC abuses, 290

Rules of the Senate

Oral and written questions, 200

Revised edition (1976-77), 6-7

Molson, Hon. Hartland de M.—*concl'dRules of the Senate—concl'd

Rule 46(G), clarification of, 583

Moro, Hon. Aldo, former Prime Minister of Italy, death of, tributes, 751-2Multiculturalism

Canadian Consultative Council on Multiculturalism, 652-3

Multiculturalism and Ethnic Attitudes in Canada, report issued by Minister of State (Multiculturalism), 652-3

National Anthem, translation into various heritage languages, 857-9, 862-3, 1027

Munro, Hon. John, P.C. Minister of Labour

Canada Labour Code bill C-8, considered in Committee of the Whole, 596-604, 605-28

National Anthem

'O Canada' as part of the Constitution, 925

Translation in various heritage languages, 857-9, 862-3, 1027

National Capital CommissionOttawa Citizen* article re statement by former chairman of commission, 846-7, 866National Capital Region, Special Joint Committee

Members

Commons, 285

Senate, 271

Message from Commons re formation of committee, 244; message to Commons in agreement, 255

Reports

Time extension for completion of inquiry, permission to travel to Washington, D.C., with necessary staff, 386, 398

Terms of reference, 255

National Defence

Use of CFB Summerside, Prince Edward Island, 476

National finance

Provincial sales tax

Federal government appropriation of provincial sources of revenue, 582

Meeting between Prime Minister and Quebec premier, 803-04

Quebec, 780, 861, 873, 887

Statement issued by four western provinces, 795-6, 797

National Finance, Standing Senate Committee

Budget, 169

Estimates ref to com

Year ending Mar. 31/78, 87

Supplementary (A), 116

Supplementary (B), 392

Year ending Mar. 31/79, 366

Expenses, 86

Meeting during Senate sitting, 437

Reports

Estimates year ending Mar.31/78, Supplementary (A), 175, 185-8, 198-9, 202-03, 206-08

Estimates year ending Mar. 31/78, Supplementary (B), 445-6, 465

Estimates year ending Mar.31/79, 871-2, 898-9, 907-10

Financial Administration bill C-10, rep without amdt, 814

Public Works Dept. accommodation program, authority to publish and distribute report on, 880, 972, 1040-2

Terms of reference, 87

National revenue

Deferral of income tax on proceeds from sale of livestock, 539, 548

Dumping duty on wide-flange steel beams, 893-4, 904-5, 926, 950-1

Employment tax program, 793, 804

Folkloric costumes, customs duties on, 887-8

Illegal importing of jewellery, 906

Information Circular re Registered Charities, 728-31, 743-5, 755

Information services, Communique—Revenue Canada, Customs and Excise, 814-15

Investment of RRSPs in annuities as opposed to trust funds, 515-16, 524-5, 539

Negotiations re Canadian Co-operative Implements Ltd., 548

Olympic Stadium, exemption from customs duties, 771

Political activity vs cancer research, 744-5, 754

Pornographic film 'The Many Faces of Christ', 926

Quebec income taxpayers, statistics, 781

Reciprocal agreements between Canada and United States re tax exemptions on donations to charitable institutions, 754, 766, 770, 794; donations to universities, 766, 770

National security

Socan Aircraft Limited, appearance of president before Senate committee, 367-8

National unity, 8-9, 28-30, 33-34, 40-42, 46, 67, 73-74, 90-93, 95-99, 103-05, 295, 314-19, 340-2, 583

Constitutional conference and reform, 29-30, 34

Federal government grant to Unity Canada, 583

Federal-provincial responsibilities, 97

Financial assistance to Quebec organizations supporting federalism, 582

Freedom of religion, language and education, 96-97, 98

Freedom of speech, 41

Individualism of Canada, 30

L'actualite article by June Callwood, 295, 314-19, 380-1, 464

Nomination of Miss Callwood for Order of Canada, 380

Newfoundland, 46

Quebec separatism, 9, 28-29, 33-34, 90-92, 96-98, 103-05

English-French relations, excerpts from editorials and speeches re, 104-05

Historical facts re French Canadians, 98-99

Montreal Gazette report of interview between Quebec premier and Keith Spicer, 90-91

Quiet revolution, 40

Referendum question, 10-12, 29, 93

School training in French language, 105-06

Regional disparities, 73; Atlantic provinces needs, 73-74

Social and political processes of Canadian life, 8-9

Democratic Promise—The Populist Moment in America, 8

Regionalism in provinces, 8

Speech by Senator Molgat in Winnipeg, 340-2

Statement by member of Commons, 341-2

Speakers: Senators

Asselin, Martial, 340

Choquette, Lionel, 103-05

Connolly, John J., 95-99

Flynn, Jacques, 28-30

Forsey, Eugene A., 295, 314-19

Fournier, Edgar E., 40-42

Frith, Royce, 8-9

Graham, B. Alasdair, 73-74

Hicks, Henry D., 380

Langlois, Leopold, 90-93, 319

Molgat, Gildas, 340, 341

Perrault, Raymond J., 33-34, 340, 341-2

Robichaud, L. J., 341

Sullivan, Joseph A., 67

Negative resolution, 658*Neiman, Hon. Joan

- Canada Labour Code bill C-8, 640-1
- Financial Administration bill C-10, 723

New Brunswick

- Kent County, The Senator Herve Michaud Experimental Farm, 508-11, 848
  - Agronomy course offered at Moncton University, 509
  - Emphasis on commodity groups, 509
  - Market developments, storage and processing facilities, 509
  - Senate committee recommendations re Kent County, 508-9
  - Subsidiary agreement for agriculture under general Development Agreement, 509; excerpt from communiqué re, 509
- Revenue Canada offices, removal from Saint John, 765

Newfoundland and Labrador

- Agriculture, research and development, 1046
- Bell Canada and Newfoundland Telephone Company, 1045-6
- Corner Brook Harbour development, 1043
- Corner Brook Mayor Dr. Noel Murphy, visitor to Senate, 143
- Energy resources, 42-45, 55
  - BRINCO Agreement, 42-44
    - British and Canadian officials involved in Labrador project, 42-43
  - Newfoundland-Quebec negotiations and agreement, 43-44
  - Federal government authority to declare national interest in, 55
  - Transportation of resources by tunnel project, 45-46
- Farm credit, lack of assistance to Newfoundlanders, 650
- Gander International Airport, USSR use of, 974
- National unity, 46
- Oil storage at Bell Island, 313-14
- Political poll conducted by CBC, authority for and costs, 772, 927
- Pulp and paper industry, bankruptcy of Labrador mill, 989
- Royal designation for Newfoundland constabulary, 925
- Telephone service, 887
- Transportation, Sullivan Commission on, 803, 861, 925, 1022
- War casualties, 429

Newspapers, periodicals, speeches, interviews, etc. excerpts from

- Agenda for Action*, brief from Canadian Manufacturers' Assoc. re economy, 113-14
- Agriculture and Land Planning*, by Norman Pearson, 101
- Bilingualism, speeches by Queen Elizabeth II and other dignitaries, 103-4
- Canada, Nation and Neighbour*, by Arthur Lower, 104
- Canadian Press, report of remarks in Senate re appointment of Comptroller General Mr. Harry Rogers, 742
- Canadians in the Making* by Arthur Lower, 104
- Capital punishment, statement attributed to Government Leader in the Senate, 727-8
- Chase Manhattan* article re exchange rate and Canada-Quebec relations, 867
- Chimo* article by Royal Bank of Canada chairman re value of Canadian currency, 869
- Class, The*, article by W. Moore re national unity and bilingualism, 104
- Democratic Promise—The Populist Moment in America*, by Lawrence Goodwyn, 8
- Economic Council, excerpt from speech by Acting Chairman re trade deficit and dollar value, 354
- Encyclopaedia of Parliament*, excerpt re duties and responsibilities of Comptroller General and Auditor General, 830

Newspapers, periodicals, speeches, interviews, etc. excerpts from —concl'd

- Excerpt from comments of Carl E. Beigie re economic policies, 108
- Extinction*, by Hon. Frederick William Rowe, 61
- Financial Times*, article re curtailment of free enterprise, 108
- Financial Times*, article re economic policies, 108
- L'actualité* article by June Callwood re national unity, 295, 314-19
- La Voix de l'Est* article by G. R. Scott re Hon. Eugene A. Forsey, 227
- Le Devoir* article re reflection of internal economy and external factors on currency, 869-70
- Marchand, Hon. Jean, article re public apology to Crown attorney, question of privilege, 285
- Montreal Gazette*, excerpt from interview between Premier René Levesque and Mr. Keith Spicer, 90-91
- Montreal Star* article re economic policies, 108
- Ottawa, Citizen
  - Cap-a-la-Roche dredging contract, article re alleged involvement of Hon. Jean Marchand, 442
  - National Capital Commission, article re statement by former chairman of commission, question of privilege, 846-7, 866
- Ottawa Journal
  - Excerpt from speech by Hon. Robert Stanfield re national unity and bilingualism, 104
  - Report of Senate proceedings, 742
- Parliamentary Procedure Simplified—A Complete Guide to Rules of Order*, question of privilege re misleading use of picture of Senate chamber on commercial publication, 768
- Provincial sales tax, statement issued by four western provinces, 795-6, 797
- Reader's Digest* article by Douglas How re national unity and bilingualism, 104
- Regina Leader Post* article re debt position of Canadian farmers, 401
- Senate reform, alleged statements of Senate government leader, 276
- Saccharin, letters, articles, statements re, 67-70
- Star-Phoenix* article 'Lang says Canadian Senate should be abolished' 393
- Toronto Star*, article re non-payment of student loans, 663
- Winnipeg Free Press*, article re government mini-budget, 108
- Women, status in Public Service, letter from David MacDonald, M.P., to Hon. Marc Lalonde, 422

Non-profit corporations

- See Canada Non-Profit Corporations bill S-3, 121, 148-9, 155, 471-5, 486-90, 511

Norrie, Hon. Margaret F.

- Address in reply to Speech from the Throne, 99-102
- Beef industry, 101-02
  - Erosion of farmland, 101; Agriculture and Land Planning, by Norman Pearson, 101
- Food shortages, 101-02
- Imports, 101
- Canadian Broadcasting Corporation
  - Production The Tar Sands, editorial comments re, 100-01
- Canadian National Railways Capital Revision and Railway bill C-17, 810
- Economic conditions, 99-102
  - Small businesses, 100-01
  - Unemployment, 99-100; job creation, 100
- Montreal container pier, adverse effects for Halifax and Saint John, 102

North Atlantic Assembly, Paris meeting, 138-42, 178-82, 215-18, 223-6, see appendix "B" of Dec. 8/77

Atlantic economic questions, 224

Cooperation in alliance arms procurement, 225-6

Defence expenditures, 138-42

Canada, 223-5; Navy, 224

Contributions of NATO member nations, 138, 139, 224

Cruise missile, 140

Electronics warfare, 140

Interoperability and standardization of equipment, 141-2, 224, 225

Leopold tanks, 142

Marine strength and aircraft, 140, 141

Nuclear weapons, 140

Reinforcements and anti-armour, 139

Education, Cultural Affairs and Information Committee, 215-17

Energy policy and supplies, 225

Price stability, 225

Subcommittee on, 225

US imports, 225

Eurocommunism, 181, 182

Free Flow of Information and People Subcommittee, 217

Greece and Turkey, 141

Human rights, 216-18

Broadcasting, resolution re 'jamming' of, 217

Canadian policy, 217-18

Communist-bloc countries persecutions, 216

Freedom of religion, 216

Helsinki Agreement, 215, 216-17

Reactions, report presented by Mr. Gontikas of Greece, 216

Resolution re Soviet and East European violations, 217

US policy and support by President Carter, 216

Military commitments of NATO members, 178-9

France, 179

Nuclear energy, 179-81

Accidents, 181

Radioactive waste material, 180

Portugal, 140

Scientific and Technical Committee, 179

USSR, 139, 140-1

Warsaw Pact, 140, 141, 225

Speakers: Senators

Austin, Jack, 223-6

Bosa, Peter, 181, 182, 217

Godfrey, John M., 178-81, 182

McDonald, A. Hamilton, 138-42

McElman, Charles, 182

Rowe, Frederick William, 141

Yuzyk, Paul, 215-18

North Atlantic Treaty Organization

See North Atlantic Assembly, Paris meeting, 138-42, 178-82, 215-18, 223-6 and appendix "B" of Dec. 8/77

Security and Co-operation in Europe, Conference on, 328-30, 498-501, 526-30, 541-2

Northern gas pipeline (See also Northern Pipeline)

Motion that special Senate committee be appointed to give advance consideration to legislation re pipeline, 377, 386-91, 393-8; motion agreed to, 398; further discussion, 432-6

Contravention of rules in establishment of special committees, 377, 386-7, 388-9, 390-1, 393-4, 397, 398

Members, choosing of, 389, 390, 394, 396-7

National scope of subject matter of bill, 395

Point of order, 390-1, 395

Precedents in establishment of special committees, 388, 391, 395-6

Northern gas pipeline—concl'd

Terms of reference, 387, 388

Speakers: Senators

Asselin, Martial, 389-90, 395

Buckwold, Sidney L., 391, 435

Flynn, Jacques, 387, 389, 391, 432-4

Forsey, Eugene A., 394

Grosart, Allister, 388-9, 390-1, 393-4, 397, 398

Langlois, Leopold, 377, 386-7, 390, 391, 394-7, 434-5

Macdonald, John M., 394-5

Perrault, Raymond J., 387-8, 389, 397-8, 434, 435-6

Phillips, Orville H., 397

Riley, Daniel, 435

Northern Gas Pipeline, Special Senate Committee

Appointment, 377, 386-91, 393-8, 432-6, 629

Meeting during Senate sitting, 456-7

Members, 432

Reports

Northern Pipeline bill C-25, rep without amdt but with recommendations, 554-6

Terms of reference, 629

See also Northern Pipeline, Special Senate Committee

Northern pipeline

Administrative arrangements, 534

Balance of payments position, impact on, 530

Canada-US agreement, 530

Canadian input in project, 532

Canadian potential for benefit, 533

Estimate of man-days employment, 533

Certificates of public convenience and necessity, 534

Earnings expected from US dollars, 530-1

Economic impact and costs of project, 535

Lysyk Inquiry, 568, 569-71

Native land claims, 534, 544, 562-7

Pipe supplies, 532

Proposal for standing committee, 532, 534-6

Prudhoe Bay reserves, 531

Shareholders agreement, 533

Social and economic impact on residents adjacent to pipeline, 545, 546

Recommendation for inquiry and terminal date of, 545

Special Senate committee to inquire into planning, construction, etc., recommendation for reappointment each session, 545, 568-71

Report to Senate during year, 545

Yukon and British Columbia, impact on lifestyle of, 534

Yukon potential for benefits, 531

Gas turbine engines, conversion to electrical motors as necessary, 531

Heritage fund, 531

Industrial development, 531

Lateral lines for gas distribution to communities, 531

Native land claims, 531, 533-4, 544, 562-7

Advance payment, 531

Preference to Yukon workers in training and hiring, 531

Property taxes from company, 531

Speakers: Senators

Desruisseaux, Paul, 535

Flynn, Jacques, 521, 522, 523-4, 533, 545, 562-4, 565, 566

Forsey, Eugene A., 566, 570

Grosart, Allister, 521, 545-6, 566

Langlois, Leopold, 564-5

Olson, Horace A., 530-2, 533, 535-6, 544-5, 546, 571

Perrault, Raymond J., 521, 522-3, 530, 568-9, 570-1

Smith, George I., 522, 532, 533-5, 565, 567, 569-70, 571

Northern pipeline—concl'd*Speakers: Senators—concl'd

Steuart, David G., 567
 van Roggen, George C., 565-6
 Williams, Guy, 567

Northern Pipeline bill C-25. 1r, 521-4; 2r, 530-6; ref to com, 536; rep without amdt but with recommendations, 544-6; motion for 3r, 562; motion in amdt (Clause 23.1), 562-7; neg, 567; 3r 571; r.a., 604

Northern Pipeline, Special Senate Committee

Budget, 900
 Meetings during Senate sittings, 825
 Meetings during Senate adjournments, 902
 Members, 824
 Terms of reference, 82
See also Northern Gas Pipeline, Special Senate Committee

Northwest Territories

Canada Elections, Election Expenses, Northwest Territories bill C-33, 471, 484-5, 494-5, 511
 Inuit representation in government, 171
 Mineral exploration in Baker Lake area, 632
 Omission of name of NWT senator from Canada Year Book, 494
 Rankin Inlet Hamlet Council, Peter Tatty and Melinda Tatty, visitors to the Senate, 368
 Shields of Arms of Yukon and Northwest Territories, absence from Senate chamber doors, 220
 Telesat relay facilities to Coral Harbour and Chesterfield Inlet, 906, 1023

Nova Scotia

Senate reform proposals unanimously adopted by Legislature of Nova Scotia, 757, 799

Nuclear energy

Accidents in nuclear plants, 179, 181
 Agreement between Canada and United States re nuclear safeguards, 144
 Government policy re neutron bomb, 805, 841
 Management of Canada's Nuclear Wastes, report of committee chaired by Dr. Hare, 180
 Nuclear safeguards, national policy, 201
 Report by Mr. Gerhard Flamig of Germany, 180
 Report by Prof. Rasmussen of Massachusetts Institute of Technology, 179
 Storage and disposal of waste material, 180

Nursing profession

Northern regions of Canada, lack of salary contract, 847

Occupational health and safety

See Canadian Centre for Occupational Health and Safety bill C-35, 662, 674-5, 690-1, 701, 713

Official languages

Report of the Commissioner of Official Languages, 486

Olson, Hon. Horace Andrew (Bud), P.C.—cont'd

Agriculture
 Wheat exports, 886, 903
 Alaska Highway pipeline
 Interpretation of agreement, 133-4, 151, 152-3, 201
 Negotiations between Canada and United States, 88, 95
 Beef industry, 18-21, 23, 861-2
 GATT provisions, 19
 Pricing mechanism, 19-21
Cattlemen, excerpt from, 19

Olson, Hon. Horace Andrew (Bud), P.C.—cont'd*Beef industry—concl'd*Pricing mechanism—concl'd

Consumer representation on boards re, 21
 Dumping practices, 20
 Lack of producers' influence on, 20
 Producer losses and consumer subsidy, 861-2

Beef industry, strike of producers in Saskatchewan and Manitoba, 404-05, 416-17, 423

Beef prices, escalation of, 404
 Cause and effect of crisis, 405, 423

Budget Speech

Distribution of minister's speech, 547

Canadian Wheat Board, restructuring of, statement by Premier Lougheed, 757, 758

Constitution of Canada

Ontario Royal Commission, question re report, 584, 632
 Supreme Court of Canada judgment re Saskatchewan legislation, 170, 171, 175-6

Economy, exchange rate of Canadian dollar, 372-3

Canada vs United States, 371-2

Foreign investments, 373

Inflation and unemployment, 372

International marketplace advantages, 372

Prairie grain producers, 372

Standby credit arranged by Finance Minister, 373

Withdrawal from international money market by provinces and agencies, 373

Economy, meeting between Canadian and United States treasury officials, report on and agreement re Canadian currency, 437, 486

Financial Administration bill C-10, 828-9

Foreign affairs

Terrorist raid on Israel and retaliatory action, 457, 476, 479

United Nations peacekeeping force, participation of Canada in defence of southern Lebanon, 476, 479, 516-17, 525

Income tax, 232-4

Cattle herd sales, 232-3

Rollovers and deferrals, 233

Income Tax (amdt to statute law and authorization for provincial sales tax reductions) bill C-56, 931-2

Alberta, 931-2

Discrimination of various provinces, 931-2

Economic Council recommendation, 931

Quebec, 932

Inter-Parliamentary Union, Bulgaria meeting, 241-2

Israeli-Arab conflict, 241-2

Universal Declaration of Human Rights, 242

Canadian policy, 242

National revenue

Deferral of income tax on proceeds from sale of livestock, 539, 548

Negotiations re Canadian Co-operative Implements Ltd., 584

Northern Gas Pipeline, Special Senate Committee

Appointment, 629

Meeting during Senate sitting, 456

Reports

Northern Pipeline bill C-25, rep without amdt, but with recommendations, 544-6

Terms of reference, 629

Northern Pipeline bill C-25, 530-2, 533, 535-6, 544-5, 546, 571

Balance of payments position, impact on, 530

Canada-US agreement, 530

Continuing committee or joint committee on pipeline, proposal for, 532, 535-6

Earnings expected from US dollars, 530-1

Olson, Hon. Horace Andrew (Bud)—*concl'dNorthern Pipeline bill C-25—concl'd

- Native land claims, 544
- Northern Pipeline Agency, 531-2
- Pipe supplies, 532
- Prudhoe Bay reserves, 531
- Shareholders agreement, 533
- Social and economic impact on residents adjacent to pipeline, 545, 546
  - Recommendation for inquiry and terminal date of, 545
- Special Senate committee to inquire into planning, construction, etc., recommendation for reappointment each session, 545
- Report to Senate during year, 545
- Yukon potential for benefits, 531
  - Gas turbine engines, conversion to electrical motors as necessary, 531
- Heritage fund, 531
- Industrial development, 531
- Lateral lines for gas distribution to communities, 531
- Native land claims, 531, 533; advance payment, 531
- Preference to workers in training and hiring, 531
- Property taxes from company, 531
- Northern Pipeline, Special Senate Committee
  - Meeting during Senate sitting, 825
  - Members, 825
  - Terms of reference, 825
- Parliament, dissolution of and legislative program pending, 753, 804-05
- Rules of the Senate
  - Motion for which no notice is required, 558
  - Motion to adjourn to discuss matter of urgent public importance, 416
  - Moving of substantive motion, 417
  - Point of order re motion in amdt on 3r of Financial Administration bill C-10, 828-9
- Soviet nationals in Canada, violation of Official Secrets Act by, 312
- Statement by Secretary of State for External Affairs, 319-21
- Transportation
  - Air Canada, threatened strike by pilots, 893, 906, 975
  - Aircraft crash at Cranbrook, B.C., 325, 335, 359
- Western grain stabilization fund payments, 159, 303, 314, 458, 516, 546

Opening of Parliament

- Communication from Canadian Secretary to the Queen, 1
- Message from the Queen, 655
- Speech from the Throne by Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth II, 1-4
- See Address in reply to Speech from the Throne

Orders and Customs of the Senate and Privileges of Parliament Committee

- Appointment, 5

Parliament

- Dissolution, possibility of and legislative program pending, 753, 804-05
- Opening, 1-4
- Prime Minister's announcement of continuation of 3rd session, 764-5
- Prorogation, 1048-9

Parliamentary reform

- House of Commons
  - Committees, 695
  - Want of confidence votes, 695

Parliamentary reform—*concl'd

Senate

- House of Provinces, motion for, 693-5
  - Appointments to, 693
  - Power to review and set aside orders in council, 693, 694
  - Provincial premiers as ex officio members, 693
- Law Clerk, 696
- Leader of the Government in the Senate and cabinet representation, 696
- Opposition representation, 695-6; western Canada, 696
- Provincial participation in appointments, motion re, 694
- Secretarial service, 696
- Senate vs Commons, 695
- Work of the Senate, 695

Parliament Buildings

- Use of facilities for Liberal Party convention, 340, 342, 359

Paterson, Hon. Norman McL.

- Senate members, 270

Penitentiaries Commissioner, qualifications of, 228, 278-9*Pension and compensation for former prisoners of war

- Amputees, 856
- Canada's role in World War I, 854
- Cost of living allowance, 854
- Herman Report recommendations, 856-7
- Prisoners of war, 856
- Rehabilitation programs, 854
- Scale of pensions for veterans, wives and dependant children, 854, 855
- Single and married rates, 855
- Veterans Charter, inconsistencies in, 857
- Widow of veteran with 48% disability, 856
- Widow or widower, eligibility of, 855
- Speakers: Senators
  - Bell, Ann Elizabeth, 855
  - Haidasz, Stanley, 862
  - Marshall, Jack, 855-7
  - McDonald, A. Hamilton, 853-5

Pension bill and Compensation for Former Prisoners of War bill C-58. 1r, 836; 2r, 853-7; 3r, 862; r.a., 1029*Perrault, Hon. Raymond J., P.C., Leader of the Government in the Senate

- Absence on official business in British Columbia, 826
- Acting Prime Minister, 206
- Address in reply to Speech from the Throne, 32-38; m for adoption, 110
  - Address to be engrossed and forwarded to Her Majesty the Queen, 110
- Agriculture
  - Benefits from exchange rate of Canadian dollar, 367
  - Farm Credit bill, 377, 437
  - Grain elevator facilities at Prince Rupert, 358, 437-8, 517
  - Wheat exports, 886, 903
- Air Canada
  - Response in French to request in English for reservation information, 325-6
  - Threatened strike by pilots, 893, 906
- Alaska Highway pipeline
  - Interpretation of agreement, 133-4, 151, 152-3, 201
  - Manufacture of pipe by Canadian companies, 133-4, 151, 201, 272
  - Negotiations between Canada and United States, 88, 95, 151

Perrault, Hon. Raymond J., P.C.—cont'd

- Alaska Highway pipeline—concl'd
- Planning and co-ordinating authority, Yukon involvement in, 13, 25-26, 40
- Procurement and tendering, Canada-United States negotiations, 88
- Baltic States, occupation by Soviet Union, 377
- Beef industry
  - Export quotas, 872-3
  - Exports to United States and resulting high prices to Canadians, 861
  - Producers in Saskatchewan and Manitoba, government assistance to, 423
- British Columbia
  - Heroin users, proposed compulsory treatment of, 772, 886
- Budget Speech
  - Date of presentation and accommodation for senators in gallery, 539, 540
  - Distribution of minister's speech, 547
- Canada Labour Code bill C-8, 592-3, 594, 595, 627, 628, 632-4, 637, 643-4
- Canada-United States relations
  - Garrison Dam project in the State of North Dakota, 754, 765
  - Statements by ambassador to Canada, 249
- Canada Week slogan, 894
- Canadian Broadcasting Corporation
  - "Duplessis", documentary program, 508
  - Fifth Estate* documentary program
    - Report re dispute between Italian government and Canadian construction firm, 82-83, 175, 201-02
    - Report re Friuli earthquake and aid from Canada, 286
    - Report of 25th anniversary, cost of production and combination of English-French version, 1023
- Canadian National Railways
  - Ocean Limited* and Scotian revenues, 313
- Canadian Wheat Board, restructuring of, statement by Premier Lougheed, 755, 778
- Capital punishment, statement attributed to Government Leader in the Senate, 727-8
- China, exchange visit of parliamentarians, 951-2
- Coal supplies from US to Canada, 207, 218
- Committees, terms of reference, 168
- Compensation for Former Prisoners of War bill C-27, 426
- Evaders, 426
- Comptroller General of Canada
  - Newspaper report of remarks in Senate re appointment of Mr. Harry Rogers, 742
  - Order in Council re appointment, 764
  - Special appointment regulations, Public Service Employment Act, 764
  - Status of Mr. Harry Rogers, 726-7, 732, 733, 745-6, 754, 778
  - Treasury Board publication re appointment, 792, 793
- Concentration of Corporate Power, Royal Commission, 54, 153, 236, 454, 732
- Publication of report, 732
- Constitution of Canada
  - Constitutional Reform, Ontario Royal Commission, report of, 585, 632
  - Excerpt from Throne Speech re, 277
  - Prime Minister's proposals re, 700, 961-2
  - Renewal of the Canadian Federation, 865, 866, 875, 881, 882, 883-5, 892-3, 903
  - Special Joint Committee, representation on, 999-1000
  - Supreme Court of Canada judgment re Saskatchewan legislation, 170-1, 175-6

Perrault, Hon. Raymond J., P.C.—cont'd

- Constitution of Canada—concl'd
- White Paper on Constitutional Reform, 777
- Côté, Hon. Jean-Pierre, resignation from Senate and appointment as Lieutenant Governor of Quebec, 714
- Crown corporations
  - Audit requirements, 715-16
  - Responsibilities of ministers and boards of directors, question answered, 54
- Duggan, Hon. James, resignation from the Senate, 513-14
- Economic conditions, 32-37
  - AIB controls, 34-37
  - Balance of payment problems, 37
  - Canada vs other OECD countries, 36
  - Commodity prices, statistics on, 35-36
  - Decision to borrow abroad to support Canadian dollar, 358, 393
  - Dollar devaluation, 34
  - Government expenditures, 37
  - Income tax, 37; job credit plan, 37
  - Meeting between Canada-United States treasury officials, report on and agreement re Canadian currency, 437, 486
  - OECD economic survey, 34-35, 36
  - Pipeline potential for employment, goods and services, 38
  - Prime Minister's letter to Economic Council of Canada re responsibilities for analysis of inflation and productivity developments, 475, 476
  - Toronto Sunday Star editorial, 33
  - Tourism, 37
  - Unemployment, 36-37; job creation, 37
  - Young Canada Works Program, additional funding for, 885
- Energy
  - Fundy tidal power sites, 314
  - Husky Oil Company, possible change in control of assets, 875-6, 886
  - Oil storage at Bell Island, 313-14
- Estimates
  - Federal Spending Plans 1978-79*, 555, 556, 583-4, 848
  - How Your Tax Dollar Is Spent*, 583-4, 848
- Ewasew, Hon. John, the late, 514
- Federal-provincial affairs
  - Conferences, government initiative re, 796, 797, 798
  - Visit to France by Quebec premier, 88
- First Ministers' Conference
  - CBC coverage of, 326
  - Government position papers and report of proceedings, 325
  - Objectives of conference, 340
  - Senators as observers, 335
- Fisheries
  - Canada-United States negotiations on fishing boundaries, 861, 892
  - Depletion of stock by foreign countries outside the 200-mile limit, 745, 765, 769, 778
  - Designation as subject matter of standing Senate committee, 754, 781, 905-06
  - Interim agreement, Canada-United States, 779
  - PEI scallop season, 1022-3
- Flynn, Hon. Jacques, tenth anniversary as Leader of the Opposition in the Senate, 77
- Foreign affairs
  - Auto Pact, Canada-United States, 893, 903-04
  - Evacuation of Canadians from Zaire, 778-9
  - Intervention by foreign nations in Zaire and Eritrea, 781, 799
  - Middle East, Canadian foreign policy, 202
  - Terrorist raid on Israel and retaliatory action, 457

Perrault, Hon. Raymond J., P.C.—*cont'dForeign affairs—concl'd

United Nations peacekeeping force, participation of Canada in defence of southern Lebanon, 476, 479, 516-17, 525, 548, 728, 746-7

Observation of ceasefire and participation of Canadian authorities in decisions, 539, 548

Whaling, International Agreement, 201, 235-6

Garrison Dam, North Dakota, 892, 904

General election

Prime Minister's announcement of continuation of 3rd session of 30th Parliament 764-5

Government

Expenditures, OECD economic survey re, 34

Foreign federal systems, question re study of, 307

Initiatives re federal-provincial conferences, 796, 797, 798

Grain, transportation of, committee to inquire into, 872, 904, 911-12

Great October Bolshevik Revolution, sixtieth anniversary, 95

Grey Cup, congratulations to Montreal Alouettes, 174

Haig, Hon. J. Campbell, resignation from the Senate, 243

Hockey, International, 385

Hockey star Gordie Howe, tribute to, 220

Human rights, task force on racial discrimination, 177

Income tax, Quebec, 795

Indians

Cutback in funds available to Brotherhood, 766, 838

Joint committee of government and National Indian Brotherhood, existence of, 766, 837

Justice Department

Libel action against Hon. Jean-Pierre Goyer, statement by Minister of Justice, re, 719-20

Payment of costs by Department, authority for, 734

Legislative program

Introduction of Bank Act, 201

Prime Minister's decision re general election and Postal Services Operations bill, 777-8

Marriage Law Exemption (James Richard Borden and Judy Ann Borden) bill S-5, 305-06

Michaud, Hon. Herve J., the late, 832

Experimental farm in Kent County named The Senator Herve Michaud Experimental Farm, 848

Moro, Hon. Aldo, former Prime Minister of Italy, death of, tributes, 751, 752

National Defence

Use of CFB Summerside, Prince Edward Island, 476

National finance

Provincial sales tax, 662-3, 780, 794, 795, 796, 797-8, 861, 873, 887

National revenue

Dumping duty on wide-flange steel beams, 893-4, 926

Illegal importing of jewellery, 906

Investment of RRSPs in annuities as opposed to trust funds, 515-16, 524-5, 539, 548

National security

Socan Aircraft Limited, appearance of president before Senate committee, 367-8

National unity

Constitutional reform 34

Federal government grant to Unity Canada, 583

Financial assistance to Quebec organizations supporting federalism, 582

Newspaper report of speech by Senator Molgat in Winnipeg, 341-2

Quebec separatism, 33-34

Perrault, Hon. Raymond J., P.C.—*cont'dNational unity—concl'd

Statement by member of Commons, 341-2

New Brunswick, establishment of experimental farm in Kent County, 510, 848

Newfoundland transportation, Sullivan Commission on, 1022

Northern Gas Pipeline, Special Senate Committee

Members, choosing of, 389

Motion for, 387-8, 389, 434, 435-6

Terms of reference, 387

Northern Pipeline bill C-25, 521, 522-3, 530, 568-9, 570-1

Continuing committee or joint committee, suggestion for, 535, 568-9

Lysyk Inquiry, 568, 570

Native land claims, 568-9

Northwest Territories

Inuit representation in government, 171

Mineral exploration in Baker Lake area, 632

Telesat relay facilities to Coral Harbour and Chesterfield Inlet, 906, 1023

Nuclear weapons

Agreement between Canada-United States re safeguards, 144

National policy, 201

Nurses in northern regions, lack of salary contract, 847

Parliament Buildings

Use of facilities for Liberal Party convention, 340, 342, 359

Parliament, dissolution of, 753

Penitentiaries, qualifications of Commissioner, 228, 278-9

Postal Service Operations bill C-45, 661-2, 685

Provincial sales tax reductions

Alleged remarks by Prime Minister, 662-3

Nova Scotia, 798

Quebec, 663, 780; counter-proposal, 861, 873, 887

Statement issued by four western provinces, 795, 796, 797

Public Service, movement of employees from Saint John, N.B., 765, 805, 892

Public Works Department

Illumination of government buildings in Hull, 258, 312-13

Queen Elizabeth II, Her Majesty, felicitations on 25th anniversary of Coronation, 832

Queen's Privy Council for Canada

Instrument of advice for summoning a person, 486, 548

Racial discrimination, report by Prof. Walter Pitman to Metropolitan Toronto Council, 177

Remembrance Day tributes, 116

Retirement age policies, 162, 163

Labour force statistics, 162

Suggested amdt to motion re special committee, 162, 163

Rules of the Senate

Motions for which no notice is required, 557, 558-9, 562

Oral and written questions, 200

Saskatchewan, Court of Queen's Bench vacancies, 27

Senate

Adjournments

Christmas, 273

Appointments, regional representation, 277, 278

Business, 88, 247, 248, 249, 257-8, 654, 715, 841, 952, 991, 992-4, 1027-8

Committee rep on Air Canada bill, Commons members comments re, 285

Conflict between committee meetings and Senate sitting, 952

Constituency allowances for senators, 905

Delay in sitting because of Budget Speech, 543

Heating of offices, 6, 151-2, 227

Privileges and immunities of senators, 176

Perrault, Hon. Raymond J., P.C.—concl'd*Senate—concl'd*Reform

Alleged statements of Senate government leader, press report of, 276-8

Conservative proposals, press report of, 700

Proposals unanimously adopted by Legislature of Nova Scotia, 757, 799

Regional representation, 158-9, 169-70

Shields of Arms of Yukon and Northwest Territories on doors of Senate chamber, absence of, 220

Star Phoenix article 'Lang says Canadian Senate should be abolished', 393

Separatism, 797-8

South Africa and other countries, government-sponsored and commercially-supported activities of Canada, phasing out of, 271-2, 278

Soviet nationals in Canada, violation of Official Secrets Act by, 312

Statement by Secretary of State for External Affairs, 319-21

Sports

CBC telecast of Pearson Cup baseball game, 847-8, 876

CBC telecast of World Cup Soccer Games, 885, 886

Montreal Alouettes win of Grey Cup of Canadian Professional Football, 174

Statute law amendment proposals, tabled, 293

Document ref to Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee, 295

Referral of amendment proposals to Senate committee before introduction of bill in Commons, 364

Student loans, newspaper article re non-repayment of, 663

Tax Rebate Discounting bill C-46, 711, 712

Exploiting of low-income groups by discounters, 711, 712

Introduction of bill by official opposition, 711

Trade

Textiles and textile products, bilateral restraint agreement, 906, tabled, 923

Transportation

Aircraft crash at Cranbrook, B.C., 325, 335, 359

Charter airlines within Canada, newspaper reports re air fares, 457-8, 546

Domestic air charter rights, Air Canada, C.P. Air and Wardair, 220-1, 312

Mirabel Airport, strike by blue-collar workers, 249

Newfoundland Transport Commission, submission of Sullivan Commission report, 861

Passenger facilities at Whitehorse and Watson Lake airports, 258, 279-80

Turks and Caicos Islands diplomats, visitors to Senate, 339

Unemployment insurance, reported overpayment of, 755-6, 779-80

United States President, visit to Canada, 201

War veterans

Husband and wife veterans, eligibility for casual earnings as single persons, 862

Meals at Sunnybrook Hospital, 838-41

Pension rights, 745

Welcome to new senators, 513

West coast oil ports, committee of inquiry by Dr. Andrew Thompson, 144, 152

Western grain stabilization fund, payments, 159, 303, 314, 458, 516, 546

Petroleum administration and energy supplies emergency

Discretionary power, amdt made by Commons, 666

Domestic petroleum and import of petroleum and petroleum products, 668

International price of oil, 667

Petroleum administration and energy supplies emergency—concl'd

Oil tar sands development, 666-7, 668

Government support of, 667

OPEC, 666, 667

Sun Oil, 667

Syncrude and Great Canadian Oil Sands Co., 667, 668

Speakers: Senators

Forsey, Eugene A., 668

Lang, Daniel A., 666-8, 690

Manning, Ernest C., 668

Smith, George I., 668, 687-9

Walker, David J., 667, 668

Petroleum Administration and Energy Supplies Emergency bill C-19.

1r, 662; 2r, 666-8, 687-90; ref to com, 690; rep without amdt, 698; m for 3r, 698; 3r, 702; r.a., 713

Petroleum corporations monitoring

Access to information re operations of companies, 995, 998, 999

Act referred to committee of House of Commons, 996, 998

Failure to file return or provide supplementary information, 996

Incorporation of amdts suggested by Senate committee, 995

Returns to be filed with minister, 995

Statements made 'in another place', 997

Speakers: Senators

Grosart, Allister, 996-9

Lang, Daniel A., 995-6

Petroleum Corporations Monitoring bill C-12. 1r, 994; 2r, 994-9; 3r, 999; r.a., 1029Petten, Hon. William J., Chief Government Whip in the Senate

Banking, Trade and Commerce Committee

Meeting during Senate sitting, 676

Committees, recommendation that provision for membership changes be incorporated into Rules, 40

Contribution made by English-speaking minority to province of Quebec, 762

Duggan, Hon. James, resignation from the Senate, 514

Inter-Parliamentary Union, Bulgaria meeting, 193-5

Agenda of meeting, 193

Law of the Sea, 193-4

Fishing industry, 193-4

World shipping and coastal state powers, 193-4

Political Questions, International Secretary and Disarmament Committee, 193

National Capital Region, Special Joint Committee

Members, 255

Terms of reference, 255

Northern Pipeline, Special Senate Committee

Members, 824

Retirement Age Policies, Special Senate Committee

Members, 235

Safe Containers Convention bill S-4, 221-2

Accident or incident involving container, 222

Costs assumed by container owners, 221-2

Dangerous goods and bulk liquids, 221

International Convention for Safe Containers, 221

International food containers, 221

Selection Committee*Reports

Constitution of Canada, Special Joint Committee, members, 994

Constitution of Canada, Special Senate Committee, members, 972, 1022

National Capital Region, Special Joint Committee, members, 271

Petten, Hon. William J.—*concl'd

Selection Committee—concl'd

Reports

Northern Gas Pipeline, Special Senate Committee, members, 432

Northern Pipeline, Special Senate Committee, members, 824

Standing committees, members, 39-40

Senate

Business, Summer adjournment, 1028

Phillips, Hon. Orville H.

Anti-Inflation bill C-18, 550, 571-3

Date of decontrol commencement, 550

Employees of AIB, escalation of, 573

Federal government spending, 572

Inflationary rates, international statistics, 572

Money supply increase (1968-77), 572

Beef industry, strike of producers in Saskatchewan and Manitoba, 411-12, 422-3

Government assistance to producers, 422-3

Import quotas, 412

Maritime agricultural industry, 411, 412

Potato producers, 411, 412; borrowings, 412

Statement of Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs, 411-12

Canada Labour Code bill C-8, 593

Compensation for Former Prisoners of War bill C-27, 425-6, 427

Escapes, 426; aircrew, 426

Evaders, 425, 427

Maximum compensation, 425-6

Polish veterans, 426

RAF Escaping Society, 426

War veterans allowance recipients, 425

World War I veterans, 425

Farm Credit bill C-29, 645, 648-50, 651, 652

Debt of agriculture community, 649

Interest rates, 649-50

Market value of farm, use in assessing loan, 650

Production and building costs, 649

Supervisory fee, 650

Fishing and Recreational Harbours bill C-2, 336-7

Berthing fees, 336-7

Net voting, 336

Seizure provisions, 337

Small craft problems in relation to consolidation of harbours, 337

Small harbours, neglect of, 336

User-pay policy in regard to fishermen, 336

Wharfinger, 337

Income Tax (to establish Employment Tax Credit Program) bill C-23, 286-9, 291

Certificate of unemployment, 289

Eligible employer, employment or worker, definition of, 288-9

Job potential under employment tax credit program, 287

Regional tax credit disparities, 288

Students and other temporary workers, 288-9

Treasury Board powers, 288

Unemployment statistics, 286-7

National Defence

Use of CFB Summerside, Prince Edward Island, 476

Northern Gas Pipeline, Special Senate Committee

Members, choosing of, 397

Rules of the Senate

Point of order re procedure after motion has been put, 596

Unemployment

Motion to adjourn to consider matter of urgent public importance, 556-7, Speaker's ruling re continuance of debate on motion, 562; motion neg, 562

Pigeon, Hon. Louis-Philippe, Puisne Judge of the Supreme Court of Canada

Royal assent, 511-12

Point of order, 390-1, 395

Beef industry, point of order re discussion on, 415-18

Motion in amdt on 3r of bill, 828-9, 835-6

Motion ruled inadmissible, excerpts from May's and Beauchesne's re, 835-6

Motion to adjourn to discuss matter of urgent public importance, point of order that leave not given, 577

National revenue, Information Circular re Registered Charities, 731

Speaker's decision re, 418, 420

Porteous, Hon. George, Lieutenant Governor of Saskatchewan (Deceased Feb. 7/78)

Tribute, 307

Visit to Senate, 292

Postal service operations

Application for injunction, 678

Bilingualism, remarks attributed to Senator Buckwold at Banff conference, 677, 679

Co-operation committees, 680

Deficit in post office operations, 678

Emergency legislation caused by delays in negotiations, 682-3

Fines for non-compliance with back-to-work orders, 678

Government intervention on behalf of public interest, 665, 686-7

Imperfection of legislation, 683

Inability of postmasters general to solve strikes, 684

International Labour Organization, 681

National economic and social interest, 665

Negotiation process, continuation of, 665

Point of order re implication of compulsory arbitration, 682

Public reaction to strikes, 682-3

Right of Public Service to strike, 677-8, 680-3

Strikes affecting the public sector, 683

Wildcat strikes, danger of, 683, 684, 687

Woods Commission on disputes in the Public Service, 682

Speakers: Senators

Asselin, Martial, 677-9, 682

Buckwold, Sidney L., 664-6, 679, 686, 687, 701

Flynn, Jacques, 661, 684-5, 686, 700, 701

Forsey, Eugene A., 682, 683

Marchand, Jean, 679-82

Perrault, Raymond J., 661-2, 685

Roblin, Duff, 683-4

Postal Service Operations bill C-45. 1r, 661-2; 2r, 664-6, 677-87; m for 3r, 700-01; m in amdt, 701, neg, 701; 3r, 701; r.a., 713

Post Office

Increased fees prescribed by Postmaster General, 653, 659, 663-4, 691

See Report of Regulations and other Statutory Instruments Committee, 653, 659, 663-4, 691

Prince Edward Island

Farm Credit bill C-29, 652

Scallop fishing season, 925

Transportation rates, 63

Use of CFB Summerside, 476

Printing of Parliament, Standing Joint Committee

Members

Senate, 39

Prisoners of war

See Compensation for Former Prisoners of War bill C-27, 392, 424-9, 456, 476-7, 511

Privilege, question of

Canadian Broadcasting Corporation

Documentary program The Fifth Estate re atomic energy, 54-55

Sunday Morning program, references to Senate, 1038-40

Canadian Press report of remarks made in Senate re appointment of Mr. Harry Rogers, 742

Constitution of Canada, Special Joint Committee, representation on, 999-1000

Debates of the Senate, correction in translation, 235

Discussion on meals at Sunnybrook Hospital, 839-40

Mackasey, Hon. Bryce, newspaper report of remarks re appointments to Senate, 803

Marchand, Hon. Jean, Cap-a-la-Roche dredging contract, newspaper report re, 442

Marchand, Hon. Jean, public apology to Crown attorney, newspaper article re, 285

National Capital Commission, Ottawa Citizen article re statement by former chairman of commission, 846-7, 866

National unity, newspaper report of speech by Senator Molgat in Winnipeg, 340-1

QCTV letter re 'Television in House of Commons' (picture of Senate chamber), 757-8

Retraction of statement by Senator Grosart re allocation of subject to committee, 393-4

Senate

Heating of offices, 151-2, 227

Misleading use of picture of Senate chamber on commercial publication, 768

Separatism, newspaper reports of remarks of Senator Denis, 804

Speech by Senator Bosa, change in Debates of the Senate, 342

Statement by Senator Langlois on discussion of CNR bill, 816-17

Voix de l'Est article by G.R. Scott re Hon. Eugene A. Forsey, 227

Prorogation of Third Session of Thirtieth Parliament,

Speech from the Throne, 1048-9

Provincial sales tax

Alleged statement by Prime Minister as to 'separatism' in reaction to budget reductions, 662

Amdts suggested by senators, newspaper report re, 804

Position taken by Finance Minister of Quebec, 663

See Income Tax (amdt to statute law and authorization for provincial sales tax reduction) bill C-56, 900, 913-21, 927-40, 942-6, 947

Also National revenue

Public Access to Government Documents

Green Paper on Legislation on, ref to Regulations and other Statutory Instruments Committee, 265; rep of com, 1021, 1030-4

Access officer, 1033

Burden of proof for exemption, 1033

Criteria for exclusion from access, 1030

Definition of document, 1030

Description of document sought, 1033

Documents related to

Cabinet, 1031

Commercial or financial information, 1032

Federal-provincial relations, 1031

International relations, 1031

Law enforcement, 1031

Legal opinions, 1032

National defence, 1031

Public Access to Government Documents—concl'd

Green Paper on Legislation on, ref to Regulations and other Statutory Instruments Committee—concl'd

Documents related to—concl'd

Personal privacy, 1031-2

Policy advice, 1031

Statutory exemptions, 1032

Eligibility for access, 1033

Exemptions—not compulsory, 1032

Fees for requests under Freedom of Information legislation, 1033-4

Priority against Crown privilege, 1034

Reports on compliance by agencies and department, 1034

Time limits for release of information, 1034

Public Service

Movement of employees from Saint John, N.B., 805, 892

National Health and Welfare Dept., move of employee to Halifax, 805

Revenue Canada offices, removal from Saint John, N.B., 765, 892

Transport Dept. and Revenue Canada employees, move to Newfoundland, 805

Public Works Department

Accommodation program, report of National Finance Committee, authority to publish and distribute, 880

Illumination of government buildings in Hull, 258, 312-13

Pulp and paper industry

Bankruptcy of Labrador mill, 989

Competing foreign industry, 989

Statements of chairman of association, 988-9, 991

Quart, Hon. Josie D.

International Women's Day, 422

Excerpt from letter from David MacDonald, MP., to Hon. Marc Lalonde re women in the Public Service, 422

Indian women, denial of rights, 422

Quebec

Canadian Broadcasting Corporation

"Duplessis" documentary program, 498, 501-04, 508

Charbonneau et le chef, 503

Discrepancies and untrue reporting in portrayal of historical figures, 501-02, 503-04

Excerpt from letter from Archbishop of Sherbrooke, 501

Lack of history teaching in school curriculum, 503

La Tribune editorial re CBC historical program, 501

Radio Canada's responsibility in verification of facts, 502-03

Club Optimiste, Laval, visitors to Senate, 159

Contribution made by English-speaking minority to province of Quebec, 762

Côté, Hon. Jean-Pierre, appointment as Lieutenant Governor, 714-15

Income tax adjustments, 795

National unity

Federal government grant to Unity Canada, 583

Financial assistance to Quebec organizations supporting federalism, 582

Quebeckers of prominence and prestige, 98-99

Referendum question, 10-12, 29

Separatism, 9, 11, 28-29, 33-34, 40

Quiet revolution, 40

Reaction of other provinces, 11

Quebec Savings Banks Act

Bank and Quebec Savings Banks bill C-16, 392, 421, 423-4, 448, 458, 511

Queen Elizabeth II, Her Majesty

Address to Her Majesty from the Senate, 5
 Felicitations on 25th anniversary of Coronation, 832
 Message re Speech from the Throne, 655
 Opening of Third Session of Thirtieth Parliament, 1
     Communication from Canadian Secretary to the Queen, 1
 Speech from the Throne by Her Majesty, 1-4

Queen's Privy Council for Canada

Instrument of advice for summoning a person, 486, 548

Questions

Agriculture
     Benefits from exchange rate of Canadian dollar, 367
     Farm Credit bill, 377, 437
     Grain elevator facilities at Prince Rupert, 358, 437-8, 517
     Research and development, 1046
     Wheat exports, 886, 903
 Air Canada
     Response in French to request in English for reservation information, 325-6
     Threatened strike by pilots, 893, 906, 975
 Air-conditioning units for motor vehicles, 1045
 Alaska Highway pipeline
     Interpretation of agreement, 133-4 151, 152-3, 201
     Labour priorities, 153
     Manufacture of pipe by Canadian companies, 133-4, 151, 201, 272
     Negotiations between Canada and United States, 88, 95, 151
     Planning and co-ordinating authority, 13, 25-26, 40
 AlCan pipeline, procurement and tendering, 88
 Baltic States, occupation by Soviet Union, 377
 Beef industry
     Export quotas, 872-3
     Exports to United States and resulting high prices to Canadians, 861, 872-3
     Producer losses and consumer subsidy, 861-2, 872-3
     Producers in Saskatchewan and Manitoba, government assistance to, 422-3
 Bell Canada and Newfoundland Telephone Company, 1045-6
 British Columbia heroin users, proposed compulsory treatment of, 772, 886
 Budget Speech
     Distribution of minister's speech, 547
     Provincial sales tax reductions
         Alleged remarks of Prime Minister, 662-3
         Position taken by Finance Minister of Quebec, 663
 Canada-United States relations
     Garrison Dam project in the State of North Dakota, 753-4, 765, 892, 904, 926-7
     Statements by ambassador to Canada, 249
 Canada Week slogan, 894
 Canadian Broadcasting Corporation
     Documentary program The Fifth Estate
         Dispute between Italian government and Canadian construction firm, 82-83, 175, 201-02
         Friuli earthquake, aid from Canada, 286
     Political poll in Newfoundland, authority for and costs, 772, 927
     Report of 25th anniversary, cost of production and combination of English-French version, 805, 1023
 Canadian National Railways, Ocean Limited and Scotian revenues, 313

Questions—cont'd

Canadian Wheat Board, suggested restructuring of, statement by Premier Lougheed, 778
 Capital punishment, statement attributed to Government Leader in the Senate, 727-8
 Coal supplies from US to Canada, 207, 218
 Communications
     Bell Canada charges for pay telephone calls in Newfoundland and other parts of Canada, 887
 Comptroller General of Canada
     Order in Council re appointment, 764
     Status of Mr. Harry Rogers, 726-7, 732-3, 745-6, 754, 778
     Treasury Board publication re appointment, 792-3
 Concentration of Corporate Power, Royal Commission, 54, 153, 236, 453-4, 732
     Publication of report, 732
 Constitution of Canada
     Constitutional Reform, Ontario Royal Commission, 584, 632
     Proposed special Senate committee, 951
     Renewal of the Canadian Federation, 864-5, 875, 892-3, 894-6, 903
     Senate reform, 881-5
     Supreme Court of Canada judgment re Saskatchewan legislation, 170-1, 175-6
     White Paper on Constitutional Reform, 777
 Crown corporations
     Audit requirements, 715-16
     Ministers responsible for such corporations, 876-7
     Names of crown corporations answerable to federal government, 876-7
     Surplus or deficit 1976/77, 876-7
 Economic Council of Canada
     Bilateral aid program, policy re, 950
     Prime Minister's letter to Council re taking on of responsibilities for analysis of inflation and productivity developments, 475-6
 Economy
     Decision to borrow abroad to support Canadian dollar, 358-9, 393
     Meeting between Canadian and United States treasury officials, report on and agreement re Canadian currency, 437, 486
 Energy
     Alberta Gas Trunk Line Co. Ltd., 975
     Husky Oil Company, possible change in control of assets, 875-6, 886, 950, 975
 Estimates
     Federal Spending Plans 1978-79, 555, 556, 583-4, 848
     How Your Tax Dollar Is Spent, 583-4, 848
 Federal-provincial affairs, visit to France by Quebec premier, 88
 First Ministers' Conference
     Availability of government position papers and report of proceedings, 325
     CBC coverage of, 326
     Objectives of conference, 339-40
     Senators as observers, 335
 Fisheries
     Canada-United States negotiations on fishing boundaries, 769, 779, 861, 885, 892
     Depletion of stock by foreign countries outside the 200-mile limit, 745, 765, 769, 778
     Designation as subject matter of standing Senate committee, 754, 781, 905-06
     Fisheries and Oceans Dept., establishment of, 1043
     Fish quotas allocation, 1046
     Interim agreement, Canada-United States, 769, 779
     Prince Edward Island scallop fishing season, 925, 1022-3
     Small craft harbours project, 1043-4

Questions—cont'd

- Folkloric costumes, customs duty on, 887-8
- Foreign affairs
  - Assistance to earthquake victims in Friuli, Italy, 810-12
  - Canada-United States auto pact, 893, 903-04
  - Evacuation of Canadians from Zaire, 770, 778-9
  - Intervention by foreign nations in Zaire and Eritrea, 781, 799
  - Kolwezi massacre in Zaire, involvement of Canadian citizens, 815
  - Diplomatic discussions re action against guerrillas, 815
  - Middle East, Canadian foreign policy, 202
  - Terrorist raid on Israel and retaliatory action, 458, 476, 479
  - United Nations peacekeeping force, participation of Canada in defence of southern Lebanon, 476, 479, 516-17, 525, 548, 728, 746-7
  - Observation of ceasefire and participation of Canadian authorities in decisions, 539, 548
  - Whaling, International Agreement, 201, 235-6
- Fundy tidal power sites, 314
- Gander International Airport, USSR use of, 974
- Government, foreign federal systems, study of, 307
- Grain, transportation of, committee to inquire into, 872, 904, 911-12
- Grain Transportation Operations Analysis—Terms of reference, 911-12
- Home insulation program, 1023-4
- Human rights, report of task force on racial discrimination, 177
- Income tax, Quebec, 795
- Indians
  - Cutback in funds available to National Indian Brotherhood, 766, 838
  - Joint committee of government and National Indian Brotherhood, existence of, 766, 837
- Justice Department
  - Libel action against Hon. Jean-Pierre Goyer, statement by Minister of Justice re, 719-20
  - Legal advice given to Hon. Mr. Goyer, authority for, 720, 974
  - Payment of costs by Department, precedents and authority for, 720, 733-4, 974-5
- Legislative program
- Introduction of Bank Act, 201
- Prime Minister's decision re general election and Postal Services Operations bill, 768-9, 777-8
- National Anthem
  - 'O Canada' to be made part of the Constitution, 925
- National Defence
  - Use of CFB Summerside, Prince Edward Island, 476
- National finance
- Provincial sales tax
  - Amdts suggested by senators, newspaper report re, 804
  - Federal government appropriation of provincial sources of revenue, 582
  - Meeting between Prime Minister and Quebec premier, 803-04
  - Quebec, 780; counter proposals, 861, 873, 887
  - Statement issued by four western provinces, 795-6, 797
- National Health and Welfare Dept., move of employee to Halifax, 805
- National revenue
  - Deferral of income tax on proceeds from sale of livestock, 539, 548
  - Dumping duty on wide-flange steel beams, 893-4, 904-05, 926, 950-1
  - Employment tax program, 793, 804
  - Illegal importing of jewellery, 906
  - Information Circular re Registered Charities, 728-31, 743-5, 755
  - Information services, Communiqué-Revenue Canada, Customs and Excise, 814-15

Questions—cont'd

- National revenue—concl'd
  - Investment of RRSPs in annuities as opposed to trust funds, 515-16, 524-5, 539
  - Negotiations re Canadian Co-operative Implements Ltd., 584
  - Olympic Stadium, exemption from customs duties, 771
  - Pornographic film 'The Many Faces of Christ', 926
  - Reciprocal agreements between Canada and United States re tax exemptions on donations to charitable institutions, 754, 766, 770, 794; donations to universities, 766
  - Tax exemptions, registered charities, political activity vs cancer research, 743-5, 754
- National security
  - Socan Aircraft Limited, appearance of president before Senate committee, 367-8
- National unity
  - Federal government grant to United Canada, 583
  - Financial assistance to Quebec organizations supporting federalism, 582
  - Toronto Baseball Club, congratulations to, 803
- Newfoundland
  - Corner Brook Harbour development, 1046
  - Royal designation for Newfoundland constabulary, 925
- Newfoundland Transport Commission, submission of report to Minister of Transport, 803, 861
- Northwest Territories
  - Inuit representation in government, 171
  - Mineral exploration in Baker Lake area, 632
  - Telesat relay facilities to Coral Harbour and Chesterfield Inlet, 906, 1023
- Nuclear weapons, government policy re neutron bomb, 201, 804
- Nurses in northern regions, lack of salary contract, 847
- Parliament Buildings
  - Use of facilities for Liberal Party convention, 340, 342, 359
- Penitentiaries, qualifications of new Commissioner, 228, 278-9
- Perrault, Hon. Raymond J., acting Prime Minister, 206
- Public Service, movement of employees from Saint John, N.B., 805, 892
- Queen's Privy Council for Canada
  - Instrument of advice for summoning a person, 486, 548
- Racial discrimination, report by Prof. Walter Pitman to Metropolitan Toronto Council, 177
- Rules of the Senate
  - Rule 46(G), clarification of, 582-3
- Saskatchewan Court of Queen's Bench vacancies, 27
- Senate
  - Heating of offices, 6, 151-2, 227
  - Privileges and immunities of senators, 176
- Reform
  - Newspaper report of Progressive Conservative Party proposal, 700
  - Proposals unanimously adopted by the Legislature of Nova Scotia, 757, 799
- Regional representation, 158-9, 169-70
- Shields of Arms of Yukon and Northwest Territories on doors of Senate chamber, absence of, 220
- Senators' constituency allowances, 905
- South Africa and other countries
  - Government-sponsored commercially-supported activities of Canadian government, phasing out of, 271-2, 278
- Soviet nationals in Canada, violation of Official Secrets Act, 312; statement by Secretary of State for External Affairs, 319-21
- Sports
  - CBC telecast of Pearson Cup baseball game, 847-8, 876

Questions—concl'd

Star-Phoenix article 'Lang says Canadian Senate should be abolished', 393

Student loans, newspaper article re non-repayment of, 663

Trade, textiles and textile products, bilateral restraint agreement, 906, tabled, 923

Transport and Communications Committee, attendance of Minister of Fisheries and the Environment at meeting, 386

Transportation

Aircraft crash at Cranbrook, B.C., 325, 335, 359

Charter airlines within Canada, newspaper reports re air fares, 457-8, 546

Domestic air charter flights, rights of, Air Canada, CP Air and Wardair, 220-1, 312

Mirabel Airport, strike by blue-collar workers, 249

Passenger facilities at Whitehorse and Watson Lake airports, 258, 279-30

Transport Dept. and Revenue Canada employees, move to Newfoundland and to Halifax, 805, 892

Unemployment insurance, reported overpayment of, 755-6, 779-80

United States President, visit to Canada, 201

War veterans

Alleged discrimination in pension rights of widows, 772

Husband and wife veterans, eligibility for casual earnings as single persons, 862

Meals at Sunnybrook Hospital, 814, 838-41

Pension rights, 745

West coast oil ports, committee of inquiry by Dr. Andrew Thompson, 144, 152

Western grain stabilization fund payments, 159, 303, 314, 458

Young Canada Works Program, additional funding for, 885

Racial discrimination

Report by Prof. Walter Pitman of Metropolitan Toronto Council, 177

Railways bill S-1 (pro forma). 1r, 6*Regulations and other Statutory Instruments, Standing Joint Committee

Budget, 169

Expenses, 143

Members

Senate, 39

Public Access to Government Documents, Green Paper on Legislation on, ref to com, 265

Reports

1st report re quorum, engagement of staff, sittings during adjournments, 143

2nd report with additional criterion for Review of Statutory Instruments, 310-11, 337-8

3rd report re Green Paper on Legislation on Public Access to Government Documents, tabled in Commons Apr. 6/78

4th report re Post Office, 653, 659-60, 663-4, 691

5th report, study on subject matter of Green Paper on Legislation on Public Access to Government Documents, 1021, 1030-4

6th report, authority to hold meetings during summer recess and to print evidence, 985

Terms of reference, 143

Remembrance Day

Tributes to Canada's War Dead, 116

Resolutions

Constitution of Canada, resolution re Special Joint Committee of Senate and House of Commons, 923

Resolutions—concl'd*Human rights

Nomination of Helsinki Monitoring Groups in USSR for 1978 Nobel Peace Prize, 1021-2

Restaurant of Parliament, Standing Joint Committee*Members

Senate, 39

Retirement age policies, 126-31, 155-7, 161-4, 177-8, 189-91, 203-05, 208-12

Accomplishments of famous older persons, 156

Bismarck's compulsory retirement age policy, 155-6

Definition of old age and aging people, 172

Flexibility of retirement age, pension systems in OECD member countries, 132

Forced retirement and hardship involved, 190

How Much Choice: Retirement Policies in Canada, 209

Labour force statistics, 162

Life expectancy at birth in selected countries, 131

Loss of experienced manpower, 157, 163

Performance work record of senior citizens, 205

Provision for retirement, 177-8

Psychological burdens at retirement age, 129

Requirement to retire to qualify for pension, 132

Resolution on Commons order paper, 126-7

Retirement age in selected countries, 128, 131

Senate Committee on Aging, 127

Senate role in inquiry, 127

Senators, 172, 173

Stevedores and coal miners, 178

US 'grey rights drive', 204-05

Speakers: Senators

Bosa, Peter, 211

Buckwold, Sidney L., 204-05

Cottreau, Ernest G., 189-90

Croll, David A., 126-32, 211-12

Deschatelets, Jean-Paul, 210-11

Godfrey, John M., 209-10

Greene, John J., 190-1

Hicks, Henry D., 163

Inman, F. Elsie, 155-7

Macdonald, John M., 177-8

Manning, Ernest C., 163, 164

Perrault, Raymond J., 162, 163

Rowe, Frederick William, 171-3

van Roggen, George C., 211

See appendix, 131-2

Retirement Age Policies, Special Senate Committee

Appointment, motion for, 126-32, 155-7, 161-4, 171-3, 177-8, 189-91, 203-05, 208-12; amdt, 212, motion as modified agreed, 212

Members, 235, 255

Quorum of committee, 323-5

Terms of reference, 126, 212

Revised Statutes of Canada, 1970

See Miscellaneous Statute Law Amendment bill C-41, 293, 295, 347-8, 543

Right to information

Government documents and information, right of public access to, 444-7, 1030-4

Riley, Hon. Daniel A.

Beef industry, strike of producers in Saskatchewan and Manitoba, 402-03, 404, 406, 410-11

Riley, Hon. Daniel A.—*concl'dBeef industry—concl'd

Beef slaughter percentages, Manitoba and Saskatchewan, 402

Dairy producer profits, 403

Illegal strike aspect, 410

Subsidies, 402-03

Canadian Broadcasting Corporation

Report of 25th anniversary, question re cost of production and combination of English-French version, 805, 1023

Northern Gas Pipeline, Special Senate Committee, 435

Public Service, movement of employees from Saint John, N.B., 805, 892

Regulations and other Statutory Instruments Committee

Reports

5th report, study of subject matter of Green Paper on Legislation on Public Access to Government Documents, 1021, 1030-4

6th report, authority to hold meetings during summer recess and to print evidence, 985

Revenue Canada, removal of offices from Saint John, N.B., 765, 892

Safe Containers Convention bill S-4, 222

Senate, regional representation, 277, 278

Rizzuto, Hon. Pietro

Constitution of Canada, Special Joint Committee, representation on, question of privilege, 999

Economic conditions, 114-15

Subsidizing of industry, 114

Unemployment insurance, 114-15

Moro, Hon. Aldo, former Prime Minister of Italy, the late, 752

Robichaud, Hon. Louis J., P.C.

Michaud, Hon. Herve J., the late, 965

National unity, statement by member of House of Commons, 341

Roblin, Hon. Duff, P.C., (Introduced in the Senate Apr.4/78)

Auto pact, Canada-United States, 893, 903-04

Canada Labour Code bill C-8, 606, 607, 609-10, 617, 623, 624, 634-5

Canadian Broadcasting Corporation

Political poll in Newfoundland, authority for and costs, 772, 927

Canadian National Railways Capital Revision and Railway bill C-17, 786-91, 816-17, 821, 896-8

Access to money markets, 896-7

Cancellation of certain shares, 786

Cancellation of debt, 786, 788, 896

Capital expenditures, 790

Crowsnest Pass freight rates, 789, 791, 897

Debt-equity ratio, 788-9, 897

Excerpts from speeches made in 1952 re CNR, 787

Hotel activities, 790, 791

Losses (1977), 898

Newfoundland transportation system losses, 789, 791, 897-8

Profitability prospect of railway, 788, 897

Transferring of passenger service from CNR to VIA, 789

Trucking industry, 790

Conflict of interest, question of privilege, 906-07

Letter to Clerk of Senate giving opinion of Law Clerk, 907

Criminal Code (language of accused) bill C-42, 958-9

Manitoba government support of bilingualism, 958-9

National unity aspect, 958

Farm Credit bill C-29, 648

Federal-provincial conferences, 798

Roblin, Hon. Duff, P.C.—*concl'd

Financial Administration bill C-10, 747-9

Comptroller General

Control of public purse, 747-8

Beauchesne's Fourth Edition, excerpt re, 748

Duties, description omitted from bill, 748-9

Lack of parliamentary jurisdiction, 749

Garrison Dam, North Dakota, 753-4, 765, 892, 904, 926-7

Grain, transportation of, committee to inquire into, 872, 904, 911-12

Income Tax (amdt to statute law and authorization for provincial sales tax reductions) bill C-56, 932-5, 938

Budget secrecy, 935

Provincial sales tax, 932-4, 939

Excerpt from speech of Manitoba finance minister, 934, 939

Federal-provincial cooperation, 932-3, 934, 935

Provincial jurisdiction, 939

Yorkton conference of western premiers, excerpt from statement re federal budget, 933-4

Justice Department

Libel action against Hon. Jean-Pierre Goyer, statement of Minister of Justice re, 719-20

Payment of costs by Department, precedents for, 719-20, 974-5

National finance, provincial sales tax

Statement issued by four western provinces, 795-6, 797

National revenue

Charitable organizations, directive on loss of status due to political activities, 720-1, 729

Postal Service Operations bill C-45, 683-4

Inability of postmasters general to solve strikes, 684

Strikes affecting the public sector, 683

Unofficial strike, danger of, 684

Question of privilege re statement by Senator Langlois on discussion of CNR bill, 816-17

Reform of Parliament, publication by government of recommendations re, 757

Rogers, Mr. Harry, Comptroller General of Canada, 726-7, 732-3, 745-6, 754, 763-4, 778*See* Financial Administration bill C-10, 719, 721-4, 734-41, 747-50, 758-62, 766-7, 772-3, 782-5, 786, 814, 826-31, 841-5, 848-53, 1029Rowe, Hon. Frederick William

Address in reply to Speech from the Throne, 44-46

British North America Act

Authority of Government of Canada to declare a project to be in the national interest, 45, 55

Compensation for Former Prisoners of War bill C-27, 426, 427

Evaders, 426

Newfoundland war casualties, 426

Corner Brook Mayor Dr. Noel Murphy, visitor to Senate, 143

Electoral Boundaries Readjustment bill C-412 (Humber-Port-au-Port-St. Barbe), 458-9

Energy needs and resources, 42-45, 55

BRINCO Agreement, 43-44

British and Canadian officials involved in Labrador project, 42-43

Newfoundland-Quebec negotiations and agreement, 43-44

Newfoundland resources, 45; federal government authority to declare national interest in, 55

Transportation of resources by potential tunnel project, 45-46

Extinction, by Hon. Frederick William Rowe, 61

Marriage Law Exemption (Lucien Roch Joseph Morin and Marie Rose Helene Morin) bill S-7, 308-09

Minutes of the Proceedings, correction re Bell Island, Nfld., 312

National unity, 46

Newfoundland, 46

Rowe, Hon. Frederick William—*concl'd

- Point of order re leave to debate motion to adjourn to discuss unemployment, 557
- Prince Edward Island, transportation rates, 63
- Retirement age policies, 163, 171-3
  - Definition of old age and aging people, 172
  - Senators, retirement age, 172
  - Terms of reference of proposed committee, 172-3
- Sports, Soccer, World Cup Games, CBC telecast of, 886
- Transportation costs, 62
- USSR tank force and defence spending, 141

Royal assent, 264, 273, 301, 511-12, 604, 712-13, 1029

- Laskin, Rt. Hon. Bora, Chief Justice of Canada, 301
- Martland, Hon. Ronald, Puisne Judge of the Supreme Court of Canada, 1048
- Pigeon, Hon. Louis-Philippe, Puisne Judge of the Supreme Court of Canada, 511-12
- Spence, Hon. Wishart F., Puisne Judge of the Supreme Court of Canada, 264, 273, 604, 712-13, 1029

Royal Canadian Legion

- Community programs of Legion, 464, 479-80
- Consultation with Dominion Command re amdt, 465, 481
- Dominion and Provincial Commands and branches, 464, 482
- Members, associate, 481
- Membership, 463-4, 482
- Purposes and objects of Legion*, excerpt from Statutes of Canada, 480

Speakers: Senators

- Bonnell, Lorne, 537-8
- Connolly, John J., 448, 463-5, 481-2, 538
- Macdonald, John M., 479-81
- Smith, George I., 465

Royal Canadian Legion bill S-10. 1r, 448; 2r, 463-5; 479-82; ref to com, 482; rep with amdt, 537-8; 3r, 538; message from Commons that bill has been passed without amdt, 581; r.a., 604*Royal Commissions

- Concentration of Corporate Power, question re report on takeover bid by Power Corporation of Canada Ltd. of Argus Corporation Ltd., 54, 153, 246, 453-4
- Newfoundland Transportation, Sullivan Commission on, 925, 1022

Rules and Orders, Standing Senate Committee

- Members, 39

Rules of the Senate

- Cases not provided for in Rules of the Senate, 414, 418-19
- Committee membership changes, recommendation that provision for be incorporated into Rules, 40
- Contravention in establishment of special committee, question of, 377, 386-7, 388-9, 390-1, 393-4, 397, 398
- Italicized items defining expenditure of public funds with which Senate has no power to deal, 517-18
  - Bourinot's Parliamentary Procedure, excerpt re, 518
  - House of Lords, excerpt from memorandum from Clerk of the Table, 518
- Motion for amdt on 3r of bill, precedents referred to in Senate Rules, 829
- Motions for which no notice is required, 557-62
- Motion to adjourn, point of order that leave not given, 557
- Motion to adjourn to discuss strike of beef producers in Saskatchewan and Manitoba, 400-21; withdrawn, 421
- Substantive motion, 417

Rules of the Senate—*concl'd

- Motion to adjourn under Rule 46(G) to consider matter of urgent public importance, 556-62; neg, 562
- Motion to revert to m for 3r, 889
- Motion which is debatable, lack of rule re, 416
- Motion with leave of the Senate, 414
- Oral and written questions, 200-01
- Point of order re Bill C-29 and com report on subject matter, 596
- Point of order re discussion on beef industry, 415, 416
- Point of order re motion in amdt on 3r of bill, 829, 835-6
  - Motion ruled inadmissible, excerpts from May's Nineteenth Edition and Beauchesne's Fourth Edition re, 835-6
- Point of order re procedure after motion has been put, 596
- Point of order re question and answer out of order, 367
- Revised edition (1976-77), 6-7
- Rule 46(G), question re clarification of, 582-3
- Suspension of Rule 93 re Bell Canada bill C-1001, 576-7

Rulings and statements of Speaker

- Motion for amdt on 3r of bill, precedents referred to in Senate Rules, 829
- Motions for which no notice is required (motion to adjourn to discuss unemployment), 562
- Question of privilege to allow senator to speak on 3r, 888, 889

Saccharin

- Lack of evidence of cancer link, 67-69
  - Ames test, excerpt from Science Journal, 67
  - "Bladder Cancer and Saccharin", article in The Lancet, 68-69
- Letter to Chairman of Committee on Health, Welfare and Science, 67-68
- Letters from and articles by prominent researchers, 68-69
- World Health Organization report, 68

St. Andrew's Day, 195*Safe containers convention

- Accident or incident involving container, 222
- Action in Canadian courts by non-Canadian commercial interest, 222-3
- Costs assumed by container owners, 221-2
- Dangerous goods and bulk liquids, 221
- Governor in Council authority, 239
- Inspections, 240
- Inter-Governmental Maritime Consultative Organization, statement from, 331
- International Convention for Safe Containers, 221, 323, 332-3
  - Proces verbal of rectification, 332-3
- International food containers, 221
- Interprovincial and intraprovincial trade, 222
- Parliamentary approval, lack of, 239
- Time allotted for disposition of motion, 239-40
- Speakers: Senators
  - Connolly, John J., 222
  - Greene, John J., 222-3
  - Petten, William J., 221-2, 249-50
  - Smith, George I., 239-40

Safe Containers Convention bill S-4. 1r, 200; 2r, 221-3, 239-41, 249-50; ref to com, 250; rep with amdts, 323, 335; 3r, 343*Samoa

- Development Dean of University of Samoa, Hon. Tagaloa Leota Pita, visitor to Senate, 724

Saskatchewan

- Court of Queen's Bench vacancies, 27
- Lieutenant Governor Hon. George Porteous (deceased Feb. 7/78)
  - Tributes, 307
  - Visit to Senate, 292
- Lieutenant Governor Hon. Irwin McIntosh and Mrs. McIntosh, visitors to Senate, 687
- Supreme Court of Canada judgment re Saskatchewan legislation, 170-1, 175-6

Science policy

- Agriculture research, 137
- Canadian technological gap, 135, 192, 197
- Government reaction to committee proposals, 134, 135
- Granting councils, 136, 192
- Implementation of proposals, 136
- Make-or-buy policy, support to industry and universities, 136
- Minister of State for Science and Technology (MOSST), 134-7
- National and government research, lack of improvement in, 135
- Recommendations in Vol. 4 of report, 136-7
- Research and development, 164-7, 191-2, 197-8
  - Canadian companies vs US companies, 164
  - Industrial sector weaknesses, 192, 197
  - National Research Council, 197
- Report prepared by Mr. Gordon Sharwood for Industry, Trade and Commerce Dept., 165-6
  - Defence Industry Productivity Program, 165-6
  - Canadair, 165-6
  - De Havilland Dash 7, 165-6
  - Grants to large firms, 165
  - PAIT, DIP, IRDIA, AGMAP, 165
- Statements of MPs and others, 197-8

Speakers: Senators

- Bell, Ann Elizabeth, 196-8
- Desruisseaux, Paul, 191-2
- Godfrey, John M., 164-7
- Grosart, Allister, 242, 438-40
- Lamontagne, Maurice, 134-7

Science Policy, Special Senate Committee

- Expenses, 94
- Reports
  - Science Policy for Canada, Vol. 4, Progress and Unfinished Business*, 25, 134-7, 164-7, 191-2, 196-8, 438-41

Security and Co-operation in Europe, Conference on, 328-30, 498-501, 526-30, 541-2

- Economics, science, technology and the environment, 329, 499
- Austria, development of inland waterway system, 329
- Brezhnev proposal re energy, transportation and environment, 329
- Excerpt from statement by Hon. Norman Cafik, 500
- Final Act of Helsinki Agreement, 328-30, 498-500, 526-30, 542
  - Canadian Parliamentary Helsinki Group, 529
  - Free flow of information and people, 529
  - Legal boundaries, 329-30
  - NATO role, 529-30
  - Soviet Political Agreements and Results*, 528; conclusion of Chairman of study (1964), 528
- Occupation by USSR of adjacent democracies, 529
- Rejection of Canada's offer re reunification of families and acceptance of dissidents as immigrants, 528
- Soviet submission, agreed upon without reference to human rights, 527, 528
- Soviet treaty violations, 528
- Statement of Minister of State for Multiculturalism, 527, 528
- Status of Estonia, Lithuania, Latvia and the Ukraine, 330
- Veto of proposals applied by Soviet-bloc countries, 527

Security and Co-operation in Europe, Conference on—concl'd

- Final Act of Helsinki Agreement—concl'd
  - Violation of fundamental human rights and harassment of dissidents, 527, 528-9
  - Appeal by Andrei Sakharov, 529
- USSR buildup of military force, 529
- Human rights and fundamental freedoms
  - Canada's participation, 329, 499, 542
  - Briefs presented by Eastern European groups, 499
  - Commitment re non-recognition of territorial status quo in Europe, 542
  - Family reunification, 329
  - Multiculturalism, 542
  - Senate role, 542
  - Signatory to International Convention of Human Rights, 542
- Military and political matters, 329
- Compulsory notification of intended manoeuvres, 329
- Yugoslavia, 328
  - Unemployment, 328; right to work, 328

Speakers: Senators

- Bosa, Peter, 328-30
- Grosart, Allister, 329, 330
- Haidasz, Stanley, 541-2
- Marchand, Jean, 501
- McDonald, A. Hamilton, 330
- Thompson, Andrew E., 329, 498-500
- Yuzyk, Paul, 526-30

Selection Committee

- Appointments, 5
- Members, 5
- Recommendation that provision for committee membership changes be incorporated into Rules, 40
- Reports
  - Constitution of Canada, Special Joint Committee, members, 994
  - Constitution of Canada, Special Senate Committee, members, 972, 1022
  - National Capital Region, Special Joint Committee, members, 271
  - Northern Gas Pipeline, Special Senate Committee, members, 432
  - Northern Pipeline, Special Senate Committee, members, 824
  - Retirement Age Policies, Special Senate Committee, members, 235, 255
  - Standing Committees, members, 39-40; report as amended adopted, 64

Senate

- Adjournments
  - Christmas, 273
  - Easter, 507
  - Summer, 1028
- Appointments
  - Cabinet ministers, 539, 731
  - Prerogative of Prime Minister, 278
- Business, 13, 54, 86-87, 88, 143-4, 169, 196, 247-9, 257-8, 295, 339, 457, 507-08, 538, 631, 654, 715, 743, 792, 841, 860-1, 900-02, 952-3, 973, 991-4, 1027-8
- CBC Sunday Morning program, references to Senate, 1038-40
- Committee rep on Air Canada bill, Commons members comments re, 285
- Committee work, 21
- Conference on Alternatives Canada, 691-7, 702-08
- Conflict between committee meetings and Senate sitting, 952
- Delay in sitting because of Budget Speech, 543
- Heating of offices, 6, 151-2, 227

Senate—concl'd

Legislative program

Question re general election and passage of Postal Services Operations bill, 768-9, 777-8

Mackasey, Hon. Bryce, newspaper report of remarks re appointments to Senate, 803

Misleading use of picture of Senate chamber on commercial publication, 768

Political parties representation, 60, 138

Privileges and immunities of senators, 176

Reform, 80, 55, 60

Alleged statements of Senate government leader, press report of, 276-8

Appointment of cabinet ministers, 731

Excerpt from 1973 speech of Hon. Leopold Langlois, 89-90

House of Provinces, recommendations re, 693-6

Appointments to, 693

Power to review and set aside orders in council, 693, 694

Provincial premiers as ex officio members, 693

Law Clerk's office, 696

Leader of the Government in the Senate and cabinet representation, 696

Newspaper report of Progressive Conservative Party proposals, 700

Nova Scotia Legislature proposals, 757, 799

Opposition representation, 695-6; western Canada, 696

Provincial participation in appointments, motion re, 694

Research facilities, 696

Secretarial services, 696

Work of the Senate, 695

Amdts to bills, 695

Senate vs Commons, 695

Regional representation, official capacities of appointees, 158-9, 169-70, 276-8

Role of, 9, 12, 542; examination of matters of national interest and subject matter of bills, 21, 127, 134-7, 164-7, 191-2, 196-8, 250-1, 253-4, 258-60, 374, 401, 402, 438-41

Shields of Arms of Yukon and Northwest Territories, omitted from doors of Senate Chamber, 220

Star Phoenix article 'Lang says Senate should be abolished', 293

Vacancies, 299-301, 498

Official opposition, depletion of seats, 300

'Order of demerit', 299-300

Provincial statistics, 299-300

See Alternatives Canada Conference, 552, 653-4, 691-7, 702-08

Senators, deceased

Ewasew, Hon. John (Mar. 26/78), 514-15

Michaud, Hon. Herve (June 5/78), 832-4, 848, 965

Senators, declaration of qualification

Anderson, Hon. Margaret Jean, 513

Bird, Hon. Florence Bayard, 513

Guay, Hon. Joseph-Philippe, P.C., 513

Haidasz, Hon. Stanley, P.C., 513

Lewis, Hon. Philip Derek, 513

Marshall, Hon. Jack, 513

Roblin, Hon. Duff, P.C., 513

Wagner, Hon. Joseph Napoleon Claude, 714

Senators, new

Anderson, Hon. Margaret Jean (Apr. 4/78), 513

Bird, Hon. Florence Bayard (Apr. 4/78), 513

Guay, Hon. Joseph-Philippe, P.C. (Apr. 4/78), 513

Haidasz, Hon. Stanley, P.C. (Apr. 4/78), 513

Lewis, Hon. Philip Derek (Apr. 4/78), 513

Senators, new—concl'd

Marshall, Hon. Jack (Apr. 4/78), 513

Roblin, Hon. Duff, P.C. (Apr. 4/78), 513

Wagner, Hon. Joseph Napoleon Claude (Apr. 25/78), 714

Senators, resignations

Côté, Hon. Jean-Pierre, P.C. (Apr. 20/78)

Appointment as Lieutenant Governor of Quebec, 714-15

Tributes, 714-15

Duggan, Hon. James (Feb. 28/78)

Tributes, 513-14

Haig, Hon. J. Campbell (Dec. 29/77)

Tributes, 243-4

Separatism

Alleged remarks by Prime Minister re reaction to provincial retail sales tax reductions, 662-3

Newspaper report of remarks of Senator Denis, 804

Sharwood, Gordon

Report prepared for Industry, Trade and Commerce Dept. on industrial support programs, 165-6

Defence Industry Productivity Program, 165-6

Canadair, 165-6

De Havilland Dash 7, 165-6

Grants to large firms, 165

R & D deficiencies, 166

Small businesses

See Income Tax and Excise Tax bill C-59, 924-5, 948-9, 1021, 1025-7, 1029

Small Loans Act

'Loan', definition of, 348, 364

Loans made on or after Jan. 1/56, 348

See Statute Law amendment proposals, 293, 295, 347-8, 363-5, 276

Smith, Hon. George Isaac

Address in reply to Speech from the Throne, 55-60

Air Canada bill C-3, 122-5, 256-7, 261-3

Amdts by committee, 256-7, 261-3

Board of directors, 123-4, 125

Business principles, 124

Capacities and activities of corporation, 122-3, 124, 261-2

Directives of Governor in Council, 123-5, 262

Shares or debt obligations, 124

Order of Governor in Council, publication in Canada Gazette, 263

Reports, referral to any Committee of Parliament, 262-3

Shares held by CNR, cancellation of, 122

Air Canada, threatened strike by pilots, 893, 906

Beef industry, strike of producers in Saskatchewan and Manitoba, 414-15

Canada Labour Code bill C-8, 614, 615, 618-20, 621, 622, 623, 625, 626, 627

Canadian Broadcasting Corporation

Documentary program The Fifth Estate, 175

Canadian National Railways Capital Revision and Railway bill C-17, 805-10, 888-9, 880-1

Accounts, scrutiny by Parliament, 891

Atlantic provinces transportation system, 890

Halifax development assistance from CNR, 808-09

Cancellation of debt, 808

Communications, 890-1

Debt-equity ratio, 806

National unity, role of CNR, 808

Pension plan, 806-07

Smith, Hon. George Isaac—cont'd

- Canadian National Railways Capital Revision and Railway bill—concl'd
  - Precedents of government assistance to CNR, 806
  - Subsidies, 891
  - Trucking industry, 807, 808, 809-10, 890
  - Subsidizing of CNR trucks, 810
  - User pay policy, 807-08
  - Winnipeg Tribune* article re CNR recapitalization, 806
- Capital punishment, statement attributed to Government Leader in the Senate, 727, 728
- Comptroller General of Canada
  - Status of Mr. Harry Rogers, 732, 733
  - Treasury Board publications, literary licence, 793
- Constitution of Canada
  - Renewal of the Canadian Federation, 884, 894, 895
  - Supreme Court of Canada judgment re Saskatchewan legislation, 176
- Constitution of Canada, Special Joint Committee, 982-3
- Criminal Code, amending of, 57
- Duke of Edinburgh's Award, 182-4
- Economic conditions, 55, 57-58, 60
  - Dollar devaluation, 57-58, 60
  - Factors related to government mismanagement, 59
  - Unemployment, 55, 58-59
- Electoral Boundaries Readjustment bill C-412 (Humber-Port-au-Port-St. Barbe), 458-60
- Estimates
  - Federal Spending Plans 1978-79*, 555, 556, 583-4, 848
  - How Your Tax Dollar is Spent*, 583-4, 848
- Export Development bill C-36, 987
  - Bell Canada and Saudi Arabia contract, 987
- Federal election results, 56
- Financial Administration bill C-10, 758-62, 829, 842-5
  - Comptroller General
    - Auditor General's report (1976), excerpt from, 758-9, 762
    - Deputy Minister title questioned, 842-3
  - Duties
    - Description omitted from bill, 760-1
    - Lack of parliamentary jurisdiction, 759-60
    - Remarks of Auditor General, 761, 762
    - Statutory enumeration of, 844
    - Vs* duties of Auditor General, 843
- Statement from Senator Forsey (read by Senator Smith) re m in amdt, 835-6
- Treasury Board President's remarks re recommendation of Auditor General, 759
- Income Tax (amdt to statute law and authorization of payments re provincial sales tax) bill C-56, 969-70
  - Provincial sales tax reductions, federal-provincial consultation, 970, see also 780, 788, 799
- Indian Affairs
  - National Indian Brotherhood
    - Cutback in funds available for Brotherhood, 766, 838
    - Joint committee of government and Brotherhood, existence of, 766, 837
- Miscellaneous Statute Law Amendment bill C-41, 580, 584
- National revenue
  - Charitable organizations, directive on loss of status due to political activities, 721, 731
  - Dumping duty on wide-flange steel beams, 950, 951
  - Information Circular re Registered Charities, 721, 731, 744
  - Information services, Communiqué—Revenue Canada, Customs and Excise, 814-15
  - Quebec income taxpayers, 781
- Northern Pipeline bill C-25, 522, 532, 533-5, 565, 567, 569-70, 571

Smith, Hon. George Isaac—concl'd

- Northern Pipeline bill C-25—concl'd
  - Administrative arrangements, 534
  - Canadian potential for benefit, 533
  - Estimate of man-days employment, 533
  - Certificates of public convenience and necessity, 534
  - Continuing committee on pipeline, proposal of Deputy Prime Minister, 534-5
  - Senate participation in, 534-5
  - Independent inquiry, question of, 569
  - Native land claims, 534, 565
  - Yukon and British Columbia, impact on lifestyle of, 534
- Petroleum Administration and Energy Supplies Emergency bill C-19, 668, 687-9
- Royal Canadian Legion bill S-10, 465
- Rules of the Senate
  - Amendments to, 7
  - Cases not provided for in Rules of the Senate, 414, 418-19
  - Motion for which no notice is required, 559, 561
    - Commons rule cited, 561
  - Motion to adjourn to discuss matter of urgent public importance, 415, 419, 420
  - Motion with leave of the Senate, 414
  - Procedure in unprovided cases, 559
- Safe Containers Convention bill S-4, 239-40
  - Governor in Council authority, 239
  - Inspections, 240
  - Parliamentary approval, lack of, 239
  - Time limit for disposition of motion, 239-40
- Senate
  - Business, 248-9, 952, 992-3
  - Conflict between committee meeting and Senate sitting, 952
  - Privileges and immunities of senators, 176
  - Reform, 55, 60
    - Proposals adopted by Nova Scotia Legislature, 757
  - Regional representation, 159
- Transport and Communications Committee
  - Attendance of Minister of Fisheries and the Environment at meeting, 386
- Reports
  - Air Canada bill C-3, rep with amdts, 256-7, 261-3
  - Canadian National Railways Capital Revision and Railways bill C-17, rep without amdt but with observations, 874
  - Fishing and Recreational Harbours bill C-2, rep without amdt but with recommendations, 630-1
  - Terms of reference, 133
- Unemployment insurance, reported overpayment of, 755, 756, 779, 780

Solar energy

- Observation of SUN-DAY, 734

South Africa and other nations, government-sponsored commercially-supported activities of Canada, phasing out of, 271-2, 278Spain

- Income Tax Conventions bill S-9, 358, 368-70, 377-80, 392, 421

Sparrow, Hon. Herbert O.

- Canada Labour Code bill C-8, 599, 600, 602, 639-40

Speaker*Pro tem

- Bourget, Hon. Maurice, 448
- Deschatelets, Hon. Jean-Paul, 310, 880, 892
- Macdonald, Hon. John M., 347
- See* Lapointe, Hon. Renaude, Speaker of the Senate

Speech from the Throne by Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth II, 1-4

- Consideration, commencement of, 7; termination of debate, 8
- Opening of Third Session of Thirtieth Parliament, 1-4
- See Address in reply to Speech from the Throne

Spence, Hon. Wishart F., O.B.E., Puisne Judge of the Supreme Court of Canada

- Royal assent, 264, 273, 604, 712-13, 1029

Sports

- CBC telecast of Pearson Cup baseball game, 847-8, 876
- Duke of Edinburgh's Award, 182-4
- Grey Cup, congratulations to Montreal Alouettes, 174
- Hockey, International
  - Report of Committee on International Hockey to the Minister of State (Fitness and Amateur Sport), 381-5, 429-31
- Hockey star Gordie Howe, tribute, 220
- Soccer, World Cup Games, CBC telecast of, 885-6

Stanbury, Hon. Richard J.

- Canadian Centre for Occupational Health and Safety bill C-35, 674-5, 691
  - Governing council, 674
  - Integrated information system for occupational health and safety, 674
  - Self-governing centre, 674
  - Statistics on injury, illness and death, ineffectiveness of regulations on, 674
- Constitution of Canada, Special Senate Committee
  - Reports
    - Interim report, 1038
    - Quorum, 1029
    - Reconstitution of Committee, 1038
- Export Development bill C-36, 985-7, 990-1
  - Authorized capital, 986
  - Bell Canada and Saudi Arabia contract, 986, 987, 990
  - Bid bonds and performance guarantees, 986
  - Government account for loans and guarantees, 986
  - Insurance ceiling, 986
  - Liability under contracts, guarantees, etc. outstanding, 987
  - Limit of liability, 986, 987
  - Provisions of export support programs, 986
  - Pulp and paper industry, 991
- Human rights
  - Nomination of Helsinki Monitoring Groups in USSR for 1978 Nobel Peace Prize, motion re, 1021-2, agreed, 1022

Stanfield, Mary, the late, wife of Hon. Robert Stanfield, P.C., 71*Statute law amendments

- Income Tax bill C-11, 235, 250-5, 258-61, 264
- Income Tax bill C-56, 900, 913-21, 927-40, 942-6, 947

Statute law amendment proposals

- Rep with recommendation for amdts, 347-8, 363-5, 376
  - Canadian Human Rights Act
    - Appropriate Minister, definition of, 347, 364
  - Citizenship Act
    - Persons convicted of offence, waiting period for granting of citizenship, 347-8, 364
  - Referral of amendment proposals to Senate committee before introduction of bill in Commons, 364; clarification of statement, 376
- Small Loans Act
  - 'Loan', definition of, 348, 364
  - Loans made on or after Jan. 1/56, 348

Statute law amendment proposals—concl'd*Tax Review Board Act

- Members of Board, eligibility for holding of office, 348
- See Miscellaneous Statute Law Amendment bill C-41, 543, 579-80, 584-5, 604

Speakers: Senators

- Flynn, Jacques, 364, 365
- Forsey, Eugene, A., 364-5
- Goldenberg, Carl, 347-8, 363-4, 365, 376
- Grosart, Allister, 364
- Perrault, Raymond J., 293, 295, 364

Steuart, Hon. David Gordon

- Beef industry, strike of producers in Saskatchewan and Manitoba, 403-04
- Canada Labour Code bill C-8, 578-9, 594, 596, 597, 598, 599, 601
  - Averaging provision, 579; western grain elevator systems, 579
  - Canadian Trucking Assoc. objection re retroactive application to imposition of first agreement, 579
  - Ministerial powers to cancel permits, 578
  - Permits for lengthening of work week, 578
  - Violation of Code, 578
- Constitution of Canada
  - Supreme Court of Canada judgment re Saskatchewan legislation, 170
- Income Tax (amdt to statute law and authorization for provincial sales tax reductions), bill C-56 920-1, 927-8
  - Discrimination in various provinces, 928
  - Provincial jurisdiction for sales tax, 928
  - Quebec, 920, 927
  - Western provinces, 928; Alberta, 928
- Northern Pipeline bill C-25, 567
  - Native land claims, 567

Student loans, newspaper article re non-repayment of, 663*Sullivan, Hon. Joseph A.

- Address in reply to Speech from the Throne, 66-70
- National unity, 67
- Saccharin, lack of evidence of cancer link, 67-69
  - Ames test, excerpt from Science Journal, 67
  - "Bladder Cancer and Saccharin", article in The Lancet, 68-69
  - Letter to Chairman of Committee on Health, Welfare and Science, 67-68
  - Letters from and articles by prominent researchers, 68-69
  - World Health Organization report, 68

Tax rebate discounting

- Determination of consideration paid, 673-4, 710-11
- Disclosure of information and documents, 672-73
- Discounters method of operation, 669-70
- Discount rate as an annual rate, 671
- Documentation required, 672
- Exploiting of low-income groups by discounters, 711, 712
- Introduction of bill by official opposition, 711
- Limitation of discounters fee, 669, 671, 672, 673
- Loan-sharking, 672, 673
- Return of tax, 669, 672
- Students and part-time employees tax, 669, 670

Speakers: Senators

- Forsey, Eugene A., 673, 712
- Grosart, Allister, 670-2, 673, 708, 709, 710-11, 712
- Guay, Joseph Philippe, 709, 710
- Hayden, Salter A., 668-70, 672-4, 699-700
- Macnaughton, Alan A., 699-700, 708-09
- McIlraith, George, 710-11
- Perrault, Raymond J., 711, 712

Tax Rebate Discounting bill C-46. 1r, 662; 2r, 668-74; ref to com, 674; rep without amdt but with observations, 699-700; 3r, 708-12; r.a., 713

Tax Review Board Act

Members of Board, eligibility for holding of office, 348
See Statute Law amendment proposals, 293, 295, 347-8, 363-5, 376

Thompson, Hon. Andrew E.

Address in reply to Speech from the Throne, 83
Baltic States, occupation by Soviet Union, 376
Estonia, sixtieth anniversary of Proclamation of Independence, 368
Italian community in Canada, 83
National Congress of Italian-Canadians, 83
Prejudices in media, 83
Nuclear weapons, 181
Security and Co-operation in Europe, Conference on, 329, 498-500
Economic and related proposals on science and technology, 499
Excerpt from statement by Hon. Norman Cafik, 500
Helsinki Agreement, 329, 498-500
Final Act approval, 499-500
Legal boundaries, 329
Human rights and fundamental freedoms, 499
Briefs presented by eastern European groups, 499
Proposals co-sponsored by Canada, 499
Yugoslavian hospitality, 500

Trade

Beef industry, import and export policy, 14, 17, 407
British preferential tariff, withdrawal of on certain imports from UK and Ireland, 1001-02
Free trade, 79
GATT negotiations, 16-17, 19, 47, 49, 50, 110-11, 1002
Textiles and textile products, Memoranda of Understanding relating to export of, 906; tabled, 923
See Customs Tariff bill C-48, 1001-03, 1029

Transfer of offenders

Application for and agreement to transfer, 496, 497
Canadians held without trial, 498
Canadians imprisoned in US and Mexico, and Americans imprisoned in Canada, 496, 497
Conviction and sentence abroad, effect of transfer on, 495, 497
Designation of authority to deal with application, 498
Entitlement to counsel in foreign country, 496
Juveniles, 496
Parole, 495-6
Provincial responsibility for custody, 495
Recommendation of Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee, 495
Revocation of parole or issue of pardon by foreign authority, 496-7
Serving of remaining time in federal penitentiary, 496

Speakers: Senators

Denis, Azellus, 497
Goldenberg, Carl, 495-6, 497, 498
Macdonald, John M., 496-7, 498

Transfer of Offenders bill C-21. 1r, 471; 2r, 495-8; 3r, 511; r.a., 511

Transport and Communications, Standing Senate Committee

Attendance of Minister of Fisheries and the Environment at meeting, 386
Meetings during Senate sittings, 437, 581-2, 825, 837, 860
Members, 39
Reports
Air Canada bill C-3, rep with amdts, 256-7, 261-3

Transport and Communications, Standing Senate Committee —concl'd

Reports—concl'd
Canadian National Railways Capital Revision and Railways bill C-17, rep without amdt but with observations, 874
Fishing and Recreational Harbours bill C-2, rep without amdt but with recommendations, 630-1
Safe Containers Convention bill S-4, rep with amdts, 323, 335
Terms of reference, 133

Transport Department

Movement of employees from Saint John, N.B. to Halifax, 805, 892

Transportation

Air Canada, threatened strike by pilots, 893, 905, 975
Aircraft crash at Cranbrook, B.C., 325, 335, 359
Charter airlines within Canada, newspaper reports re air fares, 457-8, 546
Domestic air charter flights, rights of Air Canada, C.P. Air and Wardair, 220-1, 312
Fares increase, 62-63
Flight scheduling of airlines, 72-73
Mirabel Airport, strike of blue-collar workers, 249
Motor vehicle accidents, statistics, 64
Passenger facilities at Whitehorse and Watson Lake airports, 258, 279-80
Prince Edward Island, 62

Tributes

Côté, Hon. Jean-Pierre, P.C., appointment as Lieutenant Governor of Quebec, 714-15
Duggan, Hon. James, resignation from the Senate, 513-14
Haig, Hon. J. Campbell, resignation from the Senate, 243-4
Hockey star Gordie Howe, 220
Michaud, Hon. Herve, the late, 832-4, 848
Montreal Alouettes, 174
Moro, Hon. Aldo, former Prime Minister of Italy, the late, 751-2
Porteous, Hon. George, Lieutenant Governor of Saskatchewan, the late, 307
Stanfield, Mary, the late, wife of Hon. Robert Stanfield, P.C., 71

Turks and Caicos Islands

Minister of Tourism and Development of Industries and Resources and Vice-Chairman of the People's Democratic Movement, visitors to Senate, 339

Unemployment, 12, 30, 31, 36-37, 41-42, 58-59, 61-62, 78, 83, 99-100, 114-15, 274, 280-4, 286-91, 293-5, 301, 755-6, 779-80

Employment Tax Credit Program, 274, 280-4, 286-91, 293-5, 301
Job creation, 37, 42, 78, 100
Lack of work incentives, 62
Senior citizens, 61
Unemployment insurance, 114-15
Overpayment of, 755-6, 779-80
Young Canada Works Program, additional funding for, 885

Union of Soviet Socialist Republics

Defence expenditures, 139, 140-1
Gander Airport, USSR use of, 974
Great October Bolshevik Revolution, sixtieth anniversary, 95
Occupation of Baltic countries by Soviet Union, 376, 377
Soviet nationals in Canada, violation of Official Secrets Act, 312
Statement by Secretary of State for External Affairs, 319-21
Violation of human rights, resolution by North Atlantic Assembly, 217

United Kingdom

- Duke of Edinburgh's Award, 182-4
- Speech from the Throne by Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth II, 1-4
- Message from the Queen, 655

United Nations, 80

- Canada's role and influence as a bilingual country, 80-81
- Canadian Ambassador, 80
- Middle East
  - Observation of ceasefire and participation of Canadian authorities in decisions, 539, 548
  - Peacekeeping force in southern Lebanon, participation of Canadian forces in, 476, 479, 516-17, 525, 548, 728, 746-7
- Security Council, 80

United States

- Canada-United States relations, Vol.II of report of Foreign Relations Committee, 880
- Canada-United States Inter-Parliamentary Group, New Orleans meeting, 716-18, see appendix of Apr. 20/78
- Coal supplies to Canada, 207, 218
- Fisheries interim agreement, Canada-United States, 769, 779, 885, 892
- Garrison Dam, negotiations between Canada and United States, 753-4, 765, 892, 904
- Human rights policy and support by President Carter, 216
- Reciprocal agreements between Canada and United States re tax exemptions on donations to charitable institutions, 754, 766, 770, 794; donations to universities, 766

Urban affairs

- Home insulation program, 1023-4
- Applications received, approved or rejected, 1023
- Location of offices, 1024

van Roggen, Hon. George C.

- Air Canada bill C-3, 147
- Capacities and activities of corporation, 147
- Alaska Highway pipeline, pipe specifications, 134, 151
- Beef industry, 18
- Constitution of Canada, renewal of the Canadian Federation, 883
- Economy, exchange rate of Canadian dollar, 371-2, 375
- Free floating exchange rate, 371
- Trade advantages, 371-2
- Foreign Affairs Committee
  - Canada-United States relations, authority to make study of, 87; authority to publish and distribute Vol.II of report, 880
- Inter-Parliamentary Union, Bulgaria meeting, 215
- Universal Declaration of Human Rights, 215; Canadian policy re, 215
- Marriage Law Exemption bill S-5 (James Richard Borden and Judy Ann Borden), 305
- Northern Pipeline bill C-25, 565-6
- Native land claims, 565-6
- Retirement age policies, 211
- Senate regional representation, 159
- Trade policies, 80

Veterans

- See* War veterans

Visitors

- Baltic Honorary Consuls, 376
- British Columbia Parliamentary Interns, 399
- Canadian Labour Congress officials, 632
- China, People's Republic of, delegation from National Congress, 951-2, 960

Visitors—*concl'd

- Club Optimiste, Laval, Quebec, 159
- Germany, President of Senate and party, and Ambassador of Federal Republic of Germany, 221
- Les Dames Helene de Champlain, Ottawa Region, 482
- Newfoundland, Mayor of Corner Brook, Dr. Noel Murphy, 143
- Rankin Inlet Hamlet Council members, Peter Tatty and Melinda Tatty, 368
- Regional Parliamentary Seminar, visitors from Caribbean and provinces of Canada, 86
- Samoa, Hon. Tagaloa Leota Pita, 724
- Saskatchewan Lieutenant Governor Hon. George Porteous and Mrs. Porteous, 292
- Saskatchewan Lieutenant Governor Hon. Irwin McIntosh and Mrs. McIntosh, 687
- Turks and Caicos Islands diplomats, 339

Votes

- Canada Labour Code bill C-8, 595, 644-5
- Financial Administration bill C-10, 853
- Northern Pipeline bill C-25, 567-8
- Postal Service Operations bill C-45, 701

Wagner, Hon. Joseph Napoleon Claude (Introduced in the Senate Apr. 25/78)

- Constitution of Canada, 920
- Criminal Code (language of accused) bill C-42, 956-8
  - Application for trial in official language of accused, 957
  - Change of venue, 957
- Consultation between federal and provincial authorities and federal Justice Minister, 957
- Implementation of bilingual system in various provinces, 956-7
- National unity aspect, 957-8
- New Brunswick, 959
- Ontario, 956
- Provincial jurisdiction in administration of justice, 957
- Statement of Justice Minister in Commons Committee meeting, 957
- Economic Council of Canada
  - Bilateral aid program, policy re, 950
  - CIDA, 950
- Economic planning, federal-provincial conferences, 919
- Foreign affairs
  - Kolwezi massacre in Zaire, involvement of Canadians and diplomatic discussions re action against guerrillas, 815
  - United Nations peacekeeping force, participation of Canada in defence of southern Lebanon, 728, 747
- Income Tax (amdt to statute law and authorization of payments re provincial sales tax) bill C-56, 918
- Minority rights, 919-20
- National unity
  - Toronto Baseball Club, question of congratulations to, 803

Walker, Hon. David J., P.C.

- Constitution of Canada, renewal of the Canadian Federation, 884
- Government
  - Separatism, economy and inflation, inability to deal with, 797
- Income tax, 247
- Petroleum Administration and Energy Supplies Emergency bill C-19, 667, 668
- Sun Oil, 667

War veterans

- Alleged discrimination in pension rights of widows, 772
- Compensation for Former Prisoners of War bill C-27, 392, 424-9, 456, 476-7, 511
- Husband and wife veterans, eligibility for casual earnings as single persons, 862
- Meals at Sunnybrook Hospital, 814, 838-41
- Pension rights, 745
- Royal Canadian Legion bill S-10, 448, 463-5, 479-82, 537-8, 581, 604
- Thirty-fourth anniversary of D-Day, 834-5

West coast oil ports

- Committee of Inquiry chaired by Dr. Andrew Thompson, 144, 152

Western grain stabilization fund payments, 159, 303, 314, 458, 516, 546Whaling, International Agreement on, 201, 235-6Whips

- Chief Government Whip in the Senate, Hon. William J. Petten
- Chief Opposition Whip in the Senate, Hon. John M. Macdonald

White Papers

- Australia, relations between manufacturers and state, 111
- Constitution of Canada, 777, 880, 881-5

Williams, Hon. Guy

- British Columbia, bicentennial of visit of Captain James Cook, 438
- Constitution of Canada, renewal of the Canadian Federation, 884
- Fishing and Recreational Harbours bill C-2, 363
- Northern Pipeline bill C-25, 567

Women, status of

- International Women's Day, 422
- Excerpt from letter from David MacDonald, M.P., to Hon. Marc Lalonde re women in the Public Service, 422
- Indian women, denial of rights, 422

World War II

- Thirty-fourth anniversary of D-Day, 834
- Tributes on Remembrance Day to Canada's War Dead, 116

Yukon Territory

- Alaska Highway pipeline, planning and coordinating authority, Yukon involvement in, 13, 25-26, 40
- Canada Elections, Election Expenses, Northwest Territories bill C-33, 471, 484-5, 494-5, 511
- Omission of name of Yukon Territory senator from Canada Year Book, 494
- Passenger facilities at Whitehorse and Watson Lake airports, 258, 279-80
- Shield of Arms of Yukon Territory, omission from Senate Chamber doors, 220

Yuzyk, Hon. Paul*Baltic States

- Honorary Consuls, visitors to Senate, 376
- Occupation by Soviet Union, 376

Beef industry, 74-76

- Excerpt from speech of Alberta Agriculture Minister re committee report, 75
- Imports, quotas and price controls, 74-76
- Losses of producers, 74-75
- Press comments on committee report, 75
- Strike of producers in Saskatchewan and Manitoba, 412-13
- Constitution of Canada, renewal of the Canadian Federation, 895
- Ewasew, Hon. John, the late, 514-15

Great October Bolshevik Revolution, sixtieth anniversary, 95National Anthem, translation into various heritage languages, 862-3North Atlantic Assembly, Paris meeting, 215-18

- Education, Cultural Affairs and Information and People Subcommittee, 215-17

Free Flow of Information Committee, 217Human rights, 216-18

- Broadcasting, resolution re 'jamming o of', 217

Canadian policy, 217-18Communist bloc countries, persecutions, 216Freedom of religion, 216Helsinki Agreement, 215, 216-17, report presented by Mr. Gontikas of Greece, 216Resolutions re Soviet and east European violations, 217US policy and support by President Carter, 216Security and Co-operation, Conference on, 526-30Final Act of Helsinki Agreement*Canadian Parliamentary Helsinki Group, 529Free flow of information and people, 529NATO role, 529-30Occupation by USSR of adjacent democracies, 529Rejection of Canada's offer re reunification of families and acceptance of dissidents as immigrants, 528Soviet Political Agreements and Results, 528Soviet submission, agreed upon without reference to human rights, 527, 528Statement of Minister of State for Multiculturalism, 527, 528Veto of proposals applied by Soviet bloc countries, 527Senate

- Star Phoenix* article 'Lang says Canadian Senate should be abolished', 393

Zaire*Diplomatic discussions re action against guerillas, 815Evacuation of Canadians, 770, 778-9Intervention by foreign nations in Zaire and Eritrea, 781, 799Kolwezi massacre, question as to involvement of Canadian citizens, 815

Government
Publications

Govern.
Publicatio.

